TRAINING SCHOOL VICTORIOUS.

Defeats Greenville 6 to 2 in a Game of Baseball Monday.

In a fast and interesting game of baseball, made sensational by long hits and "grandstand" plays, the E. C. T. S. on Monday afternoon auspiciously opened its baseball season by defeating the Greenville boys, 6 to 2. There were many errors made on both sides, yet the playing was at times brilliant, the Training school team being especially effective with men on bases.

The young ladies of the school were out in full force, and their effective cheering materially aided in winning the victory for the purple and gold. The town rooters did good work, but in comparison with the mighty yells that came from "cross the way" they sounded but as a gentle wind in the face of a raging storm.

The features of the game were Lipscomb's one handed stop of a hot grounder, and the pitching of Holladay, for the Training school. He had the town boys at his mercy throughout the game and fourteen times did the Greenville sluggers fail to connect with his benders.

Score by innings:

R H E
E.C.T.S. 3200010 x 6 7 7
Greenville 000100001 2 3 7

Batteries: Holladay and Brown; White, James and Haskett. Struck out by Halladay 14, by White 7 in six innings, by James 4 in two innings. Base on balls, off Halladay 1, off White 1. Two base hits, White, Lipscomb, Dodd and Haladay. Umpire Dr. Moyer.

KING'S CROSS ROAD ITEMS.

King's Cross Roads, Mar. 28.—We are very sorry to say that the school at King's X Roads closed last Thursday. It was taught by Miss Huldah M. Cox. We hope to have her with us next session. There was a picnic at the close of the school. There was an address at eleven o'clock by Rev. B. F. Huske, of Greenville. The day was pleasantly spent by all who were there.

Roy Croom, of Snow Hill and Miss Minnie Smith, of Farmville, spent Sunday with Miss Irene Smith.

Miss Lena I. Cobb, of Conetoe, came down last Wednesday to attend the picnic and to spend a few days with Miss Irene W. Smith.

We are very sorry to learn Robbie Smith is sick. We hope to see him out again in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smith and little son, William, of Greenville, were here Sunday visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Smith.

Hugh T. Smith, of Greenville, spent last Thursday night with his mother, Mrs. Mattie J. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Randolph, from near Greenville, attended the picnic at King's X Roads Thursday.

We are glad to know Mrs. Callie Forbes is improving fast. Miss Huldah M. Cox returned to her home in Winterville last Saturday morning. She was accompanied by Miss Lena Cobb as far as Greenville.

THE SILVER TEA

Quite an Enjoyable Occasion Monday Night.

The silver tea given by the ladies for the benefit of the public library, in the music room of Fineman & White, Monday night, was an occasion that gave much pleasure to those in attendance. It was mainly an evening of music. With Miss Helen Forbes as accompanist Dr. L. G. Schaffer, of Raleigh, gave several violin selections interspersing the following songs:

"Sing Me to Sleep," by Miss Olive Gaston, with violin obligato by Dr. Schaffer.

"Mizpah," by Mrs. T. E. Hooker.

"Love's Trinity" by Mr. Charles James.

"Only a Dream of You," by D. J. Whichard, with violin obligato by Miss Essie Whichard.

Dr. Schaffer is a skilled violinist and his playing was much enjoyed, as was also the songs. The guests were all served with refreshments. The donations to the library fund amounted to some over $30.

COMMISSIONERS IN SESSION.

Conferring With Architects Regarding New Court House and Jail.

The Board of County Commissioners held a special meeting today to confer with architects in reference to building a new court house and new jail. The meeting was held in the city hall, where the six architects who were on hand appeared one at the time to present their respective claims, each being given three-quarters of an hour. This meeting had not been finished at the time The Reflector goes to press, hence no definite report of the conclusions reached by the commissioners can be given today. It was very evident from what was going on at the meeting that the commissioners are determined that Pitt county shall have creditable buildings, and such as will meet the needs of the county for years to come. In this they will meet the wishes of almost the entire people of the county.

TUESDAY, MAR. 20, 1910.

Raleigh is doing the Swift act in the spoiled meat investigation.

Judge D. J. Brewer, one of the associate justices of the Supreme court of the United States, died suddenly of apoplexy in Washington City Monday night. He was 73 years of age, and one of the most able members of the Supreme court.

It is somewhat astonishing that thieves should invade the post office in a city so large as Richmond and get away with so much booty as was the case there a few nights ago. We thought "Uncle Sam" has his big post offices too well safeguarded for a robbery like that to take place. There is no doubt the government will get busy after the thieves, and it is almost as certain that they will be captured sooner or later.

Folks are certainly talking Greenville, and the mission of The Reflector is to help the talking. There are plenty of things the town needs, and everybody should be interested in getting these needs supplied. There must be action as well as talking, and when you see a good suggestion made fall in with it and help push the matter along. Past experience has shown what can be accomplished when all work together, and with proper united effort nothing is impossible.

The Coming of our Brothers.

The North Carolina Press Association has decided to meet at Wrightsville Beach and the folks of Wilmington appreciate this decision, both from a personal standpoint and from the viewpoint of realizing the true calibre of the association, as being one of the most important organizations in the Old North State. Of course we look forward to the gathering here of the editors with much pleasure; probably with more pleasure than felt over the coming of any other convention to Wilmington, or to Wrightsville Beach, but that is not because we do not recognize the importance of the other gatherings, and we do not for one instant think that "our boys" are better than the rest, but because we feel nearer and dearer to them. It is not because admiration is one bit less for the organizations, because it is not, but because we naturally love our brethren the best. Your brother may not be as attractive in personality or as an important a personage as some other man, but surely you always anticipate more joyously seeing your brother.

The meeting of the North Carolina Press Association at Wrightsville Beach will indeed be an important one. It will bring together the editors of the North Carolina newspapers, and no state possesses newspapers that have done more for its advertisement and its uplifting than North Carolina. The people of Wilmington will welcome the "pen pushers" with open arms and will embrace them warmly.—Wilmington Dispatch.

Farm Schools.

"Back to the farm" is the cry. From all quarters comes advice to boys and girls not to abandon farm life for that of the towns. Before they take this advice they should be shown how to make life on the farm both pleasant and profitable. In no better way can such an end be gained than instruction in the sciences of farming and domestic life. Few people have seemed to be aware that there already exists a state law for the establishment of such schools. Now that the public knows of this permissive law's existence we hope steps will be taken to put it into execution. The boys and girls who received no other education than that given in the local schools would learn much to qualify them as farmers and farmers' wives. They would start life feeling better qualified for their work, hence taking more interest and pleasure in it and feeling more confident of success. We should like to see such schools established in every county.—Charlotte Observer.

A WEAK WOMAN AND HER STORY

In Floral, Ark., Lives a Lady Who Feels That Her Strength Was Restored by Cardui.

Floral, Ark.—"I must speak a good word for Cardui," writes Mrs. Viola Baker, of this place. "About a month ago I was in very bad health. I was so weak and nervous that I was not able to do my housework. "My husband bought me one bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I took it according to directions and now I am in good health. "I think Cardui is a fine tonic for weak women." And you are not the only lady who thinks so, Mrs. Baker. Thousands, like you, have written to tell of the wonderful benefit Cardui has been to them. Cardui contains no minerals, or other powerful drugs. It contains no glycerin or other mawkish-tasting ingredients. Fire Department statistics show that some eighty per cent. of all fires are extinguished by chemical apparatus.

Nearly all fires are discovered at the start and are readily put out if means are at once available.

A stream is thrown to a distance of about fifty feet, carrying a large amount of carbonic acid gas, which excludes the oxygen and prevents combustion.

A fire cannot live if a small per cent. of carbonic acid gas is in the air.

It is forty times as efficient as water and will extinguish fires of oil, naphtha, gasoline, etc., which-water only spreads.

BAGGING A BIG TIGER

The Jungle Monarch Was Trapped Lolling In His Bath.

A FEAT OF MARKSMANSHIP.

Only the Brute's Head Showed Above the Water, and the Well Placed Bullet, Fired From an Elephant, Entered the Nostril and Broke His Neck.

An interesting account of a tiger hunt is given by one who had a wide experience in hunting this most dangerous of beasts. Mounted upon elephants, the writer and his companions had been beating the jungle without making a find until, as they were about to give up the search, a sudden disturbance among the elephants appeared to betoken a tiger near at hand. Giving directions to the others as to the order of marching their elephants, the writer ordered his mahout to turn into the thick feathered foliage to the left in search of a pool of water which he remembered to be there.

There was a slight descent to a long but narrow hollow about fifty or sixty yards wide. This was filled with clear water for an unknown length.

I was just about to make a remark when, instead of speaking, I gently grasped the mahout by the head as I leaned over the howdah and by this signal stopped the elephant.

There was a remarkable sight. About 120 yards distant on my right the head and neck of a large tiger, clean and beautiful, reposed above the surface of the water, while the body was cooling, concealed from view. Here was our friend enjoying his quiet bath, while we had been pounding away up and down the jungles which he had left.

"Fire at him," whispered the mahout, "or you will lose him! He will see us and be off."

"Hold your tongue!" I answered. "He can't see us, for the sun is at our back and is shining in his eyes. See how green they are."

At this moment the tiger quietly rose from his bath and sat up on end like a dog. I never saw such a sight. His head was beautiful, and the eyes shone like two green electric lights as the sun's rays reflected from them, but his huge body was dripping with muddy water, as he had been reclining upon the alluvial bottom.

For quite a minute the tiger sat up in the same position. At last, as if satisfied that he was in safety and seclusion, he once more lay down with only the head and neck exposed above the surface.

"Back the elephant gently, but do not turn around," I whispered. Immediately the elephant backed through the feathery tamarisk without the slightest sound, and we found ourselves outside the jungle. We could breathe freely.

"Go on, now, quite gently till I press your head, then turn to the right, descending through the tamarisk till I again touch your turban."

I counted the elephant's paces as she moved softly parallel with the jungle until I felt sure of my distance. A slight pressure upon the mahout's head and the elephant turned to the right. The waving plumes of the dark green tamarisk divided as we gently moved forward, and in another moment we stopped. There was the tiger in the same position, exactly facing me, but now about seventy-five paces distant.

"Keep the elephant quite steady," I whispered, and, sitting down upon the howdah seat, I took a rest with the rifle upon the front bar of the gun rack. A piece of tamarisk kept waving in the wind just in front of the rifle, beyond my reach. The mahout leaned forward and gently bent it down. Now all was clear. The tiger's eyes were like green glass. The elephant for a moment stood like stone. I touched the trigger.

There was no response to the loud report of six drams of powder from the "five-seven-seven" rifle, no splash in the unbroken surface of the water. The tiger's head was still there, but in a different attitude, one-half below the surface and only one cheek and one large eye still glittering like an emerald above.

Upon examination it proved that there was no hole whatever in that tiger, the bullet having entered the nostril, broken the neck and run along the body. The animal consequently had never moved.

This tiger when laid out straight, but without being pulled to increase its length, measured exactly nine feet and eight inches from nose to tail.—Youth's Companion.

His Last Request.

Charles Dickens used to relate an anecdote of the last moments of Fauntleroy, the great banker, hanged for forgery in 1824. His elegant dinners had always been followed by some remarkable and matchless curacao, the source of which he kept a deep secret. Three of his boon companions had an interview with him in the condemned cell the day before his execution. They were about to retire when the most impressive of the three stepped back and said: "Fauntleroy, you stand on the verge of the grave. Remember the text, my dear man, 'that we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can take nothing out.' Have you any objection, therefore, to tell me now, as a friend, where you got that curacao?"

Life is fruitful in the ratio in which it is laid out in noble action or patient perseverance.—Liddon.

CRUDE ASTRONOMY.

Russian Peasants Have Queer Ideas of Sun, Moon and Stars.

We have it on no less authority than that of Caesar that the Druids taught their disciples many things about the form and dimensions of the earth and the heavens and a body of doctrines on the motions of the stars. Even death itself was to them an astronomical fact. They held that from this life we pass to take up our abode in one of the heavenly bodies. That they firmly held to this belief is manifest from the fact that they had no objection to lending money to be repaid in the other world. They looked upon the passage of life in much the same way as we regard a journey across the Atlantic.

There is no doubt that even now in various parts of Europe the views of the peasantry as to the heavenly bodies and celestial phenomena have changed but little from those of their predecessors of a thousand years ago. A Russian contributed to the bulletin of the Astronomical Society of France has given the results of his observations on this point extending over ten years. The astronomical lore of the Russian peasantry of the north, center and south is limited to a knowledge of the existence of the sun and moon, of three constellations, of the Milky Way, of one planet, of comets, shooting stars and meteors. The sun is to all a mysterious and beneficent being.

The moon covered with ice and snow is ever in flight from its brother, the sun. Upon its disk may be seen unmistakably portrayed the murder of Abel by Cain, the latter being done to death by a pitchfork. Chill are the lunar rays, and woe betide the child of man who shall sleep unprotected therefrom! From the horns of the crescent much useful information as to the forthcoming weather may be derived by the learned in such things.

The stars are lamps or candles which are lit and extinguished daily by the Eternal. A shooting star is the soul of one who has just passed away. Comets are heralds of war and famine. No Russian ever forgets that the Napoleonic war followed the great comet of 1811.—Westminster Gazette.

MALIBRAN'S CAPTIVITY.

A Romantic Incident in the Career of the Great Singer.

The following incident is told of Mme. Malibran, whose voice once upon a time excited the most unromantic to folly.

She was resting in her dressing room at the theater after singing in the part of Desdemona, her passionate soul still quivering with the emotion of the part and the tears and applause of her listeners. A person entered and begged her to go to her mother, who had been taken ill. A carriage, not her own, was at the door. She was whirled through the streets and led, much to her surprise and fear, into a strange house and to an excellent boudoir, hung and carpeted with rose colored silk.

Here the beautiful songstress was left alone after being assured by her attendants that her mother was well, that the message was a subterfuge and that her captivity would last until she sang something.

On a low seat sat a lyre such as that which thrilled in Malibran's fingers as she sang Desdemona's touching song.

At first she determined to resist, but after a short time her mind reverted to the evening, and almost unconsciously she took up the instrument and sang the "Romance de Saule." As she concluded sounds of enthusiastic applause and trembling accents of delight came to her through the silk hangings, and she was then conducted by liveried servants to her carriage and to her home.

The next morning she found on her table a casket containing a magnificent pair of earrings, and inside the cover, written in diamonds, was the word "Merli." But the event remained a mystery to her forever.

Retort Filial.

In a warm argument one of the contestants had a poor case, but he defended his position vigorously.

"Oh, yes," the other one chuckled, "you have your defense, but you've lost. Losers always have their defense. Lincoln used to illustrate that with a story about his boy Tad.

"Lincoln and Tad were lurching one day in the White House.

"Don't eat your fish with your knife, boy," said Lincoln sternly. "It's not polite."

"But, father," said Tad, "is it polite to stare at folks when they're eating?"

Very True.

A grandmother was reproving her little grandchildren for making so much noise. "Dear me, children, you are so noisy today! Can't you be a little more quiet?"

"Now, grandma, you mustn't scold us. You see, if it wasn't for us you wouldn't be a grandma at all."—Harper's Weekly.

Why Lulu Was Happy.

Lulu was but two and a half years old when the first huckleberries she had ever seen were placed upon the table in a covered dish. When the cover was taken off she clapped her hands, exclaiming delightedly, "Oh, look at all the shoe buttons!"—Delinctor.

Know Her Limitations.

A TIMELESS WORLD.

What Would Happen if We Were Entirely Inclosed by Clouds.

If astronomers are right in ascribing the wonderful brightness of Venus to the existence of an atmosphere continually filled with clouds, then she must be a world without time—at least there can be no measurement of time there such as we have here.

It is because we can see the sun and the stars that we are able to traverse the oceans and run railroad trains across the continents.

Surround our earth with an unbroken shell of clouds and what would become of all our clocks and chronometers? Not a ship could safely cross the sea; not a railroad would be able to run its trains without a series of frightful wrecks. In a few weeks every clock and watch would be hopelessly wrong and all exact timekeeping would cease.

Probably there are few who stop to think of the way in which our everyday life depends upon astronomical observations. Our great primary timekeeper is the earth rotating on its axis. If we could not see the sun and stars because of clouds we should not know that the earth rotates, and there would be no standard to which we could refer our timepieces and by which we could correct them. In fact, we should probably have no timepieces.

There could be no hours and minutes, for they are exact divisions of an ideal day based upon celestial observations which would be impossible to us.

They could not be based upon clocks or other mechanical devices, because the most exquisite chronometer that can be constructed will not keep time indefinitely and must be continually corrected by means of observations of the stars made in the observatories.

There could be no accurate maps of countries or charts of the seas, for such maps and charts can be made only by the aid of astronomical observations.

There could be no parallels of latitude or meridians of longitude, for they, too, are based on celestial observations which would be impossible to us.

We should not know with any certainty where we were upon the earth. We could not measure the distance from New York to London nor from New York to San Francisco.

Poetical minds, moved by the spectacle of Venus in her glory, have drawn brilliant pictures of the delights of life in that radiant world, but there is another side to the question of which we may well think as we gaze admiringly upon her electric splendor.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Force of Habit.

"I understand that all star cast was rather languid."

"Yes; they played poorly for stars. Even the life they put into the mob scene was accidental and came about merely through each of them trying to grab the center of the stage."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Trouble Makers.

"What men think," remarked the knowing woman, "causes fully one-third of all the trouble in the world."

"Yes," rejoined the mere man, "and what women say causes the other two-thirds."—Chicago News.

The "Arabian Nights."

The collection of tales called the "Thousand and One Nights," or the "Arabian Nights," is of unknown date and authorship. It was first made known in Europe about the end of the seventeenth century by Antoine Galland, who was employed by Colbert to collect manuscripts in the east. The copy of the Arabic manuscript brought by Galland from Syria contained a marginal note dated 1584, and from internal evidence the middle of the fifteenth century has been fixed upon as the probable period of the composition of the work. Some of the tales were evidently borrowed by the writer from other authors, and Von Hammer identifies at least the plot and some of the stories of the "Arabian Nights" with an earlier collection in Persian called the "Thousand Fanciful Stories."

April Fooling.

The origin of the custom of April fooling cannot be traced with any degree of certainty. In the literature of the last century there are found many references to it, and yet beyond that it is scarcely possible to go. One suggestion is that the custom of playing tricks on the first day of April was derived from some ancient pagan custom, such as the Hull festival among the Hindoos or the Roman feast of the fools. One fact, however, we do know, and that is that the practice prevails in many countries under various names which would seem to indicate that it dates away back to the early history of the race.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Four Extremes.

The coldest place on earth inhabited by man is Verkhoyansk, above the arctic circle, in northeastern Siberia. The thermometer there drops to 90 degrees below zero in January, but sometimes rises to 86 degrees above zero in the shade in July, dropping, however, to the freezing point on the warmest summer nights. The hottest place in the world is the interior of the great Sahara desert, in Africa, where the thermometer rises to 122 degrees. The wettest place is Greytown, Nicaragua, where the mean annual rainfall is 200 inches. The place of least rain is Port Nolloth, in South Africa, where less than an inch sometimes falls in a year.

All For Love.

"Did you ever know a girl to die for love?"

"Yes."

"Did she just fade away and die because some man deserted her?"

"No; she just took in washing and worked herself to death because the man she loved married her."—Houston Post.

Mrs. Kate Hall says: "I have, kept house 15 years, am the mother of four children, and I would not keep house without Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea." Wife woman, why? Dries away sickness, brings health and happiness to the whole family. It's the world's health preserver.
