Newy Notes From Our Hastling Neighbor.

Winterville, N. C. April 9, 1910. Prof. F. C. Nye delivered an address at McGowan's school house last night at the close of Miss Nina Dixon's school.

J. L. Rollins and Mrs. H. F. Brinson returned yesterday from Wilson after attending the Sunday school convention there.

Miss Kate Chapman, who has been attending the Sunday school convention at Wilson, will go to Chapel Hill to spend some time before returning.

J. F. Harrington left Wednesday for Oxford to take little Clarence Walker to the Oxford Orphan Asylum. Mr. Harrington is a very strong and influential Mason, and is always on the lookout for orphan children around him. The lodge here should be congratulated for the good it is doing in our vicinity.

C. G. McLawhorn came in yesterday from Richmond where he has been for treatment for the past few days.

J. H. Cobb, of Standard, was in town yesterday.

J. D. Cox left Wednesday for Fairmont.

R. R. Cotten, of Bruce, was in town yesterday.

Thad Hodges, of Washington, was in town yesterday.

H. B. McLawhorn's house which was under construction was blown off the pillows Wednesday.

Our boys crossed bats with the Ridge Springs boys yesterday. Score 14 to 5 in favor of Ridge Springs. Our boys need more practice.

The New Form of City Government.

Hattiesburg, Miss., and Columbia, S. C., are the first two Southern cities east of Texas to try the commission form of government. (Columbia has not yet voted on the matter, but the result of the election is said to be a foregone conclusion.) When the Galveston flood came several years ago the affairs of the city were taken out of the hands of the ward politicians and party bosses—who had long controlled there as in most other American cities—and the government was vested in a commission of able business men. The results in the way of economy, enterprise, and efficient government were so satisfactory that the temporary plan was continued, and the idea has spread from city to city until it now bids fair to become one of the most notable developments of twentieth century politics in America. We hope to see a great many other cities adopt the idea, and we should like to have some plan worked out whereby the same principle might be applied to county government. Senator Aldrich has just declared—and rightly—that a good business commission could save $300,000,000 a year in our present National expenditures.—Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

Milton Wasn't Running.

One of the rooters who came along today with the Washington High School boys to the ball game, brought a gaily decorated fox terrier as a mascot. Milton Johnston could not stand for this, so took his terrier and hied off to Washington. He had already planned his trip, however, before knowing that the Washington dog was coming, or his dog would have been kept home to outclass the visiting canine.

A Paying Vocation for Women.

It may be a revelation to many mothers to know that there is no more promising field opened for her daughter today than in the lines of domestic science or the domestic arts. Not only do graduates from such schools find no trouble in securing remunerative positions, but the place seeks the graduate if she has made any kind of a record in the training school. Boards of education all over the country and principals of private schools are looking for earnest teachers and supervisors,—one great mid-west city offering $3,000 per year to the right women for the post of supervisor of domestic arts in its public schools. Besides the demand for trained teachers, there is an equally insistent call for skilled dietitians to take charge of the practical problems of food supplies and dietaries under normal and abnormal conditions of health and environment in public and private institutions, such as school lunch rooms and restaurants, hospitals and asylums, college dormitories and the like.—The Delineator for May.

Narrow Escape from Fire.

A night or two ago Mr. Z. W. Brown was going out Cotanch street to his home. In passing the mill plant of B. E. Moye & Co., on the corner of Fifth street, he saw the reflection of a light behind one of the buildings, and going there to investigate found a pile of straw burning. He pulled the straw away from against the building and stamped the fire out. If he had been a few minutes later the building would have been in a blaze. There is hardly a doubt that the straw was placed against the building and set on fire with incendiary intent.

Office Building.

There is talk of a handsome office building being erected on the site now occupied by Evans' Studio on Five Points. It is a splendid site for such a building.

WOMEN AND THE WANT AD.

Modern Business Girls Know Value of Publicity.

The present day woman in business employs just as up-to-date methods as a man, declares Professor Charles Zieblin in The Delineator for May. When she goes after a position she does so with all her might. The frank adoption of masculine methods, in order to leap the men at their own game, is modestly exemplified by the young Bryn Mawr graduate who published the following enticing advertisement:

Situation wanted—Are you looking for brain? For an experienced correspondent who writes convincing letters, letters that get what they are sent to get? A clever woman who can write clever ads or clever talks on any subject and from any point of view? Some one expert in the use of stenography and typewriting? A hybrid from the university and business world?

One who knows peoples conditions and who can meet all combinations of the two with unwreckable savoir faire? That describes me exactly.

Is it surprising that she was swamped with answers.

Women who attain success in the most masculine of industries and financial positions are evidently multiplying. The statistician who prepares the annual report on the cotton crop for the government is a woman, who is said to have increased her income from eight dollars a week to ten thousand dollars a year.

Trenton, New Jersey, has recently reported fifteen business women whose occupations are scarcely feminine. They include barbering, wholesale tobacco, real estate, undertaking, pharmacy, jewelry, piano-dealing, insurance, shoe repairing, banking, charcoal, etc. South Chicago's situation is more spectacular, if less creditable. In addition to women doctors and police, a woman runs the worst saloon and another the best undertaking establishment, so that, from birth to death, even by "the broad way which leadeth to destruction," a feminine hand may guide.

New North Carolina Industries.

For the week ending 6th the Chattanooga Tradesman reports the following new industries for North Carolina:

Elizabeth City—$30,000 farm-company.

East Bend—Printing company. Asheville—$30,000 mines; $25,000 bottling works.

Goldsboro—$50,000 garage company.

Farmville—Printing company; $10,000 warehouse company.

Entitled to Free Delivery.

The amount of post office receipts now entitles Greenville to free city delivery, this being given to towns where annual receipts reach $10,000. For the fiscal year just closed the Greenville post office receipts amounted to some over $10,200. Application will be made for the free delivery here.

Announcement.

I take this method of notifying the voters of Pitt county that I am a candidate for the House of Representatives at the coming Democratic primaries, subject to the action of said primaries. I desire to ask all of my friends their support.

Stephen C. Wooten.

AFTER AN APPROPRIATION.

Greenville Delegation in Washington—Want $55,000 for Public Building.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—A hustling delegation is here from Greenville urging an appropriation of $55,000 for a Federal building at that place, Congress having made an appropriation of ten thousand dollars with which a site was purchased. The delegation was piloted around the capitol by Representative Small, who accompanied the members before the house public buildings committee, where they were given a hearing. Later they saw Senator Overman, who is a member of the Senate public buildings committee.

Representative Thomas, who is a member of the house committee, put in a good word for Greenville. Col. Harry Skidner and F. M. Wooten did most of the talking for the visitors, and they neglected no opportunity to place Greenville in a favorable light before the committee. The growth of Greenville was emphasized by Mr. Wooten, who stated that Pitt county has ten banking institutions today, where ten years ago she had only one. Other members of the delegation are C. S. Carr, J. L. Little, J. B. Higgs and C. T. Munford.—T. J. Pence in News and Observer.

He has retained the firm of Bryant and Brogden and L. L. Tilley will assist in the defense. It is recalled that in a fight in Granville county Bivens stabbed Fowler and fled. The authorities offered a reward of $200 for him. He was reported captured several times. The Durham officers were aware of his being in the city several days ago, but could not locate him until he had gone.

Martinsville, Va., April 8.—John Echols, Thomas Bailey and Jim Hairston, negroes, were convicted here today of murder in the first degree and will meet death in the electric chair for the brutal killing of Sidney Wood, a member of their race. SATURDAY, APR. 9, 1910

In Greensboro, Thursday, two negroes were killed by the caving in of a deep sewer ditch which they were helping to dig.

It takes two pages of the State Democrat, of Raleigh, to publish the tax sales of Wake county. Folks up that way must be very negligent about paying their taxes.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has decided to increase the pay of employes rather than to increase dividends to stockholders. That sounds more like the right thing.

Mister Roosevelt is credited with the assertion that if a reception is tendered him on his return home, he wants it to be a national affair, and not merely a local matter. Sure, Mike. No doubt he feels large enough for the whole country to run up to New York to greet him.

A Greensboro gentleman tells good one on an Alabama congressman he met on a train enroute to Washington the other day. The name is not given for good and sufficient reasons. The congressman sat opposite the Greensboro man and his wife in a Pullman car. When nearing Lynchburg the congressman looked around and picked up a small grip, but its appearance did not suit him, though he finally opened it; it was filled with sundry apparel used by women. Then he yelled for the porter. That autocrat of the Pullman finally told the congressman that a lady who got off at Greensboro had evidently exchanged grips with him. Then the congressman confided to the Greensboro man and his wife that his grip contained a quart bottle partly filled with liquor and a six shooter, adding that he supposed she had about as much use for the things in his grip as he did for those in hers. But the most amusing thing about the incident was that the congressman had been down home making prohibition speeches. The Greensboro man recalled that he had seen notices to this effect in the papers and when jollied about it, he acknowledged that it was a true bill. — Greensboro Record.

The establishment of the State Insurance Department has proved one of the wisest things the legislature ever did. The beneficent results are seen almost daily. For instance, Deputy Insurance Commissioner W. A. Scott succeeded in getting eleven men held for arson during the month of March. Convictions in such cases are extremely hard to secure, yet a number of such persons have been convicted. To heavily insure one's house and personal effects, then fire it is as old as the hills, but in time Mr. Young will put a quietus on it. Fear of the law has a deterrent effect

Clinton, Miss.—"Thanks to Cardui," writes Mrs. Lena Gresham, of this place, "I have been greatly relieved."

"I suffered for three years from female inflammation, and had taken medicine from four different physicians without much benefit.

"I have received more benefit from seven bottles of Cardui, than from all the physicians."

Just try Cardui. That's all we ask. It speaks for itself. It has helped so many thousands, it must be able to help you.

Trying Cardui won't hurt you. It is safe, harmless, gentle in action, and purely vegetable.

OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Chapter I—Truxton King arrives in Edelweiss, capital of Graustark, and meets the beautiful niece of Spantz, the gunmaker. II—King does a favor for Prince Robin, the young ruler of the country, whose guardian is John Tullis, an American. III—Baron Dangkas, minister of police, interviews King and warns him against Olga, the gunmaker's niece. IV—King invades the royal park, meets the prince and is presented to the lad's fascinating Aunt Lorraine. V—The committee of ten, conspirators against the prince, meets in an underground chamber, where the girl Olga is disclosed as one who is to kill Prince Robin with a bomb. VI—John Tullis calls on the beautiful Countess Ingomede, who warns him that her hated and notorious old husband, Count Marlanx, is conspiring against the prince. VII, VIII, IX and X—King visits the house of the witch of Garlock gap and meets the royal household there. He sees an eye, leaving through a crack in a door, and while searching for the person he is overpowered and dragged into a loft. He is confronted by Count Marlanx and then taken to the underground chamber of the committee of ten. XI—Olga defends King before committee of anarchists who wish to kill him. XII—Lorraine is brought to the den and thrown into the same room with King. XIII—King feels a jailer, dons his clothing and disguise, carries Lorraine into a boat at night in which several of the anarchist leaders are about to depart. XIV—King manages to get Lorraine, whom he loves, ashore, and they hide in a freight car. XV—Olga waits on a street corner with a bomb to kill Prince Robin as he passes in a parade. King and Lorraine are carried off into the country in the car. They start back in an ox cart and warn the prince when almost in front of the girl Olga. XVI—The bomb is thrown, but the prince escapes to the castle. Marlanx is in control of the city.

CHAPTER XVII.

TRUXTON EXACTS A PROMISE.

TRUXTON KING had been in a resentful frame of mind for nearly forty-eight hours. In the first place, he had not had so much as a single glimpse of the girl he now worshiped with all his heart. In the second place, he had learned, with unpleasant promptness, that Count Vos Engo was the officer in command of the house guard, a position as gravely responsible as it was honorable.

He had, of course, proffered his services to Colonel Quinoo. The colonel, who admired the Americans, gravely informed him that there was no regular duty to which he could be assigned, but that he would expect him to hold himself ready for any emergency. In case of an assault he was to report to Count Vos Engo.

But he was not satisfied. Lorraine had not come forward with a word of greeting or relief—in fact, she had not appeared outside the castle doors. Toward dusk on Monday, long after the arrival of the refugees, he sat in gloomy contemplation of his own unhappiness, darkly glowering upon the unfriendly portals from a distant stone bench.

A brisk guardsman separated himself from the knot of men at the castle doors and crossed the plaza toward him.

Judge the dismay and anger when the soldier, a bit shamefaced himself, briefly announced that Count Vos Engo had issued an order against loitering in close proximity to the castle.

Truxton's cheek burned. He saw in an instant that the order was meant for him and for no one else, he being the only outsider likely to come under the head of "loiterer."

Truxton turned to him with a frank smile. "Please tell Count Vos Engo that I am the last person in the world to disregard discipline at a time like this."

His glance swept the balcony, suddenly becoming fixed on a couple near the third column. Count Vos Engo and Lorraine Tullis were standing there together, unmistakably watching his humiliating departure.

The next morning he encountered Vos Engo near the grotto.

Catching sight of Vos Engo, he hastened across the avenue and caught up to him.

"Good morning," said Truxton. Vos Engo did not smile as he eyed the tall American. "I haven't had a chance to thank you for coming back for me last Saturday. Allow me to say that it was a very brave thing to do."

"I do not like your words, Mr. King, nor the way in which you glare at me."

"I'm making it easier to tell you the agreeable news, Count Vos Engo; that's all. Take your hand off your sword, please—some other time perhaps, but not in these days, when we need men, not cripples. I'll tell you what I have discovered, and then we'll drop the matter until some other time."

"Thank you, I have made the gratifying discovery that you are a miserable cur."

Count Vos Engo went very white.

"As you say, there is another and a better time. We need dogs as well as men in these days."

Truxton strolled off to the stables, seeking Mr. Hobbs on the way. "Hobbs," he said, "we've got to find John Tullis; that's all there is to it." "I dare say, sir," said Mr. Hobbs, with sprightly decisiveness. "He's very much needed."

"I'm going to need him before long as my second."

Later on much of Truxton's good humor was restored and his vanity pleased by a polite request from Count Halfont to attend an important council in the "room of wrangles" that evening at 9.

Very boldly he advanced upon the castle a few minutes before the appointed hour.

He came upon Lorraine Tullis at the edge of the terrace. She was walking slowly in the soft shadows beyond the row of lights on the lower gallery. He knew her at a glance, this slim girl in spotless white.

"Lorraine!" he whispered, reaching her side in two bounds. She put out her hands, and he clasped them. Plainly she was confused. "I've been dying for a glimpse of you. Do you think you've treated me?"

"Don't, Truxton!" she pleaded, suddenly serious. "You must not come here. I saw—well, you know. I was so ashamed; I was so sorry."

He still held her hands. "Yes; they ordered me to move on, as if I were a common loafer," he said, with a soft chuckle. "But where have you kept yourself?"

"I have been ill, Truxton—truly, I have," she said quickly, uneasily.

"You told Vos Engo to ride back and pick me up," he persisted. "He told me in so many words. Now, I want a plain answer, Lorraine. Did you promise to reward him if he—well, if he saved me from the mob?"

"No," she said in a low voice.

"What was it, then? I must know, Lorraine."

"I am very, oh, so very unhappy, Truxton," she murmured.

"I came near spoiling everything just now," he whispered hoarsely.

"What?"

"I almost kissed you, Lorraine. I swear it was hard to keep from it. That would have spoiled everything."

"Yes, it would," she agreed quickly.

"I'm not going to kiss you until you have told me you love Vos Engo."

"I—I don't understand!" she cried, drawing back and looking up into his face with bewildered eyes.

"Because then I'll be sure that you love me."

"Be sensible, Truxton."

"I'll know that you promised to love him if he'd save me. It's as clear as day to me. You did tell him you'd marry him if he got me to a place of safety."

"No. I refused to marry him if he did not save you. Oh, Truxton, I am so miserable! What is to become of all of us? What is to become of John and Bobby and you?"

"I—I think I'll kiss you now, Lorraine," he whispered almost tremulously. "God, how I love you, little darling! You must make me a promise."

"Oh, Truxton, don't ask me to say that I'll be your"—She stopped, painfully embarrassed.

"That will come later," he said consolingly. "I want you to promise, on your sacred word of honor, that you'll kiss no man until you've kissed me."

"Oh," she murmured. "I—I cannot promise that! I am not sure that I'll ever—ever kiss anybody. What is it you really want me to say?" she asked, looking up with sudden shyness in her starry eyes.

"That you love me—and me only, Lorraine," he whispered.

"I will not say it!" she cried, breaking away from him. "But," as she

"The council has been extolling you, Mr. King," said the prime minister, leading him to a seat near his own. Truxton blushed involuntarily he glanced at Vos Engo. That gentleman started, a curious light leaping into his eyes.

"Here's the situation in a nutshell," went on the prime minister. "We are doomed unless success reaches us from the outside. We seem unable to warn John Tullis, who, if given time, might succeed in collecting a sufficient force of loyal countrymen to harass and eventually overthrow the dictator. I am loath to speak of another alternative that has been discussed at length by the ministers and their friends. The Duke of Perse, from a bed of pain and anguish, has counseled us to take steps in the direction I am about to speak of."

"We can appeal to Russia in this hour of stress, but we will have to make an unpleasant sacrifice. Russia is eager to take over our new issue of railway bonds. Hitherto we have voted against disposing of the bonds in that country, the reason being obvious. St. Petersburg wants a new connecting line with her possessions in Afghanistan. Our line will provide a most direct route—a cutoff, I believe they call it. Last year the Grand Duke Paulus volunteered to provide the money for the construction of the line from Edelweiss north to Balak on condition that Russia be given the right to use the line in connection with her own roads to the orient. You may see the advantage in this to Russia. Mr. King, if I send word to the Grand Duke Paulus, agreeing to his terms, which still remain open to us, signing away a most valuable right in what we had hoped would be our own individual property, we have every reason to believe that he will send armed forces to our relief on the pretext that Russia is defending properties of her own. That is one way in which we may out Count Marlanx. The other lies in the ability of John Tullis to give battle to him with our own people carrying the guns. Lieutenant Hadan has told us quite lately of a remark you made which he happened to overhear. If I quote him correctly, you said to the Englishman Hobbs that you could get away with it, meaning, as I take it, that you could succeed in reaching John Tullis. May I not implore you to tell us how you would go about it?"

Truxton had turned a brick red. Shame and mortification surged within him. He was cruelly conscious of an undercurrent of irony in the premier's courteous request. For an instant he was sorely crushed. A low laugh from the opposite side of the room sent a shaft to his soul. He looked up. Vos Engo was still smiling. In an instant the American's blood boiled.

"I did say I could get to John Tullis. I'll start tonight."

His words created a profound impression, they came so abruptly.

"Send for Mr. Hobbs, please," said Truxton. "There should be three of us," addressing the men about him. "One of us is sure to get away."

"There is not a man here—or in the service—who will not gladly accompany you, Mr. King," cried General Braise quickly.

"Count Vos Engo is the man I would choose, if I may be permitted the honor of naming my companion," said Truxton, grinning inwardly with a malicious joy. Vos Engo yellowish green. His eyes bulged.

"I—I am in command of the person of his royal highness," he stammered, suddenly going very red.

"I had forgotten your present occupation," said Truxton quietly. "Pray pardon the embarrassment I may have caused you. After all, I think Hobbs will do. He knows the country like a book."

Mr. Hobbs came. That is to say, he was produced. It is doubtful if Mr. Hobbs ever fully recovered from the malady commonly known as stage fright. He had never been called Mr. Hobbs by a prime minister before, nor had he ever been asked in person by a minister of war if he had a family at home. Afterward Truxton King was obliged to tell him that he had unwaveringly volunteered to accompany him on the perilous trip to the hills. Be sure of it, Mr. Hobbs was not in a mental condition for many hours to even remotely comprehend what had taken place.

But Mr. Hobbs was not the kind to falter once he had given his word. "We'll be off at midnight, Hobbs," said Truxton.

"As you say, Mr. King, just as you say," said Hobbs, with fine indifference.

As Truxton was leaving the castle ten minutes later a brisk, eager faced young attendant hurried up to him.

"I bear a message from his royal highness," said the attendant, detaining him. "Prince Robin has asked for you, sir."

"I'll see him," said King promptly, as if he were granting the audience.

"WHAT YOU LOVE ME AND ME ONLY, LORRAINE."

ran to the steps, a delicious tremor in her voice. "I will consider the other thing you ask."

King was ushered into a large, sedately furnished room. A score of men were there before him—sitting or standing in attitudes of attention, listening to the words of General Braise. King's entrance was the signal for an immediate transfer of interest. The general bowed most politely and at once turned to Count Halfont with the remark that he had quite finished his suggestions. The prime minister came forward to greet the momentarily shy American.
