TEACHERS' ASSEMBLY

Of North Carolina—17th Annual Session Will be Held in Asheville in June.

The next annual session of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly will be held in Asheville, June 14 to 17, 1910. It will be the twenty-seventh annual session of that organization, and the program announced by the secretary promises to be one of the best in its history. Some of the best known educators of this and other states will appear on it. Delightful social features are being prepared, and already the teachers are beginning to look forward with eager anticipations to their outing in "The Land of the Sky." A thousand teachers will be present, and Asheville will set out its best for their entertainment.

The social and recreation features will be delightful, but there will also be work enough, and real work at that. The program provides for forty-one addresses, reports of committees, etc., besides the general discussions and the general business of the organization. That the addresses and discussions will be of a high order is evident from a list of those who will take part.

Saw the Morning Star.

The Charlotte Observer has occasioned trouble down in this neck of the woods. Saturday's issue of that paper contained an article about the comet, saying it would be visible Saturday, Sunday and Monday morning somewhere between 4 and 5 o'clock. That article was read in a certain household in town, Saturday night, and forthwith the sub-head of the family dispatched one of the children to a neighbor's to borrow an alarm clock. The alarm was carefully set at 4:15. The thing went off all right, for just on the dot there was a jingle that seemed as loud as the gong of the ice wagon. There was a hurrying out to find the comet, one sleepy fellow deciding to stay in bed and let the lookers report if they found anything. When the lookers returned to their deserted couches one was heard to remark with disgust: "That old Charlotte Observer is a fraud. We could not find a thing but the morning star."

TO STUDENT BODY IN GREENVILLE

Young Friends:

Has it ever occurred to your minds to question why the Civic League is offering a prize of $5 in gold for the best essay written by you on "Civic Beauty?"

To those of you into whose minds the question has arisen, as well as to those into whose minds the question has not arisen, we would like to say, the Civic League realizes the fact that in a short while, yea, much shorter than now appears to you, you young men will be the leading citizens of your respective towns; some will be filling the mayor's chair, others will be on the board of aldermen, while others will be doctors, lawyers, merchants, etc.

Is today too early for the mayor or aldermen of tomorrow to begin to study civics, and all that pertain thereto? We of the league think not. Hence the offer of the prize is to stimulate you to activity along this line so that when the positions of trust and honor come to you, they come to a well rounded prepared man.

And young ladies, we further realize that in a short time you will also be the leading women of your respective towns and communities. Is it too early for the school teacher or the house wife of tomorrow to study these things today. We think not, hence to you also is this prize offered.

We hope many will enter the contest. Let your essays be in the hands of Mayor Whedbee on or before May 4. We will let you know who is to deliver the prize as soon as the contest closes.

Respectfully,
The Civic League.

The Boon of the Rural 'Phone.

We are pleased to hear from our rural friends who have recently installed the long distance 'phone—which is receiving such a remarkable extension of its service into the homes of the farmers in Guilford county. The service aside from the convenience is a protection to life and property—in bringing the farm and the city in closer touch with one another. With good roads, rural 'phones and rural free delivery of mail, the life of the rural resident is being rapidly revolutionized—and the demand for country homes by town people increased.—High Point Enterprise.

The Recital Saturday Night.

Miss Sallie Baker, of Palmyra, gave a reading Saturday night in the auditorium of East Carolina Teachers' Training School for the benefit of the Y. W. C. A. which merits the highest praise. The audience was small but appreciative and every one seemed to thoroughly enjoy the entertainment. She was assisted by Misses Bishop and Davis and Prof. Austin. Miss Bishop's instrumental solo being especially good. Those failed to go missed a fine treat.

Prospects Bright.

Some of the delegation to Washington City in the interest of an appropriation for the public building in Greenville, got back Saturday afternoon, others Sunday evening. They were much encouraged by their appearance before the congressional committee, and report the prospects bright for Greenville being included in the appropriations bill now pending.

STATE NEWS.

Newly Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

The dwelling house of John Scott, an industrious and worthy colored man living near Tuscarora, was destroyed Friday night by fire involving the death of his wife, two nieces, and all of his household goods. Nothing was saved.—New Bern Journal.

Will Black, Cling Ingle and J. F. Wilson, three young white men, all residents of Asheville were arraigned before Magistrate Waddell Saturday on the charge of burglarizing the store of A. T. Elmonds at Georgetown, near Flat creek and each was held under a fifty dollar bond for appearance in the Superior court.

Another Story of Rabbit Courage.

Mr. R. T. Ashcraft is far from scoffing at the story of a rabbit chasing a cat in the effort to rescue one of her offspring. In speaking of the story Mr. Ashcraft said that it reminded him of an occurrence, several years ago, on the farm, a mile east of town, of his late father, W. J. Ashcraft. While walking in the woods, a short distance from his father's home, he says he came across a chicken snake, at least four feet long, that had a young rabbit in its mouth. The rabbit was squealing pitifully and just as he arrived on the scene a large mother rabbit came galloping at full speed through the woods. And Mr. Ashcraft affirms, and he is a man whose word cannot be doubted, that that mother rabbit did not do a thing but jump on the snake with both feet and bite and scratch it until the reptile was glad to release the baby rabbit, after which the mother and her baby trotted off together through the woods, and lived happily ever afterwards. Mr. Ashcraft killed the snake.—Wadesboro Messenger.

The Road Drag a Great Thing

While a crowd of Marshville citizens were discussing the work of the road drag, reference was made to the article which had recently appeared in a neighboring paper, written by a rural carrier, in which he stated that a piece of road so bad that he had to take to the woods while passing that way had been put in such condition in a few hours with a drag that he could pass over it in a fast trot with perfect ease. "Yes, and they are just as good as they are recommended to be," said Rev. L. T. Cordell, "I used to travel over roads in the mountains," he continued, "that could hardly have been kept up by the ordinary tools, but with the road drag they were easily kept in fairly good condition." Mr. Cordell thinks that with a properly made and properly used drag a section of road can be kept in better condition by the employment of one hand than with 12 or 15 hands using the ordinary tools.—Our Home.

Date Was Wrong.

In the hurry Saturday afternoon, through an oversight the date of C. T. Munford's tax receipt was published as April 15th when it should have been March 15th. It appears properly corrected in another column.

EMANUEL MOVEMENT FAILS

Combination of Religion, Mental Suggestion Falls Flat

The Emmanuel movement having to do with the treatment of disease by a combination of religion, mental suggestion and medicine, and in which it was hoped an effective cure had been found for neurasthenia and other disorders of the nerve system, has proved a failure at St. Luke's hospital in San Francisco, according to a statement made by Bishop Nicholas, of the Episcopal church. The local experiment has lasted a year. Every effort has been made to test the efficacy of the prescribed treatment. The hospital's psychopathic ward has now been discarded and Dr. A. B. Shields, D. D., the clerical superintendent of the institution, has sent in his resignation effective May 1.

Bishop Nichols thus accounts for the failure of the treatment at the hospital:

"We discovered that it was impossible to secure beneficial results by placing patients in a psychopathic ward associated with a hospital. All the depressing influences of the hospital bore down upon them. The constant atmosphere of suffering made a cure impossible and finally we were forced to the conclusion that we failed."

The San Francisco experiment has been closely watched by medical men throughout the country.

AGRICULTURAL HIGH SCHOOLS.

One thing very much needed in North Carolina is an agricultural high school in every county at some point convenient to the county capital. That an interest is being awakened in better agricultural instruction is apparent to every one, and we believe county schools for this purpose, with an experiment farm attached, are matters of the near future. Farming is now about the best and surest business in which a man can engage, and when our boys are learned the principles of real farming they will prefer this to other avocations. The professions are already so overcrowded that much success in this line is a rare exception; merchandising is so overdone and competition so strong that only a few find profit in this direction; but there is abundance of room for the good farmer and the field will always yield a good return for his labor. Let us have the agricultural schools in every county so the boys will learn to love the farm. Such schools with farms attached could be made practically self sustaining.

Raleigh aldermen have come to the conclusion that those who sell "the stuff" must pay for the privilege. The license tax on drug stores which sell whiskey on prescription has been increased from $125 to $500, and the tax on near-beer saloons has also been made $500, double the license heretofore.

The Mississippi senators had a row right in the senate chamber over the bribery investigation, and forthwith instructed the newspapers to keep quiet about it, but the newspapers told their readers just what had happened.

The University of North Carolina ball team met defeat twice in succession at the hands of the Virginians, losing the games at both Greensboro and Charlotte.

Thad Manning, of the Henderson Gold Leaf, is another of the boys who think the press convention at Wrightsville, June 8-10, is too early for swimming.

A South Carolina woman made use of her "rat" as a hiding place for money which her husband had stolen. Officers caught on to the game.

President Taft has called on his colleagues to stand by him. No doubt he feels the need of backing.

It is the desire of the post office department that patrons of rural mail paint their boxes and post a pure white color and an effort is being made to have this done throughout the country. The request is made for the double purpose of preserving the post and protecting the box as well as uniformity of identification. It is also urged that the name of the patron be marked on each box. To this end the department is writing to postmasters and urging that patrons be urged to paint boxes and post.

A Power for Development.

A fitting tribute to building and loan associations is paid by the Democrat, of Tompkinsville, N. Y. That the press of the country has awakened to the wonderful work being done for humanity by these organizations is simply a sign of the times, and the voice of the people speaking through the mouth-piece—the daily papers:

"The building loan associations of Richmond Borough have been in the past and are today the principal financial power for the development of Staten Island. Without them we would be stagnate. There would be no progress at all. The majority of our homes and a large number of our business places owe their existence and completion to the building loan associations. Every young man and young woman—in fact, anyone who desires to save money or buy a home—should become a member of a building loan association. Money invested in them is safe and secure. No high finance crook or Wall Street gambler will ever have an opportunity to rob and manipulate your hard earned money if it is invested in a home for yourself. It is being used to develop the real estate of your community by aiding someone else to build a home. It is the safest and best investment you can have."

That was an odd reason, but none the less convincing. Mayor Gaynor gave for vetoing a city ordinance that even if made into law it would not be enforced. If that rule had prevailed more generally with chief executives of cities and States we would have fewer dead letters on the statute books. The laws that are not enforced probably outnumber those that are.—Chattanooga Times.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Pills. The following statement leaves no ground for doubt.

Mrs. A. Simmons, 501 Heritage St., Kinston, N. C., says: "I found Doan's Kidney Pills to be an effective remedy for kidney trouble and backache. My back pained me for a long time and my kidneys were much disordered. I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a box, I began using them. They benefited me in every way and I am now free from backache and am able to rest well. ### BIRD BURGLARS.

The Jay and the Crow Are the Very Worst of Pests.

The jay and the crow have a very bad reputation—that of robbing other birds' nests—and it is richly deserved. Which is the worse it were hard to say. But their methods are different.

The jay reminds one of the jolly freebooter of old. He seems to take a pride in his depravity and to rob as much for amusement as for plunder. He will approach a nest in full day. The protests of the owner are met with jeers of mockery, as it were. If these could be translated into words the result would be something like this: "Ha, ha! I like to hear a poor insignificant little tit like you, with common drab plumage, threaten the like of me! You make me laugh, really. But what's the matter with you, anyway? Do you not see that I am paying you a distinguished honor in deigning to select your eggs for my breakfast? You must be a very stupid little bird. Please stop that outcry and leave me in peace."

Then after hopping from limb to limb all about the nest and displaying his gay military trappings to the full he will proceed to pounce upon the eggs or young, as the case may be. Quite often as much of these will be scattered upon the ground as will be eaten. His whole manner is reckless and extravagant. Nor does he exhibit the least fear or appear to be in the slightest degree conscious that what he is doing is wrong. When his feast is finished he will hop about again more gayly and superciliously than ever and finally fly off, with a mocking laugh, while the poor little victim views the ruin of her hopes with despair.

How different from all this is the crow and his manner of procedure! With the air of a midnight marauder he tries industriously to live up to it. He will only approach a nest in the dusk of morning or evening, and his maneuvers are stealthy and cautious in the extreme. After the discovery of the nest he will fly off a certain distance and take up a position of observation. Having satisfied himself that there are no traps or surprises in store, he will fly a little nearer the nest. Here he will study the owner, who now has taken alarm, and those whom her cries may summon to the spot. If there is nothing to apprehend in the way of attack (and, of course, usually there is not) the marauder will make his way right up to the nest, which in turn he will study while occasionally casting furtive glances about him.

His air at this moment is full of interest. Dark and fierce and rapacious, there is yet a certain craven look which seems to betray a consciousness of guilt. The whole figure would do credit to one of those becloaked prowlers we read about as lurking o' nights in the byways of old Spain or Italy.

The outcries of the owner of the nest, of her mate and perhaps of some sympathetic neighbors become louder and more frantic, but they produce no effect upon the intruder save for the occasional sidelong furtive glance, he remaining quite impassive. At length, when everything has been observed and studied and there seems to be no danger imminent, the attack is made. This is so voracious that in a few minutes all is over. Then the marauder, after wiping his bill on a branch, will betake himself away as silently as he came. If we follow his lumbering flight with our eyes we will see him light upon the top of some tree at a considerable distance and there give vent to a series of strident caws. This, no doubt, is his way of expressing satisfaction over his successful foray.—Forest and Stream.

A Bridge Fiend's Ultimatum.

The lady was preparing for her first trip abroad. She consulted her doctor as to the best course to pursue to avoid seasickness. He advocated eating heartily. Another doctor, to whom she mentioned her doubts, advised her to refrain from eating. In despair at such conflicting advice, she consulted a third physician and asked which was right.

"Both, my dear madam, both," he replied. "It just depends upon whether you prefer to discard from strength or weakness."—Lippincott's.

Not Afraid of Slipping.

Michael Dugan, a journeyman plumber, was sent by his employer to the Hightower mansion to repair a gas leak in the drawing room. When the butler admitted him he said to Dugan:

"You are requested to be careful of the floors. They have just been polished."

"They's no danger iv me slipping on thim," replied Dugan. "I boy spiked in me shoes."—Lippincott's.

DYNAMITE AND ICE.

A Strenuous Day in the Arctic With Peary on the Roosevelt.

I think that none of the members of the Peary expedition will ever forget the 30th of August. The Roosevelt was klicked about the floes as if she had been a football. The game began about 4 o'clock in the morning. I was in my cabin trying to get a little sleep with my clothes on, for I had not dared to remove them for a week. My rest was cut short by a shock so violent that before I realized that anything had happened I found myself on deck—a deck that inclined to starboard some 12 to 15 degrees. I ran, or, rather, climbed, the deck to the port side and saw what had happened. A big toe rushing past with the current had picked up the grounded berg to which we were attached by the hawsers and dashed it against the Roosevelt and clear along her port side as if that thousand-ton berg had been a toy. The berg brought up against another one just aft of us, and the Roosevelt slipped from between the two like a greased pig.

As soon as the pressure was relaxed and the ship regained an even keel we discovered that the cable which had been attached to the floe berg at the stern had become entangled with the propeller. It was a time for lightning thought and action, but by attaching a heavier cable to the parted one and taking a hitch around the steam capstan we finally disentangled it.

This excitement was no sooner over than a great berg that was passing near us split in two of its own accord, a cube of some twenty-five or thirty feet just missing our quarter by only a foot or two. "Bergs to the right of them, bergs to the left of them, bergs on top of them," I heard somebody say as we caught our breath at this miraculous escape. The ship was now quite at the mercy of the drifting ice, and with the pressure from the outer pack the Roosevelt again careened to starboard. I knew that if she were driven any higher on to the shore we would have to discharge a large part of the coal in order to lighten her sufficiently to get her off again, so I decided to dynamite the ice.

I told Bartlett to get out his batteries and dynamite and to smash the ice between the Roosevelt and the heavy floes outside, making a soft cushion for the ship to rest on. The batteries were brought up from the lazaret, one of the dynamite boxes lifted out with caution, and Bartlett and I looked for the best places in the ice for the charges. Several sticks of dynamite were wrapped in pieces of old bagging and fastened on the end of long spruce poles, which we had brought along specially for this purpose. A wire from the battery had, of course, been connected with one of the primers buried in the dynamite. Pole, wire and dynamite were thrust down through a crack in the ice at several places in the adjacent floe. The other end of each wire was then connected with the battery, every one got away to a respectful distance on the far side of the deck, and a quick, sharp push on the plunger of the battery sent the electric current along the wires.

Rip! Bang! Boom! The ship shook like a dish of jelly, and a column of water and pieces of ice went flying a hundred feet into the air, geyser fashion. The pressure of the ice against the ship being thus removed, she righted herself and lay quietly on her cushion of crushed ice, waiting for whatever might happen next.—Commander R. E. Peary in Hampton's Magazine.

MacMahon and Grevy.

In Paris in the revolution of 1830 a law student was soundly kicked by one of the king's officers for tearing down a copy of the ordinances placarded on the wall. The officer was armed, the student was not, so the latter ran away. Nearly a half century later, in 1870, the officer called upon the student to bid him goodby, having just resigned the presidency of the French republic on account of a radical difference with the majority of the national assembly on questions of state policy. He combined with his adieu also a graceful word of congratulation on the student's election to succeed him in the presidential chair. The student was Jules Grevy; the officer was Patrice de MacMahon, who died ripe in years and honors.

The Falkland Islands.

The Falkland islands are among the least known and most out of the way corners of the widely scattered British empire. They form a sort of British suburb of the south pole, some 500 miles from the antarctic end of America, Cape Horn. A former governor of the Falkland islands, the late Sir William Robinson, used to say that he would have committed suicide while there if he could have found a tree tall enough to hang himself on.—London Standard.

Very Unconventional.

"Is this proposal the result of a bet or a joke or a dare?" asked the girl. "No, I ask you to marry me because I love you." "It is unusual; but, after all, the unusual is the proper paper nowadays. I accept you, Algernon."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Fellow in Love.

Prue—Do you think he was sincere when he said he loved you? Dolly—I'm sure of it. He looked too foolish to be making believe.—Lippincott's.

Whoever enjoys not life I count him but an apparition, though he wears about him the visible affections of flesh.—Sir Thomas Browne.

ILL TIMED APPLAUSE.

It Distracts the Players and Annoys the Audience.

Applause, the strongest tonic to the actor, sometimes annoys your true artist. If it hails the action of the play too long or if it draws the sentence just begun it is exasperation to the judicious in the audience. The brighter the dialogue the more irritating is anything that distracts from it. It is the fashion at our theaters, especially on first nights, to greet each player vociferously in such a way as to mar the pleasure of the performance, if it contains any.

Here is a practice from which the thoughtless or the overenthusiastic should forbear. It may take the mind of the actor off his work in hand if he is the object of a great deal of applause and may have the like effect on some who do not receive any such mark of esteem when others are getting a too generous share of it.

There is plenty of time between acts for this handclapping, which the players can appreciate much better than when they are taxing their memories for the text of their parts and trying to concentrate on their work. It is not in good taste to approve with mere noise a scene or a situation when the enjoyment of it by one's neighbor may be heightened by the absence of such distraction. There is vast room for the improvement of general playhouse manners, but inconsiderate and promiscuous approbation of acting while the story is flowing from the stage is one of the chief drawbacks to enjoyment of the drama. Encouragement by managers to such custom in the mistaken belief that it adds to the general pleasure of patrons is largely responsible for its increasing base.—New York Press.

When the Commons Was a Shield.

In modern times when the British parliament is dissolved it means that the members must look to their bank books for election expenses. Formerly it spurred them to desperate shifts to avoid bankruptcy and arrest for debt, for with the dissolution of parliament went the member's prized privilege of immunity from his creditors. Down to the middle of the last century no civil action for the recovery of debt could be directed against members of parliament, so that a seat in parliament was the spendthrift's invulnerable defense, or, as Disraeli wrote, the only way to keep some men "out of the house of correction is to get them into the house of commons."

Australia.

While Australia is the fifth of the great continents of the earth, with single states larger than historic kingdoms and empires, the London Standard notes that it has fewer inhabitants than those for whom the police force of London is responsible. In population it is no greater than Belgium, a tiny shred of flat country that would be lost in the back lands of Queensland or South Australia. In fact, Australia has only a small fringe of population sparsely strewn along the seacoast, too few in number even to hold that rim except in dots and patches, while the natural increase of population is below that of most other nations.

"Well?"

"And she gets the other half before the week is up."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Genius the Fruit of Hard Work.

The published production of genius is like the personation of an actor on the stage. We see it and judge of it as it is presented, without thinking or caring by what means he has arrived at his superiority. Research, reflection, study, are not taken into account. It is the effect of his work, not the work, that we consider. Quite likely we explain his impressiveness, his influence upon us, his naturalness, as we choose to style it, by pronouncing him a genius, just as we explain discoveries in science, accomplishments in art, triumphs in literature. They are what they are because they have sprung from genius. The measureless work which has aided, shaped, ripened, expressed the genius is not remembered, nor is it generally suspected.—Junius Henri Browne.

Mr. London writes: "If I owned your Tea, I would guarantee a cure or refund their money. I say it's Nature cure and the only one for the blood." Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea cured him where other remedies failed. Try it with yours. If. Jno. L. Wooten.

Japanese Mechanics.

Japanese mechanics are about as good workmen as you will find anywhere. Every common carpenter is a cabinetmaker, and many of the stonecutters would pass as sculptors. The painters have some artistic ability, and ordinary masons lay walls which would be a surprise to our people of that trade in the United States.

Here in Japan the master carpenters receive 65 cents a day and the best men under him 40 and 50 cents. This is for nine or ten hours' work. These carpenters are fully the equal of any we have at home. They do the work in just the opposite ways from ours. They pull the plane toward them instead of pushing it from them, and they pull the hand-saw. Nevertheless their joints fit, and a great part of their house-making consists of sliding walls which move in grooves.—Boston Globe.

Mrs. Kate Hall says: "I have, kept house 15 years, am the mother of four children, and I would not keep house without Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea." Wise woman, why? Drives away sickness, brings health and happiness to the whole family. It's the world's health preserver. Jno. L. Wooten.
