SUPERIOR COURT.

April Term in Session in The City Hall.

The April term of Pitt superior court began this morning, the sessions being held in the city hall which had been tendered by the town since the burning of the court house. The hall will not hold as large a crowd as did the court house, but it has been provided with seats so that all having business with the court can be accommodated, with some room to spare for spectators.

Judge R. B. Peebles is presiding at this term, and Solicitor C. L. Abernethy representing the State.

The grand jury is composed of the following: B. F. Manning, foreman, M. M. Ewell, Asa Jones, D. C. Davenport, D. C. Jackson, L. M. Manning, J. M. C. Nelson, J. S. Porter, F. T. Satterfield, W. F. Harris, J. I. Manning, G. E. Jackson, C. M. Tucker, J. H. Boyd, J. D. Fleming, J. B. Buck, B. W. Tucker, J. A. Williams.

In beginning his charge to the grand jury, Judge Peebles said the United States has the best laws of any country on the globe, and no State in the Union has better laws than North Carolina, but these good laws amount to nothing unless properly executed. There are no more important officers for the execution of the laws than the grand jurors and petit jurors, and these should so perform their duties that any man, it matters not how humble he may be, can come before the court with a feeling that he will get justice.

In calling attention to crimes, Judge Peebles only mentioned a few, the capital offences and some new laws, mainly elopement with a married woman, setting fire to one's own woods without giving two days' notice in writing, and the statute in regard to liquor, making the buyer guilty as well as the seller.

Mr. D. D. Gardner Dead.

Mr. D. D. Gardner died at 11:30 o'clock, Sunday night, at his home on Third street, after an illness covering several months. He was 66 years of age, a native of Wilson county, and moved to Greenville some twenty years ago.

Mr. Gardner was twice married, his first wife being Miss Olivia Davis, of Lenoir county. By this marriage there are six living children, Messrs. J. Z. Gardner, of Greenville; W. D. Gardner, of Snow Hill; A. D. Gardner, of Oxford; Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, of Wilmington; Mrs. H. O. Abbott, of Hamlet and Mrs. C. G. Whitehurst, of Bethel.

Some years after the death of his first wife he married Mrs. Willie E. Whitehurst, of Martin county, who with three small children survive him.

The funeral will take place Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. H. Shore, the interment being in the Episcopal cemetery. The pall bearers will be Messrs. Sam Flake, A. C. Holloman, J. A. Ricks, F. E. Mayo, T. E. Moore and Paul Mitrick.

Hail Storm.

Sunday there was a heavy hail storm in Carolina township. Parties who saw it tell us the hail stones were very large and enough of them to cover the ground.

STATE NEWS.

Newsy Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Greensboro, April 23.—The decomposed body of a white man about 35 years old was found in Piedmont park by two boys this afternoon. Other than cards bearing the names of a Richmond cafe and a Richmond clothing house there is no clue to his identification. The body had apparently been lying where found for a month or six weeks. Coroner Wood held an investigation tonight, but found nothing indicating foul play.

Raleigh, April 23.—Solomon Shepard, the desperate negro convict serving 30 years for the murder of Engineer Holt of the Southern Railway at Durham, made a murderous assault on Lewis Harris, a fellow convict, in the barber shop of the penitentiary this afternoon, cutting Harris' throat almost from ear to ear and barely missing the jugular vein. Only the fact that a guard leaped from the top of a nearby cell and felled him with his billet prevented murder.

One of the largest seizures of whiskey ever known in this state took place Wednesday, when 27,000 gallons were taken on the place of N. Glenn Williams, in Yadkin county, for alleged irregularities. Deputy Marshal Harkrader, of Charlotte, is in charge of the raid. He is having all the goods regauged, it being suspected that the owner of a vast amount of whiskey and brandy in barrels comprised a good deal more than the gauger's report showed. It is said that Mr. Williams has shipped more than 20,000 gallons of whiskey and brandy since prohibition went into effect in North Carolina two years ago. He had on hand at the time about 50,000 gallons, it is said.—Winston special to Charlotte Observer.

Mr. J. I. Thomason Supreme Deputy F. M. C.,
Wilson, N. C.

Dear Sir:
I beg to acknowledge receipt of check for $3,000 from the Mystic Circle, in settlement of policy in this order, by the late A. P. Branch. Full settlement was made within ten days from date of mailing claim.

Respectfully,

Mrs. Annie H. Branch,
Administratrix.

Mr. Branch was a member of the Mystic Circle fifteen years. Wilson Ruling No. 305 was organized twenty years ago and is one of the best beneficial orders. Their rates are based on The National Fraternal Congress table, which is considered by insurance experts, as correct. If you want insurance protection at full protection cost without the investment feature, you would do well to see Jas. I. Thomason, State Deputy. If you want investment see the Savings Banks or Building & Loan.—Wilson Times.

Result of a Mass Meeting of Beaufort Citizens.

Washington, N. C., April 23.—A large mass meeting of citizens of Washington and Beaufort county, called by agreement between the solicitor of this district and the board of county commissioners, was held in the court house in this city at noon today for the purpose of deciding whether the bill of indictment brought in against the commissioners at the last term of Superior court for failure to provide a better court house should be prosecuted. The court house was filled to overflowing and a great deal of interest was exhibited. Solicitor Ward spoke to the assembly for something over an hour on the matter in question. His speech was a delightful surprise to his many friends and made a very fine impression his audience.

As a result of the meeting, the proceedings against the board of commissioners will not be pressed and the matter is left open as before. It was apparent that the temper of the assemblage was changed from one of hostility to good feelings. The needs of a new court house for Beaufort county are apparent to every one and from such expressions of public sentiment as were heard it is reasonably certain that Beaufort will provide itself with a proper building in the near future.

MEETING IN METHODIST CHURCH

Interest Increasing With Every Service.

The meeting in the Methodist church conducted by Rev. J. A. Parker, of Louisburg, is growing in interest. Three services were held Sunday, all of them well attended. There were a large number of men present at the Sunday afternoon service and Mr. Parker spoke to them from the text "Every one of us must give account of himself to God".

The largest congregation was Sunday night when the main auditorium of the church was completely filled. At that time Mr. Parker gave one of his best sermons from the text "And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Several requests for prayer were made at this service.

Mr. Parker's beautiful solos are much enjoyed. The service tonight begins at 7.45.

Bridge Washed Away.

The recent rains have caused a big freshet in Tar river. The water is so high that late Saturday afternoon the county bridge at Pillsboro, about 10 miles above Greenville, was washed away. A considerable section of the bridge floated down to about 3 miles from town and lodged in the low grounds. The part of the bridge washed away was about 200 feet long. Mr. G. V. Smith and another man were at work on it when it broke loose, and were carried some distance before being rescued. They had a thrilling experience.

Heavy Rains.

A while before day Sunday morning this section had a heavy rain accompanied by loud thunder. There was another rain about midday.

This week will put April out of business. It may for a fact.

BUILDING AND LOAN.

There Are Ninety-Nine Associations in the State.

Building and Loan Associations in this State are under the supervision of the insurance department and the forthcoming report of Commissioner Young will show 99 associations reporting and that there was incorporated during the year eleven associations. The report will show that there are 19,959 white shareholders and 3,832 colored shareholders. Shares subscribed for during the year were $2,200, and withdrawn or matured $3,829. Total shares in force at the end of the year (December 31, 1909,) were 171,159.

The report also shows as total receipts of the 99 associations $4,607,048.11, and disbursements of $4,606,650.17. The associations report as loans $6,661,741.69 with total assets of $6,802,554.64. The associations report as surplus $179,791.73. This report makes a good showing and will show a decided gain in building and loan associations in this State. They not only enable the working people of our cities and towns to lay by something for the future and to build their homes, but will also make it possible for the rapid growth of the cities and towns by the erection of buildings for this class of our citizens.—Raleigh Evening Times.

DEBATE WITH WASHINGTON.

Several Greenville People Should Go With the Boys

The debate between the high schools of Washington and Greenville will be held in the auditorium of the city public school building in Washington next Friday night, beginning at 8.30 o'clock. The contest will be about an hour and a half long. Greenville will be represented by Linda J. Smith and Benj. Taylor. Adrian Brown will act as secretary during the debate.

I very much hope a large number of people will go from Greenville to hear the debate. I think the contest will be an interesting one, and the Greenville speakers can present their side of the question with more ease and force if they have some home people in front of them.

Those who desire to go can leave Greenville at 4.43 p. m. and return the next morning at 8.10. I am informed that a boat will probably be operated; it will leave here Friday afternoon and return after the debate.

Child Has Narrow Escape.

A sensation has been created in the neighborhood of Pelham, Rockingham county, as the result of the narrow escape of the four-year-old boy of Charles Patterson, a well known farmer, from being buried alive. The Danville Bee says the child was taken suddenly ill a few days ago and suffered from what appeared to be convulsions, passing into a state of unconsciousness that was mistaken for death. The child was prepared for burial and after being placed in a casket removed to the Hickory Grove church to await the funeral ceremonies.

A number of men and women of the neighborhood remained in the church auditorium with the casket, and prompted by a desire to get a parting look at the child, one of the party slipped back the glass pane from the coffin, revealing the features. The face was observed to be flushed and the body was then touched by a member of the party. It was found to be warm and the blood evidently was circulating freely through the veins and arteries. Horrified at the peculiar and distressing discovery, a physician was hurriedly sent for. The child, however, after a number of tests had been resorted to, never regained consciousness, and passed away to the Great Beyond before the doctor arrived. The incident, however, resulted in delaying the funeral for one day longer, to put at ease all doubts that the little one was really dead.—Winston Sentinel.

"Yes, me tellible awful," was the reply. "Me callee in another doctor. He give me medicine; me velly, velly bad. Me callee in another doctor. He come and give me more medicine, make me velly, velly badder. Me callee in Sing Loo. He no come. He save my life."—Birmingham (England) Post.

If you fail to pay your poll tax this week, you can save yourself embarrassment next fall by not trying to vote.

Yes, you had better stay quiet sometime, for we are keeping an eye on you.

Judge Guion's decision that State bonds owned by banks are indirectly taxable and entering into the value of the shares of the banks raises an interesting question and one that will have a distinct bearing upon the prices to be obtained for a forthcoming large issue of refunding bond. The non-taxability of the State's securities is one of their most attractive features. If banks are not permitted to benefit by such provision, they will of course be to a great extent kept out of the market. On the other hand, should they be permitted to avoid taxation by the measure of bonds held, $4,000,000 now declared by the corporation commission assessable for taxation will be withdrawn.—Wilmington Star.

Defective Jury System.

The law of selecting jurors in murder trials in North Carolina needs to be changed. The defense has an unfair advantage of the State in the matter of challenges and the average man who is competent for jury service is ineligible under the very nature of things. If a man has brains enough to form an opinion and sense enough to express an opinion after he has formed it, he may be excused no matter how honest and fair minded he may be, although he has heard but one side of the question. If however, he never reads a newspaper, never discussed the subject with his neighbors, knows nothing about the case at issue, or little of anything else for that matter, and has not formed or expressed an opinion as to one's guilt or innocence, such a man is competent to sit in the jury box, "hear the evidence and render a verdict accordingly." And it is not infrequently occurs that what the lawyers say has more influence upon some such jurors than the sworn testimony of witnesses in the case.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

Would Like to Give Cotton a Lift.

Mecklenburg county is having quite a snappy time in the political field just at present. A Democratic primary is to be held in that county June 25 and while there appears "no burning" questions to get wildly excited over, yet already the woods are full of candidates, the latter in marked contrast to "down this way." Already in Mecklenburg, there are three candidates for sheriff, three for treasurer and four for clerk of the court. That is the number appearing in the papers, but of course there may be more. We notice that our old friend Mr. O. O. Moore, is in the race for clerk, and we only wish we were qualified to go to Mecklenburg and drop a ballot in for him on the day of election. We hope he lands, because he is a man of splendid calibre and one that deserves office at the hands of his fellow Democrats. We cast our vote for him at the last Democratic State convention and glory in having done so.—Wilmington Dispatch.

From Thursday, April 28 to May 10, there will be open in Raleigh the American tuberculosis exhibition, free of charge to all citizens of Wake county. The purpose is to inform the people about tuberculosis or consumption, a disease which is not inherited, which is preventable and curable, and which is contracted by infection or the spread of the seeds from the bodies of consumptives who are careless about expectoration.

A Detroit minister declares that Hades is full of peek-a-boo shirt waists. Still if any garments are to be worn there at all he hardly could expect the women to go around in fur cloaks, could he?—Wilmington Dispatch.

PAGANINI.

A Genius That Touched the Lute Dividing Sanity From Madness.

If ever there was a genius it was Paganini, the violinist, and probably no one has ever approached as near without crossing the border line that divides sanity and madness.

The violin thus opportunely rescued came into his possession very curiously. When he was a lad, Paganini, the painter, came one day to his father's house and, putting into the lad's hand a priceless Stradivarius and the score of a concerto of great difficulty, said:

"This," indicating the violin, "shall be yours if you play this," indicating the sheet of music, "at sight without a fault."

"You have lost your instrument, sir," said the youthful Nicolo and proceeded to play the concerto through.

Here is a pen picture of the great violinist by one who was present at one of his triumphs:

"He looked," says this eyewitness, "like an indifferently dressed skeleton. His figure was of astonishing gauntness and angularity and his walk shambling and awkward. But his face, lit up by a pair of great, dark, flaming eyes, was of a pallor quite extraordinary, even ghastly, and had a look of almost eagle sharpness, sometimes varied by a sardonic grin or a look of almost diabolical fury. He came on to the stage limping, having run a nail into his heel. At all times odd looking his appearance in these circumstances was ludicrous, and there was some tittering among the audience."

"As he stood, he settled himself on one hip at a gaunt angle, and one found oneself wondering how he could hold his violin, much less play it. Just as he began a candle fell on his desk—more laughter. Presently his first string broke—more laughter. But he played the rest of the piece through on three strings, and now the laughter was changed into tumultuous applause, which, as the evening wore on, became simply frantic."

Verily, great wit is oft to madness near allied.—London Family Herald.

The Growth of Seaweed.

Seaweeds vary surprisingly in their habits of life. Some species grow altogether beneath the water, attaching themselves below the lowest tide level; others frequent heights where they are left dry at every retreating tide, while others yet are found in situations where they are scarcely ever covered by water. Whereas most of them attach themselves to rocks or solid bottom, keeping to the shallows, there are exceptions to the rule, among which the most remarkable is the sargasso or gulf weed, which floats on the surface of the ocean. Immense fields of it are seen by the navigator, extending as far as the eye can reach. It is sometimes so abundant as seriously to interfere with the progress of ships, and it was this which so alarmed the crew of Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.

Idiosyncratic Problems.

Sociology, if it is to deserve the name of science, must soon turn itself to a quantitative and qualitative analysis and synthesis of certain phenomena which now go about unattached, unshelved, as it were. For instance, how many freaks does it take to make one fad, how many fads to make a fashion? How many cranks must be gathered together in one place before we have a cult? What relation does a cult bear to a movement? What is the comparative proportion of ideas to each of the categories here mentioned?

The permutations and combinations of these tentative queries are infinite.—Judge's Library.

Managing John.

"John," she said softly, "have you been saying anything about me to mother lately?"

"No," replied John. "Why do you ask?"

"Because she said this morning that she believed you were on the eve of proposing to me. Now, I do not wish you to speak to mother when you have said anything that she will hear."

And with that he would.

HIS FIRST GRIZZLY.

A Curious Hunting Experience In British Columbia.

While hunting wild goats in northern British Columbia, W. H. Wright had a peculiar experience which shows that in hunting, as in other matters, it is more often than not the unexpected that happens. In his book "The Grizzly Bear" he describes the incident:

Mr. Pope joined me the last of August, and we worked our way back to where I had seen the goats, this being the game we had come to hunt.

When near the point where we intended to leave our horses I looked up to our right and on top of the ridge above the timber line saw a large grizzly running for all he was worth.

I called Pope's attention to him, and as he was entirely out of range, being some 800 yards away, and as we supposed from his rapid flight that he had seen us we sat quietly on the horses and looked at him. The horses, too, saw the bear, and they also watched him.

For 200 yards or so he continued his flight, and then, to our amazement, he turned down the ridge and came straight toward us on the jump. This was another story. We both dismounted, I held the horses by their heads so they could not make any disturbance, and Pope stepped a few feet ahead and dropped on one knee, ready for a shot in case the bear came near enough.

The bear came on downhill at the same mad gait until he had covered half the distance and was not over 400 yards above us, when he dashed into a little thicket of fir bushes and disappeared.

We discussed our chances of crawling up to him. We saw the bushes sway; out jumped the grizzly, and down he came straight toward us. It seemed as if he must surely have seen us, and he actually came up within 150 yards of us, when he turned to the left, stopped and commenced digging out a ground squirrel.

This was our chance. The bear was standing broadside on, and Pope fired. He hit him just back of the shoulder and pierced the heart. It was a good shot.

The bear turned a somersault, cart wheeled down toward us and never stopped until he landed in the little trail that we were following.

This was Pope's first grizzly, and from the stories he had been told of how wild these bears were and how hard to kill he had felt that it was doubtful if he ever got one. Yet we had been standing, with the two horses, all the time in plain view. Not a bush screened us, and the horses kept their ears pointed forward and watched the bear from the time he left the ridge until Pope shot him.

Mozart and Beethoven.

The stories of how men of genius have had future fame predicted for them in their early youth must generally be taken with a considerable grain of salt. As authentic as most is the account of the first meeting of Mozart with the young Beethoven, which took place on the latter's first visit to Vienna in the year 1787. Mozart, then at the height of his fame, asked him to play, but, thinking his performance a prepared piece, paid little attention to it. Beethoven, seeing this, entreated Mozart to give him a subject, which he did, and the boy, getting excited with the occasion, played so finely that the composer of "Don Giovanni," stepping softly into the next room, said to his friends there: "Pay attention to him. He will make a noise in the world some day or another."—Chambers' Journal.

Why Two Ears Are Necessary.

Sound travels by waves radiating from a central point of disturbance, just as waves radiate when a stone is dropped into still water. So far as the hearing of each individual is concerned, these waves move in a direct line from the cause of the sound to his ear, the impact being the greatest in the ear nearest to the source. This being the case, a person who has totally lost the sense of hearing in one ear, although he may imagine that the defect is of little consequence, cannot locate the direction of a sound to save his life, even when the center of disturbance is quite near him.

His Views on Suffrage.

When a female canvasser asked an old farmer to sign a petition in favor of a woman's movement he eyed the document for awhile with suspicion. "No, I'm again, it sure," was the reply, with the emphasis of a man who had had some domestic infelicity. "A woman who's allus signing petitions is allus getting her name in the papers."—Home Journal.

THE POISON CURARI.

Mysterious Mixture Makes Deer Wounded to Death. Bold.

Curari, the vegetable poison with which the Indians of the upper Amazon tip their hunting arrows, remains a mystery in its composition after a hundred years of investigation by scientists. The Indians will sell it for its weight in silver, but will not reveal the plants from which it is derived. Not long ago a professor in a German university was sent to the Amazon wilderness for the express purpose of discovering the secret, for curari, or urari, as it is otherwise called, is now thought to be of great value in medicine. The professor lived two years in Indian villages, and while he was permitted to witness the boiling of the "witches' broth," which lasted several days, he could not tell what plants went into the brew. Returning from his baffled quest, down the Amazon with a quantity of the poison, the professor was met by another traveler, Dewey Austin Cobb, who had got possession of a native blowgun. The latter tells in the National Geographic Magazine how he put some of the professor's curari on some of his blowgun arrows, which are like toothpicks feathered with cotton, and tried it on a buck deer in the forest.

"After a deliberate aim our hunter fired," says Mr. Cobb, "if I may use such a word for the little puff, scarcely heard by us and entirely inaudible above the rustling corn leaves at the distance of the deer. The animal gave a slight start as it felt the prick of the arrow on its flank and turned partly around, sniffing the air for a scent and looking about as if searching for the insect that had bitten or stung it. Detecting nothing, it stood still and unalarmed. At the end of a minute or a minute and a half at most its head dropped a little, as if it was sleepy."

"We all approached its side, and the hunter laid a hand on its shoulder. It looked up at him, but showed no resentment or fear. Even its breathing seemed easy and natural, which surprised me, as I had heard that death resulted from paralysis of the lungs when caused by urari. At the end of ten minutes, though it opened its eyes when touched, its breath became shorter and slower. Eighteen minutes after it was struck by the arrow it was dead."

The Basking Shark.

The ferocity of sharks is not necessarily in proportion to their size. For example, there is the great basking shark, so called because of its habit of lying motionless at the surface of the water. It often attains a length of nearly forty feet, but its teeth are small comparatively, and it probably never attacks man, depending upon small fishes and crustacea for its diet. Another name for this species is "sailfish," because of its great back fin, which shows out of the water like a sail when it is basking. Although sluggish ordinarily and easily harpooned, it exhibits great activity and enormous strength when struck, diving immediately to the bottom and requiring a great length of rope to hold it. These basking sharks are caught for their livers off the coast of Iceland, and the oil obtained is used to adulterate cod liver oil.

A Household Industry.

The advertisements were the most interesting things in the paper, according to Mr. Hobart's ideas. He read them to his wife as she sat at work on the stockings of their active son.

"No need to spend your time hunting for antiques now," said Mr. Hobart after skimming the cream from a long article, as was his wont. "Here's a man that will undertake and guarantee to make your new furniture look as if 'twas a hundred years old by a process known only to him."

"I don't see any need of processes for our furniture," remarked Mrs. Hobart as she cast a hopeless stocking to the flames of the Franklin front. "Tommy's feet are all the process we need. Perhaps we could rent him out by the day."—Youth's Companion.

Bad Hand Made Him Money.

When Lord Curzon was at Oxford he wrote an abominable hand. One day he penned two letters, one of them to a relative and one to a chum with whom he always discussed the faults of their respective relations, and accidentally put these letters into the wrong envelopes. He was about to write a profound apology to his relative when he received the following note from him: "Can't read a word of your four pages, but guess you want some money, you young rascal." Enclosed was a Bank of England note for a good amount.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S WHIM.

The Practical Joke a Celebrated Man Played on Posterity.

One of the most famous of post-mortem jokes was that perpetrated by the donor of the celebrated Soane museum of pictures and other valuable objects of art to England, the late Sir John Soane, who died in 1837. In his will Sir John made provision for the opening of three sealed cupboards on certain specified dates in the presence of the trustees. In 1806—that is to say, almost thirty years after the death of the testator—the first of the mysterious receptacles was with much ceremony and breaking of seals opened in the presence of a committee of men, with the then president of the Royal Academy, Sir F. Grant, at their head. Instead of a priceless treasure or some evidence that would throw an entirely new light upon some doubtful incident in political history the contents of the cupboard proved to be worthless accounts, letters and stationery.

Twenty years passed by, and the interest that had smoldered after the disappointment of 1806 was again fanned into flame at the prospect of breaking the seals of the second cupboard, at which rite there were present, among others, Dr. Alfred Waterhouse, R. A., and Sir (then Dr.) B. W. Richardson. Like the cupboard mentioned to the well known nursery rhyme, Sir John's second cabinet proved "bare" of any sensation, the contents being chiefly composed of letters relating to certain long forgotten family quarrels that had not even the merit of being interesting. If some of those authorized to be present at the opening of the third and last receptacle of mystery were dubious about the profit that would accrue by letting the light of day fall upon the contents thereof after sixty years' darkness, one at least, Sir B. W. Richardson, looked forward with unabated interest to that day in 1836 when the last seal would be broken and the mystery solved, but he, alas, died just two days before the ceremony was performed, and the fact that Sir John had played a practical joke upon posterity was duly confirmed by the presence of a collection of perfectly worthless letters and papers.

The Only Original.

George Washington was very small, very black and very new to the life of the public school which he had just entered. His family had emigrated to the city from some unknown wilderness, and the officials of the school board had discovered little George and brought him into line with the prospects of the higher education. It was his first day, and the teacher was trying to make him at home.

"And so your name is George Washington?" said the teacher.

"Yassum, Jorge Washin'ton."

"And I suppose you try to be as like him as a little boy can, don't you?"

"Lak who, mam?" "Like George Washington." The youngster looked puzzled. "Ah 'kain't help bein' lak Jorge Washin'ton," he replied stoutly, "cos that's who Ah am."—Youth's Companion.

His Gentle Request.

According to Harper's, there is a lad of ten living in a town where the schoolmasters still employ the rod in order that the child may not be spoiled who found himself liable to that form of chastisement at the hands of the teacher.

As the youngster approached the principal the fierce aspect of the latter's countenance, together with the sight of the unpraised cane, quite undid him, and he began to blubber.

Then, innocently and doubtless with some vague recollection of a visit to the dentist, he stammered: "Please sir, may—may—I take gas?"

The Deathwatch.

A popular belief is that the sound produced by a little insect known as a "deathwatch" portends the death of some relative or friend. That the noise made by this little creature resembles the ticking of a watch is undisputed, but that it in anywise foretells the dissolution of a human being is absurd. Observation has established the fact that these little insects infest decaying timber and posts and that the peculiar noise is caused by them in gnawing and boring through the rotten wood fibers in quest of food.
