TOOK POISON THROUGH MISTAKE

Dr. Wm. C. Whitfield Took Dose of Aniline Dye for Taka Diastase.

Dr. William Cobb Whitfield, who accidentally took a dose of aniline dye. Saturday morning, has practically recovered from the poison and is able to be out. The accident occurred about as follows: Dr. Whitfield who was suffering with a slight attack of indigestion, asked his sister to hand him a bottle of taka diastase, which he had observed on a shelf on the back porch. Measuring out the required dose Dr. Whitfield took what he thought to be medicine. But no sooner had he taken it than he knew it to be something else. Inquiring revealed the fact that the bottle had been filled with some kind of dye, by some member of the family, some weeks previously the medicine having been used up. In the anxiety over the illness of their father the ladies forgot the fact. As the bottle was properly labelled, "Taka Diastase," and as the dye resembled the medicine, Dr. Whitfield was not aware of the real contents of the bottle. Prompt action prevented serious results and Dr. Whitfield is practically well. The rumor that Dr. Whitfield had given his father, Col. N. B. Whitfield, a dose of the medicine is absolutely false and without foundation.—Kinston Free Press.

Great Conference of the Methodists.

Asheville, N. C., May 3—From all parts of the country where there is a conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, delegates have poured into the city today for the quadrennial general conference, which begins its three weeks' session tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Bishops Wilson, Hendricks, Key, Candler, Morrison, Hess and Atkins are here, but Bishop Fitzgerald, it is feared, will not arrive as he is very feeble.

Fourteen extra Pullmans have arrived in the city, each with its full quota. Going several miles out from Asheville, each train was boarded by a reception committee and the handling of the delegates was thus greatly facilitated.

Statement From Dr. Fountain.

Editor Reflector:

Please allow me space to reply to the report of the grand jury to Superior court which appeared in your issue of Monday, May the 2nd.

In this report the committee of the grand jury stated that they had visited the county home and found everything in good condition with the exception of the medical attention.

Whoever gave this information to the committee sent there by the grand jury did willfully and maliciously lie.

This is not the first time that the grand jury has been selected as a cover for false statements made against me.

Men who select this method of assassinating the character of those who are doing their duty, are cowards of the lowest type. I will state further that I have visited the county home since this report, and without an exception, every inmate has expressed themselves as being perfectly satisfied with the medical attention they were getting.

Wm. Fountain,
Supt. of Health.

National Ginners' Report.

In a statement issued by the National Ginners' association it is estimated that the acreage planted to cotton in the Southern states on April 26 had been increased by seven-tenths of one per cent, as compared with the same date last year. In the Atlantic states a small increase is reported, while the valley states show a slight decrease because of the spread of the boll weevil. Texas shows a slight increase and Oklahoma about 10 per cent, not as much as indicated in March in either state. This is explained by the scarcity of feedstuffs increasing the acreage in corn, oats and alfalfa.

Reports to the association show that 64 per cent of the crop has been planted. The greater part of the plants which were up before the recent cold weather were killed except in central and southern Texas, and it is estimated that 14,000,000 acres should be replanted. With average weather a loss of 10 per cent in yield is produced.

STATE NEWS.

Wadesboro, N. C., May 3.—Mrs. J. M. Haire is quite sick at her home in the northern part of town. Her physicians, Drs. J. M. Covington & Son, have announced her trouble a typical case of pellagra.

Bailey, N. C., May 2.—The Rock Spring school closed last night with a splendid program, but when the little concert was about half over a rough crowd from the Mt. Pleasant neighborhood, about three miles from here, broke it up. It was a shame and a disgrace, for the teacher, Miss Susie Finch, had worked very hard and faithfully.

Acting upon information furnished him, Sheriff A. D. Warren, of Greene county, and a posse, Monday afternoon, captured a brand new moonshine outfit, about five miles from Snow Hill. The officer and his men went to the still and secreting themselves, awaited developments. Soon Fred McKeel arrived and was promptly placed under arrest. Later Z. V. Barrow came and was also arrested. Both men were taken to Snow Hill and given a hearing before a justice of the peace who bound them over to the Superior court.—Kinston Free Press.

Mr. W. B. Dorton has received a letter from his patent attorney notifying him that he has been granted the privilege of manufacturing and selling a drink vending machine he recently patented, and that his patent will be secured in a short time. The letter also stated that this was the only drink vending machine that had come under his observation that a lead nickle would not work. There is a small contrivance in the slot of the machine that will bend a lead nickle whenever it is put into the machine. Mr. Dorton has already received numerous offers for his patent.—Concord Times.

Lieutenant-Governor W. C. Newland, of Lenoir, is a visitor in Raleigh, and as there has been some talk that he would be a candidate for the next nomination for governor by the Democracy, he was asked concerning this. In reply Mr. Newland said: "It is too far off to talk about now, but I will say that in all probability I will be a candidate for governor. That is my intention now.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Raleigh, May 3—The biggest diamond rattlesnake ever found in North Carolina has just been received at the State museum from Havelock, Craven county. It measures six feet long and has a circumference of nine inches at its largest point. It was shipped to the museum dead and as yet no details as to how it was killed have been learned here. It is being carefully preserved by Curator H. H. Brimley.

Winston-Salem, May 3.—D. A. Tompkins, of Charlotte, who was to have spoken at the meeting of the board of trade here tonight, arrived here this morning from New York, where he went last week to attend the annual meeting of The Associated Press. He was taken ill on the train between New York and Washington and had to stop a day in the latter city. After his arrival here Mr. Tompkins was attended by a physician, who advised him to return home. He threatened with an attack of paralysis.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

Stockholders Re-elected Entire Board of Directors.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of The Home Building & Loan Association was held Tuesday night in the mayor's office, considerably more than a majority of the stock being represented. There was no business before the meeting except hearing a report from the auditing committee of the standing of the association for the past year, and the election of a board of directors. The present directors were all unanimously re-elected, as follows: R. C. Flangan, D. C. Moore, H. A. White, H. W. Whedbee, C. T. Munford, D. J. Whichard, S. T. White, B. W. Moseley, R. O. Jeffress, C. O. H. Laughinghouse, C. C. Vines and W. A. Bowen.

NOTES FROM HANRAHAN.

Hanrahan, N. C., May 3rd.

We wrote you last week but after we had sealed and directed what we had written we be thought ourselves, and behold it was Thursday and not Wednesday, and as your weekly comes out on Thursday morning of course we were one day too late. So we decided that we would be on time this week and send this in on Tuesday and if in your wisdom you see fit to publish this, with any of last week's that you may deem proper, then let it come.

On Thursday evening of last week about twenty of our young men and fair maidens, with a sufficiency of the older people of the community as chaperones, met here about sunset expecting to go to Ayden to hear Rev. Mr. Plyler, of Washington, preach. Because of those things that are at times unavoidable the whole crowd were disappointed in going to Ayden, but were not disappointed in having a splendid social time. We all gathered at the home of Samie Jackson and were highly entertained by several recitations rendered by Miss Lizzie Hines, our very efficient teacher. Mrs. Carrie Holloway and Miss Pearl Jackson gave us a few choice pieces that were well rendered, then we had songs and a real good time until 10 o'clock told us that it was time for working people to repair to their own homes. All went home feeling that there are more ways than one for people to get good out of this fleeting life.

Friday of this week will be commencement day with the graded school at Grifton.

Prof. Carile, of Wake Forest, will deliver the literary address at 11 a. m. Dinner will be spread on the grounds at 1 p. m. and a game of ball at 4 p. m. The commencement exercises will be at 8 p. m., so the day will be well filled in. Prof. Brothers and his corps of teachers have done a splendid year's work there, and we hope they will be retained for another year.

Our letter is growing too long, so we must close, but we do want to say that many of our men might learn a lesson, a valuable one, in gardening, by observing Miss Ophelia Collins' garden. She has by far the finest garden that we have seen, and she has done the work with her own hands. So ladies can teach us men many valuable lessons after all.

Passing along the streets some odors, as well as trash, are encountered.

AYDEN MAN DISAPPEARS.

Has Written From Norfolk to His Brother.

Ayden, May 3.—F. Lilly, a prominent merchant of Ayden, left yesterday morning for parts unknown. He leaves a wife and no children. He left a note in which was stated that he would never be seen around here again. He had been drinking some, and possibly other troubles led to leaving. He was a prominent Mason, K. of P., and a member of the M. E. church. His whereabouts are unknown. On Sunday he stated to some of his friends that if they ever expected to drink with him they had better do it then. He was registrar for the town election, which was to be held today, and when the time came for the opening of the polls he was not to be found. Whether he has committed suicide or left for other parts is not known, but the latter is more probable.

Seeing the above in this morning's Raleigh News and Observer, we phoned to Ayden for further particulars and learned that a brother of Mr. Lilly received a letter from him Tuesday night written from Norfolk. Mr. Lilly assigned no reason for leaving Ayden, but stated in the letter to his brother that he might return any time.

LINOTYPE ORDERED.

The Reflector twisted up its courage to the point of activity Tuesday, and took a step which has been in contemplation for some years, that was placing an order for a linotype machine. It is something we have wanted and needed for a long time, but as it meant an outlay of some thing over $3,500, it looked like a big venture for a country print shop. And so it is, but we have faith in the people of Greenville and Pitt county, and feel sure they will stand by us in this venture, for we believe they want their home paper to be progressive and better enabled to work for the advancement of the community. A good sum of money must be raised by the time this machine comes out of the factory, which will be early in June, and we hope every one who owes The Reflector will come to our help.

There is not an institution in Greenville doing more for the upbuilding of the community than The Home Building and Loan Association. While it is a good and safe thing for the investor, it is better for the borrower, the home builder, for through its aid a number of people are building houses that could not do so otherwise. The association is looked after by a board of directors who take much interest in it, and, without remuneration other than the satisfaction which comes from doing something for the community, give it their personal attention. The association is just four years old, and at the annual meeting of shareholders their confidence was shown in the board of directors by unanimously re-electing the entire twelve of them.

Raleigh did not get enough at the first mass meeting round, and has called another for the 14th.

The announcement of Congressman Godwin, of the sixth district, that he will again be a candidate for congress is pleasing to his host of friends, both in his district and throughout the state. Godwin is a very popular man, both in his district and in congress, and has done much since he was first elected for his district. North Carolina is very fortunate in having some splendid men to represent her on the Democratic side of the house. They are all men of influence and ability and the state could do no better than to keep every one of them there for many more years to come. It is always a good thing to keep a man in congress for several terms who shows that he can do something for his district. This is clearly shown in the case of Congressman Small, who has just landed such a big appropriation for the waterways in Eastern North Carolina. North Carolina is one state that should feel proud of her congressmen and we hope that she will keep them there as long as they do such good service for the state, and the longer good men stay, the more they can do for the state.—Raleigh Times.

The Asheville Citizen advocates the removal of the tax on mortgages, saying that it is a form of double taxation. "Double taxation is wrong," says the Greensboro Telegram, "but wouldn't it be fairer to remove the tax on the property mortgaged and steer around double taxation in that way? When property is mortgaged the man holding the mortgage is the one who possesses the thing of value. The person who gave the mortgage is only conditionally in possession of the property. In fairness he ought not to be forced to pay tax on it when in point of fact he does not own it."

You'd scarce expect one of my age, in merchandising to engage and hope to get a paying trade without the local paper's aid. And yet I did that very thing; I opened up a store last spring this month the sheriff took my stock and sold it at the auction block. Don't view me with a scornful eye, but simply say as I pass by, "there goes a fool who seemed to think he had no use for printer's ink." There is a truth as broad as earth and business men should know its worth; 'tis simply this, the public buys its goods from those who advertise.—Gaffney, S. C., Ledger.

A New Park for an Old One, How it Can be in Greenville.

The back aches at times with a dull, indelible feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the joints are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Greenville residents would do well to profit by the following example: Joseph Savage, Church street, Tarboro, N. C., says: "For some time my kidneys were disordered, the passages of the kidney secretions being scanty and at times painful. I had pains in my loins and if I stooped suddenly, sharp twinges caught me across the back, making it hard for me to sit at night. After trying a number of remedies without finding relief, I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. They removed the aches and pains and regulated the passages of the kidney secretions. I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the benefit I have derived from their use."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Catarrhal Asthma and Hay Fever.

Tens of thousands of sufferers from hay fever and catarrhal asthma find great comfort and quick relief by breathing Hymel.
Of course where asthma is not caused by a catarrhal condition, but by nervous contraction of the bronchial tubes, Hymel is not recommended.
But in a case of asthma where there is a discharge of mucous, breathing Hymel gives most wonderful relief by soothing the irritated and highly inflamed membrane.
Mr. W. A. White, R. F. D. No. 1, Evansport, writes: "I have been bothered with asthma for over five years but could not get any relief until I tried Hymel. I have spent lots of money on remedies for asthma and if I could not get another bottle I would not be without Hymel for $50. I recommend it."
A complete Hymel outfit, including hard rubber pocket inhaler, costs $1 with instructions for use in hay fever and asthma. Extra bottles of Hymel cost 50 cents at drugists, everywhere and at Coward & Wooten's.

THE MILKY WAY.

A Hundred Million Stars Gleam In That Silvery Scarf.

The census of the starry sky is concerned almost entirely with the Milky way. The number of stars not connected with it is negligible. But when you look at the Milky way the idea of numbering its stars seems the dream of a madman. It stretches all round the sky. Its extent is so unthinkably immense that science has never undertaken to measure it, and the imagination could not grasp the figures that such a measurement, if it was possible to make it, would involve.

Yet that whole enormous expanse of space occupied by the Milky way is so crowded with stars that they make upon the eye the impression of a silvery scarf wound round the brow of the universe.

It requires a telescope to see them as a broad zone of glittering points instead of an almost uniform band of whiteness in the firmament.

In some places they are more thinly scattered, so that, as you gaze through the glass, you almost think that, with infinite patience, you might count the number included in a space as large as the face of the moon.

But in other places they seem to be packed together like the sands of the seashore. They stretch away over thousands of square degrees of space, hanging in great festoons, spreading out in vast banners, where billions upon billions of cubic miles seem to be filled with stars thicker than the flakes in a driving snowstorm.

There are begemmed knots in that starry scarf so rich that the eye is dazzled and the mind confused by the spectacle which they present.

Yet science, although it shrinks from trying to estimate the space which they occupy, has succeeded in forming a fairly correct enumeration of the stars of the Milky way.

The most extravagant estimates do not put the number at more than 300,000,000, and the most trustworthy and probable make them a third less. A hundred million stars, then, is the total population of the glittering universe, and when we see what a marvelous effect of innumerable they produce we begin to appreciate what a hundred millions mean.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

BRITISH NAVAL DRILL

Practice That Keeps the Crews In Fit Condition.

CLEARING SHIP FOR ACTION.

A Lively Time While the Decks Are Being Stripped of Everything That Would Impede the Fire of the Guns. Working the Torpedo Nets.

It is a little after two bells in the forenoon watch, or, in shore going talk, 2 a. m., and the officers and men of the battleship wear an expectant air. The ship's company is fallen in at stations for general exercise. The commander, surrounded by his staff—a midshipman, a bugler and the chief boatswain's mate—is standing on top of the after barbettes. A kind of tense hush is over all hands and, indeed, over the rest of the squadron at anchor in the bay. It is a general drill morning, and the ships of the squadron are about to compete against each other at various evolutions.

On the after bridge the glasses of the signal boatswain and his yeomen are couched on the flagship. Presently a couple of gaily colored flags are hoisted at her main. Hardly have they left the rail when the signal boatswain spins round. "Signal 'place net defense, sir,'" he cries. "Out nets!" bawls the commander. "Out nets!" shout the boatswain's mates. Instantly hordes of men dash at the neat roll of wire nets lying on the shelf round the ship and push it overboard. One edge being held in place, it unrolls as it falls, making a veil on the side. "Clear the net shelf!" The men vanish. "Man the purchase!" Somewhere above a bugle blows out a "G."

The marines, handling large bearing out spars, shove the upper ends of the booms, from which the nets hang, outboard. They revolve slowly about their lower ends, which are near the water line and, hauled by the steam capstan on one side and the seamen on the purchase on the other, extend themselves at right angles to the hull. "Break!" bellows the commander, and a signalman jerks the halyards. A red, white and blue pendant, hitherto waiting in a ball at the topsail yardarm, breaks from its confinement and floats out on the breeze, announcing to all and sundry that the ship has finished the evolution and is now protected from torpedo attack by her crinoline of nets. "First ship, sir," reports the signal boatswain, and the men, once more at their general stations, grin contentedly and make contemptuous comments on the struggles of the remainder of the fleet. There is a short pause till these are ended; then another hoist rises from the flagship's bridge. "In nets!" is the order, and the ship's company is once more galvanized into action. Amid a scene of orderly confusion the huge booms return to position, shut back against the ship's side, the brails which pass beneath the nets every few yards are manned, all hands haul with a will, the mass of steel meshes is rolled up and secured on its shelf, and the bright pendant at the topsail yardarm is again broken by the signalman.

A short "Stand easy!" follows, soon ended by another signal, "Clear for action!" To the mind of the bewildered spectator pandemonium follows. But it is only in appearance. Each man knows what he has to do and does it. Under the onslaught of the seamen davits, stanchions, rails, stowpiles—in fact, all things that can possibly restrict the fire of the guns—disappear with a rapidity that gives the impression of their being mowed down; skylights are masked by steel hatches, boats are turned in and secured, and in two or three minutes the decks are stripped bare and the men again fallen in, awaiting the order to replace gear. This done—a longer job, but still accomplished with celerity—the last and most exciting signal of the forenoon appears—"Away all boats' crews; pull round the fleet."

The men tumble into their boats at the davits, the lowerers pay out the falls, and in a few moments the cutters, winters, gigs and galleys are pulling for dear life, a midshipman in charge of each. On the after bridge the commander, waving two small hand flags which control the huge steam derrick, is lifting the pinnace and launch from the boat deck and depositing them in the water. Men drop into them, double and treble banking the long oars, and soon these are pounding after the lighter boats.

The evolution is a race, ship against ship. Who will have the first boat back? Who will have all boats back and hoisted first? Midshipmen, probably with bets on the matter, are urging their crews on. Every man is putting his back into it for the honor of his ship. Telescopes watch progress from all the vessels of the fleet. Here comes the galley—the captain's boat, manned by a picked crew and dawning through the water under the long sweeping strokes of the oars—first boat back. Again the tricolor pendant flies out, and the captain's "doggie" (midshipman) climbs out of the galley's stern sheets, beaming all over his boyish countenance.

The boats are hoisted as they return, the men left on board manning the falls and running away with them to the sound of the ship's band playing on the shelter deck. Presently all is square again. The boatswain's mates pipe "Hands carry on smoking." The forenoon drills are over, and officers and men alike are in good humor, proud of the final signal received from the all powerful flagship: "Evolution smartly performed."—London Globe.

A GAME OF BALL.

How It May Strike a Stranger Who Sees It For the First Time.

Nothing has set America so high in the estimation of foreign nations, says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, as the adoption of baseball as the national sport. If a foreign spy wanders into America seeking to fathom our real inwardness and sees a game of baseball, any feeling of contempt for our newness gives way instantly to awestruck admiration. At his first glance baseball is to him a mystery, and it remains a mystery to him. He sees 30,000 men and women suffering the tortures of the lower regions on hot grand stands. He sees a man pick up a small white ball as hard as a pine knot. Facing him is another man who holds a smooth but deadly club in his hands. Behind this second man is a third man whose face is hidden behind a birdcage. Suddenly the man with the ball raises one foot in the air and shows the man with the bat the sole of his shoe. The man at the bat sees that there are spikes in the sole of the shoe, and it angers him, and he raises his bat to throw it at the man with the ball. "But—ah, ha!"—the man with the ball is too quick for him. He throws the hard, white ball at the man with the bat with all his strength. The man with the bat waves defiance by swinging the bat in the air. The ball proceeds. The batsman never flinches. Will the ball kill the man or will the impact crush the ball? But, see! The ball finds man unflinching; the ball is panic stricken; the ball dodges around the man; the ball is lost, buried in the huge leather chair cushion that covers the hand of the birdcage man behind the batsman! "Strike one!" says the umpire. Thirty thousand cheers! Why?

Grub Street's Pawshop.

If the Avanti is not the oldest and best known pawshop in the world it deserves to be. It has been in existence ever since the days of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson. It is in Fleet street—Grub street—and has been the poor writer's uncle for all these centuries and years. It has an old legend something like this: "Old Literary Friends Never Forgotten." There are many souvenirs, sayings and traditions of the greatest men on earth who, going broke, had to patronize it. Outside of its own name, it is well known as the Grub street pawshop.—London Mail.

Unspella.

The Newfoundland seal folk for some reason not given by the St. John's correspondent of the New York Sun describe their greasy spittle as "swells," and they also say they "spell" an object when they mean to carry it. One can imagine the amazement of the young cleric who on one occasion asked a burly hunter how he spelled "swells."

The Rest Cure.

"I hate to press this bill, Mr. Slow-pay," said the tailor, taking a much wrinkled memorandum of accounts from his pocket, "but"

"Oh, don't bother, Snip," said Slow-pay gently. "You don't need to press it. I don't mind the wrinkles in it at all. Fact is, I've got a dozen fresh copies of it at home already."—Judge.

OILED THE RAILS.

The Way a Runaway Locomotive Was Conquered.

One dark night when a conductor was taking three passenger cars through to a town called Sunbury he noticed the headlight of a locomotive in his rear. He instantly informed the engineer of the fact, and both began to speculate what it meant. The train was running at a high speed, but the headlight in the rear was steadily gaining on them.

As no lights were displayed in the rear of the headlight, they concluded that it must be an empty engine.

The road twists in and out among the mountains and skirts the banks of the Susquehanna river in such a way as to permit any one looking back to observe what is going on in the rear for a considerable distance.

The conductor ordered the engineer to put on more steam, so the latter pulled the throttle wide open. Then followed a wild chase. Pursued and pursuer tore along at the highest speed. Everybody on the cars believed that the engineer of the pursuing engine was either drunk or crazy.

Finally a bright idea occurred to the passenger engineer. He recalled the fact that a locomotive can make but little progress on greasy rails. Accordingly the contents of two large cans of lard oil were poured on the track from the rear of the last passenger coach. The idea proved a good one. Soon the headlight of the pursuing engine grew dim in the distance, and when it was safe to do so the train stopped and backed up to solve the mystery. An odd sight was revealed.

One of the finest engines on the road had broken away from the train shed at Williamsport and started down the track on a voyage of destruction. The oil poured on the track had baffled all the destructive ability that the locomotive possessed. There it stood, puffing and snorting and paying like a wild steer, the driving wheels buzzing around on the greased track like a flywheel in a machine shop, but moving hardly an inch.

Not a sign of engineer was found, and the fireman of the pursued train mounted the engine and shut her off. She was towed into Sunbury, and there a dispatch was found ordering the crew to a sidetrack out of the way of the runaway.—Harper's Weekly.

Firmness.

"When my wife makes up her mind," said Mr. Meekton, "there is no use of arguing with her."

"But every woman changes her opinion sometimes."

"Yes. And Henrietta is particularly resolute when she makes up her mind to change her opinion."—Washington Star.

Self love is at once the most delicate and the most vigorous of our defects. Nothing wounds it, but nothing kills it.

MAN'S THREE DUTIES.

A Good Husband, a Good Father and a Good Neighbor.

I have made a code for my own guidance which may interest you. I hold that a man's first duty is to be a good husband, which implies, of course, that he ought to marry and then make his wife believe, if he can, that she has been the most fortunate of women.

It isn't easy—but, my, how it pays! He must be lover, husband, son and even father by turns and occasionally just nobody—he must get clear off the earth. But when he comes back—

A man's second duty is to be a good father, which implies, of course, that he ought to have children—adopted, if necessary. He ought to be to them the standard by which all other men are measured and found wanting, because he is their daddy and they love him.

A man's third duty is to be a good neighbor, to carry his share, no matter how small or how great it may be, of the community's worthy enterprises, to share the sorrows and the joys of those around him, to make his home a real asset to his community.

After a man has done these three things, if he has time and means and strength, he can and should think in wider circles. But the man who does these three well is doing more than if he contributed millions and neglected these three. The man who neglects his wife or his children or his neighbors, no matter what other apparently great things he may have done, will hear Gabriel's trumpet very faintly if at all on the morning of the great day.—Erman J. Ridgway in Delineator.

When the Mule Kicks.

"No man unless he is blind should ever be kicked by a mule. There is no excuse for it. If kicked he is as much to blame as the mule," said a mule raiser. "A mule never kicks without first wagging his ears and switching his tail," said the breeder. "All you have to do is to keep your eyes on his ears and tail. And when he begins to wag his ears or switch his tail then it is time to dodge. And if you dodge quickly you will never be touched."—Kansas City Journal.

A Cold Bite.

"You were twenty miles from the north pole and starving!" exclaimed the credulous housewife. "And how did you save yourself?"

"Why, mum," responded Frigid Fred as he wiped away a tear, "in me starving moments I remembered de Eskimo dogs. Pushing out through the snow, I twisted one of der tails, an' den—an' den!"

"And then what, my poor man?"

"I got a cold bite."—Chicago News.

Science the Mother of Cities.

Attention may be invited to the interesting fact that at the beginning of the last century not a single city in Christendom had so many as a million inhabitants. In 1800 Paris had 548,000, and in 1801 London had 864,000. Great cities could not exist then as the advance of science has enabled them to exist today. Science has helped the cities not only by conquering pestilence and teaching the laws of health, but by enabling them to draw their supplies from the remotest quarters of the earth instead of being dependent for food, as was the case at the opening of the nineteenth century, upon the region of country immediately surrounding them.—Detroit Free Press.

Installation Service.

Rev. R. C. Deal was formally installed as pastor of Greenville Presbyterian church Tuesday night. Rev. J. N. H. Summerell, of New Bern presided and preached a very forcible sermon. The charge to the new pastor was delivered by Rev. R. H. Seagriff, of Washington, and Mr. H. E. Show, elder of Kinston Presbyterian church, delivered the charge to the people.

Altogether this was a most interesting service. Mr. Deal is a strong preacher, and the Greenville people welcome him to the field. He will serve the church here on the first and third Sundays in each month.

AN ARCTIC CAMP.

Peary's Canvas Tents, Which Were Absolutely Snow Proof.

A man's first night in a canvas tent in the arctic is likely to be rather wakeful," says Commander Peary in Hampton's. "The ice makes mysterious noises, the dogs bark and fight outside the tent, where they are tethered, and as three Eskimos and one white man usually occupy a small tent and the oil stove is left burning all night the air, notwithstanding the cold, is not overpure, and sometimes the Eskimos begin chanting to the spirits of their ancestors in the middle of the night. Sometimes, too, the new man's nerves are tried by hearing voices howl in the distance.

"The tents are specially made. They are of lightweight canvas, and the floor of the tent is sewed directly into it. The fly is sewed up, a circular opening in it just large enough to admit a man, and that opening fitted with a circular flap, which is closed by a drawstring, making the tent absolutely snow proof. An ordinary tent when the snow is flying would be filled in no time.

"The tent is pyramidal, with one pole in the center, and the edges are usually held down by the sledge runners or by snowshoes used as tent pegs. The men sleep on the floor in their clothes with a musk ox skin or a couple of deerskins wrapped around them.

"The kitchen box for our sledge journeys is simply a wooden box containing two double burner oil stoves with four inch wicks. The two cooking pots are the bottoms of five gallon coal oil tins fitted with covers. When packed, they are turned bottom side up over each stove, and the hinged cover of the wooden box is closed.

"On reaching camp, whether tent or snow igloo, the kitchen box is set down inside. The top of the box is turned up and keeps the heat of the stove from melting the wall of the igloo or burning the tent. The hinged front of the box is turned down and forms a table. The two cooking pots are filled with pounded ice and put on the stove. When the ice melts one pot is used for tea and the other may be used to warm beans or to boil meat if there is any.

"Each man has a quart cup for tea and a hunting knife which serves many purposes. He does not carry a fork, and one teaspoon is considered quite enough for a party of four. Each man helps himself from the pot—sticks in his knife and fishes out a piece of meat.

"The theory of field work is that there shall be two meals a day, one in the morning and one at night. As the days grow short the meals are taken before light and after dark, leaving the period of light entirely for work. Sometimes it is necessary to travel twenty-four hours without stopping for food."
