STATE NEWS.

Newsy Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Running at random over the streets of Raleigh yesterday and biting probably fifty of their species, were two mad dogs, one of which was shot by Policeman J. H. Wyatt.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Wilmington, May 25.—During a severe electric storm today Miss Caledonia Roderick was struck by lightning and her right shoe torn to shreds. She was knocked unconscious, but an examination later by a physician showed no injury resulted other than the severe shock and a slight burn on the right foot. The bolt first struck an electric meter in a store and passed out on the wires over the sidewalk.

Referring to the frost and freeze in Ashe county on the 15th the Jefferson Recorder says: "The mercury stood 5 degrees below freezing in fair exposure. Half grown cherries were cooked as with fire—apples, peaches, pears and all were killed. Only fruits having special natural protection escaped. We estimate the damage to the crops at not less than $100,000 in this county."

Hugh Miller, 14 years old was bitten by a copperhead snake near his home in Providence township, Rowan county, Sunday afternoon and for a while his condition was serious. The lad was in a pasture when the snake, unseen by him, struck him just above the right ankle. He hurried to his home but before he arrived the poison from the snake's fangs had begun to take effect and the limb swelled rapidly. An old-fashioned remedy was resorted to and relief was obtained. A young chicken was killed and its warm body placed over the wound. The swelling soon began to subside and when the chicken was removed the part applied to the bite was black.—Greensboro Record.

Mr. C. A. Robinson, who lives in the city and farms in No. 11 township, tells of a singular occurrence at his home. He had a hen with seventeen young chickens, and she deserted them, leaving them without a protector. Being up against it, he put a large domineer rooster in the coop where the hen had been keeping her chicks, and much to his surprise and gratification, the old fellow took charge of the chicks and gathered them under his wings when night came and kept them there. The old fellow is doing the best he can by them and makes strenuous efforts to cluck to them, which art he has not yet been able to acquire.—Concord Tribune.

There can be no question that he is following the right lines for the betterment of his people, and the institution will have a broad field of usefulness.

CHANGE COMES SO QUICKLY.

Hanrahan, N. C., May 25.—Sic transit, in one day and night we might say, we have passed from general sunshine to floods of rain, and still the rains descend in torrents. What looked so promising yesterday now looks drooped and sick. Thus how quick we can pass from rejoicing to faces that do not beam so bright. But amidst the storms and behind each cloud there is a silver lining.

We started out to say that these flooding rains should teach our farmers a lesson of drainage and not to build their foundation too much upon the sands and to withhold part of their fertilizers that they throw down promiscuously in the spring, and to feed it to their hungering crops as they need it.

Amidst the roar of thunder, the flash of lightning and the down pour of rain, the birds are still singing sweetly and we look up and are hopeful.

PACTOLUS ITEMS.

Pactolus, N. C., May 24.—B. B. Satterthwaite attended the commencement last week at Winterville.

The baseball game between Grimesland and Pactolus was broken up by the rain Saturday.

Miss Louise Satterthwaite came home Saturday evening from Winterville where she has been in school.

W. S. Williams is on the sick list again.

W. B. Ward went to the commencement at Old Ford Friday night. He reported that it was the best the school ever had.

There was a good attendance at Sunday school Sunday afternoon. The hour has been changed to four o'clock. Would like to see more next Sunday.

The farmers are uneasy about their crops on account of rain.

Len Perkins, section master on East Carolina railroad, is in town visiting friends. Always glad to see our "old boys" back again.

Misses Pattie and Sidney Davenport spent Tuesday at Stokes.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for county treasurer for Pitt county subject to the action of the Democratic primary. W. B. Wilson.

QUEER WAYS OF GROWN FOLKS

If a Boy Minded All the Time He'd Never Have a Bit of Fun.

Parents and guardians—grown folks generally—are a funny lot, any way you take 'em, says Eugene Wood in The Delineator for June. Do you know why they made such a fuss about your reading a moral and instructive work like, "The Skull Hunter of the Sierras? Well, I can tell you. They saw that you were having a good time. They couldn't stand that. Oh, that cut them to the heart! They had a heap sight rather you gaped through "The Life of the Rev. James B. Emery, D. D." a very tedious volume, I need scarcely say. Just the minute they saw you enjoying yourself pouring coal-oil on the cat and setting her afire, they'd make you quit it. They wouldn't let you do a thing that there was any fun in.

Mind them, and you'd go right straight to school and come right straight back again, like a galley-slave scourged to his dungeon. Mind them, and if there was a boy that stuck out his tongue at you and hollered: "Girl-boy, girl-boy! I kin lick you with one hand tied behind me. Fraidy fraidy, fraidy! I'll tell my ma on you! Hee, fraidy!" you would not let on you heard him. Paste him one on the snoot? No, no, no! Naughty.

Mind them, and you would be a tattletale in school and be 100 in everything, deportment and all, just like a girl. Mind them, and you would go right at your chores without having to be told more than forty-seven times; you'd wait at meal-times till you were served, like as if you were a sick person and had no appetite, and, after supper you'd commence on your home-work before the last bite was swallowed, and not ask pa and ma questions because they're tired after a hard day's rest, and it's better for you anyhow to work it all out by yourself. And when you had done every example, and learned what the principal products of Paraguay are, and committed to memory that priceless gem to the effect that a "noun is the name of a person, place or thing," you would kiss everybody good night like a dear child, and go to bed so as to be up bright and early in the morning.

There's no pleasing them. They'll jaw at you: "Why can't you play quietly? Good land! you make noise enough to wake the dead!" Take them at their word, and it's: "What devilment are you up to now? Some mischief, or you wouldn't be so still about it." Suspicious? M-m! There's no pleasing them, I tell you. You'd think they were the whole show to hear them talk, and just because they feed and clothe you and all that, they've got a right to boss you.

STARTED A FARM ON $100.

What Happened When a Vacation Fund Was Wisely Invested.

Instead of a fleeting holiday in a crowded boarding-house, why not use the vacation fund to establish an all-the-year-round home in the country? Business disaster had so crippled our resources that one hundred dollars was all we considered it safe to risk, and that was absorbed by moving expenses, a kitchen stove and a few necessary tools; so I can truly say that I commenced without capital or experience, yet the place was entirely self-supporting within two years, says Kate V. Saint Maur, in The Delineator for June. My first purchase was nine old hens and some garden seeds, so we soon had eggs and vegetables. There were rhubarb and all sorts of fruit on the farm, so each week living cost a little less, and I was able to buy more poultry. Late in the fall the sale of winter apples and young chickens we had raised made a cow possible.

The farm we found was only twenty five miles from the city and a little more than two miles from the railroad station. The house was a long, low, old-time homestead, with lots of out-buildings. The Master Man's commutative ticket cost six dollars per month. Of course we had no horse at first, but our nearest neighbor drove to the station night and morning and agreed to take a passenger for five dollars a month, which brought the city trip up to eleven dollars a month, but as the farm cost only fifteen dollars, the outlay still came well within the amount we had been paying for a city flat. Therefore, the luxury of a whole house, plenty of room, and, healthful, restful environment was true economy.

The secret of success for city people is to commence country home-building with inexpensive things which give quick returns, like poultry and vegetables. A cow also brings immediate return, for she provides milk, cream and butter for the table—usually several pounds more of the latter than any ordinary family can use, so there is some to sell.

Sales and "Prospects."

A business magazine recently asked its readers: "Can 'ads' make sales, or only 'prospects'?" and, of course, there were as many shades of opinion given in answer as there were writers participating in the symposium. The fact is that good advertising in strong mediums, for reasonably-priced articles of general consumption, makes both sales and "prospects." Newspaper publicity as a rule makes more than enough immediate sales to pay for itself, and the "prospects" are so much "velvet." The half-convinced readers of today's advertisement are persuaded by the presentation of the proposition in a new light tomorrow. The extra profit to be derived from the "prospect" is lost by the spasmodic advertiser.—Exchange.

County Buys Temple Lot.

The lot on Third street on which the Masonic temple was burned in the February fire, was sold at auction Tuesday and brought $3,000. It was purchased by the county and will be added to the court house square, as it adjoins that property. This will give the county considerably more room for the new court house and jail.

THE MARYLAND SHOWS.

Carnival Attractions That Are Above the Average.

So far the Maryland Shows have been up against bad weather but the shows have been going on each afternoon and night. Early Wednesday night was fair and a large crowd went out, but most of them went home in the rain. Those who were under the tents when the shower came up fared all right. The remainder of the week may give better weather.

The shows are above the average of carnival attractions and those who attend them get the worth of their money. The big Hippodrome is one of the best shows for the price that one can see. The program consists of slack wire stunts, acrobats, contortions, juggling, trapeze and swinging ladder acts by performers as good as are seen anywhere, and the dog dive from the top of the tent is something marvelous. The dog climbs a ladder to the top of the tent and leaps off into a hammock held just above the ground.

The Old Plantation is also an attraction that well amuses the crowd with negro songs and dances. There is always fun about a show of this kind.

The five legged cow is quite a novelty and there are several other attractions.

HEROIC TREATMENT.

The Chinese Doctor's Methods Were Severe, but Efficacious.

This is the Chinese medical treatment which a missionary underwent: Having been thrown from his horse and left fainting in the street, he was carried into a house, where a doctor soon visited him. "He made me sit up in bed, placing near me a large basin filled with water, in which he put a thick piece of ice to reduce it to freezing point. Then, stripping me to the waist, he made me stretch my neck over the basin while he continued to pour the water on my neck with a cup. The pain caused by those nerves which take their rise from the 'pia mater' was so great and so insufferable that it seemed to me unequalled, but he said it would stanch the blood and restore me to my senses, which was actually the case, for in a short time my sight became clear and my mind resumed its powers. He next bound my head with a band drawn tight by two men, who held the ends while he struck the intermediate parts vigorously with a piece of wood, which shook my head violently and gave me dreadful pain. This, he said, was to settle the brain, which he supposed had been displaced, and it is true that after the second operation my head felt more free.

"A third operation was now performed, during which he made me, still stripped to the waist, walk in the open air supported by two persons, and while thus walking he unexpectedly threw a basin of freezing cold water over my breast. As this caused me to draw my breath with great vehemence and as my chest had been injured by the fall, it may easily be imagined what were my sufferings under this affliction, but I was consoled by the information that if any rib had been dislocated this sudden and hard breathing would restore it to its natural position. The next proceeding was not less painful and extravagant. The operator made me sit on the ground and, assisted by two men, held a cloth upon my mouth and nose till I was almost suffocated. 'This,' said the Chinese Aesculapius, 'by causing a violent heaving of the chest will force back any rib that may have been dislocated.' The wound in my head not being deep, he healed it by stuffing it with burned cotton. He then ordered that I should continue to walk much, supported by two persons; that I should not sit long or be allowed to sleep till 10 o'clock at night, at which time I should eat a little thin rice soup. He assured me that these walks in the open air while fasting would prevent the blood from settling upon the chest, where it might corrupt. These remedies, though barbarous and excruciating, cured me so completely that in seven days I was able to resume my journey."—London Lancet.

Many Uses For Clay.

"Some folks," said a clay dealer, "seem to think that clay is only used for bricks. Clay, as a matter of fact, enters into our food, our clothes, our carpets and our wall papers. It enters into our food in two ways—first, in the form of teeth, artificial ivories being made of white Cornish clay, and second, in the form of bleach, for clay is the bleach employed to whiten flour. Clay is used to stiffen certain dress goods of a cheap type, and it enters into our wall papers and carpets, especially blue wall papers and carpets, for ultramarine dye is made of clay. All stationery paper contains clay too. This clay all comes from Fowey, in Cornwall. It is worth $5 a ton. We import 100,000 tons a year."

It Didn't Happen.

"Miss Zackly," says the inquisitive lady to the schoolteacher, "I have often wondered why you never got married. How does it happen that?"
"It doesn't happen," interrupts the teacher tartly, "because it never happened to happen. I couldn't happen not to be married, could I? If anything happens it has to be a happening, and if a happening does not happen then it neither may happen to happen nor happen not to happen. I trust this explains matters to you, Mrs. Quizzle, and now I understand why it is that your children happen to be so backward with their studies."—Life.

Resourceful Pussy.

Short—I thought you were going to drown that cat?
Long—Well, they say a cat has nine lives, but this one has twenty, I think. Why, I actually put that cat into a tub of water and tied a brick round its neck, and what do you think?

Short—Goodness knows.
Long—Well, this morning when I went to look at the tub the cat had swallowed all the water and was sitting on the brick.—Tit-Bits.

THEIR FINAL QUARREL.

She Said It Was Irrevocable, but He Knew Better.

It was all off. They had quarreled, finally and irrevocably. It doesn't matter now what it was about. The chances are that in their anger neither remembered anything except that he had disappointed her in some awful, unforgettable way and she had seized the diamond engagement ring from a dainty, slender finger and thrust it upon him with a gesture of infinite scorn.

For an instant he held the circlet in his hand ruefully. For another instant he paced the porch, hands in his pockets, head low, his voice quivering with emotion as he pleaded. Suddenly he stopped in front of her.

"That's final, is it?" he inquired.

"Final," she replied telly. "No man with a spark of"—

"All right!" he snapped. "This thing's no use to me, then."

His right arm shot out like the arm of a ball pitcher, and a second later the tinkle-tinkle of metal on the concrete walk half a block away told her he had thrown the ring away.

"Oh!" she cried, and there was sudden anguish in her heart, "I didn't mean it! We must find it—at once."

"I don't care for it," he said stubbornly. "Life has mighty little 'now to make'—"

"Silly!" she cried. "Help me—immediately."

He couldn't let her go alone, with night coming on, so, after proper reluctance, he followed. In the eagerness of searching all her anger melted.

It took a long time, but finally he stooped quickly and exclaiming, "Here it is!" held up the diamond ring.

What happened in the next hour is nobody's business except their own. The human, masculine part of the story was disclosed to his bosom friend late that night in the quiet of their room.

"Had it in my pocket all the time," he said. "I threw a quarter down the street. And, dad bling if, I didn't find it either!"

But it did the work.—Kansas City Times.

One Case Where the Half Proved Greater Than the Whole.

There is no painter who lends himself to "splitting" so much as Botticelli—I. e., a division of the panel into two parts so as to form separate pictures. Years ago I sold to a Mr. Buttery of London half a Botticelli, which is now owned by Herr Kaufmann of Berlin. I have myself seen the other half of the picture, as well as the picture in its entire state.

In one case I can recall the half proved greater than the whole. A certain Signor Barilli bequeathed a valuable Botticelli to his two grandsons, who were twins. But, although twins, these two young men were rather quarrelsome and had no taste in common.

One proposed to sell the picture, which had been painted for one of their ancestors. It is said, by Botticelli himself. The other would not consent.

The first then proposed that the other should buy his share and keep the picture himself. He took me with him, and I assigned the value of the picture at 5,000 lire, saying I would give that for it. The brother declined and suggested placing the picture in the custody of an aunt pending an adjustment of the terms. "Oh, very well," cried his brother, dying into a passion.

"If you won't buy and won't let me sell there's only one thing to do," and before any one could interfere he emptied three chambers of a revolver into the panel, completely destroying one-half of the composition, including a St. John and a Joseph. The picture being sent to me to restore, I could do nothing with it and strongly advised separating the panel. Shortly after I did so the owner died, and I disposed of the work for 8,000 lire to Adolph Kann. It is now, I believe, in Russia.—E. Panzone in Strand Magazine.

Von Moltke's Simplicity.

Once while traveling General Moltke entered a small Swiss hotel, and as the head waiter saw his gaunt figure stalking in, wrapped in a worn-out, dusty cloak, carrying an old leather satchel, he measured his wealth by his looks and ordered his assistant to show him to a small room in the uppermost story. As he was making himself comfortable in the attic another assistant came, as is customary there, to ask the silent stranger his name and rank. The consequence was that a few minutes later the proprietor, in full dress, appeared at the door of the attic to inform his excellency that a better room had just been vacated.

"Give that to my servant," replied Moltke, "when he comes with my carriage. This is good enough for me." And he remained.

The Silks of Samarkand.

The silks and velvets of Samarkand, long famous for the rainbow blending of their colors, have a season, exactly like fruits or garden truck, and can only be purchased at that particular time of the year. When the worms are ready for spinning they are all brought to the silk bazaar and sold. The silk is then spun and dyed, and all that is not used in the maker's family is exported in the form of cloth. Thus, unless you happen to be in Samarkand during the season, it is all but impossible to find any of the native silk for sale except in the form of ready-made khalat, which are a sort of glorified dressing gown.—E. A. Powell in Everybody's.

Too Lavish.

Mrs. Dobbs was trying to find out the likes and dislikes of her new boarder, and all she learned increased her satisfaction.

"Do you want pie for breakfast?" she asked.

"No, I thank you," said the new boarder, with a smile. "Pie for breakfast seems a little too much."

"That's just the way I look at it," said Mrs. Dobbs heartily. "I say pie for dinner is a necessity, and pie for supper gives a kind of finishing touch to the day, but pie for breakfast is what I call putting on airs."—Youth's Companion.

The Usual Sequel.

When they reached Montreal on their elopement Chicago seemed far, far away, and they were both homesick.

"I will just telegraph the letter 'F' to father," said the beautiful bride.

"That will mean forgiveness," said the young bridegroom.

"Gracious, dear! And what will two 'F's' mean?"

"Why, forgiveness and funds."—Chicago News.

Poor Memory.

"She made a horrible break at Green's dinner-party the other night."

"What was it?"

"Called the hostess by her first husband's name."—Detroit Free Press.

THE TERRIBLE BATHOLITE.

Molten Rock That Bores Upward Through the Earth's Crust.

Batholite is a term invented by the great German geologist Eduard Suess to describe the gigantic intrusions of molten rock which, according to him, bore their way upward through the crust of the earth from the "eternal depths" below, cutting through the strata and folds of the mountains very much as a white hot soldering iron may be thrust through a plank, burning its way across the grain of the wood as if it were cheese.

These batholites lurk deep in the earth, where the temperature is thousands of degrees, and gradually melt their way to the surface above them. Generally they issue in the form of tremendous domes of hot rock, towering up to mountain heights and often giving birth to volcanoes. When a batholite, as sometimes happens, does not reach the surface its roof opens in a network of fissures, lava pours out and a whole group of volcanoes appears at that point.

Suess has recognized the remains of many cooled batholites on various parts of the earth's surface, and he says that the consolidated crust of the earth, even at the present day, may be exposed to these mighty intrusions from below. The batholites bring up with them many metals from the interior of the planet, and rich mines are often opened in the dikes that are thus formed.

Suess describes the rock about Boulder, Colo., as an ancient batholite, which covers 5,000 square kilometers of surface. But there are others still more prodigious in extent.

Sometimes they have been worn down nearly to the general level, but near Elkhorn the old batholite yet towers up to an elevation of 9,000 feet above the sea. The diamond dikes of South Africa have thus been thrust up from the profound depths of the earth, where there exists a laboratory of nature in which she performs what seem miracles to the petty inhabitants of the planet's surface.

The face of the moon shows us most clearly what batholites are capable of. The vast circular plains ringed with steep mountains, which make its surface so marvelous to look upon with a telescope, have, according to this view, been formed by intrusions of colossal batholites, and Suess calls them by the startling name of "smelting furnaces"—furnaces thousands of square miles in extent—in which the frame of that little world has been melted and dissolved like a snow bank lying in the path of a flow of molten iron.

And if we could remove the sedimentary accumulations of ages from the face of our world, says this astonishing German savant, we might find now hidden under our feet a network of the seared skeletons of ancient batholites, grander than any on the moon!—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Casting Sleighbells. A question frequently asked is in regard to the method of producing sleighbells containing iron balls larger than the opening in the bells. Previous to making a cast the maker of sleighbells puts an iron ball inside a sand core, just the shape of the inside of the bell. This sand core, with the jinglet inside, is placed in the mold of the outside and the melted metal poured in, which fills up the space between the core and mold. The hot metal burns the core so that it can be shaken out, leaving the ball within the shell. Ball valves, swivel joints and many other articles are cast in the same manner.

Male Fashions In 1850. Male fashions of 1850 had other discomforts besides long hair. Trousers were tight and buttoned under the foot with broad straps. Every man who aspired to be well dressed wore his coat so high in the collar that the back of the hat rested on it. This fashion was so prevalent that, according to Sir Algernon West, "every hat had a crescent of cloth on the back of the brim to prevent the rubbing of the beaver or imitation beaver of which the hat was made, for silk hats were not then invented." And from the same authority we learn that "opera hats were unknown, and in the evening a folding chapeau bras was always carried under the arm. Nobody but an apothecary or a solicitor would have dreamed of leaving his hat in the hall of the house where he was calling or dining."—London Chronicle.

The Poor Fish. This melancholy tragedy happened in Holland. A fisherman who caught a salt herring placed the fish in a tub full of salt water. Every day he took out some of the salt water and replaced it with fresh. In a few days he had the herring living in fresh water. But, not content at stopping here, he decided to try another plan. Every day he took a little water out of the tub until none was left, and the herring was still alive. The next course was walking. In a month or so the herring had developed feet and learned to walk, and he accompanied his master on his journeys. One day as they were crossing over a narrow bridge the herring caught sight of the water. Reminiscences of former days flashed through his head, and he resolved to try the water. But while still gazing at it he fell in, and before his master could aid him he was drowned.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Mexican Mosquito. The finest fly traps are not in it with a little Mexican spider named mosquito. Natives gather from oak trees a branch covered with this spider's nests and hang it up in the house. The spiders begin on the flies by wholesale. Mosquito nests are very tidy, pretty and old maidish. A lot of tiny beetles make their home therein with the spiders. The beetles live on fly legs, the crumbs and scraps from the mosquito's table, and pay for their bed and board by keeping the web house perfectly clean and refined, eating everything and dropping no litter in the Mexican professional gentleman's house. Mrs. Mosquero is a very quiet, orderly lady who never wanders from her own fireside or strays from her own back yard, but when a fly calls round she gets very busy with her spider knives and saws.—New York Press.
