The musical at the Methodist church Monday night for the benefit of the church was largely attended and much enjoyed by all present.

Now is a good time for some good concern to open a wholesale grocery store in Ayden.

There is a splendid opening for a lawyer to locate here. Just think of it, not a lawyer nearer than Greenville, which is twelve miles.

New Telephone Directory Out.

We are now delivering our new telephone directory, and we earnestly ask that all users of the telephone will call by number instead of name, as it very greatly expedites the service. It is not for our own good, but the subscribers that we ask this. Owing to our rapid growth it is impossible for the operator to remember all the numbers and have to look them up, thereby greatly reducing the efficiency of the service. In calling by number always call the figures singly, as 17 call, "one" "seven," or as 280-L, call, "two" "eight" "0" "L." Try this and you will like it.

Respectfully,
Home Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Our Greenville, yours if you come.

HANRAHAN ITEMS.

Hanrahan, N. C. May 30.—The other day we read a letter from a sweet little country girl, who was visiting friends and relatives in a city. The letter was to her mama. Of course there are sights in the city for a country girl to see. After she had told of them and had implored her mother to extend her time to stay longer, carefully placing each punctuation point as it should be and using capitals where they were indicated, she ended with a P. S. "Dear Mama please take all mistakes for hugs and kisses." And then we thought how much better it would be if we all would look upon all honest mistakes with a great degree of love and forbearance.

A while ago we were at a certain place and chanced to be in a store. The proprietor was in his office busy at his desk. In the store there was a man, yes, a gentleman (who chanced to have some silvery threads among his locks) sweeping the floor. A traveling man chanced to step in while he was sweeping, said he as he passed the man that was sweeping: "How's the old man" and walked on to the desk where the proprietor was. After a hearty hand shake, and a very pleasant greeting he began trying to sell his goods. Soon the merchant called to the man that was sweeping and asked if we need this or that, and the traveling man soon found that a wink from the man that was sweeping would check the merchant in buying his articles. So when the traveling man went to leave the store he shook the hand of the man that was sweeping as heartily as he did that of the proprietor. Honest labor never degrades a man, and courtesy is never out of place, even though it be bestowed upon an employee in the presence of his employer.

We have been eating for desert for the past week, peach pies from this year's peaches, ripe and delicious. I want to say to every farmer, what I heard a somewhat uncouth fellow say to his best girl as they went to an ice cream counter and he bought a saucer, with some cake and was chunking the cake in with one hand and the cream with the other. He looked up at his girl and said, "Hit's mighty good, Sall, better git you some." Now these peaches were raised and the pies cooked by a maiden lady, and if you want to know her name address Uno, box 1, Hanrahan, N. C., and I will give it. But none need apply except such as can produce the very best references, or can prove by their very act that they are worthy and well qualified to cope with the problems of life.

A tenant of W. S. McLawhorn quit his crop last week. Another evidence that the tenant system has become very unsatisfactory. Better learn our boys to love the farm and train them to till the soil.

Our people were sorry indeed that Prof. Ragsdale was too unwell to be with us on Sunday. Hope he is much better ere this. Better take a much needed rest, professor.

Jacob McLawhorn had corn tassels last week, first we have seen.

The meeting of the Ladies' Round Table club, which was to have been this afternoon, was postponed until June 7th, when it will be held with Mrs. H. L. Coward.

A RUNAWAY MARRIAGE.

Mr. R. C. White, of Greenville and Miss Clara Pugh, of New Bern.

There was much interest among their friends over the report that became current here Monday afternoon that Mr. Richard C. White, of Greenville, and Miss Clara Pugh, of New Bern, were married. Nothing definite could be learned at the time except that the marriage had taken place in Kinston.

From the Kinston Free Press of Monday we get the following particulars:

"A romantic runaway marriage was celebrated at the home of Mayor W. D. LaRoque, this morning at 11.30 o'clock, when Mr. Richard White, of Greenville, and Miss Clara Pugh, of New Bern, were united in matrimony by the Rev. J. H. Griffith, in the presence of but a few friends.

The runaway couple came in from New Bern on the 10.30 Norfolk Southern train this morning and were met by Mr. Jim Hines, a particular friend of the groom's and taken to the home of Mr. LaRoque, where the ceremony was subsequently performed.

"The bride was engaged to be married to Hon. E. M. Green, of New Bern and broke a "date" with him last night in order to see Mr. White, who was visiting in the city. It was then that they made their arrangements to run up to Kinston and be married. Mr. and Mrs. White will remain in Kinston until the 8 o'clock train when they will leave for a bridal trip to New York city and other points."

After their bridal tour they will come to Greenville to make their home here.

RUNAWAY HORSE INJURED.

Collision With Other Vehicles Closely Missed.

Mr. J. J. Jones brought a load of produce to town this morning. He left his horse and cart standing near the market house while he went inside to make some inquiry about prices. The horse became frightened at something and ran away. Reaching Five Points the animal was about to turn the corner up Evans street when it slipped down on the paving and slid nearly across the street. Both the front legs of the horse were badly skinned in the slide on the paving.

But for the runaway horse falling, there would have been a collision with other vehicles going down the street near the corner at the time, and the result might have been something serious.

President Wooten Resigns.

Mr. F. M. Wooten, president of the chamber of commerce, has sent in his resignation to the board of directors, and asks that his successor be elected at once. The directors will meet at 8 o'clock tonight, in the office of Dr. D. L. James, to elect a president and secretary of the organization. This is an important matter, and all the directors are asked to be on hand promptly. There is much that the chamber of commerce can do for Greenville if it will just be active.

Registratoin for Town Election.

The registration books in the different wards open tomorrow and remain open for three days between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. Those who are not registered for the town election to be held next Monday should look after this matter.

This Hen Lays Fuel.

If the following incident which was related to the writer yesterday is true and the narrator vouches for its authenticity, there is a probability that the coal trust will eventually be quashed.

Several weeks ago a Mr. Williams, who lives near Arapahoe, purchased two tons of coal which he intended to use for fuel next winter. Having no other place to put the coal it was carried into the barn and placed in an empty stall to which there was no door and the incident was forgotten.

Mrs. Williams has a brood of fine Leghorn chickens in which she takes a special pride and these fowls are allowed to roam at will over the whole farm.

On going out to the hen house a few days ago she was surprised to find a coal black egg in one of the nests. The matter was discussed among the family but they could offer no explanation of the matter and supposed it was just a freak of nature.

When, however, on the next day another similar egg was found they decided that something was wrong and begun to investigate.

The two shells were placed on a plate and upon being ignited emitted a pale blue light and an intense heat and the odor of coal gas quickly filled the room.

The chickens were watched that day and it was found that one of them was continuously eating the small particles of coal which had flaked off of original lumps.

Preliminary tests of the eggshells to determine their value as fuel have been made, it is said and proved that the hens are the goods. The eggshells, thickly impregnated with coal dust burn a long time and give out much heat. This is doubtless due to the combination of coal and lime which they contain.—New Bern Journal.

Raleigh, May 30.—The Supreme court adjourned for the term today without leaving a single case that had been argued during the term to go over to the fall term for an opinion.

Randleman, May 30.—Wilson Davies, an aged man of this place, dropped dead yesterday just after delivering an address at the Sunday school convention held in the auditorium. Mr. Davies, who has long been superintendent of St. John's Sunday school, had closed his address with the words "God bless you till we meet again," when he was seen to stagger to his seat. Before aid could reach him breath had left the body and the well loved man was dead.

Growing of Grapes in Eastern Carolina

That the United States Department of Agriculture is making a comprehensive and exhaustive study of the possibilities of grape growing in Eastern Carolina is attested by the arrival in the city yesterday of Mr. C. T. Dearing, viticulturist of the department, who has been to Willard, N. C., where the United States in connection with the State department has a test farm of some 20 acres being used experimentally in improving the growing of the scuppernong or muscadine variety of grape. Mr. Dearing says there are millions of acres of land in this State well adapted to this culture and he has reasons to expect much from the tests in breeding, etc., at the Willard farm.—Wilmington Star.

TUESDAY, MAY 31, 1910.

Everybody will be poor now that tax listing time has come,

Cucumbers have "also come," but, like the green apple, should be given a wide berth.

Better roads mean a better county. People are realizing this, and that is why the sentiments for good roads is growing so fast in Pitt county.

The New Bern Journal must be lining up for the Charlotte Chronicle's medal next time, judging from the article headed "This Hen Lays Fuel," published elsewhere.

This is the week in which you must do your talking about candidates for aldermen. The ward primaries will be held next Friday night, then all will be over except voting on Monday for the nominees.

At their meeting next Monday the county commissioners should appoint delegates to the good roads convention which meets at Wrightsville next week. Pitt county should be represented at that convention.

The Republicans have done enough for the Democrats to sweep the country in the next national election, but the trouble with Democrats is that they throw away their opportunities instead of taking advantage of them.

Those fellows who wanted it located elsewhere and did not think East Carolina Teachers' Training school was going to be a success at Greenville, must think over again. The school is really passing the expectations of its warmest friends.

What a language we have. When the draw to a bridge is open so people cannot pass over the announcement is made that it is "closed for repairs," and when the work is done so that it can be closed the statement comes that it is "open for passage."

Most North Carolina papers will "go to the devil" next week while the editors are doing Wrightsville and the press convention. And in not a few instances the devil and shop boys will give the readers a better paper than if the editors were at home.

From Editor Cowan, of the Wilmington Dispatch, The Reflector man is in receipt of a postcard of a girl in a bathing suit on the beach at Wrightsville with the words "I'm waiting for you," and Cowan adds

May be a legislature can be elected that will tamper with the state prohibition law, but we refuse to believe it. Efforts are to be made to get that body to exempt certain counties or cities from the operation of the law. What right has the legislature to set aside the will of the people as expressed at the ballot box? The way to do it is to in some way get another vote, but how this is to be done the Lord only knows; we don't. But men and brethren, is there a sensible man living who believes, could another vote be had, that the state would go wet?—Greensboro Record.

Here is a morsel for the superstitious to crack, taken from the Pensacola Times—"Superstitious people who talk about the number thirteen should remember that the United States started out as an independent nation with thirteen colonies, there a thirteen letters in 'e pluribus unum,' on every dollar, and it takes just thirteen letters to spell 'in God we trust,' 'united we stand,' 'American folks,' 'President Taft,' 'T. Roosevelt, Esq.'"—Greensboro Record.

The farmers of this country should quit sending their money out West for hay and other forage. They should produce their own forage crops and keep their money at home. A little enterprise and intelligent application will convince them that they can produce three times as much forage at home for the same money they spend for Western hay or other forage crops.—Wilmington Star.

The prosperity of our country depends so largely on the prosperity of our farmers, that every thing possible should be done to render life in the rural districts agreeable as well as profitable, and nothing could conduce more to the comfort and happiness of our people than the improvement of roads.—Gaffney, S. C. Ledger.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY
Imperfect Digestion Causes Bad Complexion and Dull Eyes.

The color of your cheeks won't fade, the brightness in your eyes won't vanish, if you keep your stomach in good condition.
This was the advice of a prominent physician to a woman's club in Boston and it is good advice.
Belching of gas, heaviness, sour taste in mouth, dizziness, biliousness and nausea occur simply because the stomach is not properly digesting the food.
The blood needs nourishment to carry vigor, vim and vitality to every part of the body and when food ferments in the stomach enough nourishment is not supplied.
Mills' stomach tablets give instant relief to upset stomachs, but they do more; they put strength into the stomach and build it up so that it can easily digest a hearty meal without giving its owner hours of misery.
Mills' is sold by druggists everywhere and by Coward & Wooten at 50c a large box. It is guaranteed to cure indigestion or any stomach distress or money back.

PAID IN MUSICAL NOTES.

When Mrs. Sembrich Got a Stage Gown for a Song.

Whenever I think of my early operatic experiences I delight to recall a little dressmaker in Dresden who literally sold me a stage gown for a song. I had made my first appearance and was well received. Then word came that I was to appear next as Violetta in "Traviata." Now, in Germany the curious custom obtains of furnishing costumes to the male singers and obliging the women to dress themselves. At that stage in my career a role calling for several elaborate evening gowns meant a serious drain on my resources. At the same time I realized that appropriate dressing was vitally essential to my success. Bravely I began my bargain hunting, but the prices were far beyond my fears. I was forced to resign myself to do the best I could from my own scant wardrobe. But no ingenuity could encompass a suitable ball gown for the third act. I started on another round of the shops, and good fortune bore me this time to a smart looking little place. The proprietress recognized me and was most courteous. Just the gown I wanted was the first dress she produced. My voice trembled as I asked the price. She named a figure that put it as effectually beyond my reach as the top of Mont Blanc.

"What can you pay, madam?" she asked gently as she read the disappointment in my face.

Hesitatingly I named a sum less than half the price she demanded.

"On one condition the gown is yours," she said.

"And what is that?" I asked breathlessly.

"I have a father who is bedridden," she said. "Never was there a greater lover of music. Only last night he was fretting because he might never hear the little Sembrich, of whom I have told him so much since your debut here. Come and sing an aria for him and the gown is yours at your own price."

I kissed her with brimming eyes, and the bargain was struck. That night, with my husband as accompanist, I went to the home of the old gentleman and sang for him, not one, but many arias. That was the first and only time I ever got a stage gown for a song.—Mrs. Sembrich in New Idea Woman's Magazine.

Naming Babies in Japan.

In Japan a curious custom is in vogue with respect to the naming of babies. The newborn is taken to the temple when it has attained the age of two weeks, and to the priest who receives him the father of the little one suggests three names deemed to be appropriate. The priest writes these three names on slips of paper. He holds these slips of paper for a few minutes and then throws them over his shoulder, sending them as high in the air as possible. The slip that reaches the ground last contains the name that is conferred on the waiting baby.

The next step in the process is for the priest to copy the name on a piece of silk or fine paper, which is handed to the proud parent with these words:

"So shall the child be named."—Harper's Weekly.

The Girl He Wanted.

The girl was a greenhorn. She didn't know the pretty daughter was engaged to be married, and when the pretty daughter's intended called after a week's absence from town this is what the parlor maid said to him:

"Miss Minnie you're wantin'? Well, I don't know whether she's in or not. But if you're the young gentleman that was here last night till 12:30 and got caught huggin' and kissin' her in the parlor, why, she ain't in to you no more and never will be."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Deceivers Ever.

They were arguing about the alleged inborn strain of deceitfulness in woman, and she retaliated by citing the instances of men deceiving their wives.

"I suppose," said he, "that you hold that a man should never deceive his wife."

"Oh, no," she smiled back at him; "I shouldn't go so far as that. How would it be possible for the average man to get a wife if he didn't deceive her?"—Lippincott's.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"
"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"
"You bet! You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as she passed."—Philadelphia Press.

STRUCK A SNAG.

A Painful Jolt For the Good Roads Ambassador.

"I'll never forget the night I called on the Widow Yarn. She owned forty acres on the main road, which I hoped to have improved. In practically every house in the county I had been hospitably received because I was a human being. A pioneer citizen, member of the Good Roads club, took me in a carriage to see the widow. 'I'll watch the horses,' this wise old citizen said.

"I don't know what would frighten them," I suggested, but he seemed to expect a brass band or some other unusual sight, although it was 8 o'clock at night. I soon knew why he preferred to sit out there in the cold.

"Mrs. Yarn, I believe?" I began ingratiatingly when the door was opened.

"Well," the person who stood there observed, "I've been here forty years. You ought to believe it."

"This," thinks I to myself, "is a strange place for curbstone humor." And then aloud: "I have been talking for good roads, madam. We have decided to run a rock road by here, and as—"

"Who has decided?" This in the voice of a conductor when he asks you how old your little boy is.

"Why," I stammered, "the Good Roads club, and—"

"I don't belong to it, do I? They wouldn't have a woman member, would they?"

"I'm sure I don't know. I have been chiefly—"

"Sure you don't!" the Widow Yarn snapped. "You're chiefly concerned about taxing my forty acres into the county treasury without letting me vote on it. What right have you to come over here to build roads? Are you a road builder? Did you ever build a road or pay for one?"

"Madam," I said, "you really do have a vote on this question if a road district is organized. You have forty votes—one for every acre you own, and—"

Her face lighted up with a light that never was seen before on human face unless perhaps in riding on an old transfer or getting rid of a bad nickel. She opened the door wider—I had not been admitted up to that moment—and asked me to enter.

"You say I have forty votes?" she inquired.

"You have," I assured her, feeling like the bearer of good news.

"Well, glory be!" the Widow Yarn sighed, rocking herself comfortably. "Glory be, say I! I'll cast them all against your old rock road. Now I must be getting ready for prayer meeting."—Charles Dillon in Harper's Weekly.

The Terrors of Frankness.

"There is no worse vice than frankness," said a playwright. "How should I feel, for example, if I asked you for your opinion of my plays and you answered me frankly, quite frankly? Why, I should feel like the poor lady at the bridge drive who said to her hostess' little daughter:

"Your eyes are such a heavenly blue. And what color are my eyes, darling?"

"The child's high treble traveled easily to the farthest corner of the quiet room as she replied, looking earnestly up into her questioner's face: "Dwab middles, yellow whites and wed whites!"—Exchange.

Ruskin and the Turners.

How closely famous pictures can be imitated by skillful artists was proved by an exhibition by Ruskin in 1875 of a series of facsimiles of Turner's pictures in the National gallery, London. The collection was accompanied by a characteristic note from Ruskin, in which he said, "I have given my best attention during upward of ten years to train a copyist to perfect fidelity in rendering the works of Turner and have now succeeded in enabling him to produce facsimiles so close as to look like replicas—facsimiles which I must sign with my own name to prevent their being sold for real Turners."

Kith and Kin.

"Very interesting conversation in here?" asked papa, suddenly thrusting his head through the conservatory window, where Ethel, Mr. Tomkins and little Eva sat very quietly.

"Yes, indeed," said Ethel, ready on the instant with a reply. "Mr. Tomkins and I were discussing our kith and kin, weren't we, Eva?"

"Yeth, you wath," replied little Eva. "Mr. Tomkins said, 'May I have a kith?' and Ethel said, 'You kin.'"—London Tit-Bits.

A Deduction.

"Little Willie Withers is the brightest and best behaved boy in the neighborhood."

"Allow me to deduce."

"Go ahead."

"You don't know little Willie, and you've recently been chatting with his mother."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

THE BASTILLE.

Rise and the Fall of the Famous State Prison of France.

The famous French prison known as the Bastille was started on April 22, 1356, by order of Charles V. The Bastille turned out to be an important structure in history, and its fall on July 15, 1789, marked the beginning of the French Revolution. It was originally intended by Charles as a defense against the English. When it came to be used as a state prison it was provided with vast bulwarks and ditches. The Bastille had four towers of five stories each on each of its large sides. It was partly in these towers and partly in underground cellars that the prisoners were situated. It was capable of containing from seventy to eighty prisoners, a number frequently reached during the reigns of Louis XIV. and Louis XV., the majority of them being persons of the higher ranks. On its site now stands the Column of July, erected in memory of the patriots of 1789 and 1830.

The name bastille, or bastel, in ancient times was given to any kind of structure calculated to withstand a military force, and thus, formerly in England and on the borders of Scotland, the term bastel house was usually applied to places of strength and fancied security. The French Bastille was originally called the Bastille St. Antoine.

Stephen Marcel, provost of the merchants, undertook the erection of the French Bastille. The building was enlarged in 1369 by Hugh Aubmot, provost of Paris under Charles V. He added two towers, which, being placed opposite to those already existing on each side of the gate, made of the Bastille a square fort, with a tower at each of the four angles.

After the death of Charles V., Aubriot, who had many enemies, was prosecuted for alleged crimes and was condemned to perpetual confinement in the Bastille, of which, according to some historians, he was the first prisoner. After some time he was removed thence to Fort l'Eveque, another prison, from which he was liberated in 1381 by the insurrection of the Maillotins.

After this insurrection, in 1382, the young king, Charles VI., still further enlarged the Bastille by adding four towers to it, each 100 feet high, thus giving it, instead of the square form it originally possessed, the shape of an oblong or parallelogram. To increase its strength the Bastille was surrounded by a ditch 25 feet deep and 120 feet wide. The road which formerly passed through it was turned to one side.

The Bastille from its commanding position was closely connected with important affairs in French history and was occupied by the Guises in 1588, by Charles IV. in 1584, the Frondeurs in 1649 and Conde in 1652.

It was natural, therefore, that the Bastille should be one of the first objects of attack at the outbreak of the Revolution. In July 15, 1793, the populace of Paris, recruited chiefly from the Faubourg St. Antoine, attacked the fortress and stormed it after a half hearted resistance by the governor, De Launay, and a handful of Swiss. The governor and seven of his men were killed, the archives of the prison scattered, and the prisoners, seven in number, were carried through the streets and hailed as victims of tyranny and martyrs in the people's cause. The building itself was torn down. The anniversary of the taking of the Bastille is celebrated every year as the national holiday of France.

An Old Time Encyclopedia.

An ancient encyclopedia was that compiled by a Chinese. In 1403 an emperor of the Ming dynasty ordered that such a work should be undertaken, and in 1410 the 100 volumes were ready for block printing. This process in ancient China was accomplished by pasting written copy on blocks of wood and cutting the letters in relief. The work of printing the encyclopedia seemed so arduous that it was abandoned, and the work remained in manuscript. The books of the encyclopedia were one foot and eight inches in length and half an inch thick and were bound in yellow silk. They were stored in Peking and were burned during the siege of that city by the allied forces in 1901.—Harper's Weekly.

His Hard Luck.

His horse went dead, and his mule went lame, and he lost six cows in a poker game; then a hurricane came on a summer's day and blew the house where he lived away, and the earthquake came when that was gone and swallowed the land that the house was on; then the tax collector came around and charged him up with the hole in the ground. —Upson (Ga.) Parrot.

Japanese Mechanics.

Japanese mechanics are about as good workmen as you will find anywhere. Every common carpenter is a cabinetmaker, and many of the stonecutters would pass as sculptors. The painters have some artistic ability, and ordinary masons lay walls which would be a surprise to our people of that trade in the United States.

Here in Japan the master carpenters receive 65 cents a day and the best men under him 40 and 50 cents. This is for nine or ten hours' work. These carpenters are fully the equal of any we have at home. They do the work in just the opposite ways from ours. They pull the plane toward them instead of pushing it from them, and they pull the hand-saw. Nevertheless their joints fit, and a great part of their house-making consists of sliding walls which move in grooves.—Boston Globe.

What He Lacked.

"They tell me," said the innocent maid, "that your marriage was the result of love at first sight. Is it true?"
"It is," answered the round shouldered man sadly. "Had I been gifted with second sight I'd still be in the bachelor class!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE FIRST WOMAN.

An Old Eastern Legend That Tells How She Was Created.

The last section "Of a Finger of the Moon Reddened by the Setting Sun" in the Sanskrit work called the "Surging of the Ocean of Time" contains a legend concerning woman's creation which is commonly credited throughout India and which runs somewhat as follows: At the beginning of time Twashtri, the Vulcan of Hindoo mythology, created the world. But when he wished to create a woman he found he had employed all his materials in the creation of man. There did not remain one solid element. Then Twashtri, perplexed, fell into a profound meditation. He roused himself to do as follows: He took the lightness of the leaf and the glance of the fawn, the gaiety of the sun's rays and tears of the mist, the inconstancy of the wind and the timidity of the hare, the vanity of the peacock and the softness of the down on the throat of the swallow, the harshness of the diamond, the sweet flavor of honey, the cruelty of the tiger, the warmth of fire, the chill of snow, the chatter of the jay and the cooing of the turtle-dove. He melted all these and formed a woman. Then he made a present of her to man. Eight days later the man came to Twashtri and said: "My lord, the creature you gave me poisons my existence. She chatters without rest, she takes all my time, she laments for nothing at all and is always ill." And Twashtri received the woman again. But eight days later the man came again to the god and said: "My lord, my life is very solitary since I returned this creature. I remember she danced before my singing. I recall how she glanced at me from the corner of her eye, that she played with me, clung to me." And Twashtri returned the woman to him. Three days only passed, and Twashtri saw the man coming to him again. "My lord," said he, "I do not understand exactly how, but I'm sure the woman causes me more annoyance than pleasure. I beg of you relieve me of her." But Twashtri cried, "Go your way and do your best!" And the man cried, "I cannot live with her!" "Neither can you live without her," replied Twashtri. And the man went sorrowfully away, murmuring: "Woe is me. I can neither live with her nor without her."

THE SPEAKER'S MACE.

Ancient Emblem Used in the House of Representatives.

With all its dignity, its senatorial courtesy and the forms and ceremonies that always are observed, the senate is far behind the house of representatives in the matter of one antiquated piece of furniture. The senate has no mace. Now, a mace is not such in the way of furniture. It is a silver eagle mounted upon a staff around which are bands of silver.

This mace is always an emblem of the house of representatives. It is the duty of one employee to look after it. Just before a session of the house begins he takes it from the office of the sergeant-at-arms into the house chamber, and as soon as the speaker's gavel falls he inserts it in a socket in a stone pillar at the right of the speaker's chair. The mace remains there while the house is in session and is taken out and stood beside its pedestal when the house is in committee of the whole. When the house adjourns the mace is carried back to the office of the sergeant-at-arms.

This ancient emblem has not a thing to do with the order of business of the house, save as one of the old time regulations that are continued. When the house is turbulent an officer seizes the mace and walks through the aisles. Only once or twice when the speaker failed to preserve order here I seen an officer seize the mace and walk through the house, waving it backward and forward. Possibly the sight of it brought members to their senses and they retired to their seats. At all events, that is about the only real use for the mace that I ever have observed.
