GENERAL ASSEMBLY CALLED SPECIAL SESSION.

GOVERNOR KITCHIN ACTS IN EMERGENCY.

Session Set for June 14—Bankers Asked to Meet on June 8 in Conference Upon Matter of Bonds.

The General Assembly of North Carolina is called to meet in extra session on Tuesday, June 14, at 11 o'clock. The proclamation for it was signed at 4:30 yesterday afternoon by Governor Kitchin.

The extra session is called by the Governor by the advice of the Council of State, and is for the purpose of taking action in the emergency which has arisen because of the failure to sell the entire issue of the bonds to refund the issue of $3,430,000 of 1880, which fall due on the first day of July.

There funding bonds bear an interest rate of four per cent. and of the entire issue there has only been subscribed $1,219,000, leaving yet not subscribed $2,211,000 and it is to provide for this amount that the extra session is called. The expectation is that by increasing the rate to five per cent that the entire issue will be readily absorbed.

THE CALL MAY BE REVOKED.

There is one chance against an extra session being held, and that chance depends upon the bankers and capitalists of the State. Governor Kitchin has written personally to every bank in North Carolina asking that it have representatives here at a conference on June eighth, the purpose of this being to see if the remainder of the issue of refunding bonds cannot be placed. If there is action taken at the meeting to take up the $2,211,000, this will obviate the need for the extra session and while there is no official statement given out, it is understood that with the entire issue taken the call for the extra session will be revoked.—Raleigh News and Observer.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOR.

To the Honorable the General Assembly of North Carolina:

By and with the advice of the council of state, an extraordinary occasion having arisen, I, W. W. Kitchin, governor of the State of North Carolina, in the exercise of the power conferred on me by the constitution of the State, do issue this my proclamation convening the general assembly in extra session on Tuesday, the 14th day of June, 1910, at 11 o'clock a. m., and do hereby notify and request the senators and the members of the house of representatives of the general assembly of North Carolina to meet in their respective halls, in the Capitol in the city Raleigh at said time, for the purpose of considering the emergency resulting from the inability of the state treasurer to sell in accordance with chapter 399, public laws 1909, entitled "An act to authorize the issue of state bonds to pay off the state bonds which fall due on the first day of July, 1910," sufficient bonds to pay the present outstanding bonds of the issue of 1880, which mature on July 1, 1910, and of enacting legislation to enable the state treasurer to secure sufficient funds to pay said last mentioned bonds at their maturity.

For information of the members of the General Assembly all State papers are requested to publish notice of this proclamation. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused

Not only does the school, but the teachers who are taking this course, appreciate your kindness and hospitality. It is a pleasure to me to express publicly our feeling in this matter.

Accident at Plant.

Friday afternoon a gust of wind blew off one of the heavy doors to the engine room of the city electric light and water plant. The door fell across the main 15-inch driving belt and broke it in two. For a moment it looked like the machinery would run away, having no belt to hold it, but by quick work of Enginier Zahnizer everything was stopped and no damage resulted except to the belt. This was soon repaired without any interruption of consequence to the service.

New Telephone Directory Out.

We are now delivering our new telephone directory, and we earnestly ask that all users of the telephone will call by number instead of name, as it very greatly expedites the service. It is not for our own good, but the subscribers that we ask this. Owing to our rapid growth it is impossible for the operator to remember all the numbers and have to look them up, thereby greatly reducing the efficiency of the service. In calling by number always call the figures singly, as 17 call, "one," "seven," or as 280-L call, "two," "eight," "0" .L. Try this and you will like it. Respectfully,
Home Telephone & Telegraph Co.

SATURDAY, JUNE 4, 1910.

The result of the primaries in the different wards, Friday night, shows a considerable change in the personnel of the next board of aldermen. In four of the wards new men were nominated, all of them young men of good business qualifications. The outlook is for a good board of aldermen.

One thing The Reflector believes must come sooner or later to all towns of consequence, is the commission form of government. Better municipal administration can be given by three men sufficiently paid for their services than by a larger number who are not paid enough to afford to leave their own business to look after public affairs.

By an error of records sent from Davidson county, a prisoner who was sentenced to the penitentiary for fifteen years was released at the expiration of two years. The commitment papers received at the prison had two years written thereon, hence no blame can attach to the prison authorities for letting the prisoner go at the expiration of that time.

As to Superstition.

Our Home this week discusses somewhat on omens and superstitions. It holds that the days of superstition are not all in the background and to sustain its contention, it gives instances of some people who will hang up a black snake to make it rain, who will have uneasy feelings when a rabbit crosses the road before them, who will shudder at the thought of passing a graveyard after midnight or refuse to begin a job of work on Friday. "And then," says Our Home, "there are those who carry the hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, place a horseshoe over the door or put it in the fireplace to clinch the claws of the hawk, expect to find money when the left eye itches and look for company if the nose needs rubbing. And there are numerous other things that we might mention which many people look upon as omens of distress or luck. Very few people will admit that they really do 'believe in' such things, but away deep down in their very natures they can't help but think they have a little something to do with matters. It's just a little streak of the old New England witchcraft that we have not fully gotten rid of." Then there is the bad luck of passing under a ladder. The Chronicle knows of intelligent men in Charlotte who will go out into the street rather than walk under a ladder that may be erected from the sidewalk to the front of some building. But the remedy is simple, but sure. If by any means, a man happens to walk under a ladder, all he has to do to break the spell, is to take off his hat, turn it around and put it on again. There is also a remedy for the rabbit hoodoo. If a rabbit crosses the road in front of you, turn your left hand pocket wrong side out then turn it in again, and you will be safe. The Chronicle has no faith in any of these superstitions. There is one, however, that it has tried to have faith in, and that is to look over the left shoulder at the new moon, and wish for money. We have tried that somewhat in the neighborhood of a million times and it hasn't worked worth a red cent. Wherefore, we say, away with all superstitions, both good and bad—Charlotte Chronicle.

Just about the most contemptible scoundrel in any community is the soft soaping hypocrite. The citizen who is brazenly and openly vile can be placed and dealt with accordingly; but the one who is depraved at heart, who pretends to favor the enforcement of law and order, but winks at violations of law and evil practices generally, who pretends to stand for civic righteousness, but secretly lends his influence to those factors that mean social degradation—such citizen is a great deal more harmful and less desirable than the avowed thug. There is too much straddling going on in the world. Too many men and women, too, are trying to run with the hare and follow with the hounds. Our community suffers from this state of affairs and so does every other community. A man is strong just insofar as you can place him and count on him. A community is strong just insofar as she can depend on her citizens. In this community we must have a stricter alignment of law-abiding citizens opposing those who will wink at law violation. We must know just where to place men when the critical time comes. Nothing so saps the moral strength of an individual or community as does listless indifference which naturally develops into rank hypocrisy—Kinston Free Press.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

ST. PETER CRIED "LORD, SAVE ME."

Matthew 14:22-36—June 5.

"Then they that were in the ship came and worshiped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God."—V. 33.

RESPECTING its heroes the Bible, unlike any other religious book, tells the naked truth. Today's study emphasizes both the strength and the weakness of St. Peter's natural disposition. We identify the character here pictured as the same which was displayed on other occasions—noble and courageous, but rather forward and boastful. Not a single weakness of any of the Bible characters seems to be smoothed down or cut away in the narrative. It was this same St. Peter who, after hearing Jesus tell of his approaching death, took the Master to task for it, upbraiding him for speaking after this manner and assuring him that he did not tell the truth, and that the disciple knew more than his Master; that the latter was either ignorant or else willfully misrepresenting the future. No wonder the Master rebuked him, as in this matter being an adversary.

The same courageous man afterward drew his sword and smote the servant of the High Priest in his Master's defense. Yet with all this it was only a few hours later when he denied him entirely with oaths and cursing. Nevertheless, the Master loved him; with his peculiar combination of weakness and strength he had, withal, a noble, faithful heart, even while he boastfully declared, "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." Our study shows us St. Peter with the other disciples in a fishing-boat on a boisterous sea. Jesus had declined to go with them in the boat, withdrawing himself to the mountain for a season of prayer. The boat had not yet reached her destination, when the disciples saw the Master walking upon the water and drawing near. At first they were all affrighted; then reassurance came from his word, and finally St. Peter asked the Lord's permission that he might walk to him on the water. This permission was granted, and we cannot doubt that, had the Apostle maintained his faith, he would have reached the Lord in safety, for the same power that had exercised itself in him and in the other disciples for the healing of sick and the casting out of demons was absolutely able to keep him from sinking into the water.

But while St. Peter's faith was stronger than that of the others and stronger than ours today, in that he even attempted to walk on the water, nevertheless it was not strong enough. As his eye caught a glimpse of the boisterousness of the sea his faith began to fail and he began to sink. The Master, however, caught him, saying, "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" The lesson of the occasion being ended, the wind ceased. All the disciples then offered the Lord their worship, realizing afresh that he was the Son of God in power; that even the winds and the waves obeyed him.

"A hand that is not ours upstays our steps,
A voice that is not ours commands the waves;
Commands the waves, and whispers in our ear,
O, thou of little faith, why didst thou doubt?"

All are sinners. "There is none righteous; no, not one." Some do not realize the extent of their imperfections. Nevertheless it is safe to say that all sane people recognize themselves as imperfect and hence as unworthy the recognition of the great Creator. They cannot commend themselves to him as being worthy of his favor and life eternal. It is when this conviction of unworthiness becomes deep-seated; when the realization is keen that "the wage of sin is death," that the heart is most likely to realize the value of life eternal and to cry unto the Lord for deliverance from darkness, from sin's bondage and from its death sentence. To all such the Savior stands ready to lend a helping hand, as in St. Peter's case. He will not reproach such for their sins if they have repented of them and turned to righteousness. Rather, he will say, "Why did you not come sooner? I was quite willing to aid you as soon as you cried."

Our forefathers used to think that they should picture before the sinner's mind an everlasting torture at the hands of devils. It seemed to them that such pictures would be more successful in drawing men from sin to righteousness than the Scripture penalty which declares that the wages of sin is death, "everlasting destruction" (II Thessalonians 1, 9). But they overdid the matter. Their message failed to convert the world. It merely tortured the saintly, the loving, the Godlike. Men reasoned that there was probably some mistake about it, as it is contrary to all human experiences that life could persist in such untellable torture. Now, however, with the aid of the modern Bible, superior translations, marginal references, etc., the people of God are learning more and more that God's Word is true and that it should not be twisted—when it says death it does not mean life in torture.

Indeed, some have told us that to their minds the utter blotting out of existence which God has ordained to be the fate of those who refuse his every opportunity and offer of salvation is more of a terror to them than life in any condition would be. One reason that it has greater terrors undoubtedly is that it is more rational, and thinking people can and do receive it more earnestly and give it more weight. It is from everlasting destruction that the Savior stands ready to deliver every member of Adam's race from the death penalty—from the tomb and all the imperfections of mind and body which are parts of death. Jesus' death at Calvary was of sufficient value to cancel the sins of the first man and of all those who share the death penalty with him. Without Christ's death there would be no resurrection, no future life.

A little while and the faithful ones shall come forth in the "first resurrection" to be Christ's Joint-heirs. Then will come the general uplift of mankind—including the awakening of those of the whole world from the sleep of death. Our Lord's help of Peter corresponds to that greater help of the whole world. It also illustrates how those who have already become the children of God would be in danger of sinning again, were it not for our Lord's helping hand.

The Filipino Judge.

A former official in the Philippines tells this story of a native judge:

I came home one day just in time to see a thief climbing out the window with the better part of my wardrobe. I gave chase so earnestly that the thief finally dropped the clothes in the street and disappeared. As I gathered up my belongings a native policeman came along and insisted on arresting me. He took me before a Filipino judge, where I told my story very plainly and emphatically.

When I had finished the judge said, "You are dismissed, but you may leave the clothes here."

"But why?" I insisted angrily.

"Because," said he, with sage deliberation, "how can I tell that you speak the truth? When the thief comes back to identify these clothes as the ones he stole you may have them."—Youth's Companion.

Whistler Let Them Wait.

Whistler's laxity in the matter of engagements was notorious. No one ever knew if he were coming or not to affairs. But his point of view is explained in his answer to a friend of his who knew that he had an engagement to dine with some swells in a distant part of London and who felt that it was most impolitic for Whistler to offend them. It was growing late, and yet Whistler was painting away madly, intently.

"My dear fellow," he said to him at last, "it is frightfully late, and you have to dine with Lady Such-a-one. Don't you think you'd better stop?"

"Stop?" fairly shrieked Whistler.

"Stop, when everything is going beautifully? Go and stuff myself with disgusting food when I can paint like this? Never! Never! Besides, they can't do anything until I get there! They never do!"

Henry Clay's Eloquence.

It was the remark of a distinguished senator that Henry Clay's eloquence was absolutely intangible to delineation, that the most labored description could not embrace it and that to be understood it must be seen and felt. He was an orator by nature. His eagle eye burned with patriotic ardor or flashed indignation and defiance upon his foes or was suffused with tears of commiseration or of pity, and it was because he felt that he made others feel. A gentleman after hearing one of his magnificent efforts in the senate thus described him: "Every muscle of the orator's face was at work. His whole body seemed agitated, as if each part was distinct with a separate life, and his small, white hand, with its blue veins apparently distended almost to bursting, moved gracefully, but with all the energy of rapid and vehement gesture. The appearance of the speaker seemed that of a pure intellect wrought up to its mightiest energies and brightly shining through the thin and transparent veil of flesh that invested it."—St. Louis Republic.

An Awful Jolt.

"I see you have a new automobile," said Wiggs enviously.

"Yes," responded Biggs as he slowed up the machine near the sidewalk. "And it's a beauty. Everything works like clockwork."

"That's good."

"The tires are puncture proof."

"Better still."

"And she goes like the wind."

"Gee whiz! Wish I owned one."

"By the way, are you fond of riding?"

"Am I fond of riding? Well, I should say so!"

"Well, here's a street car transfer I just found. I won't need it, and you can ride home on it."—Chicago News

JAPANESE HEROISM.

The Brave Record of the Loss of a Submarine Vessel.

Subjoined is the translation of a message written by Lieutenant Tsutomu Sakuma, who was in command of the Japanese submarine No. 6, which foundered while maneuvering in Hiroshima bay. The message was found in the conning tower of the submarine after she had been brought to the surface:

"It is with the deepest regret that I write this message to describe the loss of this boat with my fellow officers and men, due to my own fault. I would here specially mention that all steps have been taken to raise her, my comrades and men working earnestly and calmly till the end. I ordered the ship to dive with the engine running, but as I found she went down too far I tried to shut the valves which admit the sea water to the ballast tank, but unexpectedly the chain working these valves broke, and I was left helpless, unable to control the boat. Meanwhile the tanks filled with water, and the boat went down at an incline of about twenty-five degrees. After striking the bottom the water began rushing in, the switchboard was immersed in water, all electric lights went out, the fuses burnt away, and the boat was filled with poisonous gases, so that we experienced the greatest difficulty in breathing.

"Under these conditions we worked our very utmost with the hand pumps to empty the main ballast tank, which, I believe, we succeeded in doing, although we could not read the gauges owing to darkness. No electric current was available, as I mentioned before, and our last hope of rising to the surface lay in working the hand pumps only.

"I write this in the dim light coming from the conning tower—11:45 a. m. "I earnestly beseech his majesty to grant me forgiveness and to succor the families of my comrades and men who have lost their lives in this perishing boat. This is my only wish. 12:30 p. m.

"It is with the utmost difficulty that I can breathe, though I am sure we must have blown out the gasoline entirely from the tanks. I cannot continue any more. 12:40 p. m."—London Times.

His Latest Request.

There is a clever lad who will get his living in this world. For playing truant maternal authority cut off his supper. Casting one fond look at the authoress of his existence, he paused at the door to say:

"Mother, I am going to die, and when I am no more I wish the doctor to cut me open and look at my stomach."

The maternal heart was filled with awful forebodings, and the maternal voice asked what he meant.

"I wish it to be known," he answered, "that I died of starvation."

This was enough. The small boy was triumphant and retired to his little bed gorged to repletion.

Toy Spaniel an Old Breed.

The English toy spaniel is undoubtedly one of the oldest and most popular breeds of pet dogs known. As far back as the days of Charles the Martyr this breed was much prized by the ladies of the court. In the narrative of the execution of Mary, queen of Scots, indorsed in Lord Burghley's hand and forwarded to the court, it was recorded that one of the executioners found her little pet (a spaniel of practically the same type as those afterward known in the reign of Charles II.), which had crept under the folds of her garments to be near her and which would not be taken away.—Bit and Spur.

The Newspaper as a Business Builder.

Not in a long time have we seen the case for newspaper advertising more sensibly and unanswerably stated than in the following extract from the St. Albans (Vt.) Messenger: One more Franklin county business concern decides to forsake advertising wagons, job boards, store windows and other similar expensive and ineffective methods of advertising and will employ space in newspapers hereafter. They will all come to it in time. Advertising pays, if the man has something to sell so regulates his advertising as to convince other people that it is worth buying. All the substitutes for newspaper advertising can be easily avoided or disregarded by the very people the advertiser tries hardest to attract, the man or woman that can afford to buy.

"They will all come in time." Our contemporary is right, beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Outdoor, street car, circular and letter advertising are efficient auxiliaries to newspaper publicity, but they are, after all, only auxiliaries.

It is the journal of general circulation, that goes every day or every week or three times a week into the homes of the ultimate consumers, that brings results in the way of salesmanship.

And, at the essential analysis, newspaper advertising is simply salesmanship on paper.

Fifty years ago, business enterprises of all natures, from the vague general store on down to the chimney sweeper, indulged in space-buying more or less tentatively, advertising at intervals and always a little skeptical as to the wisdom of the investment.

Today it is universally recognized that half of business-building lies in efficiency of goods and sense in methods; the other half lies in judicious and discriminate newspaper advertising.

And the art, which seems marvelous enough to the uninitiated, is even now only in its first stages.

QUEEN SAAV'S READY WIT.

A Story Appropriated From the Annals of Irish Royalty.

The anger of King Colm was terrible. 'Twas a fortnight before he could address himself to his queen or look her in the face and speak to her—and what he came to say to her then was that she was a shame and a disgrace to him, but sure what could he expect anyhow when he was such a notorious fool as ever to marry a beggar of a race of beggars. "Get up," says he, "and dress yourself, and leave my sight and my castle for evermore."

"Very well and good, me lord," says Saav, says she. "I'm ready. I was prepared for this, as you'll remember, before ever I married you; but," says she, "you remember your agreement—three back burdens of the greatest valuables I choose to carry out of your castle at my lavin'?"

"Thirty-three," says he, "if you like. 'Twill be a cheap price to get rid of you."

"Thanky, me lord," says she. "I'll only ask three. And before I've got them out maybe you'll think 'twas enough."

"What is the first back burden you choose?" says he.

"A back burden," says she, "of gold, silver, diamonds and jewelry."

In a short time the king had a burden of them piled on her that near almost broke her back, and with it she went out over the drawbridge.

When she laid it down and come back in again says the king, says he, "What will your second back burden be?"

"For my second back burden," says she, "hoist up on me our baby boy."

The king gave a groan that'd rent rocks. But he wasn't the man to be daunted before any woman. He lifted with his own hands the boy in whom his heart was wrapped up and, settin' his teeth hard, put him on Saav's shoulders. She carried him out over the drawbridge.

When she come back again says Colm, says he, "Now then, name your third and last burden, and we're done with you forever, thank God!"

Says Saav, says she, "Get on me back yourself."

King Colm and his good Queen Saav lived ever after the happiest and most contented couple that Ireland ever knew, a parable for all kings and queens and married couples in the nation. Saav lived and died the whitest, as her husband lived ever after and died the justest and most generous, most reasonable, sensible, affable and amiable king that Ireland ever knew. BIRD DOGS.

Some of These Trained Animals Are Wonderfully Clever.

The wonderful intelligence of the well broken bird dog is often strikingly shown at field trials, says Country Life In America. The field trial, which is becoming more popular in this country, gives a good chance to study the psychology of the dogs, the instinct to point game affecting them in various ways.

On a cold perfect winter day Mr. Tomlinson was handling the noted field trial winner Uncle Sam. He was in normal health and very keen. After hunting about two hours his handler cast him over into a patch of low growth hedge, and the party watching him run came up near a fence to get a better view of his work. Just as all eyes were turned upon him they saw him tumble to the ground flat and limp, just as though he had struck an obscure stump or stone.

Mr. Clemson, his owner, and a party of friends went cautiously up to him. There he lay, stretched listlessly on his side, not a muscle moving, his eyes dull and glazed. Consolation was offered Mr. Clemson by the gentlemen witnessing the sad death of so capital a field performer as Uncle Sam and the very remarkable manner in which he had died.

Presently his handler came up and saw him lying there just as the others had—with glazed, dull eyes and no perceptible breathing. As Tomlinson said "Poor Sam!" he thought he noticed just the slightest movement of his tail. He spoke again and was sure of it.

Turning to Mr. Clemson and his friends, he said: "Gentlemen, there are birds here. Though I cannot explain the actions of the dog, I am positive of it. He is very close to them."

At that he kicked the tufts of sedge directly in front of the dog's nose, who all this time had never move or regained his animated expression. Suddenly Tomlinson flushed three close lying birds. To the surprise of all, the dog was instantly on his feet, eager again to be cast off.
