AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsp Notes From a Hustling Town Briefly Told

Ayden, N. C., June 7.
Prof. E. F. Mumford, formerly of Ayden, but now a teacher in the Morganton asylum, is here with his mother for a few days.

Is the world growing better? The Holiness people arrived Saturday, pitched their tent and are attracting large crowds.

Mrs. Ferebee, of Hertford, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. D. G. Berry, is visiting relatives in Scotland Neck.

At the meeting Monday night I. O. O. F. the following officers were elected: R. W. Smith, N. G.; B. J. Skinner, V. G.; Exum Dail, recording secretary; H. G. Burton, financial secretary; J. R. Smith, treasurer.

Are not our people making a mistake by shipping their corn field peas elsewhere, when they are so much needed at home? We are a true disciple of the "Progressive Farmer," and endorse all it says about leguminous crops, and are sure the demand will overtax their supply, yet we see a great many peas shipped from here to other points. We regard self protection as the first law of nature.

Jno. A. Branch tells us while berry hunting, he captured three foxes, near half grown. He discovered them under the trunk of an uprooted tree.

Rain! Rain! We are reminded of the small boy's speech, "Go away and come another day."

Within the last year Swift creek township has lost three of its most substantial citizens—Messrs. E. S. Laughinghouse, John Snip Kilpatrick and Joshua L. Tucker—these gentlemen resided in the immediate section of St. John's church. They were men of prudence, zeal and integrity. Staunch Democrats, good business men, and successful farmers.

The tax lister, H. J. Lancaster, will be here to list your taxes on June 10, 11, and 18th.

The children of Mr. Jimmie Sugg, from the I. O. O. F. orphanage at Goldsboro, arrived yesterday to spend vacation with their mother.

Miss Dollie Braxton, of the training school spent Sunday with Miss Eva Hart.

J. H. Tripp spent Sunday at Morehead.

Mrs. Cyrene Mumford is spending the week with relatives at Winterville.

Dr. J. C. Caldwell filled Rev. C. M. Morton's appointment at the Christian church here Sunday night.

Quite a number of our Masons attended the funeral of J. L. Tucker Monday, which took at St. John's church, near his home.

STOKESTOWN ITEMS.

Stokestown, N. C., June 6.—Quite a number of our people attended the children's day excursion at Timothy Sunday.

D. C. Stokes is on the sick list. Miss Rosalie Stokes, of Washington, is visiting relatives here.

We had a nice rain Sunday night, which was needed very much.

John Dixon and Misses Martha Williams and Dolly Dixon, of Black Jack, were the guests of Miss Lizzie Stokes Sunday.

Miss Belya Dixon, of Winterville, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. B. Stokes.

NEW COURT HOUSE.

Larger Than Old One—Will Have Clock in Steeple—Plans Complete.

We know what the new court house is going to look like but we do not know what it will cost. One thing is certain, that despite certain kicks that have been registered from various parts of the county, there will be a town clock and a nice large one at that.

After Saturday, the plans, which have been drawn by the famous architect, Frank P. Wilburn, will be advertised and a day set on which the different contracting builders who want the job can put in their bids.

The new building will be somewhat larger than the one which went down in the recent fire. It will be 66 by 116 feet. There will be two large entrances, one from the side and the other towards Evans street just as before. The colonnade of the front entrance will not be as wide as the building itself, as it was for the old court house. The small, hard-to-get-to gallery which was a practically useless part of the old court house will be replaced by a roomy comfortable balcony. The ground floor will have thirteen rooms, which will be divided into six sets of offices. Besides the sheriff, clerk, register of deeds and other county offices in the old court house, the board of education and board of county commissioners will be allotted comfortable quarters in the new building. A basement will be extended under nearly the whole building. It will be used for the furnaces of the new steam heating system which will be installed.

The site of the Masonic Temple, which was destroyed in the same fire as the court house, has been purchased by the board of county commissioners as a supplement to the grounds.

The Judicial Convention.

The judicial convention for the Eastern Judicial District will be called early in July, no definite date having been set upon as yet. Of course nobody in Greenville is making any predictions, but a person glancing over the following figures will no doubt envy Mr. H. W. Whedbee his chance of election.

The different counties of the district will have the voting power given below in the convention soon to be held:

Cartaret	23
Craven	20
Greene	18
Jones	13
Pamlico	13
Pitt	50
Total	147

As yet there is no candidate out against the present incumbent, C. L. Abernethy, of Beaufort, for the office of solicitor.

New Interprise for Farmville.

A cotton seed oil and fertilizer factory with $40,000, paid in capital, has been organized at Farmville. The lime has already been ordered for the laying of the foundation and work will begin as soon as the building material can be rushed to Farmville. R. L. Davis is president of the corporation and B. M. Lewis, vice-president. Mr. W. M. Lang is one of the stockholders.

For Sale.

BASE BALL CLUB

Organized Monday—Game Arranged for With Washington.

The local baseball club, which organized Monday has arranged a game with Greenville's ancient and worthy rival, Washington, to be played in Greenville next Tuesday. The boys got together yesterday afternoon to begin a season of hard work.

The line up this year will include such experienced players as John Ivey Smith, Bert James, Gus Forbes, W. T. Lipscomb, Jr., Hugh Ragsdale, Guy Lanier, Dodd, who played second base for the Training school, and Luther Bowling. Among the young players who are trying for places on the team which will represent Greenville this summer are J. Conrad Lanier, Ben Bryan, Harry White and others.

Many of the names given of the first part of the list are those of players who worked for Greenville on the '05 and '06 teams when she had the best amateur team in eastern North Carolina.

The captain and manager will be elected today. Mr. J. C. Lanier, who handled matters for the nine last summer, is already in correspondence with Kinston and other neighboring towns and hopes to have games arranged with them at an early date.

The boys are trying to get the Training School diamond. They believe that President Wright and the faculty will grant them the privilege of its use.

They are going to try to give Greenville baseball fans a chance to see on an average, two good games a week.

New Telephone Directory Out.

We are now delivering our new telephone directory, and we earnestly ask that all users of the telephone will call by number instead of name, as it very greatly expedites the service. It is not for our own good, but the subscribers that we ask this. Owing to our rapid growth it is impossible for the operator to remember all the numbers and have to look them up, thereby greatly reducing the efficiency of the service. In calling by number always call the figures singly, as 17 call, "one" "seven," or as 280-L call, "two" "eight" "0" "L." Try this and you will like it. Respectfully,
Home Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Offices in Shelburn Building.

Mr. Ed. H. Shelburn is erecting a two-story, two-entrance front office building on the site of his recently burned down coca-cola bottling works. The lower floor is divided into two sets of offices, one to be occupied by Skinner & Whedbee, the other by Mr. Albion Dunn, who was married to Miss Irma Cobb, of this city during the 1909 holidays. Mr. Dunn will move to Greenville in the early fall.

TOWN ELECTION.

New Board to Have First Meeting July First—Policemen to be Elected.

The city elections for the board of aldermen were held in the five wards of the town, with little excitement. The men who had been nominated at the recent Democratic primaries went through without a flutter. The nominees elected were:

J. I. Smith, 1st ward.
W. A. Bowen, 2nd ward.
J. F. Davenport, 3rd ward.
W. L. Hall, 4th ward.
H. C. Edwards, 5th ward.

The second, third, and fourth wards are entitled to two representatives on the board. These wards elect one man every year for a two year's term. The three men whose two year terms have not yet expired are:

C. S. Carr, 2nd ward.
E. B. Higgs, 3rd ward.
E. G. Flanagan, 4th ward.

The retiring aldermen are J. B. White, D. W. Hardee, E. A. Moye and W. S. Moye.

It is rumored that certain members of the board have expressed their intention of resigning at an early date.

The new board will hold its first meeting on July 1st. At this time they will elect the policemen for the town and the clerk of the board.

Pythians Elect Officers.

Last Thursday night the local chapter of the Knights of Pythias held their semi-annual election. The officers chosen were: Rev. B. F. Huske, Chancellor Commander; G. J. Woodward, Vice Chancellor Commander; M. L. Turnage, Prelate; E. B. Ficklen, Master of Work; A. B. Ellington, Keeper of Records and Seals; F. G. Smith, Master of Finance; C. S. Carr, Master of Exchequer; W. B. Wilson, Jr., Master at Arms; H. B. Harris, Inner Guard; H. D. Bateman, Outer Guard.

The insurance department of the Knights of Pythias in Greenville has made a rapid stride in its work in the past year. With a membership of 20, its society insurance has increased from $18,000 to $28,000 in twelve months.

A Runaway Marriage.

A marriage was solemnized in the parlors of Hotel Tull at three o'clock this afternoon, when Mr. Charlie M. Hurst, of Oak City, Martin county, and Miss Mary E. Beverly, of Bethel, Pitt county, were united in wedlock by Rev. J. R. Rountree in the presence of a few friends. It is understood to be a runaway match, but the reason for this was not learned. The couple will remain as guests of Hotel Tull until in the morning, when they will take their departure for Martin county.—Kinston Free Press, 6h.

$5 in Gold.

A $5 gold piece will be given to the person that guesses nearest to the number of dots, which will be shown on the picture curtain at the Amuzu theatre. Cards will be given at ticket office. Write your name and number of your guess and leave with ticket seller. 6 11

Annual Baraca Excursion.

The annual Baraca excursion of the Memorial Baptist church will be the 30th of this month. Raleigh has been selected as the place to go, and preparations are now being made to make the day a great success in the way of pleasure for all who go.

STATE NEWS.

Newsp Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

The news comes from Beaufort that the Beaufort section of the inland waterway will probably be open for traffic about next November. That is good. The bar at Beaufort is being dredged and has already about 18 feet of water. After Uncle Sam gets through with the job it will be found that a great work has been done and Eastern North Carolina will be the gainer by a great deal.—Kinston Free Press.

Wilson, June 6.—The stand taken by the city authorities of Rocky Mount in refusing to license dealers to sell near beer, if followed by every village, town and city in North Carolina, would do more toward the enforcement of prohibition in the State than anything yet attempted. They truly say that the stuff is intoxicating; that the analysis and witnesses before the recorder prove as much, and that they have no right to license a man to violate the law.

Durham, June 6.—At a late hour tonight the trustees of Trinity College elected Dean W. P. Few, of the Chair of English, president of Trinity College to succeed Dr. J. C. Kilgo recently made Bishop. Dr. Few has been fourteen years at Trinity being like his predecessor a native South Carolinian. His close connection with college made him the logical successor and but one ballot was cast for another. Dr. W. O. Cranford, of the Chair of Philosophy, becomes dean of the faculty, and S. B. Underwood is elected headmaster of Trinity Park.

Raise in Salaries.

Among the changes in salaries of the different post masters of North Carolina are the following, which will be of interest to Greenville people. Each of these towns has had an increase:
Ayden—$1,100.
Elizabeth City—$2,500.
New Bern—$2,700.
Tarboro—$2,200.
Wilson—$2,500.
Williamston—$1,600.

TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1910.

If Solomon Sheppard, the notorious negro in the penitentiary, keeps on trying to escape he may get what is coming to him.

We think the Wilmington Dispatch will have an opportunity to go for the weather man over the kind he gives the press convention.

A plucky New York girl knocked down a burglar with a bottle and held him until help arrived. The bottle has been known to knock men out before, but not used in just the way this girl adopted.

Two important meetings are scheduled for Wrightsville this week, the press association and the good roads association. It goes without saying that the editors are very much interested in both. No class is doing more for good roads than the newspaper men.

The editor is off this week attending the press convention at Wrightsville. During his absence Mr. L. Ames Brown will do the local reporting for the paper. He had considerable newspaper experience at the University and is a good writer. The editorial department will be in charge of Mr. C. W. Hearne foreman of the paper, and the business end will be looked after by both himself and Mr. O. B. Whichard. With these in charge the editor will take life easy for a few days and not trouble his mind much about things in the shop.

An Expert Opinion.

A. W. Green, president of the National Biscuit Company, a concern which has extensively used a variety of means of presenting its wares to public attention, is quoted thus in The Fourth Estate: "Newspaper advertising we have found the best, taken all around. Bill-board advertising is good, but it requires too much time and attention. The boards have to be watched to see that they are in good condition, and the advertisements constantly have to be renewed. We have very little trouble with the newspapers. Magazine advertising is well enough, but it is slow." Mr. Green is in substantial agreement with the great majority of advertisers who have fairly compared newspapers with other mediums by actual and comprehensive tests. The newspaper yields the quickest returns, and the greatest returns per dollar of investment—always provided the right newspaper is chosen to do the work.

The Record is not in the race for that medal offered by the Charlotte Chronicle for the paper that tells, in the course of the year, the greatest lie, yet here is a story coming from a gentleman whose veracity cannot be questioned, that will be put down as a bid for the medal. Mr. B. B. Bouldin has recently returned from a trip over to his old home in Virginia and says he ran across a story that is vouched for by the best kind of people. A little tot of a child, perhaps four or five years old, was in the habit of coming to its mother for a little milk and bread between meals. It was finally noticed that on receiving the milk, etc., the child went out towards the barn. This excited some curiosity and one day the father followed it, keeping out of sight. Going out to a somewhat secluded spot, the child sat down on a rock; in a moment two copper-head snakes came up; the child dipped the spoon in the milk and one of them was given a drink, then the other; but being somewhat greedy one of them dipped its head in the cup of milk, when the little tot whacked it over the head and told it to wait its turn. All this was very interesting to the father, but it got next to his nerves and he killed both snakes. Over this the child cried for three days. Remember, Mr. Chronicle man, this is not a bid for that medal. —Greensboro Record.

The Navy Yard Tablet.

Mark well that the Charlotte tablet was unveiled by women of the South—a self sacrificing, devoted, loyal and magnificent womanhood that deserves a monument and must have it as the tribute of brave men to the highest type of woman the world ever produced. Let us hope that the tablet at the Charlotte navy yard may not fall a prey to the vandalism of a ruthless industrialism that is constantly obliterating the old landmarks to make way for the further development of the modern and progressive Charlotte. —Wilmington Star.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY
Imperfect Digestion Causes Bad Complexion and Dull Eyes.
The color of your cheeks won't fade, the brightness in your eye won't vanish, if you keep your stomach in good condition.
This was the advice of a prominent physician to a woman's club in Boston and it is good advice.
Belching of gas, heaviness, sour taste in mouth, dizziness, biliousness and nausea occur simply because the stomach is not properly digesting the food.
The blood needs nourishment to carry vigor, vim and vitality to every part of the body and when food ferments in the stomach enough nourishment is not supplied.
Mi-o-na stomach tablets give instant relief to upset stomachs, but they do more; they put strength into the stomach and build it up so that it can easily digest a hearty meal without giving its owner hours of misery.
Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere and by Coward & Wooten at 50c a large box. It is guaranteed to cure indigestion or any stomach distress or money back.

THE TAIL OF A COMET

It Pays Dearly For Its Brilliant
Gaseous Display.

FORMED BY LIGHT AND HEAT.

Far Away the Comet is a Globular
Mass, and as it Nears the Sun the Action of That Body Untwines the Tail, Which is Never Recovered.

Traveling as comets do in very elongated ellipses, with the sun in one of the foci, as the attracting point is called, most of their journey is spent in slow uneventfulness far away from the hearth of the system—hearth is just what the word focus means. They are then small globular aggregations, sluggish and dim—a little roundish nebula in look. Such they appear when first descried in the telescope coming in from space, for they are rarely seen at all until they have entered within the orbit of Mars. Distance in part, but still more their own behavior till then, keeps them hid.

Within this nebulosity, known as the head, appears as it nears us a bright spot, the nucleus. Suddenly there occurs a complete change in the department of the body, one which renders it the observed of all observers, and in less civilized times occasionally its being held the harbinger of distress, disease and death.

As soon as the comet gets near enough the heat of the sun sets up commotion within it. By Very's determination of the temperature of the unblanketed sunward side of the moon we are enabled to infer that this heat is great at the earth's distance from the sun in spite of the cold of space. This temperature is 353 degrees F.

And as the comet approaches the sun this heat must increase inversely as the square of the distance. At half the radius of the earth orbit it is already four times as great above absolute zero, at a quarter sixteen times, and so on increasingly, the temperature rising into thousands of degrees.

No wonder the comet acts as it does, it at once becomes uneasy, waxes in light and, as the spectroscope reveals, disruptive electric discharges start in it which let out the imprisoned gases. Then begins that spectacular career of perihelion passage which makes the comet so superb an object and for which it pays so dear. The gases which are thus thrust out from the interior of the separate meteorites, together with such particles of the iron as are made gaseous by the heat, fall prey to another force besides gravitation. This force is the impact of light itself, the light emitted by the sun.

That so immaterial a thing as a beam of light can have power to move even a pitth ball is a conception not easy to grasp. Yet there is no doubt of the fact, theoretically calculated years ago by Clerk Maxwell from his electro-magnetic theory of light, for the gaseous particles proceed to be repelled by the sun at enormous speed, each behaving exactly as it should by mathematical analysis if such were the occasioning cause. Evidently the light waves have a propelling power in the direction of their own motion equal to their own speed.

Why, then, is it that the planets betray no such effect in spite of their size? The answer is, because of that very size. Gravity acts on the mass, a matter of three dimensions; the light force on the surface of the body, a matter of two. As a body diminishes in size, therefore, its surface bears a greater and greater ratio to its mass until when small enough the second force is the stronger of the two.

This relation is betrayed in the conduct of the tail. The imprisoned gases, heated to expansion on the sunward side of the comet, rise toward it in a series of exquisite mantling envelopes, as if the comet's head were veiling itself from the too ardent gaze of the sun. Then, after rising to a certain height, their initial impetus overcome, they fall back, repelled by the light waves, although still attracted by gravity, and are driven out to form the tail of the comet, fresh envelopes taking their place.

Sometimes only a single tail is formed, but at others two or even three are shot out, and when this happens one is nearly straight, one curved and one greatly bent. Now, calculation shows that the repelling force in the case of the first is fourteen times that of gravity, in the second two and two-tenths times, or something less, and in the third only about one-fifth of gravity. But these are the very ratios which particles of hydrogen gas, of the hydrocarbons and of iron or sodium would respectively show.

As the comet approaches the sun the display becomes more violent and more spectacular. Finer and wilder grows the pageant, the "hairy star" loosening its tresses, which had stood sedately coiled about its head and the depths of space, to stream in gorgeous gleams behind it as it pays its orbital obsequance to the ruler of its course. It seemingly backs away in keeping with the etiquette of royalty, turning always its face sunward as it retreats whence it came.

But it pays dearly for its display. The matter going to form the tail can never be recovered, but is driven farther away. At each successive return to the sun some of its mass and brilliance is thus lost, and this is why the periodic comets, those that have made many visits, are such small and inconspicuous objects. It is only the comets of long ellipses and very distant habit—of which the perihelion pageant is so fine.—Youth's Companion.

THE BASTILLE

Rise and the Fall of the Famous State Prison of France.

The famous French prison known as the Bastille was started on April 22, 1356, by order of Charles V. The Bastille turned out to be an important structure in history, and its fall on July 15, 1789, marked the beginning of the French Revolution. It was originally intended by Charles as a defense against the English. When it came to be used as a state prison it was provided with vast bulwarks and ditches. The Bastille had four towers of five stories each on each of its large sides. It was partly in these towers and partly in underground cellars that the prisoners were situated. It was capable of containing from seventy to eighty prisoners, a number frequently reached during the reigns of Louis XIV. and Louis XV., the majority of them being persons of the higher ranks. On its site now stands the Column of July, erected in memory of the patriots of 1789 and 1830.

The name bastille, or bastel, in ancient times was given to any kind of structure calculated to withstand a military force, and thus, formerly in England and on the borders of Scotland, the term bastel house was usually applied to places of strength and fancied security. The French Bastille was originally called the Bastille St. Antoine.

Stephen Marcel, provost of the merchants, undertook the erection of the French Bastille. The building was enlarged in 1369 by Hugh Aubmot, provost of Paris under Charles V. He added two towers, which, being placed opposite to those already existing on each side of the gate, made of the Bastille a square fort, with a tower at each of the four angles.

After the death of Charles V., Aubriot, who had many enemies, was prosecuted for alleged crimes and was condemned to perpetual confinement in the Bastille, of which, according to some historians, he was the first prisoner. After some time he was removed thence to Fort l'Evêque, another prison, from which he was liberated in 1381 by the insurrection of the Maillotins.

After this insurrection, in 1382, the young king, Charles VI., still further enlarged the Bastille by adding four towers to it, each 100 feet high, thus giving it, instead of the square form it originally possessed, the shape of an oblong or parallelogram. To increase its strength the Bastille was surrounded by a ditch 25 feet deep and 120 feet wide. The road which formerly passed through it was turned to one side.

The Bastille from its commanding position was closely connected with important affairs in French history and was occupied by the Guises in 1588, by Charles IV. in 1584, the Frondeurs in 1649 and Conde in 1652.

It was natural, therefore, that the Bastille should be one of the first objects of attack at the outbreak of the Revolution. In July 15, 1793, the populace of Paris, recruited chiefly from the Faubourg St. Antoine, attacked the fortress and stormed it after a half hearted resistance by the governor, De Launay, and a handful of Swiss. The governor and seven of his men were killed, the archives of the prison scattered, and the prisoners, seven in number, were carried through the streets and hailed as victims of tyranny and martyrs in the people's cause. The building itself was torn down. The anniversary of the taking of the Bastille is celebrated every year as the national holiday of France.

An Old Time Encyclopedia.
An ancient encyclopedia was that compiled by a Chinese. In 1403 an emperor of the Ming dynasty ordered that such a work should be undertaken, and in 1410 the 100 volumes were ready for block printing. This process in ancient China was accomplished by pasting written copy on blocks of wood and cutting the letters in relief. The work of printing the encyclopedia seemed so arduous that it was abandoned, and the work remained in manuscript. The books of the encyclopedia were one foot and eight inches in length and half an inch thick and were bound in yellow silk. They were stored in Peking and were burned during the siege of that city by the allied forces in 1901.—Harper's Weekly.

His Hard Luck.
His horse went dead, and his mule went lame, and he lost six cows in a poker game; then a hurricane came on a summer's day and blew the house where he lived away, and the earthquake came when that was gone and swallowed the land that the house was on; then the tax collector came around and charged him up with the hole in the ground.—Upon (Ga.) BAGGING A BIG TIGER

The Jungle Monarch Was Trapped Lolling in His Bath.

A FEAT OF MARKSMANSHIP.

Only the Crute's Head Showed Above the Water, and the Well Placed Bullet, Fired From an Elephant, Entered the Nostril and Broke His Neck.

An interesting account of a tiger hunt is given by one who had a wide experience in hunting this most dangerous of beasts. Mounted upon elephants, the writer and his companions had been beating the jungle without making a find until, as they were about to give up the search, a sudden disturbance among the elephants appeared to betoken a tiger near at hand. Giving directions to the others as to the order of marching their elephants, the writer ordered his mahout to turn into the thick feathered foliage to the left in search of a pool of water which he remembered to be there.

There was a slight descent to a long but narrow hollow about fifty or sixty yards wide. This was filled with clear water for an unknown length.

I was just about to make a remark when, instead of speaking, I gently grasped the mahout by the head as I leaned over the howdah and by this signal stopped the elephant.

There was a remarkable sight. About 120 yards distant on my right the head and neck of a large tiger, clean and beautiful, reposed above the surface of the water, while the body was cooling, concealed from view. Here was our friend enjoying his quiet bath, while we had been pounding away up and down the jungles which he had left.

"Fire at him" whispered the mahout, "or you will lose him! He will see us and be off."

"Hold your tongue!" I answered. "He can't see us, for the sun is at our back and is shining in his eyes. See how green they are."

At this moment the tiger quietly rose from his bath and sat up on end like a dog. I never saw such a sight. His head was beautiful, and the eyes shone like two green electric lights as the sun's rays reflected from them, but his huge body was dripping with muddy water, as he had been reclining upon the alluvial bottom.

For quite a minute the tiger sat up in the same position. At last, as if satisfied that he was in safety and seclusion, he once more lay down with only the head and neck exposed above the surface.

"Back the elephant gently, but do not turn around," I whispered. Immediately the elephant backed through the feathery tamarisk without the slightest sound, and we found ourselves outside the jungle. We could breathe freely.

"Go on, now, quite gently till I press your head, then turn to the right, descending through the tamarisk till I again touch your turban."

I counted the elephant's paces as she moved softly parallel with the jungle until I felt sure of my distance. A slight pressure upon the mahout's head and the elephant turned to the right. The waving plumes of the dark green tamarisk divided as we gently moved forward, and in another moment we stopped. There was the tiger in the same position, exactly facing me, but now about seventy-five paces distant.

"Keep the elephant quite steady," I whispered, and, sitting down upon the howdah seat, I took a rest with the rifle upon the front bar of the gun rack. A piece of tamarisk kept waving in the wind just in front of the rifle beyond my reach. The mahout leaned forward and gently bent it down. Now all was clear. The tiger's eyes were like green glass. The elephant for a moment stood like stone. I touched the trigger.

There was no response to the loud report of six drams of powder from the "five-seven-seven" rifle, no splash in the unbroken surface of the water. The tiger's head was still there, but in a different attitude, one-half below the surface and only one cheek and one large eye still glittering like an emerald above.

Upon examination it proved that there was no hole whatever in that tiger, the bullet having entered the nostril, broken the neck and run along the body. The animal consequently had never moved.

This tiger when laid out straight, but without being pulled to increase its length, measured exactly nine feet and eight inches from nose to tail.—Youth's Companion.

His Last Request.
Charles Dickens used to relate an anecdote of the last moments of Fauntleroy, the great banker, hanged for forgery in 1824. His elegant dinners had always been followed by some remarkable and matchless curacao, the source of which he kept a deep secret. Three of his boon companions had an interview with him in the condemned cell the day before his execution. They were about to retire when the most impressive of the three stepped back and said: "Fauntleroy, you stand on the verge of the grave. Remember the text, my dear man, that 'we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can take nothing out.' Have you any objection, therefore, to tell me now, as a friend, where you got that curacao?"

BURIED PLUNDER.

Recovered by Thieves After Serving Out Their Jail Terms.

It is well known to the police that there are a number of ex-convicts who are literally rolling in riches and driving about London and the provinces today in their own motorcars and carriages, said a detective to the writer the other day. The majority of these men are old embezzlers, and there seems to be little doubt that they are able to live well and keep going lavishly furnished residences because the money they stole was hidden by them before being arrested and sent to prison.

There are thousands of pounds' worth of valuable property looted by thieves from various sources that lies buried in odd corners of Britain and will probably only be recovered by the men themselves on their release. Cases are constantly occurring where an embezzler after running off with a large sum in gold refuses to divulge the hiding place of his ill gotten gains. He is sent to prison, and the loot remains unrecovered. In nine cases out of ten the embezzler, finding arrest imminent, buries his stolen property and digs it up again when he comes out of prison.

A man who was for many years an inmate of one of our prisons is now living in affluence in a town up north. He was imprisoned for embezzling £70,000 from his employers, and he declared at the trial that he had spent every penny of it. For some time after his release from jail he lived in a cheap lodging house at Hoxton, and then one day he declared that he had come into a fortune, a brother in Australia having died and left him some thousands. As a matter of fact, although the police had no proof, he had recovered the money which he had embezzled years before.

A man of considerable means now living in the United States served a term of imprisonment for forgery, having obtained £15,000 by means of false checks. Not a penny of the money was recovered by the police. During the forced confinement of the thief's wife, in pursuance of a previously agreed plan, went out to service in a gentleman's family. As soon as the husband was liberated; however, his wife resigned her position, and the pair sailed immediately for the colonies. It ultimately came to light that the money which had been stolen by means of false checks had been buried under the flooring in a son's house.

Some fifteen years ago a Hindoo merchant who had come to London to make purchases of gems was robbed of many thousands of pounds. The thieves carried their ill gotten wealth to a cheap tenement in Whitechapel; but, finding the police hot on their track, they carried the loot one dark night to a remote spot on the Essex marshes and secretly buried it. They then disappeared and have not been seen since. It is believed that the money remains to this day where it was buried.—London Tit-Bits.

Stoves of the Middle Ages.

The stoves of the middle ages and of the era of the Roman empire and throughout Germany and Scandinavia generally were built of brick, tiles or similar material and were so large as to be stationary, sometimes taking up the whole side of a room, and in the latter country in winter the couches and blankets were spread thereon, and the family used them in lieu of the beds of subsequent years. The fire was built at the bottom, and the heat and smoke passed through various flues, distributing warmth, before they made their exit to the chimney. Some of them were faced with porcelain and were highly ornamental.

Disillusionment.

When a person's dress and bearing are striking it is natural to expect that voice and conversation will be in keeping. Nevertheless it does not always turn out so.

A man standing on the street corner, waiting for his car, saw two very pretty and tastefully dressed girls approaching from opposite directions. Their smiling faces showed that they were acquaintances, and as they came nearer the observant man prepared to hear gracefully expressed greetings and well bred tones of voice.

What he heard, in a chirping, birdlike treble, was this: "Wot you chawin', May?"

Thought It Was a Regatta.

"I suppose," said the facetious Mr. Codding to Mrs. Malaprop, who had just returned from abroad, "that you saw an Italian vendetta while you were in that country?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!" replied the guileless lady. "We saw one in the canals at Venice, with all the don-gals decorated most lovely."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN OLD TIME DINNER.

British Table Manners in the Seventeenth Century.

An account of hospitality in England in 1629 gives a good idea of the manner in which a country gentleman of the period lived. Dinner and supper were brought in by the servants with their hats on, a custom which is corroborated by Fynes Morison, who says that, being at a knight's house who had many servants to attend him, they brought in the meats with their heads covered with blue caps. After washing their hands in a basin they sat down to dinner, and Sir James Pringle said grace. The viands seemed to have been plentiful and excellent—"big pottage, long kale, bowe of white kale," which is cabbage; "brach soppe," powdered beef, roast and boiled mutton, a venison pie in form of an egg and goose. Then they had cheese, cut and uncut, and apples. But the close of the feast was the most curious thing about it.

The tablecloth was removed, and on the table were put a "towel the whole breadth of the table and half the length of it, a basin and ewer to wash, then a green carpet laid on, then one cup of beer set on the carpet, then a little lawn serviter plaited over the corner of the table and a glass of hot water set down also on the table; then be there three boys to say grace, the first the thanksgiving, the second the Pater Noster, the third prayer for a blessing of God's church. The good man of the house, his parents, kinsfolk and the whole company then do drink hot waters, so at supper, then to bed."—Exchange.

Mixing Religions.

The bright six-year-old daughter of an upper west side physician happened into his reception room the other day, and a waiting woman patient engaged her in conversation.

"I suppose you go to church at Sunday school?" she asked.

"Oh, yes, ma'am," she replied.

"And what denomination do your parents belong to?"

"Why," said the little one, "mamma's a Presbyterian and papa's a brain specialist."—New York Globe.

CHAINED A WARSHIP.

An Incident of the War Between Greece and Turkey.

A YOUNG OFFICER'S DARING.

The Turk's Pluck and Strategy Resulted in Making a Powerful Greek Vessel a Helpless Prisoner Within the Landlocked Waters of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1897 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, fresh from the crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic fleet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with this artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gantlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boathouse, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large calque, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the night. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

The heart of man is made to reconcile contradictions.—Hume.

C. T. MUNFORD, At the Big Store

is where mothers teach their children to go for Big Bargains in Clothing, Hats, Shoes, Dry Goods, Dress Goods, Notions and Millinery. That is where everybody goes.

He "Sells it Cheaper". Try Him

Charged For Curiosity. Mr. Bach—What is the reason you charge twice as much for my cuffs as you did formerly?

Laundress—Because you have begun making pencil notes on them.

"What difference does that make?"

"The girls waste so much time in trying to make them out."—London Spare Moments.

Indisputable Proof. "You say they contested the will of the deceased?"

"Yes, and the court held that he was suffering from hallucinations."

"On what grounds?"

"It appears that he left three-fourths of his property to his mother-in-law."—London Outlook.

A Fine Distinction

A small boy in the village school when writing a composition on "Quakers" wound up by saying, "Quakers never quarrel, never get into a fight, never claw and never scratch." Then he added, "Paw is a Quaker, but I really don't think maw is."—Delmeator.

Where He Bluffs

"Does Bliggins ever bluff when he plays cards?"

"Never until he gets home and explains where he has been."—Washington Star.

True friends have no solitary joy or sorrow.—Channing.
