Our farmers are not disposed to ship their potatoes at present prices.

Miss Ella Wayne returned from the Kinston hospital Saturday very much improved.

Eli Ange, who has been assisting in bookkeeping at J. R. Smith Co's. during the busy season, left Tuesday for his home in Jamesville.

Dr. E. L. St. Clair, the apostle of education, is doing some very effective work for the Baptist Seminary here. A twenty-seven room dormitory will be a pretty sight.

ONE LETTER GOT LOST.

But Hanrahan Correspondent is Right on Deck.

Hanrahan, N. C., June 13.—

We don't know how to begin this week, because what we wrote last week we failed to see in print. You know that a thing written does not look like it does in print, and we suppose that is why so many people like to get their names in a newspaper. But there is one thing that we do know, and that is what we wrote last week came nearer to our heart than anything that we have written from Hanrahan, but you were gone, Mr. Editor, and your foreman did not know who we are. Tell him that we be the lord mayor of Hanrahan, that we say to this man go and he moves to another corner, and if the money is in sight, and a plenty of it, and he is not too much indisposed he makes an effort to do our bidding. Now if this does not find its way to the waste basket, then we may come again another day.

The weather man for the past week has not necessitated to change his type. It has read showers tonight or tomorrow. It should have read showers tonight and tomorrow.

We have been eating huckle or whortle berry pies since the early peaches gave out. We want to say to that widow, or old maid, that wrote us from Vanceboro under our assumed name, that they are of the right temperature and our wife objects to anyone else having our name. But there is a widower about two miles from here who has no child; he weighs about 230 pounds, he owns a 50 acre farm, he is very manly in life, raises a plenty of chickens and hogs, lives at home, is an excellent clock workman, has considerable mechanical talent, but he does not love to cook. He is anxious for some kind lady to bake some hot pies, fry chicken, ect. Now if she will send us her correct name I will inform him of her. All conversation strictly confidential provided they are not written on a postal card. People will read postal cards, the law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith have our deepest sympathy in the death of their infant boy last night.

S. V. Laughinghouse showed us a letter from the patent office at Washington, informing him that he had been, on June 4th, granted a patent on a ventilator design to ventilate cars, buildings of all kinds, and mines while being worked. If we mistake not the training school of your city is ventilated by this device. "Vanderbilt" has built many air castles, some of which have fallen, but we honestly think that this is the plan to furnish pure air wherever it is needed.

Greenville Rector.

Rev. B. F. Huske, of Greenville, preached in St. Mary's Episcopal church last night to a good audience. Rev. Mr. Huske preached a strong and helpful sermon that was appreciated by all present. Mr. Huske is one of the promising of the younger North Carolina clergymen. Mr. Huske returned to Greenville this morning.—Kinston Free Press 13th.

and gone to South Carolina to work enlarging picture business. Gus Lilly went with him. Miss Pearl Tripp succeeds Mr. Cory.

TYSON-HORNE.

Beautiful Marriage in Church This Morning.

At 7.45 o'clock this morning in St. Paul's Episcopal church, was witnessed a very beautiful marriage, when the destinies of Mr. James C. Tyson and Miss Loraine Horne were united by Rev. B. F. Huske.

Skilled hands had handsomely decorated the church for the occasion, the chancel being a bower of palms and ferns, the arch wreathed in evergreens, magnolias and cape jessamines. Though the hour was early, the edifice was more than filled with admiring friends who had assembled to witness this union of hearts.

As Miss Helen Forbes played the wedding march the bridal party entered and took their respective places. First came the ushers, Messrs. R. C. Flanagan and W. L. Hall, Hill Horne and Z. P. Vandyke.

Following these came the dame of honor, Mrs. O. R. Brown, of Henderson, dressed in white lingerie with black hat, carrying a bouquet of carnations.

The bride, in an elegant traveling suit of Alice blue, with Persian trimmings and jewel buttons, carrying a bouquet of sweet peas, entered with her brother, Mr. John L. Horne, who gave her away.

As these approached the altar the groom with his brother, Mr. B. F. Tyson, entered from the vestry and met them.

The impressive ring ceremony of the Episcopal church was used. At its conclusion the bridal party first drove to the former home of the bride on Greene street, and from there they proceeded to the A. C. L. depot to depart on a bridal tour to Washington City, Baltimore and Virginia Beach.

This marriage has been looked forward to with much interest, as both are well known and popular. Mr. Tyson has for several years been city clerk and tax collector. The esteem of their friends was shown in the very large number of bridal presents they received.

A BAD CUSTOM.

One That Common Politeness Should Correct.

It has been noticed that people attending marriages in churches have a custom that should be corrected. When the bridal party is retiring from the church, as soon as the ushers, who go last, have passed the aisle, the audience has a habit of filling the aisle and rushing out behind them, thus cutting off the exit of the family and special guests until the audience is out. This custom causes more or less confusion and sometimes interferes with the bridal party reaching carriages in waiting for them. On such occasions it is proper for the audience to remain in their seats until not only the immediate bridal party, but also the family and special guests who occupy reserved seats, have retired from the church.

Base Ball Thursday.

The Greenville base ball team will open the season here on Thursday, June 16, when they confront the strong aggregation from Washington.

The locals have been practicing hard for the past week, and they are confident of giving a good account of themselves in the opening contest.

STATE NEWS.

Newsy Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Raleigh, June 13.—Because the prisoner has sustained a stroke of paralysis and is being treated by a physician Governor Kitchin grants a reprieve to Junius Bowman, under sentence of eight years in the penitentiary in Alexander county for second degree murder. He was sentenced last September and since his case has been pending on appeal in the Supreme court this stroke of paralysis has come upon him so that the trial judge, the solicitor and others ask for the reprieve of sentence that the governor grants. A condition of the reprieve is that Bowman give a $6,000 bond for his appearance at the fall term of the Alexander court, and that he be of good behavior in the meantime.

As the result of the careless handling of a pistol, Joe Jones, colored, was shot and killed by his younger brother, at the home of their father, Rance Jones, Sunday morning, between seven and eight o'clock. They were handling a pistol, which was supposed to be out of fix. Joe had been working with it, when his younger brother asked him to let him see it. The gun was handed over. No sooner had it changed hands than a shot rang out and the older brother fell to the floor, a bullet hole in the right side of his forehead.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Spencer, June 13.—The big gest piece of news that has developed in Spencer for five years is the announcement today that John P. Pettyjohn and company, of Lynchburg, Va., have been awarded a contract for the erection of a new brick and steel boiler shop in Spencer for the Southern Railway Company. The building will be modern in all respects, two stories high, constructed of steel encased in brick and equipped with the best machinery known to modern railroad shops. The cost of the building has not been given out, but it is estimated at about $200,000, including equipment.

NEW MASONIC ROOM.

Nice Quarters in the Winslow Building.

The Masons of Greenville will soon have their new lodge room ready for occupancy. Their new quarters are in the second story of the newly erected Winslow building on Fifth and Washington streets. The front room of the building will be occupied by the public library which will be in operation at an early date. A small room behind this front room is the candidates' room, containing a large locker whose use is known only to those who have been put there.

The large room in the rear is the lodge room proper. It is 51 by 28 feet. A fine Brussels carpet has been put down at a cost of $200 dollars. The furniture of which a part has already arrived, is heavy mahogany with black leather upholstery. The walls are kalsomined in blue.

With the arrival of the remainder of the furniture, probably the latter part of this week, the Masons will take charge of their rooms.

The sun was a warm number today when it got chance to shine between the clouds.

Found His Wheel.

Milton Pugh is once more a very happy boy, in that he has found his bicycle which was stolen a few weeks ago. The wheel was located Monday in Mr. R. L. Humber's shop where it had been taken by a negro for repairs. Of course there was the usual story, the negro who carried it to the shop saying he had bought it from another negro, and the latter that he had bought it from another, and so on until names were lost. But the part that pleases Milton most is that he has got his wheel.

Opportunity to Select Teachers.

Some school committeemen of the county are taking advantage of the opportunity offered by so many teachers being here in the summer school, and are coming to engage teachers for their fall schools. This is a good idea, for the committeemen by visiting the school can see personally and observe the work of the teachers, and with the assistance of the county superintendent and faculty can hardly go wrong in making selections.

High Water in River.

Observer R. M. Hearne received warning Monday from the government department at Raleigh that the water in Tar river would reach the 15 foot stage by Saturday. The water is already very high and still rising.

TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1910.

Lets everybody get to talking good roads.

With potatoes so low, the Northern folks where they are shipped ought to find living cheaper.

Some North Carolina editors are whetting their pencils with a determination to make Editor Sherrill, of the Concord Tribune, hustle for that mendacity medal next time.

Great preparations have been and are yet being made for the Roosevelt reception when he returns from his trip abroad and lands in New York on the 18th. He is going to be de-lighted at the noise made over him.

The government is going to try the experiment of making farmers out of the Indians, and a dispatch from Washington says car loads of farming implements for that purpose are being shipped to the Indian reservations of the West. We have got our doubts about the success of the experiment, as the average Indian does not love much work.

There is not a finer harbor on the Atlantic Coast than Wilmington, and that city is destined to soon become the greatest seaport of the South. All it needs is a channel down the Cape Fear of sufficient depth to permit the entry of vessels of any draught. Already the movement is on the way to secure this channel, and when that is a reality Wilmington will be the port of entry and distributing point for all of North Carolina.

The editors whose good fortune it was to attend the recent meeting at Wrightsville, have cause to long pleasantly remember Editor J. H. Cowan, of the Wilmington Dispatch. He was at the head of the reception and entertainment committees, and to say that he laid himself out for the pleasure of the visitors is not half way expressing it. We never saw a person more active in doing things for the pleasure of others, and he was here and there, everywhere at everybody's call, even seeking them out to see if there was anything else he could do. Cowan is a prince of good fellows.

A lady friend who has enjoyed the friendly tilts between The Reflector and the Wilmington Dispatch, wants to know if we saw Editor Cowan at the press convention and what he looks like. Certainly we saw him. That was half of our anticipated pleasure in going.

Fact is he was the first to rush up and greet us with open arms when we landed. And what does he look like? That is not hard either; for if he can stand the comparison we will say that he might easily be taken for our twin brother. He is just a little bit larger in size and almost as good looking, but we outshined him on the hair proposition, his top knot only reaching a sandy hue. If so near like us, you know he is bound to be the real article.

We have seen much of North Carolina in our day, but not until the trip to Wilmington last week did we know that a few miles out from that city, and across the line in a neighboring county, is a colony of Italians that are making their section blossom like a rose. Their location is called St. Helena, and there are said to be something like 400 of them in the colony. They were brought there from Northern Italy, noted for its good farmers, and are a vastly different people from the Sicilian class of peanut and banana venders who come from the southern part of that country. This colony was planted on unimproved land right in the woods, but they set to work in earnest and their section now looks like a truck garden. They are a class of emigrants that North Carolina needs and the State should have many such colonies.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY
Imperfect Digestion Causes Bad Complexion and Dull Eyes.
The color of your cheeks won't fade, the brightness in your eye won't vanish, if you keep your stomach in good condition.
This was the advice of a prominent physician to a woman's club in Boston and it is good advice.
Belching of gas, heaviness, sour taste in mouth, dizziness, biliousness and nausea occur simply because the stomach is not properly digesting the food.
The blood needs nourishment to carry vigor, vim and vitality to every part of the body and when food ferments in the stomach enough nourishment is not supplied.
Mi-o-na stomach tablets give instant relief to upset stomachs, but they do more; they put strength into the stomach and build it up so that it can easily digest a hearty meal without giving its owner hours of misery.
Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere and by Coward & Wooten at 50c a large box. It is guaranteed to cure indigestion or any stomach distress or money back.

JEFFERSON'S PICTURES.

A Wonderful Landscape Painted Entirely From Imagination.

Marvelous were the products of Jefferson's inspiration. He had created a school of his own. He was prone to portray forest scenes, with tree trunks of wonderful size, in accurate military formation. Old mills were a favorite subject with him, especially old mills with water wheels, and in some of his paintings he actually accomplished the impossible, for to all intents and purposes he succeeded in making the water run uphill. This having been called to his attention by an overcritical friend, Mr. Jefferson responded that he was well pleased with the result, for "few men could have accomplished it."

When president of the Players club, a position he held for so many years before his death, Mr. Jefferson presented to the club a large canvas of his own. If the writer remembers correctly, there was a pond in the foreground, with rushes, a tumbledown house and a large and rather theatrical looking forest, all painted, the artist boasted, in the dead of winter in his own sitting room and entirely from his imagination. When it was first displayed on the walls—for of course none of the old gentleman's gifts was ever refused—it attracted much attention, and one day Mr. Jefferson, being in the club, seized a brother member, who happened to be a man whose pictures had on more than one occasion won prizes in the salon, and stood him before his own masterpiece. "Now, I want you to tell me," he said frankly, with his child-like and delightful smile, "what you think of it."

"Well," replied the painter, responding to the pressure on his arm, "I'd like to have one hung as well as that." And the old gentleman was delighted. During his lifetime that picture remained in its prominent position, and whenever Mr. Jefferson entered the club he would manage to maneuver himself in front of it, regarding it from all sides and angles, and hardly ever did a picture receive so much praise and so little criticism as that marvelous landscape.—James Barnes in Bookman.

EQUATORIAL AFRICA.

Three Things a White Person Must Have to Live There.

Without a mosquito bar a white person would be unable to live on the equator, writes Ida Vera Simonton in the Delimitator.

No matter how hot and stifling the night—and no other place can be so stifling as the equatorial African night during the long rainy season in the midst of the jungle—one must sleep under a closely tucked in mosquito bar, not the ventilated kind of civilization knows, but one of closely woven stuff through which no air circulates.

When the mosquito bar was let down it took in almost the entire room, but it proved especially useful in sickness and convalescence. It permitted existence free from insect bites. As malaria is the white man's most insidious foe and comes from the bite of the mosquito, every precaution must be taken against it. Three things are absolutely necessary in Africa—a mosquito bar, a water filter and quinine. The bed was made by a native carpenter. The frame was of wood, the slats of bamboo ribs fitted closely together with the plith side uppermost. They didn't give a bit and were an excellent dancing floor for the dried plantain leaves which made the mattress. The leaves were confined beneath ticking-tacked to the four sides of the bed, but they matted easily, and every night it was continuous leaf turning for me. The bamboo was slippery, and insomnia kept me and the leaves on the move, so that most of the time I slept on a hard surface. My pillow was of dried sweet smelling grass. Whoever says that hard beds are benefactors should sleep upon an African bed.

Gold Heated Water.

Over 4,000 years ago an elaborate system of filtration was established by the Egyptians to purify the waters of the Nile. In both Rome and Athens hot water was drunk in preference to cold by the small minority who used water for drinking purposes. Chamberlain, writing in 1860, notes that the habit of drinking hot water was spreading among all classes in France. "Some warm it by holding it over the fire. Others dip burning bread into it. Rich people plunge a bar of hot gold into their water before drinking it, and the less wealthy a bar of hot iron, while the very poor are content to warm their drink with a live coal."

Got His Number.

Uncle Zeph had had some trouble getting about on the cars and complained of the employees. "When a conductor is uncivil to you take his number," said his nephew.

Two days later uncle came in somewhat battered, but looking triumphant. "I got the number," he said, with a satisfied air, "but I had to grab the hull cap too."—Buffalo Express.

Had a Proxy.

"Have a drink, old man?"
"No; I've cut it out."
"Aw, be sociable."
"Well, my companion here will take a drink with you. He's my social secretary."—Kansas City Journal.

Entirely Capable.

"Is your new maid capable?"
"Yes, indeed. She can tell callers I don't want to see that I'm out and make them believe it."—Detroit Free Press.

MEXICAN SWEETMEATS.

Vegetables of All Kinds Are Candied or Preserved.

I was surprised at the Mexican sweetmeats, said a New Yorker just back from Mexico. I do not think there can be any fruit or vegetable which they do not candy, preserve in sirup or convert into jam.

In a queer little pueblo in the state of Zacatecas I heard a woman calling monotonously, "Cimarrones, calabasas!" Now, these words in English mean sweet potatoes and pumpkins. She had a small tray, held in place by a leather thong that went around her neck.

I crossed the plaza and asked her for five cents' worth of calabasas. She placed several pieces of a sugary yellow substance in a paper bag, and I realized that I was going to have the experience of tasting candied pumpkin.

If you can imagine pumpkin pie frozen hard and saturated with sugar you can get an idea of the flavor of that queer confection. One grows to like it after one has lived in Mexico for awhile.

The cimarrones were rather nice. The sweet potatoes are boiled in water until they are soft. They are then soaked in hot sirup and candied. A final coating of powdered white sugar is added and gives them the appearance of large Easter eggs.

Beets, carrots, turnips and artichokes are some of the vegetables made into sweetmeats in Mexico. Tropical fruits of every description are also used for this purpose, and candied watermelon peel is a great favorite.

The regular stand of the sweetmeat vendors is on the plaza, but at night they turn out in force around the doors of the theaters. A Mexican senorita would not enjoy the show unless she had a good supply of native confections to munch. It is her substitute for the chocolate creams that we buy for our matinee girls.

Last New Year's eve I was in Nogales, a pueblo on the international line between Arizona and the Mexican state of Sonora. A vaudeville entertainment was being given at the little theater, and about 8 o'clock I strolled over to take in an act or two. It was almost impossible to make my way to the box office through the crowd of peddlers that blocked the street and sidewalks.

"Pumpkins, carrots, sweet potatoes, senior!" they shouted in Spanish while the light from many oil lamps flickered over their wares. "Very cheap! Only 10 cents for as much as you can eat!"

It was a strange scene, full of color and racy of the soil. Indeed, it is the sweetmeat vendors that will always recur to my mind when I think of my visit to Mexico.—Exchange.

A Disgusted Thief.

Under the headline "Not Worth While" a Paris paper prints this story from Piccolo of Trieste: "At police headquarters a portmanteau was received with this note: 'Please accept this from a disgusted man. Days ago I gained possession of it—how and where I need not tell—and felt confident because of its English make and the many evidences of travel which it bears that it was a rich find. See what it contains—books, old books at that; old shoes, soiled linen of the cheap kind, and the stockings have holes in them. The foreigner who carried it was well dressed, and I would go to prison for theft for the satisfaction of having him identify his beggarly belongings.'"

Queer Chinese Headdress.

The female headdress is carried in some countries to singular extravagance. The Chinese beauty carries on her head the figure of a certain bird. This is composed of copper or of gold, according to the rank of the person. The wings spread out and fall over the front of the headdress and conceal the temples; the tail, long and open, forms a beautiful tuft of feathers; the beak covers the top of the nose; the neck is fastened to the body of the artificial animal by a spring that it may the more freely play and tremble at the slightest motion.

An Intelligent Horse.

A baker living in the west end of Dundee, Scotland, possesses a most intelligent horse. While waiting in front of his master's shop the animal is often called upon to clear the way to allow the tramway cars to pass, and this it does regularly and without the slightest assistance. On hearing the clanging of the car bell the horse immediately crosses over to the other side of the street and allows the car to pass; then, looking around, as much as to say, "All clear!" it again takes up its original position.—Wide World Magazine.

CRUDE ASTRONOMY.

Russian Peasants Have Queer Ideas of Sun, Moon and Stars.

We have it on no less authority than that of Caesar that the Druids taught their disciples many things about the form and dimensions of the earth and the heavens and a body of doctrines on the motions of the stars. Even death itself was to them an astronomical fact. They held that from this life we pass to take up our abode in one of the heavenly bodies. That they firmly held to this belief is manifest from the fact that they had no objection to lending money to be repaid in the other world. They looked upon the passage of life in much the same way as we regard a journey across the Atlantic.

There is no doubt that even now in various parts of Europe the views of the peasantry as to the heavenly bodies and celestial phenomena have changed but little from those of their predecessors of a thousand years ago. A Russian contributed to the bulletin of the Astronomical Society of France has given the results of his observations on this point extending over ten years. The astronomical lore of the Russian peasantry of the north, center and south is limited to a knowledge of the existence of the sun and moon, of three constellations, of the Milky way, of one planet, of comets, shooting stars and meteors. The sun is to all a mysterious and beneficent being.

The moon covered with ice and snow is ever in flight from its brother, the sun. Upon its disk may be seen unmistakably portrayed the murder of Abel by Cain, the latter being done to death by a pitchfork. Chill are the lunar rays, and woe betide the child of man who shall sleep unprotected therefrom! From the horns of the crescent much useful information as to the forthcoming weather may be derived by the learned in such things.

The stars are lamps or candles which are lit and extinguished daily by the Eternal. A shooting star is the soul of one who has just passed away. Comets are heralds of war and famine. No Russian ever forgets that the Napoleonic war followed the great comet of 1811.—Westminster Gazette.

MALIBRAN'S CAPTIVITY.

The following incident is told of Mme. Malibran, whose voice once upon a time excited the most unromantic to folly.

She was resting in her dressing room at the theater after singing in the part of Desdemona, her passionate soul still quivering with the emotion of the part and the tears and applause of her listeners. A person entered and begged her to go to her mother, who had been taken ill. A carriage, not her own, was at the door. She was whirled through the streets and led, much to her surprise and fear, into a strange house and to an excellent boudoir, hung and carpeted with rose colored silk.

Here the beautiful songstress was left alone after being assured by her attendants that her mother was well, that the message was a subterfuge and that her captivity would last until she sang something.

On a low seat sat a lyre such as that which thrilled in Malibran's fingers as she sang Desdemona's touching song.

At first she determined to resist, but after a short time her mind reverted to the evening, and almost unconsciously she took up the instrument and sang the "Romance de Saule." As she concluded sounds of enthusiastic applause and trembling accents of delight came to her through the silk hangings, and she was then conducted by liveried servants to her carriage and to her home.

The next morning she found on her table a casket containing a magnificent pair of earrings, and inside the cover, written in diamonds, was the word "Merci." But the event remained a mystery to her forever.

Retort Filial.

In a warm argument one of the contestants had a poor case, but he defended his position vigorously.

"Oh, yes," the other one chuckled, "you have your defense, but you've lost. Losers always have their defense. Lincoln used to illustrate that with a story about his boy Tad.

"Lincoln and Tad were lunching one day in the White House.

"Don't eat your fish with your knife, boy," said Lincoln sternly. "It's not polite."

"But, father," said Tad, "is it polite to stare at folks when they're eating?"

Very True.

A grandmother was reproving her little grandchildren for making so much noise. "Dear me, children, you are so noisy today! Can't you be a little more quiet?"

"Now, grandma, you mustn't scold us. You see, if it wasn't for us you wouldn't be a grandma at all."—Harper's Weekly.

Why Lulu Was Happy.

Lulu was but two and a half years old when the first huckleberries she had ever seen were placed upon the table in a covered dish. When the cover was taken off she clapped her hands, exclaiming delightedly, "Oh, look at all the shoe buttons!"—Delimitator.

Knew Her Limitations.

He—Now that we are married, pet, do you love me enough to cook for me?
She—Enough, darling? I love you entirely too much for that.—Boston Transcript.

A LANGUAGE LESSON.

The Verb "to Strike" Illustrates the Difficulties of English.

The verb "to strike" is likely to provoke more or less bother among persons seeking to acquire the English language. It may have any one of several meanings.

"To strike" means to hit, beat, assault. It is this meaning of the term that is brought to mind by the spectacle of a blackened eye. Often it may be avoided by moving on when the policeman says so.

"To strike" means a mere attempt to hit, as when a batter, according to reports on the sporting page, "fans the air," therefore a miss. This suggests a contradiction; but, no matter—there are others in the language.

"To strike" means to leave a job because of dissatisfaction with conditions. This sort of strike is never a miss, for it hits something every time.

"To strike" when qualified by the words "it rich" is to discover while prospecting a deposit of precious metal or an ore bearing vein. From this use the term has been adapted to express the achievement of sudden wealth in any field. To make "a strike" in bowling, however, is different.

Again, "to strike" is to make a gentle touch directed toward a friendly pocketbook. Here the strike is in the effort and not in the result. Chances are there will be no result.

A few lines might be devoted to "pare," "pear" and "pair," identical in sound, but in nothing else except spelling by the foolfied method.

Briefly, "pare" is a verb meaning to denude of tegumental covering, but applies mostly to fruit; also potatoes. You may pare an apple, which is to skin it, but you may not pare an elephant, although it is possible to skin it if you have the elephant. Pear is a pomological product that grows on a tree. If the tree had but two pears there would be a pair. A married couple sometimes constitute a pair. A pair, in short, is made up of two of a kind.

By remembering these simple facts the student will be enabled to avoid confusion.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Tomato.

The tomato, wholesome, toothsome, capable for such variety of edible use as it is, was not found out by man until comparatively recent times. It is a native of western South America, whence it was introduced and cultivated in Europe during the sixteenth century. At first its wrinkled fruits were regarded with suspicion, and it was grown to be looked at as a curiosity more than anything else. Cultivation smoothed out the wrinkles and developed the tomato so that in the eighteenth century both yellow and red varieties were known. There are many old people living today who relate that in their childhood the tomato was known as the "love apple" and was poisonous if eaten too much of.

A Vegetating Student.

During a lecture at a Manchester college on the industries of Europe a wayward student was so deeply engrossed in the perusal of a novel which he held beneath his desk that he did not hear the sharp voice of the lecturer as he asked, "What is Brussels noted for?" There was a tense silence as all eyes were turned in the direction of the unconscious reader. "N., what is Brussels noted for?" came the question in a louder tone. The student hurriedly whispered to his neighbor on the right, who happened to be the wag of the class, and then, drawing himself up with an air of assurance, boldly replied, "Sprouts!"

Persons who really wish to become angels should make a start in that direction while they are yet mortals.—National Magazine.

PAPERING THE HOUSE

PROPPED BY FREE TICKETS.

The Judicious Distribution of "Complimentaries" by the Manager Secures Well Dressed Audiences and Saves the Appearance of a "Frost."

Long before the curtain goes down at the end of a new production the manager has decided, nine times in ten, whether he has a success or not. But he does not mean to be caught napping in either event. If he believes the play is a "frost" or even a semi-success the house for the next few nights must bear every outward evidence of prosperity.

In other words, he must "buck the line" of adverse criticism by "papering the house." For a week at least he must make a "front" in the orchestra chairs, no matter if there is desolation in the box office. Let him make the public believe the new piece has attracted a large number of patrons for six or eight performances and there is a chance of enough business to prop up a forced run of a few weeks, which may help things on the road. This means that "paper" or free tickets must be judiciously distributed.

Every manager of a theater has a large circle of friends. This may be due partly to his possession of a genial personality, but undoubtedly the business he is in has in itself an attraction for many. A majority of these people will accept passes when they are offered; some are not above asking for them, while still others—but these are rare—will buy tickets when complimentaries are not tendered.

When the manager has a play that is in danger of going to pieces for lack of patronage he sends tickets to all these friends of his and whenever possible obtains a promise that they will be used by the persons to whom he gives them. It is not difficult to extract such a pledge. Being on terms of more or less intimacy with the manager, the favored ones know he will be likely to see them in the theater or if they are not there that he will take note of those who do not use the tickets. He keeps a record of the seat numbers opposite the names of those who should occupy those particular chairs and can tell at once when his hospitality has been abused.

Another class which sees many plays in New York city gratis is to be found in department stores. Nearly every director of a theatrical company—as distinct from a theater manager—is on cordial terms with the heads of departments in large retail mercantile establishments. Each of these heads will accept from six to a dozen pairs of tickets occasionally to distribute among his subordinates.

Often it is possible to get rid of 200 tickets or more in a day in this way, and when this is repeated in four or five stores the manager is sure of the attendance of an appreciable number of well dressed young women in the newest millinery and style of coiffure, each with a respectably attired cavalier and all on their best behavior. These people may not be ultra fashionable, but they will not disgrace their environment.

Unless the theatrical man is acquainted with the department heads, however, it is not an easy matter to give away tickets in such an establishment. The average clerk in a large store, especially of the feminine gender, is suspicious. She does not understand such open handed generosity, and there must be a lot of explanation to convince her that in offering something for nothing the manager has not some sinister design. As for the male clerks, if he gives them any directly they are sure to tell every one what a pull they have with the manager and pester him for tickets ever afterward, particularly when he has a success, with "the free list absolutely suspended."

It is far less of an undertaking to buy a hundred dollars' worth of low priced goods than to make a present of two tickets apiece to a dozen persons behind the counter. The telephone girls, stenographers and manicurists look askance at free tickets from a stranger, although when their confidence is won they will generally accept them with due gratitude.—Theater Magazine.

EQUATORIAL AFRICA.

Three Things a White Person Must Have to Live There.

Without a mosquito bar a white person would be unable to live on the equator, writes Ida Vera Simonton in the Delineator.

No matter how hot and stifling the night—and no other place can be so stifling as the equatorial African night during the long rainy season in the midst of the jungle—one must sleep under a closely tucked in mosquito bar, not the ventilated kind civilization knows, but one of closely woven stuff through which no air circulates.

When the mosquito bar was let down it took in almost the entire room, but it proved especially useful in sickness and convalescence. It permitted existence free from insect bites. Three things are absolutely necessary in Africa—a mosquito bar, a water filter and quinine.
