MR. AND MRS. DAUG TRIDGE

Determine in Honor of Misses Hackney and Smith.

With a library party which was distinguished by the originality displayed in contriving the different amusements of the evening Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Daughtridge entertained in honor of Misses Bessie Hackney, of Wilson, and Mary Smith, of Greenville, Friday night. The arriving guests saw a sign board pointing "This way to the spring." The spring proved to be a large punch bowl embedded in a bank of honeysuckle underneath an old well shelter. Numerous plain dippers were hung around and each person was privileged to quench his thirst from red water of this spring. The first contest was the event which gave the occasion its name "Library Party." Each visitor was supposed to represent some book. A number card was pinned on everyone and blanks and pencils were handed around in order that the guessers' as to the different representations might be written out. No guessers names were handed in, each paper being numbered. Number eighteen, who proved to be Mr. Walter Wilson, Jr., was found to have guessed the largest number and he was awarded the prize for this event, a book, The Beeches.

Another highly interesting contest was the filling in the blanks in a description of an auto trip from Greenville to Wilson. As "We left in a steamer car at 10:30 p. m." Each blank was to be supplied with the name of some guest so as to make the sense of the story clear. So many tied for this prize that it was decided to have the guests of honor cut and Miss Hackney was the fortunate one, winning a beautiful automobile veil pin.

Later prizes, two sets of books, were presented to each of the guests of honor.

Everybody present seemed especially to enjoy the evening and many expressions of appreciation and admiration for the originality, which revealed itself in the different contests were heard as the crowd dispersed at 12:15 p. m.

A Salesman's Trick.

Discussing some of the curious kinks of salesmanship, a writer in one of the business magazines remarks that if the salesman can only get the article he is trying to sell into the hands of the prospective customer while his merits are being discussed his chances of closing the transaction are greatly improved. That may be. But it is still better to get into the hands of the "prospect" a printed advertisement which will inform him before he enters the store why it is to his advantage to purchase the article and predispose him in its favor. The certain way to do this is to exploit the commodity in the daily newspaper. Well-advertised goods do not have to be pushed into the hands of customers by salesmen. They sell themselves without any psychological manipulation.—Ex.

NEW K. P. COMMITTEEMEN

Announced After Installation of Newly Elected Officers.

The Grand Lodge Nights of Pythias of North Carolina, closed their fortieth annual convention which was held in Charlotte shortly after noon Thursday installing the new officers elected Wednesday headed by A. E. McCausland, Grand Chancellor, and G. C. McLean, vice-Grand Chancellor, selected Asheville as the place of meeting for the 1911 gathering, on invitation of Mrs. A. S. Bernard, and heard the appointments of the Grand Chancellor of the standing committees and district deputies for the new Pythian year. The new orphanage at Clayton was further discussed and a rising vote of thanks extended to Rev. Dr. P. R. Law, chairman of the orphanage committee.

The lodge also had further discussion of the question of colored lodge making use of the Pythian name, and the supreme lodge will probably be memorialized, or other steps taken for the desired relief.

The Grand Chancellor announced the following appointments of committees: Grand Tribunal C. R. Barker, Salisbury; Dr. D. J. Hill, Lexington; J. C. Clifford, Durham.

UNJUST TO THE CLERKS.

Late Shoppers Delay Stores Closing at Established Hour.

The kindness of the different merchants of the town who have signed an agreement to permit their clerks to "knock off" work at seven p. m. each week day except Saturday is being frustrated by the numerous lady shoppers who happen along so often just at closing time. The clerks, especially the lady clerks, in the different stores are tired at this time of the day and hate to be deprived of their privilege of leaving at seven o'clock. They have two alternatives open to them. They may adopt the iron clad rule in vogue in Norfolk and other cities and leave invariably at seven, customers or no customers, or they can request the lady shoppers to either come earlier or postpone their shopping until the following morning. They feel that their working hours should be observed and request their friends in town to help them.

Of parties, marriages and deaths Greenville has had her share this week.

FIGHT ON EVANS STREET.

Messrs. S. J. Nobles and N. L. Tripp Have Mix Up.

Messrs. S. J. Nobles and Noah Lawrence Tripp were the principals in a small sized scrap at the corner of Evans and Fourth streets about nine o'clock Friday night. Mr. Nobles is about fifty or seventy five pounds heavier than Mr. Tripp, but he bears all the scars of the mix up. He took several hard falls on the brick pavement and stone curbing, badly scraping up his elbow and shoulder. Dr. Chas. O'H. Laughinghouse who examined him immediately after the men had been parted, found three severe bruises on Mr. Nobles' face.

Mr. Nobles stated to bystanders who were gathered around to see how badly he was injured, that the first blow which Mr. Tripp had hit him had left him almost stunned. To this he attributed the fact that Mr. Tripp had so evidently worsted him in the fight. He denied having struck a single blow.

The trial which was to have been held this morning, will take place Monday at 10:30 a. m. It could not be held today on account of the absence of the principal witness, Mr. Abe McGowan.

Mr. Nobles at first wished to get out a warrant against Mr. Tripp for secret assault, but a warrant was finally issued for each, charging disorderly conduct.

WITH MISS LILLIAN CARR.

Entertains in Honor of Miss Sallie Pierce, of Warsaw.

Greenville has no more charming young lady and delightful entertainer than Miss Lillian Carr, and her host, of friends have on several occasions enjoyed her hospitality, hence when tiny invitations requested their presence from 10:30 to 1:30 today at a porch party, at the home of Mrs. J. L. Wooten, given by Miss Carr in honor of Miss Sallie Pierce, of Warsaw, it is no wonder that all who received them were eager to respond with their presence.

The guests upon arrival were greeted by the hostess and her mother, Mrs. H. L. Carr, and Mrs. Wooten, and then repaired to the parlor, where punch was served by Misses Mildred Carr and Pattie Wooten.

The guests then assembled around seven tables on the porch and played progressive "Old Maid," over which they had much merriment. Miss Ward Moore made the highest score and was awarded the prize, a cut-glass perfume bottle, which she presented to Miss Pierce, the guest of honor. Miss Mattie Moye King made the lowest score and received the "booby" prize, a pack of "old maids."

After the game ice cream and wafers were served.

During the entertainment Mrs. T. E. Hooker sang several solos, and Miss Lillian Burch gave a number of instrumental selections.

A. B. Ellington, member of Grand Lodge, K. of P., returned yesterday from the convention recently held in Charlotte. He says that it was the most enthusiastic convention ever held in the Grand Domain. There were donations from the different lodges and members to the orphanage of about $4,500.

REMODELED MARKET HOUSE.

Greenville Now Has One as Good as Any in the State.

That Greenville now has as good a market house as can be found in any town in the State, is due to the efforts of the market committee of the board of aldermen. For something like a year the aldermen had the matter under consideration of improving the market house, and a few months ago the committee was instructed to proceed with the work.

At an expenditure of about $1,600 the committee had the entire interior of the market house remodeled and constructed on thorough sanitary principles. All wood partitions and floors, and everything that could in any way harbor germs, were removed. A concrete floor was laid with complete drainage system underneath. The stalls are divided with metal railings with marble top counters across the front of each. All receptacles for meats are sanitary, and fish are required to be kept in metal tanks in another part of the building removed from the meats.

The aldermen have adopted regulations governing the market. Every evening the occupants are required to close, when the market policeman takes charge and flushes out the building, and three times a week disinfectants are used in all the drains. The doors and windows have been doubled screened to keep out flies. It is now an ideal market house and a credit to the town. It is a place to which ladies can afford to go in making market purchases, and it will be to their advantage to do so. If at times there is any criticism to make, or anything found about the market that needs correction, the committee will be glad to have suggestions.

Butter and Eggs
A government suit has been brought under the anti-trust act against the Chicago butter and egg board. Similar action is to be taken against the Elgin butter board.

In old days the farmer sold butter and eggs from his own wagon. Sailing sloops later brought these products to our cities from greater distances. Steamboats and railway trains rapidly widened the area of collection, and butter became an export crop. Buyers bought competitively in open market at their own risk and sold promptly. Prices were low, being largely fixed by foreign demand. Cold storage and the trust system have changed all that. The butter and egg board is accused of issuing low quotations to farmers. City consumers have seen no such prices. With storage facilities unlimited and an insistent domestic demand, the manipulators, protected from foreign competition by the tariff, can make prices almost as they will to both farmer and consumer.

A Good Thing.

The Charlotte Chronicle says the first thing the next legislature should do should be to pass the bill for the Torrens system of registering land titles and have it at work before the session adjourns. The movement is undoubtedly growing rapidly in popularity, and every candidate for the legislature should be asked to support it.—Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

"Some North Carolina editors are whetting their pencils" remarks The Greenville Reflector, "with a determination to make Editor Sherrill of The Concord Tribune hustle for that mendacity medal next time." With this cheering news from the east, and a marked activity in regard to the matter noticeable in the piedmont region, the committee of award will certainly have no light or frivolous task in arriving at a just decision.—Charlotte Observer.

The worst panic the country ever experienced occurred under the Roosevelt administration. The Sneeze a Good Omen.
In the "Odyssey," just as Penelope had uttered the words, "If Ulysses should come, soon would he, with his son, be revenged upon the violence of men," Telemachus "sneezed loudly," and Penelope, laughing happily, ordered the "stranger"—who, as we know, was none other than Ulysses himself—to be brought to her presence. "Dost thou not see," she says, "that my son has sneezed at all my words?" Xenophon hailed a sneeze from one of his soldiers as an omen sent from Jupiter. Another similar incident is recalled in the wars with Cyrus the younger. Theocritus speaks of a happy bridegroom welcomed by a lucky sneeze. Catullus makes Cupid's sneeze propitious to a pair of lovers, and the list of allusions might easily be amplified.—Springfield Republican.

The Mexican Mosquito.

The finest fly traps are not in it with a little Mexican spider named mosquito. Natives gather from oak trees a branch covered with this spider's nests and hang it up in the house. The spiders begin on the flies by whole sale. Mosquito nests are very tidy pretty and old maidish. A lot of tiny beetles make their home therein with the spiders. The beetles live on fly legs, the crumbs and scraps from the mosquito's table, and pay for their board and board by keeping the web house perfectly clean and refined, eating everything and dropping no litter in the Mexican professional gentleman's house. Mrs. Mosquito is a very quiet, orderly lady who never wanders from her own fireside or strays from her own back yard, but when a fly calls round she gets very busy with her spider knives and saws.—New York Press.

FIGURE PROBLEMS

Gems That Are to Be Found in the Old Arithmetics.

ALL OF THEM "PRACTICAL."

That Was What the Inquisitive Boy's Father Told Him, and the Lad Started Out to Verify the Statement—The "Practical" Examples He Dug Up.

Was education more practical a generation ago, or did John's father study his books more thoroughly than John does? John is a seventh grade student in the public schools. He asked his father to help him solve the following problem:

"A., asked how much money he has in the bank, replied, 'If I had $10 more I would have $1,000 more than half what I now have.' How much money had A.?"

"Such a fool problem," said the father. "Tell that teacher to ask the cashier. You have been pestering me with problems like that for a week. Suppose your teacher asked you how old you are. Would you tell her 'If I were ten times as old as I am, diminished by forty-two, I would be thirty years older than dad, and if dad were one-fourth as old as he now is he would be my age?' What would your teacher do if you answered in such a manner? In my day we had practical problems in our arithmetic."

In order to investigate his father's statement John went to the public library and asked for an old arithmetic. The librarian gave him Richard's Natural Arithmetic. He turned to the page marked "Practical Exercises" and read:

"A. put his whole flock of sheep into three pastures. Half go into one pasture, one-third into another and thirty-two into a third. How many in the flock?"

"That's queer," said John. "Practical exercises too. Here is a man who wants to find how many sheep he has. He counts them so he will know when he has half of them. This half he puts into a pasture. Then he counts out a third and puts it in another pen. Next he counts what's left and finds he has thirty-two. After a little figuring he finds how many in the whole flock. Very practical. I guess dad didn't study that book."

The next book he examined was Milne's Inductive Arithmetic, edition of 1879. In miscellaneous examples he found the following:

"Two ladders will together just reach the top of a building seventy-five feet high. If the shorter ladder is two-thirds the length of the other, what is the length of each?"

"Why didn't he measure each ladder separately?" John asked himself. "That problem is not practical. I guess dad is older than I thought. I want an older book."

The text written in 1868 was handed to him. The book was evidently influenced by the civil war, for it was filled with problems dealing with battering down fortifications and the sustenance of soldiers. One problem was:

"If twelve pieces of cannon (eighteen pounders) can batter down a fortress in three hours, how long will it take for nineteen twenty-four-pounders to batter down the same fortress?"

"That's fine for a general," John reflected, "but dad says that I am going to be a captain of industry."

Another arithmetic of the same date had the famous fish problem with which John's teacher had troubled him for six weeks before he himself finally explained it to the class. The fish problem is:

"The head of a fish is ten inches long. Its tail is as long as its head and one-half the body. The body is as long as the head and tail both. How long is the fish?"

Very handy problem for a butcher. John turned to the Common School Arithmetic, edition of 1853. "Here I'm sure to find something good," he reflected and read:

"A hare starts up twelve rods before a hound, but she is not perceived by him till she has been up one and one-fourth minutes. She runs at the rate of thirty-six rods a minute, and the hound runs at the rate of forty rods a minute. How long will the race last, and what will be the distance the hound runs?"

"What difference does it make how far the hound runs?" John asked as he turned to the Scholar's Arithmetic, edition of 1807. The present high cost of living made the first problem impractical for present day purposes, John concluded. The problem was as follows:

"If I give eighty bushels of potatoes at 21 cents a bushel and 240 pounds of flax at 15 cents a pound for sixty-four bushels of salt, what is the salt worth a bushel?"

Another problem was:

"A good man driving his guest to market was met by another, who said, 'Good morning, master, with your 100 geese.' Says he in reply, 'I have not 100 geese, but if I had half as many as I now have and two and one-half geese besides the number I now have already I should have 100.' How many geese had the man?"

How long would you permit a man to live if he made such an answer to you?

"Phew!" John sighed as he wiped his forehead and handed the book back to the librarian. "Dad must have skipped these practical problems."—Kansas City Star.

BOTH SATISFIED.

Two Widely Different Views of a Shopping Incident.

When Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. Cobbett returned to their respective homes at the close of "stockholders' day" they were both obviously satisfied with the result of the day's shopping in the city. One little incident had given each of them, after her own fashion, a large measure of content.

"You know I always say that Ellen Ann dresses a nite too much for traveling off for the day," said Mrs. Hobbs to her husband as he sat patiently listening to her account of small happenings. "Well, today 'twas borne out by what I saw at Ransom & Klein's."

"We were both looking for dress goods for the children—she for a plaid, green and blue, for her Sophie and I for a dark red for Mattie."

"We both wanted to see what the ones we'd half chosen looked like by daylight, and it so happened that we started for the place where you can stand under the skylight at the same time. Being two counters apart, we hadn't kept watch of each other, and 'twas just a happen."

"Well, the man that was showing me the goods looked at me kind of searching, and then he handed the piece of goods over the counter to me, and he said, 'You can take it right over to the skylight yourself, madam,' and turned to straighten out some other goods."

"When I got to the skylight, if there didn't come Ellen Ann, meek as you please, with a little cashgirl carrying her piece of goods, and that child never let go her hold of it once, and it come over me that Ellen Ann's flashy hat and her plush bag with gilt trimmings had made them think she wasn't to be trusted."

"I'm afraid they took her for one of those light fingered folks—shoplifters. I felt real sorry for her, and I hurried off so's not to shame her."

While Mr. Hobbs was digesting this piece of news Mr. Cobbett was listening to his wife's version.

"The clerk looked at me," she said, "and then he beckoned one of the cashgirls and said to her real sharp, 'Take this to the skylight and let the lady look at it.'"

"And I followed after her empty handed to find poor Mary Jane there, with a great piece of red stuff she'd lugged in her own arms from the counter."

"It just proves what I've always told you. When Mary Jane goes among strangers those plain, homely clothes of hers give them the idea she's a hardworking woman that's always had to do for herself and doesn't expect to be done for by anybody."

"But there! I like Mary Jane and always have, and I let her slink off with that piece of goods just as if I hadn't really sensed who 'twas."—Youth's Companion.

By Easy Stages.

Justice McEwen once sat on a cow case—that is, a case involving money due one man for boarding the cow of another. The wrangle was as to what the board was worth. One attorney called three or four liverymen and got their testimony on the cost of boarding a horse. Of course the opposing counsel objected and declared such testimony to be incompetent on the ground that the cost of boarding a horse is not the same as the cost of boarding a cow. This the other attorney conceded, but he explained that he was going to follow up the testimony of the liveryman with expert testimony to show how much less, if any, it costs to keep a cow than a horse.

"Oh, if you're going to work on that plan," put in McEwen in judicial tones, "you might as well start in with elephants and work down to cows by gradual stages."—Cleveland Leader.

The Discovery of Florida.

Juan Ponce de Leon, sailing from Porto Rico in search of new land, discovered Florida on March 27, 1512. He landed near St. Augustine, planted the cross and took possession in the name of the Spanish monarch. In 1763 a treaty ceding east and west Florida to Great Britain in exchange for Havana and the western part of Cuba was ratified. In 1781 part of Florida was ceded to Spain, and in 1783 Great Britain ceded east and west Florida to Spain. On Feb. 23, 1819, east and west Florida were ceded to the United States by treaty and purchase, Spain receiving $5,000,000.

An Artful Dodger.

"How is your boy getting along at school?"

"Splendidly, splendidly! I tell you, my friend, this boy of mine will make his way in the world, don't you fear. During the time he's been going to school they have had thirty-two examinations, and he's managed to dodge every one of them."—Glasgow Times.

CHAINED A WARSHIP.

An Incident of the War Between Greece and Turkey.

A YOUNG OFFICER'S DARING.

The Turk's Pluck and Strategy Resulted in Making a Powerful Greek Vessel a Helpless Prisoner Within the Landlocked Waters of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1897 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, fresh from the crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic feet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with this artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gauntlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boat-house, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large caique, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the night. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

Punishment in Persia.

Among the Persians the usual mode of punishment is the bastinado, from which men of the highest rank are not exempt. It is inflicted with very great severity, frequently so as to render the sufferer almost a cripple for life. The victim is thrown upon his face, and each foot is passed through a loop of strong cord attached to a pole, which is raised horizontally by men, who, twisting it round, tighten the ropes and render the feet immovable. Two executioners then strike the sole alternately with switches of the pomegranate tree well steeped in water to render them supple. A store of these switches is generally ready for use in the pond which adjoins the courtyards of the houses of the great. The punishment frequently lasts for an hour or until the unfortunate victim faints from pain.

Heckling Humor.

A parliamentary candidate was holding a meeting in Auld Reekie at which the heckler was much in evidence, and the embarrassed candidate failed to give a single answer which was judged to be satisfactory by the audience. Toward the end of the meeting an elector rose and quietly asked, "Sir, would you tell us what might be the name your second initial stands for?" The unfortunate candidate, greatly puzzled at the purport of the question, asked in what way the information could interest the audience. "In this way," explained the interrogator—"we should be able to see if you could answer one question?"—London Tatler.

In No Hurry.

"Too many people," said a clergyman, "regard their religion as did the little boy in the jam closet. His mother pounced on him suddenly. He stood on tiptoe, lading jam with both hands from the jam pot to his mouth. "Oh, Jacky!" his mother cried. "And only last night you prayed to be made a saint!"

"His face, an expressionless mask of jam, turned toward her.

"Yes, but not till after I'm dead," he explained."

OLD CLIPPER SHIPS.

Records That Were Made by These Fast Sailing Vessels.

In these record smashing times one is apt to smile when mention is made of fast sailing ships of other days, but it is a fact nevertheless that no mean records were achieved by the famous American clippers of the last century, many of which were even faster than the majority of the steamers today. Today even there are sailing ships that with anything like a fair breeze can outstrip nine out of ten ocean tramps.

During the period between 1850 and the civil war the Flying Cloud made some neat records in the transatlantic trade, and these stood till they were surpassed by the famous Guion liner Alaska in 1882. The Flying Cloud made one day's run of 433 knots and another of 427 knots, equal to about twenty-one land miles an hour.

During the period between 1840 and 1860 there were packet ships that beat the mail steamers across the ocean eighty-six times. Dickens crossed in the old Britannia, a steamship, but he returned by the packet George Washington, which beat the liner home by twenty-nine hours.

A small packet boat, the Fidelio, of about 500 tons, accomplished the Atlantic trip in 13 days 7 hours, and the Dreadnought, whose owners boasted that she had never been beaten in a race, averaged on one trip 16 knots an hour.

There was a British ship, the Thermopylae, that made a really wonderful record from Melbourne to London—sixty days, an average of 12 knots an hour for the voyage. She came home afterward from China in ninety-one days. The performance of the Thermopylae showed a speed greater than that of most freighters of today.

It is a fact that with a fair wind the big five and six masted schooners of today develop a speed that frequently enables their crews to have the pleasure, coming up the coast deep with cargo, of sailing pleasantly past some Norwegian or British tramp steamer plugging along on its most economical coal consumption at a rate of 6 or 8 knots an hour.—Harper's Weekly.

A Success.

Byker—I attended a successful sleight of hand performance last night. Pyker—Really! Byker—Yes, I lent a conjurer a counterfeit half dollar, and he gave me back a good one.
