PARENTS REUNITED.

Baby Leads Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whisnant to Adjust Their Difference.

A happy climax of the legal fight between Mrs. Lelia Whisnant and Walter Whisnant over the possession of their bright little 20-months-old baby was enacted yesterday afternoon in the office of Mr. J. D. McCall when an amicable settlement was reached between the two parties. The parents will live together again and enjoy their baby over which they fought and each will contribute to its training to useful citizenship. Their love for the little child reunited them and they agreed to go back home and forget all enmity which at one time existed between them. It was through Judge Pell's efforts that they were brought back together.

The hearing yesterday was a continuation of the habeas corpus proceeding instituted by Mrs. Whisnant for the possession of her child on Monday of last week. The case is remembered as one of the most sensational of its kind in this county in recent years. A breach had occurred in the family and this grew to such an extent that Mrs. Whisnant attempted to take her baby and live with her relatives at Oxford. While at the station ready to board the train her husband rushed up in an automobile, snatched the child from its mother's arms and dashed away. Mrs. Whisnant was left screaming in the waiting room. She indicted her husband for an assault to which he submitted and paid a fine. The next step was a habeas corpus proceeding for the possession of her child and during the hearing Whisnant skipped away between the suns with the child and fled to South Carolina. He was apprehended and brought back to answer a charge of contempt of court. For this offense a fine of $50 was imposed. Thinking the breach might be closed and the parents reunited, Judge Pell put the child in temporary custody of Mr. Wix with whom Mrs. Whisnant boarded, allowing the husband the privilege of paying a daily call. This daily call had the desired effect and when father and mother reported to Judge Pell yesterday, they had agreed on a peaceable adjustment by which they will live together again.—Charlotte Observer.

Baraca Excursion.

The Baraca class of Memorial Baptist Sunday school will run their annual excursion on Thursday, June 30th. They will go to Raleigh over the Norfolk Southern road, the train leaving Greenville at 7.30 a. m. returning to Greenville about 10.30 p. m. The fare for the round trip will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Christian Harris.

Mrs. Mellie M. Harris requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Lena Rivers, to Mr. Earl Turner Christian, Wednesday morning, the twenty-ninth of June, nineteen hundred and ten, at eight o'clock, seven hundred and sixteen, Dickinson avenue, Greenville, North Carolina.

In New Residence.

Some days ago Mr. Frank Wilson moved into his handsome new residence on Fifth street near the A. C. L. railroad. He has a beautiful home and it is a credit to the town.

PROFITABLE REAL ESTATE DEAL.

Part of $1,900 Purchase Brings $4,500 With Some Left.

Here is a good illustration of how one investment in Greenville real estate pays. Five years ago Messrs. W. A. and James Darden purchased some vacant property on Dickinson avenue, a portion of it being where the Norfolk Southern freight depot is now located. The price paid for the property was $1,900. They sold a portion of it to the railroad company for $2,500, and also erected three store buildings on the other end of the property from the depot. Last Saturday they sold the remaining vacant part of the property between the stores and the depot to Messrs. Charles Cobb and H. C. Edwards for $2,000. Thus on the original purchase of $1,900, the Messrs. Darden sold $4,500 worth, and still own the portion occupied by the three stores, which is worth more than they paid for the whole five years ago. This shows the rapid development Greenville is making.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN WRECK.

Freight Train Gets Off Track and Delays Passenger Trains.

The Norfolk Southern railway had considerable trouble Saturday night and unday, and in consequence passenger trains, especially on Sunday, were put badly off of schedule time.

Owing to softening of the road bed by excessive rains, a freight train in which were several heavy coal cars, got off the track Saturday evening a few miles above Wilson. Until a track could be constructed around the wreck, passenger trains had to meet there and transfer. The train from Raleigh due here at 12:30 Sunday morning did not come in until 8:45, a little over eight hours late. The excursion train to Morehead and Beaufort, due to pass here at 8:36 a. m. was two hours late, hence very few people went on it.

MRS. OUTLAW ENTERTAINS

Reported for Reflector. Friday afternoon the Embroidery club and the visitors in town were delightfully entertained by Mrs. N. W. Outlaw.

It was the regular meeting of the club and everybody came with their embroidery. We were very glad to enroll Misses Shelburn and Coward and Mrs. White as members.

After much laughter and merriment, the hostess presented the guests with cards to answer the questions from a penny. The prize, a bottle of toilet water, was won by Miss Mary Shelburn, who asked the visitors to cut for it, Mrs. Richard White was the lucky one.

After the contest delicious ices were served.

The visitors present were Misses Pierce, King, Shelburn, Jackson, Coward and Mrs. Richard White.

All things being found agreeable the minister united Mr. Claud Green, of New Bern, and Miss Oma N. Harrell, of Eure. The couple left on the 9.20 Norfolk Southern train for the home of the groom in New Bern, first sending a telegram to the parents of the bride at Eure advising them of the marriage.

SUCCESS OF TRAINING SCHOOL.

Making a Remarkable Record and Capacity Nearly Twice Overrun.

It is a requirement in several counties that public school teachers attend some summer school for four weeks. The first four weeks of the summer term at East Carolina Teachers' Training School ended Saturday, and some forty odd of the four weeks' classes left today for their respective homes. Many others who came with the intention of taking the four weeks' course have expressed themselves as so delighted with the teacher training that the school is giving that they cannot afford to miss it and are going to remain through the full ten weeks' summer term. Still others are coming in to take the places of those who leave.

Up to the present time, since the school opened last October, the individual enrollment, not counting twice those who first entered for the regular term and then re-entered for the summer term, has reached 470, about twice the normal working capacity of the school. For a new institution this is a remarkable record and indicates the phenomenal success of the school. It also bears strong testimony of the thorough work of the school and foretells that the East is destined to have the greatest educational institution in North Carolina.

President Wright and his excellent faculty are enthused with their work and are gratified at the success of the school, and everybody rejoices with them in this.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Masons meet tonight.

We have had some warm days all right.

It is clouding up again like more rain is near.

The excessive rains have made a poor outlook for the tobacco crop.

At last the water in the river has stopped rising, but it is certainly high.

That advertisement in The Reflector would look good and do you good. Try it.

Township primaries next Saturday to send delegates to the county convention.

Curbing is being placed along the sidewalks of Evans street southward from the graded school.

The directors of the chamber of commerce will meet at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the office of the president, H. A. White.

It is taking much time and more work, but Evans and Fifth streets are going to be fine all the way some of these days.

There was a tremendous congregation at the Methodist church Sunday morning to witness the very interesting children's day exercises.

Attendants upon the summer school course at the Training school are invited to call at Reflector Book Store and see the handsome embossed E. C. T. T. S. paper.

THE REFLECTOR COMPANY.

In order to increase facilities and enlarge its sphere of usefulness, both as a newspaper and job printing establishment, The Reflector has been incorporated under the name of The Reflector Company. This step places The Reflector in better position to reach its ambition of being the leading paper in the first congressional district and of having a job printing plant surpassed by none in its field. What we hope to do is to have a daily and weekly newspaper truly representative of this progressive section, and in which the people who patronize it can feel a pride and be glad to call their paper.

Early in May after it was definitely decided to incorporate the business, which had been in contemplation for sometime, orders were placed for a linotype machine, folding machine, an extra job press and other equipment for the plant, and the installation of these has since been going on. Still further equipment will be added from time to time as the business develops, that the plant may be recognized for its completeness and ability to turn out the very best work.

The present editor, who has conducted The Reflector for more than a quarter of a century, is a large shareholder in the enterprise, has been elected president of the company, and asks every patron to lend his aid in helping to make The Reflector a useful and creditable newspaper. We feel gratified at having associated with us in this work a class of men of the highest integrity and business qualifications, and who are interested in the development of this eastern section.

The officers of The Reflector Company are as follows:
President, D. J. Whichard,
Vice President, A. G. Cox,
Secretary and Treasurer, B. B. Sugg,
Assistant Secretary and Treasurer, C. B. Whichard.
Directors—D. J. Whichard, O. L. Joyner, S. J. Everett, H. W. Whedbee, R. J. Cobb, C. W. Wilson and Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse.

Others composing the company are equally well known as those mentioned. These gentlemen have associated themselves with the enterprise because of the interest they feel in their section, and they realize that nothing so helps to promote progress as a good strong newspaper.

No special change is to be made in the appearance of The Reflector until about the first of July, and after that time the paper will speak for itself.

We could almost cry that Mr. H. E. C. Bryant, "Red Buck," for many years connected with the Charlotte Observer, and one of the State's most brilliant writers, has taken the fever to go West. He has resigned his place with the Observer to take a position on a Montana paper.

If you haven't got something good to say for Greenville, for goodness sake crawl in a hole and pull the hole in after you. The room of the kicker is more desirable than his company.

The recent excessive rains so damaged crop prospects that not a few people are blue. But they need not get that way. Things work out right somehow, and nobody is going to starve.

It looks like some Northern papers had rather lie than tell the truth when printing things concerning the South.

One thing about the flying machine, it can go high enough not to frighten the mule.

Get on the good roads wagon and go forward.

Fifty-two counties in North Carolina have on file with the State Department of Agriculture applications for the location of experimental farms. State Agronomist Burgess is making as rapid headway as possible in acceding to these petitions. The adoption of the plan by the State authorities illustrates the trend towards application of science to farming and its beneficial results is raising the general standard of farming methods would be hard to overstate.—Charlotte Observer.

Secretary Wilson, of the Agricultural Department at Washington, has issued a bulletin vindicating hot bread. The secretary is a strong Republican but this last act of his will convince the South that he is not an offensive partisan. It shows how rapidly they are imbibing Southern ideas at Washington.—Wilmington Star.

Mrs. L. Cameron, 117 Payton ave., Kinston, N. C., says: "The great benefit I obtained from Doan's Kidney Pills justifies me in recommending them. A dull, nagging backache, accompanied by sharp twinges through my joints bothered me for a long time. I had but little energy or ambition and was caused additional annoyance by a kidney weakness. Having Doan's Kidney Pills recommended to me, I procured a box. After taking the contents, the pains in my back ceased and difficulty with the kidney secretions was corrected."

The Better Way.
Through the good offices of a powerful American residing in Paris an ambitious young girl from our west obtained an audience with the late Constant Coquelin of the Comedie Francaise, who graciously consented to hear her recite.

After listening to a classic or two the great French actor went up to the young aspirant for histrionic honors and placed his hand on her head, as in benediction.

"My dear child," said he, "marry soon. Goodby."—Youth's Companion.

"Indeed! May I ask what?" asked the professor.
"I addressed all the envelopes for the rejected manuscripts," said Araminta proudly.—Harper's Weekly.

Duck by Duck.
An old farmer had brought twenty ducks to the market to sell and, after the usual amount of haggling inseparable from a bargain of that description, managed to dispose of the lot to a dealer.

"That's 30 shillings I have to give you," said the dealer as he proceeded to count it out.

But the old chap's strong point was not arithmetic, and he was not satisfied with this mode of payment.

"No, no," he exclaimed. "Ye bought them at wan an' six apiece, an' ye'll jist pay for them duck by duck."

And "duck by duck" it had to be. London Scene

A QUAIN OLD TAVERN

The Old Cheshire Cheese, in the Heart of London.

SERVES A FAMOUS PUDDING.

A Noble Pastry it is, and it was Sampled by Such Men as Gladstone, Dickens, Thackeray, Tennyson, Trollope and Whistler.

Nearly all Americans when they go to London make it a point to visit that quaint old tavern in the heart of the newspaper and printing business, the Old Cheshire Cheese, to partake of its famous pudding.

It is the Londoner's delight when he gets back to Fleet street to make a rush for the pudding, and it is almost the last thing he eats before leaving it. Travelers in the Sahara have seen mirages of that pudding, and during the Boer war the men shut up in Ladysmith and Mafeking dreamed of it at regular intervals.

Precisely at 1 o'clock p. m. Tom conveys the pudding from the first to the main floor. It is a big pudding, and the price of it is just 2 shillings—that is to say, a feed of it is 2 shillings, as much as you please, as many shares as you ask for, cut and come again, all for 48 cents of American coin. Cheap, aye, and, oh, how good it is! It is worth crossing the Atlantic to get a sniff of it, and the aroma lingers in the memory for many a day.

Big? The dimensions are—Fustian. It is a round earthen vessel something more than two dozen inches deep, with a diameter of about eighteen inches. A noble pastry, my masters!

When it is placed upon the service table an elliptical white crust meets the hungry gaze. Tom and his myrmidons take their places in front facing the host, who, knife and spoon in hand, poses with gentle dignity and benignant mien. It is a moment of solemn thought when every man hopes that his portion will be larger than his friend's and that he will be blessed with an abundance of gravy. But they ought from years of acquaintance with the host to understand that his hand is as steady as his judgment is impartial.

No more and nothing better for one than for another. He waves his weapons, and the first onslaught is made. The room is full of a delicious steam bearing with it the concentrated essences of ambrosial substances. The guests sniff it up and murmur choice blessings on the cook, the original inventor, the house and the host. It is a time when men feel good, one toward the other.

One smell of that pudding makes the whole world kin. This famous pudding, which has tickled the palates of thousands, is thus compounded:

A crust of flour, water and suet.
Beefsteak.
Sheep's kidneys.
Larks.
Mushrooms (freshly gathered).
Oysters.
Stock.
Pepper and salt.

But it is the boiling that does it. For at least twelve hours this heaven sent pudding is kept slowly simmering in an immense copper specially constructed for the purpose. It must not boil quickly, but the same temperature be kept up the whole period. The steak assumes a juicy tenderness; the larks—not sparrows, as some malignant spirit has suggested, although sparrow pudding is not to be despised—are seethed to the bone, and you can chey up each little songster without an effort; the kidneys are soft and mushy and offer no resistance to the digestive organs, and the oysters, despite their lengthened cooking, are not leathery. The amalgamation and assimilation of the variety of constituents are perfect; the result is bliss.

There is a story told of one eminent litterateur who had seven helpings of the pudding and still yearned for more, and there is another remarkable narrative of four men who ordered a pudding of the regulation size and finished it among them.

J. Pierpont Morgan praised the pudding, and Theodore Roosevelt was delighted with it. Lord Beaconsfield bestowed his approbation thereon, and Gladstone thought it far superior to his famous "three courses." Dickens, Thackeray, Meredith, Swinburne, Tennyson, Trollope, Whistler, Leighton, Sala, Phil May—all sorts of the best of men of their day have fed upon the pudding, and it no doubt helped to inspire their work.

Apparently any cook can fashion it, mix it, fix it, boil it. Let any cook try it. Lots of cooks have tried it, but the results have not been satisfactory. There was a man who once ran the Old Cheshire Cheese, and in his day the pudding first achieved its great fame. When he sold the old hostelry and took a house in the financial district he announced that the same pudding—the same in every respect—would be served every Saturday.

Many of the Cheese's old patrons came around to celebrate. There was the size, but the aroma was wanting, there were the identical materials, but the favor was not in them. It was not the same, not a bit of it. There was something missing. It may have been the shades of the departed great ones of a bygone time. And so it is that today the famous dish of the Old Cheshire Cheese tastes as of old, and its devotees cannot be seduced by any assigning invitation based upon "just as good" simply because there is nothing just as good.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Thoughts are mightier than the strength of hand.—Sophocles.

GAVE ALL HE HAD.

The Romantic Story of an Old California Miner.

"The finest gentleman I ever knew," said Mark Twain once, "was an old California miner who could barely write his own name. He was a forty-year-old man, and he and his partner had struck it rich in the early days. The old man had neither child nor child, and he had worked hard all his life, and when he did get his money he hardly knew what to do with it.

"He did not try to jump into society or to push his way with the 'big fellows' there. He continued to live with the people whom he had associated with all his life, and many an act of kindness was done, many a wandering son and father saved, many a sorrowing woman's burden lightened and her home brightened by an unknown donor, whose identity with the old man was only known to a few.

"It was different with the partner. He had a wife and two daughters with social aspirations, and after a whole lot of pushing and hauling and shoving they landed in society. The expense was too much of a drain on the husband's purse, and he speculated, with the inevitable outcome. He lost his entire fortune and then shot himself. Then it was that the true gentleness of the old man showed itself. The widow and her daughters had no one to turn to but him, and he did not disappoint them. He saved their home for them when everything else went under the hammer, and he maintained them in all the regal style to which they were accustomed, although he still lived in his old lodgings. He lived long enough to see both of the girls well married and the mother carefully settled in life. Then he died in a charity hospital in San Francisco. He had spent every penny he owned on the family of his partner."

NO WONDER HE DIED.

The Way Charles II. Was Dosed by His Fourteen Doctors.

Charles II. of England lived less than a week after he was attacked by his fatal illness, and it is wonderful that he lived so long. A monograph on "The Last Days of Charles II." gives some extraordinary details of those last days:

"The royal patient had fourteen doctors in attendance. They bled him to the extent of thirty-four ounces; they shaved his hair and applied blistering agents all over his head; they also applied plasters to the soles of his feet, and they dosed him with orange infusion of the metals, white vitriol dissolved in compound peony water, powder of sacred bitter, sirup of buckthorn, rock salt, emetic wine, two-blend pills, bryony compound, powder of white hellebore roots, powder of cowslip flowers, best magna, cream of tartar, barley and licorice, sweet almond kernels, sal ammoniac, antidotal milk water, mallow root, melon seeds, chicken broth, bark of elm, a julep of black cherry water, flowers of lime, lilies of the valley, peony compound, spirit of lavender, prepared pearls and white sugar candy, senna leaves, flowers of camomile, gentian root, nutmeg, ale made without hops, spirit of human skull (commonly employed in convulsive disorders; the purpose was suggestive—viz., to excite horror, as it was to be the skull of a man who had died a violent death), Peruvian bark, sirup of cloves, Raleigh's stronger antidote, Goa stone, Rhine wine and oriental bezoar stone."

Dr. Raymond Crawford, the author of this odd historical sketch, believes that the king's trouble was not apoplexy, but Bright's disease.

Easy Oysters.
During a discussion on finance in the United States senate one of the speakers traced the history of the various mediums of exchange, their development and changes from the days of barter to the days of gold and silver.

"I call to the attention of the senate," he said in the course of the speech, "that at one time the medium of exchange was oyster shells. Oyster shells were used for money."

"Delightful!" broke in the late Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. "If that system only prevailed now we could order half a dozen oysters on the half shell and pay for them with the shells."—Saturday Evening Post.

Painfully Frank.
The caller didn't look it, but she declared to little Clorinda that she dearly loved children. It may be that she said so because she heard the distant swish of the skirts of Clorinda's mamma; but, whatever the cause, she repeated it urgently. Then, as the small lady with the pet cat made no move to answer her invitation to come and make friends, she asked, "Why is it that you love your kitty better than me, dearie?"

And Clorinda's mamma entered the room with an ill concealed smile as she heard her daughter answer, "Cause she purrs as if she meant it."

Harmony.
"What we want is harmony," said the statesman.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "it makes me think of a glee club I used to belong to. Every fellow's idea of harmony was to pick his own key and sing so loud nobody else could be noticed."—Washington Star.

Steps to the Presidency.
"Pa," said little George, "I've chopped down your favorite cherry tree."

"That's a good start toward the presidency, son," responded wise Mr. Washington. "Now split it into rails."—Pittsburg Post.

GIGANTIC AMAZON

It is the Greatest as Well as the Strangest of Rivers.

ITS UPPER PART A MYSTERY.

Shrouded in Impenetrable Forests and Vine Growths Through Which a Gleam of Sunlight Never Shows—A Curious Woodland Tangle.

While the Amazon is the world's greatest river, it is not in length at least in the volume of water which flows through it, it is the world's strangest river as well.

The few travelers and explorers who have journeyed up this water course to its many sources in the glaciers of the South American mountains tell stories which are almost incredible about the literal maze of streams which unite to form it, each stream having its birth in one of the great ice masses. Yet a few hundred miles below, where they merge and create the river, the temperature is such that it works its way through a perfect labyrinth of tropical vegetation.

Only the mariner can tell the place where the Amazon really has its mouth, because the opening it has made on the eastern coast of South America is so wide that it extends over 100 miles. A long distance before one comes to the mouth of the river, however, one is really sailing on the waters of the Amazon, because they force their way so far out into the ocean. They say that 300 miles out at sea of the mouth of the Amazon you can hoist a bucketful of fresh water out of the ocean from the deck of a ship, such is the quantity of its water that flows from that gigantic basin.

Long after you have entered the actual river and have its banks north and south of you if you are in mid-stream you will still be out of sight of land, such is the breadth of the vast channel. The river stretches far into the ocean and far up the country. Take a map of South America and look up a place called Iquitos. It lies four-fifths of the way across the continent from east to west. Yet from Iquitos there is a fortnightly service of ocean going steamers to Europe which descend some 3,000 miles of the river before they reach the sea.

It is not only one branch of the Amazon, but many, that are thus to be regarded as the same as ocean highways. The southern branches of the Amazon are broken by rapids along a line where a low continental shelf exists. Above these rapids, however, there is again deep water. Thus beyond the falls of the Madeira there are over 10,000 miles of navigable water on that river and its branches.

Not only Sir Martin Conday, but other travelers who have ventured along the upper river and its tributaries, say that here a curious woodland tangle exists. To the surface of the water the sun's rays seldom reach, and one may go many miles along waterways where it is well nigh as dark as night because the sky is almost completely shut out by the mass of vines which interlace the trees and are so thick with leaves. Deprived of the sunlight, all is dark and rank. The damp air is laden with unhealthful vapor. The surface of the water in places where the current is too sluggish to carry it away is covered with scum and weed.

It requires no little courage to explore these fastnesses, for a man really takes his life in his hands, so unhealthy are they. Occasionally, however, one can see the upper portion of the forest where there is a little crevice in its roof of vines. Above this is really a scene of life and beauty. Birds and butterflies and other gorgeous insects are flying from place to place; flowers of hundreds of hues and shapes are blooming from the plants attached to tree, branch and trunk. While below all may be lifeless and silent, above the height where the mass of vines overshadow the river nature has created a world of brightness and animation; but, as already stated, it is almost entirely shut out from the human eye.

To attempt to break through this canopy of vines which hide it from the lower world is almost impossible because the vines grow so thickly, but some naturalists have penetrated it and say that the forests really have two surfaces, the one above this artificial roof and the one below. That which is above is barred from human entrance. Its inhabitants are mostly birds and insects that are radiant with beauty unequalled in the world.

Whatever grows in the Amazon mad strives with desperate interecine struggle to reach this sky exposed surface and there blossoms. Beneath, where man can walk or float, all is dark. Only here and there a fitful ray of sunlight struggles through. Orchids blossom within this shadowy region.

You can see these bright creatures flitting in the cavern below, but not in all their glory, as they must behold one another above. Sometimes as they flit about beneath they will chance to cross a sunbeam strating through a hole in the vegetation; then for an instant they flash into view like an explosion of burning color. It is thus that the great butterflies are seen to the best effect. No one can imagine what a picture they produce in their native haunts as their wings flash and close and flash again in the sunlight as they fly.

No; this upper world of the Amazon forests has been closed to human beings and promises to remain a perpetual mystery unless with the aid of some aerial craft one may be able to visit it.—Chambers' Journal.

Gone Before.

A detective boarded a train, and just before the train started a solemn looking man got in. The detective was in pursuit of a criminal who had traveled by a previous train, and he took out a photograph of the fugitive and studied it intently. This attracted the attention of the solemn man, who presently observed:

"You have perchance lost a dear friend?"

"Dear? Yes; very dear, indeed," answered the detective.

"Take comfort; he has but gone before," continued the solemn man, who was not a little shocked when he got for a reply:

"Yes, hang him, and got three hours' start of me, but I'll follow him, even if it takes me to Hongkong!"—London Tit-Bits.

How It Is Done.

Returning from school the other afternoon, a little girl proudly informed her mother that she had learned to "punctuate."

"Well, dear," said her mother, "and how is it done?"

"You see, mother," explained the child, "when you write 'Hark!' you put a hatpin after it, and when you ask a question you put a buttonhook!"

In Doubt.

Visitor—So your boy is in college, is he, Mr. Cornstossle? Farmer—I can't say exactly. He's in ther mill fine, an' in ther rowin' crew, an' in ther jinnayzeem, an' in ther domptory, but whether he's ever in ther college is more'n I kin find out by his letters.

Too Well Known.
Titus Titmouse was infuriated, but the editor of the Wind shut him up in two seconds.
"Is this the newspaper office?" inquired Mr. Titmouse.
"It is," responded the man at the desk.
"Didn't this paper say I was a liar?" and he began prancing.
"It did not."
"Didn't it say I was a scoundrel?"
"It did not."
"Well, some paper said it."
"Possibly it was our contemporary down the street," suggested the editor as he picked up a paper-weight. "This paper never prints stale news."
So They Would.
Mrs. Newwed went into a butcher's shop to get a joint of beef. The butcher was a little old man, inclined to be cranky. He began to cut the meat. She thought he was sawing off too much bone.
"That joint will have too much bone in it, I fear," she said.
The butcher stopped and sighed.
"Madam," he said, "that's the cow's fault. These cows would be awful in shape if they had to run around without bones."
Mrs. Newwed said no more.—London Scraps.

THE UMPIRE.

Did You Ever Hear the Fans Cheer Him For His Work?

There is one unique phase connected with the life of the umpire which perhaps has never occurred to most lovers of baseball. You have often been to a theater and seen the hero or heroine—yes, even the villain—win round after round of applause for some excellent bit of acting.

You have been to a football game and heard some ball gladiator cheered to the echo for making a long run that resulted in a touchdown or for a flying tackle that prevented imminent defeat. When some player is injured they convey their sympathy to him by cheering his name.

You have been to a ball game and heard the fans cheer some crack pitcher because in a pinch he fanned some mighty batter. It's just the natural way of the American to show admiration and appreciation.

Rack your brain, think your hardest, recall every game you have ever attended, then see if you can remember a time when the umpire drew applause for his work. Have you ever heard the fans cheer the name of the umpire after he has worked a fifteen inning game which fairly bristled with close and unusual plays and got away without a kick? If you can recall such an incident, just dot it down in your notebook that you were present at a very, very unusual happening.

Do they cheer the umpire's name when he stops a foul tip with his shin or has a swift shoot bounced off his mask? Yes, they do—not. Any injury to the umpire usually gets a round of derisive laughter from the crowd. Generally, if he has been going bad, some leather lunged individual requests that he be killed or chloroformed. Of course there are many people in the stands who sympathize with the umpire. Their sympathy is usually silence. That isn't much balm to his injury or feelings.

Applause would sound so strange to an umpire's ears that he would probably become so thoroughly frightened he would jump the back fence.—Billy Evans in New York Tribune.

THE TELESCOPE.

Gallei's Rude Instrument the First Used in Astronomy.

The first telescope was pointed toward the sky on Jan. 7, 1610, when Gallei first tried his rude instrument and was rewarded by discovering some of the moons of Jupiter. No great magnifying power was needed for this, as at least one of the moons is large enough to be seen by the naked eye did not the nearness of the brilliant planet prevent this. Lenses had been known for a long time and were at that time in common use by near-sighted persons.

The name of the real discoverer of the telescope seems to be unknown, but the accepted story now is that two young sons of a Middelbury optician named Lippersley some time between 1605 and 1608, while playing with some lenses, happened to hold two of them at a distance from each other and were surprised and delighted to find that the weather vane on a neighboring tower seemed to come near them when looked at through the two lenses. In April, 1609, a little telescope made in Holland was offered for sale in Paris.

The next month Gallei, then a professor in the university at Padua, heard of this instrument and realized at once its importance in the study of astronomy. From the description of the Dutch instrument he had one made at once, and in August he astounded the people of Venice by showing them from the top of the campanile persons entering the doors of the church at Murano. This spyglass was less than two inches in diameter and magnified three times. From this crude instrument of Gallei to the monster telescopes forty inches in diameter of the present day is the development of only three centuries.—Argonaut.

An Interruption.

Among the primary pupils enrolled in a Baltimore school is the son of a prominent business man of that city, says Harper's Magazine. One afternoon at close of school the youngster sought out his father in his office, to whom he said:

"Dad, I'm getting tired of school. I think I'll quit."

"Why," asked the astonished parent, "what's the matter, Tommy? I thought you were fond of going to school."

"So I am, dad," responded the youngster, suppressing a yawn, "but it breaks up the day so."

His Opening Break.

A congressman had returned to his constituency to deliver a carefully prepared address. The day arrived, and, loosening the first button of his Prince Albert, he uttered his carefully prepared prefatory remarks, and to this day he cannot understand the ripple of laughter which swept over his audience when he uttered his opening sentence, "Before I begin to speak to you I desire to say something." He said it.—Kansas City Star.

On the Way.

"I understand that you owe everything to your wife," said the tactless relative.

"No," answered Mr. Meekton, "but I will if I don't stop playing bridge with her and her mother."

Her Slip.

He—Do you think if I were to kiss you your dog would bite me? She—Well—er—his never done it to any one before.
