GRAND TRUNK TRAFFIC STILL TIED UP.

STRIKE BREAKERS DESERTING THE RAILROAD.

Trouble on Canadian Pacific Grows More Serious, With Heavy Losses to Shippers and Road.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Montreal, July 21.—The desertion of strike breakers is seriously hampering traffic on the Grand Trunk Railroad, and the officials are badly worried over the situation. The losses to shippers and to the company has already climbed into millions of dollars because of delay in handling freights.

Missionary work by strikers among the non-union employees has caused desertions and compelled the road to delay plans for sending out freight trains. By this means 300 strike breakers have been lost to the company. The situation today seems to be only waiting, with both sides hoping the other will take the initiative for a settlement of the trouble.

There has been very little disorder so far. Passenger and mail trains are moving very slowly, with very few freight trains moving at all.

ENGLISH RAILROAD TROUBLES.

General Dissatisfaction Prevails Now Among Employees.

By Cable to The Reflector.

New Castle, Eng., July 21.—With 100,000 men already affected by the strike among the Northeastern Railroad employees, the situation is growing worse and disaffection is spreading rapidly that it is feared that the employees of the Great North eastern and North British roads will join in sympathy and cause a gigantic tie up throughout all England.

Guards on the Northeastern will strike tonight in sympathy with the trainmen. There is a growing demand that the government take over the Northeastern lines, temporarily at least, and straighten out the trouble between the railroad and the men.

ASSUMES WAR ATTITUDE.

Uncle Sam Will Resent Proposed Execution of Americans.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, July 21.—The United States is ready with war ships and marines to strike quickly to overthrow Madrid. The government is shocked by the news that Madrid has ordered the execution of all captured Americans, and is only waiting for a confirmation of this order to act. If it is found to be true, the United States is ready to interfere at once and restore order in Nicaragua.

CRANK AFTER TEDDY

Creates Much Excitement at Ex-President's Home.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Oyster Bay, July 21.—A crank who made an attempt to see ex-President Theodore Roosevelt caused considerable excitement here today. He said he was Rev. George Nathaniel, of Philadelphia, and that he wanted $5,000 from ex-president to build an orphanage at Nazareth, Galilee. Two guards turned the crank back from Sagamore Hill and he took his departure in great anger.

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va., July 21.—Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity: Trade conditions generally are irregular, with a tendency towards improvement in most lines; dry goods are quiet, however, a moderate amount of orders for future shipment are being received. Shoes continue active, the same may be said of trunks and bags. A fair demand for building and dimension lumber is reported, building is active. Crop conditions have improved following seasonable weather. Retail trade is quiet, collections irregular, in the most cases slow.

CORONATION OF GEORGE IV.

Imposing Ceremonies Witnessed by 2,000,000 People.

By Cable to The Reflector.

London, July 21.—Medieval pomp and ceremony again held sway in this city today, when George IV was proclaimed King of England and Great Britain to the millions of people who make up London's population. The brilliant ceremony was similar in detail to that of the proclamation of accessions, but was marred by dull and threatening weather. The streets were thronged, however, it being estimated that fully 2,000,000 persons watched the displays.

MONEY FOR SCHOOLS.

State High School Fund is Being Apportioned.

Raleigh, July 21.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. Y. Joyner, Director of Public Schools W. N. Walker and Chief Clerk J. A. Barwick, of the State department of education, are engaged just now with the apportionment of the State high school fund apportionment for the next school year preparatory for the State board of education to officially fix the apportionments the State over. There were last season 175 of these schools. The law limits aid to four to each county. No school can receive from the State fund more than $500, the minimum being $250. The community in which the school is located has to raise an amount equal that allowed by the State. And in the case of counties that are not receiving the State aid for elementary schools, the board has to provide amounts equal to the State allowance also. It will be some days yet before the apportionments are finally fixed by the State board of education, this being done generally in accordance with the recommendations of Dr. Joyner and his associates in the preliminary division estimate.

WILLIAMSTON 5; GREENVILLE 1.

Greenville Lets The Visitors Walk Over Them.

Williamston defeated Greenville Wednesday 5 to 1 in one of the most interesting games ever played on the local diamond. The visitors scored four runs in the first inning, and from then it seemed that the home team lost hope and went to sleep.

The unexpected absence of the captain and two other members of the home team left it in a crippled condition, and this in a measure explains the defeat. Greenville has the material for a good team, but it will never win games until they take some practice. It takes practice to win as Wednesday's game clearly shows.

Score by innings:

Williamston.....	4	0	0	0	1	0	5	7	1
Greenville.....	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	4	5

SOMEWHAT A HOG.

There is Money in Raising Hogs of This Kind.

Hanging in front of the store of J. L. Starkey is a ham, that attracts the attention of all passers. This particular ham weighs just 46 pounds and the price asked for it is $10. The hog out of which this ham was taken weighed 600 pounds gross, or about 450 pounds dressed, and at the current selling price is calculated to have been worth $60. When folks can raise hogs of this kind it looks like there should be money in them.

Farmer in the Saddle.

The man who wrestles with the cow and teaches the calves to suck, who casts the corn before the swine, is now in the greatest luck, for butter's on the upper grade, veal's higher than a kite, pork is climbing up the scale and beef is out of sight; eggs he gathers every day from his Poland china coop are almost worth their weight in gold and we are in the soup. His corn brings him a fancy price, it's rising every day and he rakes in all kinds of men for a half load of hay. The farmer is in the saddle and when he comes to town, the rest of us by right should go way back and sit down.—Rockingham News.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT OCCURS AT FORT MONROE.

PREMATURE EXPLOSION BLOWS BREACH OUT OF BIG GUN.

Sergeant Hess and Ten Artillerymen Were Killed—Target Practice Was in Order to Test Fort.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, July 21.—Sergeant Hess and ten artillerymen were killed today in an explosion at Fort Monroe, Va. The men were engaged in target practice when a premature explosion occurred, blowing out the gun breach. Great preparations had been made for practice and nearly all big officers of the army were at Fort Monroe. Target shooting was in the nature of a test to determine just how far the fort could be depended on to defend the Chesapeake Bay. Definite information is not yet obtainable. The accident happened today at noon.

MR. DUNN COMPLIMENTED.

Scotland Neck People Closely Attached to Him.

Genuine regret throughout our community and county is felt and expressed at the contemplated removal on August 1st, of Mr. Albion Dunn to Greenville. Scotland Neck and Halifax county in his removal lose one of its most valuable and prominent citizens.

Less than twenty-eight years of age, he stands in the front rank of the Halifax bar, a bar noted throughout the State for its character and ability. We doubt if any lawyer in the State his age has so large a practice and has attained such marked success in his profession.

Highly educated, a hard worker, a close student, an eloquent and forceful speaker, possessing the combination of character, courage and ability that everywhere command confidence and respect, and with a fine presence, no man is more splendidly equipped for the good citizen and strong lawyer.

Never turning his back on friend or foe, firm in conviction, having both the courage and faculty of its expression, his forceful personality will impress itself upon any people.

He has succeeded here; he will succeed there. To the people of Greenville and Pitt county we commend him with assurance. To them we extend our congratulations; to him, our best wishes.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

AT THE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Dr. Rankin Will Lecture There on Friday Night.

On Friday night Dr. W. S. Rankin, superintendent of the State board of health, will deliver an address to the teachers attending the summer school at East Carolina Teachers' Training School. His subject will be health something that not only school teachers but people generally should hear discussed. If any of the people of Greenville or community wish to hear this lecture, and certainly they should be interested in a matter of such importance, they are cordially invited to be present.

HAPPENINGS THROUGHOUT NORTH CAROLINA.

CREAM OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE EXCHANGES.

Kinston Man Hurt—Governor Offers Reward for Criminals—Large Corn Yield—Robbed by Highwaymen.

In alighting from a boat at Shackelford Banks, near Morehead, Tuesday evening, Mr. W. G. Jones, of this city sustained a double compound fracture of both the bones of his leg, just above the ankle, which will, in all probability, make him a cripple for life, if the physicians succeed in saving the limb from the knife. Mr. Jones was taken across the sound and placed on a special train and brought to this city for surgical attention, but owing to delays en route did not reach home until after 5 o'clock yesterday morning, during which time he suffered excruciating pains from the injury.—Kinston Free Press.

Spencer, July 21.—Columbus Shepherd, a prominent young man of Washington, D. C., who has been visiting relatives in Salisbury and Rowan county for some time was set upon by two negro highwaymen one mile east of Spencer tonight, beaten into insensibility with rocks and robbed of two hundred dollars. Shepherd was found unconscious by the roadside an hour later and removed to the home of Lum Kesler, a relative, where it is said his condition is serious but he may recover. Bloodhounds were put upon the trail and a posse headed by the sheriff of the county is after the negroes. Mr. Shepherd's most serious injuries are in the stomach.

Raleigh, July 20.—A reward of $200 was offered by Governor Kitchin yesterday for the capture of Levy Maynard, accessory to the killing of Besie Thomason, of High Point, through a criminal operation by Dr. Vestal, who, with his wife, is now in Guilford jail. He also offered a reward of $200 for Claude Thomas, alias Buster Beal, a negro railroad hand, who mortally wounded Policeman J. M. Sing, at Wadesboro last evening, as the officer arrested another negro.

The editor took a look at the field of corn which Mr. Noah Biggs is growing his celebrated seed and orphanage corn Tuesday. He has a three acre lot in corn that is as near perfect as any we ever saw. It is uniform in size and bears a rich color. If no misfortune befalls the corn, Mr. Biggs expects to gather 100 barrels from the three acres, and it looks like he ought easily to get that yield. It is richly worth a trip to see this field of corn growing and see the plan of cultivation, etc. Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

AMUSING LAW SUIT.

In Which Distinguished Litigants Appear in Buncombe Court

Asheville, N. C., July 20.—Dr. Geo. T. Winston, ex-president of the A. and M. college and the University of North Carolina, who retired upon a grant from the Carnegie fund, and is making his home here, was arrested this afternoon upon a warrant sworn out by Stanley Howland, a neighbor, upon the charge that he is allowing his chickens to trespass upon Mr. Howland's property.

Mr. Howland, incidently, is a cousin of Hetty Green, and with his father has lived here for many years, being interested in Asheville and East Tennessee Railway Company.

The case is one of the most humorous ever heard here. It is said that Mr. Howland has a tenant, Mr. McLean, who is not in very good health, and that the crowing of Dr. Winston's roosters early in the morning annoys him.

The doctor's chickens have been running out at times at his place and sometimes cross over the line on to the Howland property.

The case will be heard before Judge Coker tomorrow morning.—Raleigh News and Observer.

AGE 180 YEARS.

Book Containing Town Lot Leases and Records of Early Days.

City Clerk Patterson showed an old record book yesterday of the town of New Bern, in which the first record was made November 17th, 1733, or nearly 180 years ago. It is a book in which the leases of town lots was recorded and the records in this book continue for about 70 years.

In part of the book is a record of the assessments and taxes due for the year 1679, and this is worthy of much study and by careful analysis very much light would be thrown upon conditions at that time. Some of the deductions to be made are really quite startling, and as the total valuation being 1,010,778 pounds or about $5,000,000, and the tax levied was 2043 pounds, or $10,000, showing a very low per cent. of taxation compared with the present day.

A very curious thing is that in the entire tax list there are but 131 names. It would seem that the property of the city must have been held in a very few hands, and the amount put down to many of these names is very large. It is also noted that a great part of these names are still to be found among the well known people of this city today.

The person having largest valuation of property in 1779 was John Wright Stanly. This was 140,950 pounds, or about $700,000. Considering the value of money then, that is its purchasing power, this would be equal today to probably three millions dollars. This was well nigh incredible wealth in those days. On this Mr. Stanly paid a tax of 201 pounds.—New Bern Journal.

Dr. Hyatt Coming.

Dr. H. O. Hyatt will be in Greenville at Hotel Bertha, August 1st and 2nd, Monday, and Tuesday, for the purpose of treating diseases of the eye and fitting glasses. 7191dw eod

TO MISS HELEN FORBES.

Entertainment in Her Honor by Henderson Hostess.

Henderson, July 19.—In honor of Miss Helen Forbes, of Greenville, Miss Marie Manning entertained most delightfully on Thursday evening, there being about one hundred guests present. For the occasion the beautiful home of the hostess was decorated throughout with palms and cut flowers, while a number of Japanese lanterns hung suspended out on the lawn, shedding a subdued light on the happy party of young people gathered there.

During the evening a number of the guests engaged in dancing, while others were out on the lawn.

Receiving the guests at the door were the hostess, with Mr. Geo. Cooper, and the guest of honor with Mr. Ed. Shaw.

The guest of honor was handsomely attired in white lace over green satin, while the hostess wore white chiffon over white satin.

During the evening delicious refreshments consisting of ices, cake and other delicacies were served on the lawn. The occasion throughout was a happy one for all the young people present.—Raleigh News and Observer.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1910.

Greenville is going to miss her opera house the coming season.

Our chief asset is health, therefore you should take part in cleaning up the town and helping to drive out the flies.

So many people try to live by speculation rather than by labor, that makes it harder for the others to get along.

Back to the farm where you can make something is better than merely hanging on in town and working for a pittance.

We have materials for good roads everywhere, and all we need is labor and skill to make them serve us, instead of serving them.

The county candidates have plenty of guessing ahead of them for the next week as to whether there will be a voting primary or a delegate convention to make nominations. The Reflector thinks the people prefer the latter.

Sand is an indispensable road material. What it needs is a clay cement to fill the crevices, and to hold the grains together in a rigid form that will resist the pressure of wheels and it makes the best roads.

Those who feel a pride in the appearance of the town should co-operate with the officials in cleaning the sidewalks and streets. Trash is unsightly and weeds are menace. The more attention that is given to cleanliness makes that much better safeguard to health.

We heartily concur with the Wilmington Star in this sentiment: "Durham county republicans are boasting that they will beat General Julian S. Carr, the Democratic nominee for the legislature. Instead of flippant talk like that, the Durham Republicans could boast of some respectability if they were to join the Democrats in sending General Carr to the general assembly as a matter of county pride.

It is enough to make the ordinary newspaper man a little envious when he looks at the Salisbury Post, or to at least wish that the merchants in the towns would catch the spirit of those in Salisbury. The Post is recently coming in 12-page size, and nine of these pages are filled with advertisements. The Salisbury merchants show that they believe in printers' ink, and it pays them.

If you want to see Greenville become the best town in the east, you should be willing to do your part to help make it so. This cannot be done by holding back yourself and letting the other fellow make all the efforts. Nor can it be done by making your own living out of those around and then sending your money elsewhere for things from home dealers and home makers. It is all standing together for home advancement and encouraging each other in the different lines of business that makes a town grow. Be helper rather than a hindrance.

If it is true that Georgia has a politician by the name of Fuller Winn, Georgia is not the only State which has a politician full o' wind.—Wilmington Star.

With the adoption of a good roads plank in the State Democratic platform this vital subject, already attracting almost universal attention in the South, and indeed in the nation, is likely to receive much more thought in North Carolina in the immediate days. It cannot receive too much. We need a definite plan for co-operation between counties and State and a department of roads, under whose direction the work of road improvement can be carried on with intelligence and scientific knowledge. Too many counties in the State are trying to do something in a blundering way, without knowing what they can do or should do. Thus both time and money is being wasted, which if expended under intelligent direction, would amount to so much more.—Monroe Journal.

No Climate Like North Carolina's.
Last April and during the very last days of that month, too, when frost and snow laid waste the crops in States far south of us; when the cold wave swooped down from the far northwest, North Carolina experienced just a slight frost or two, nothing being damaged except in the extreme western part of the State. The mountains stood as a barrier between us and the destructive cold wave. During the past week a hot wave has swept States north of us. Many have died from heat in New York, Philadelphia and other cities north of us, but no such death-dealing heat has visited us—just the good old summer time has been our portion. North Carolina climate is the best in all the weather bureau.—Monroe Enquirer.

The Tax of Bad Roads.
One of the heaviest taxes farmers pay in many sections is the tax imposed by bad roads in the loss of time, the wear and tear of vehicles and the breaking down of horses. Add to this the loss in value of real estate bordering on bad roads, as shown by the immediate rise in value in real estate when good roads are made in any district.

The Atlanta Constitution cites the case of a farmer in Georgia who refused to contribute a strip of his farm to a good road because he did not believe in good roads on principle. But the road was made all the same, and that farmer was offered ten dollars an acre more for his 300 acres than he had asked before the road was built. Queer sort of principle, his

Whenever a good road is built there is usually no more kicking but people off the road soon want one in their neighborhood, so that one well built road is the means for getting more, as has been the case in Mecklenburg county, N. C., where good roads are the rule rather than the exception, and the people are making more of them all the time.

There is no better investment a farmer can make than a liberal tax for a first class road.—Salisbury Post.

Billions of Taxes.
The Manufacturers' Record notes a careful student's estimate that American public expenditures, including national, State, city, town and county, have increased since 1897 from one billion dollars to two and a half billions. This is at the rate of 150 per cent. whereas population has increased 25. "The unnecessary burden," says our contemporary, "is due to the surplussage and incompetency of the horde of officeholders supported by the taxes of the people. There is hardly a single government in the country, from Washington down, that is not conducted upon lines that would bankrupt an ordinary business undertaking in six months. The great weakness is the large number of salary-drawers selected for every other reason save qualifications to render to the public proper service. Not a small part of the extraordinary increase in national expenditures, especially since 1901, is due to activities of the Federal government, unjustified, in most cases, by the constitution, and in some cases unwarranted by law.

Unquestionably one of the greatest factors in our trouble-causing extravagance has been unjustifiable and excessive public expenditures. But what dispensers can be trusted to cut down political pay-rolls? Not merely by turning the Republican party out—desirable thought that consumption is—can the tax-payer obtain much relief from the tax-eater. He must make his wish so plainly evident that even a Republican congress would obey.—Charlotte Observer.

THE OIL WELL SHOOTER.

Sometimes Blown Into Eternity With His Own Ammunition.

In certain of the petroleum producing districts it becomes necessary sometimes in opening an oil well—sometimes when the well has become clogged or apparently exhausted—to begin or renew the flow by exploding nitroglycerin at the bottom of the well. This explosive is employed because it is exploded readily by the dropping of a weight upon it. A man who carries nitroglycerin from well to well for this purpose is known in the oil regions as a "shooter."

The shooter has a wagon in which to carry his explosive. A square box under the seat is carefully padded, and when it has been solidly filled with cans of nitroglycerin, which is a molasses-like fluid, he fastens down the cover and drives slowly away to the well that he is to shoot. Usually he makes the trip very early in the morning to avoid the customary travel and so diminish the chance of danger.

For the most part the roads are bad, and the wagon jolts along in a way to make any one but an old shooter decidedly nervous. If it is dark there is great danger that a wheel may drop into a hole with force enough to detonate the explosive. Several wagons bearing shooters and their loads have been blown up, but no one ever lived to tell what sort of jar caused the explosion.

In such a case little is ever found except the great hole in the ground which the explosion has dug, with possibly a wheel of the wagon a quarter of a mile away in one direction and another in the opposite direction.

The shooter generally takes from 80 to 240 quarts of nitroglycerin in his wagon. The smaller amount is quite enough if it should explode to leave no trace of the driver of the vehicle.

When the shooter reaches the well which is to be treated long torpedo tubes are placed within the casing of the well, and the nitroglycerin is poured carefully into them. The well may be 1,500 feet deep and is seldom less than a thousand. When one of the tubes is filled it is lowered with the utmost care to the bottom of the well. This operation is repeated until the shooter is satisfied that the load is heavy enough to accomplish the purpose. When all is ready a bar of iron, known as a "go-devil," is dropped into the well. The instant it leaves his hand the shooter takes to his heels, seeking a place of safety.

Suddenly the earth trembles; there is a crash, followed by a snap; a muffled sound arises and becomes louder and louder until a column of oil and water shoots from 75 to 100 feet into the air. The country for hundreds of feet around is filled with clouds of spray floating to leeward. When this subsides the well is in operation and the shooter receives his fee and drives away.—Harper's Weekly.

The Dead Man's Hand.

Charms as cures for sickness were common in England a century ago. Lady Wake, who was born in 1800, tells of a grewsome cure adopted for the removal of some birthmarks which disfigured her face. Her mother was persuaded that "a dead man's hand laid upon my cheek and hands would effectually remove the marks," she writes. "As a man could not be killed for the occasion, it was necessary to wait till some one died. An old man at last did die in one of the nearest cottages, and I was taken there in my sleep. I remember afterward being constantly stopped by the widow, who always examined my cheek in order to ascertain the state of her husband's body, as the marks, she told my nurse, would certainly fade away as he turned into dust. Whatever the cause of the cure, the marks in time disappeared."

Different Style.

Edward, aged six, was sent to a barber shop to get his hair cut. The barber who was assigned to the job had red hair. "Would you like to have your hair cut like mine?" asked the barber. "No, sir," answered Edward. "Cut it some other color, please."—Chicago News.

TRAINING LIONS.

A Daring Performance That Had a Very Simple Explanation.

Some years ago a lion tamer who was exhibiting in a German circus in Holland attracted immense crowds at every performance by doing what seemed to be the most daring of acts in the lions' cage. He would climb into the cage with great pieces of meat and throw it to the roaring beasts. The moment they had leaped upon it he would spring among them and put his foot on it. The animals would growl furiously, and then, just as the spectators were all waiting breathlessly, expecting that the beasts would tear him to pieces, they would shrink back, cowed. After he had repeated this exciting act for many days an Englishman made a wager with him for a big sum of money that he would not dare to do it after the lions had been starved for three days. The trainer considered for a moment and then accepted the wager, making only the condition that he be allowed to have three weeks of preparation.

At the end of three weeks the trainer announced that he was ready, and the process of starving the lions began. The Englishman kept guards posted around the cage day and night to make certain that not a morsel of food should be given to the animals. At the expiration of the three days all Amsterdam rushed to the circus. The lions were maddened with hunger, as any one could see and hear, for they roared continually, and their attempts to break through the bars showed how angry they had become. In the height of the uproar the trainer entered the cage with an immense piece of beef in his arms. He tossed it on the floor of the cage, raised his whip, and, lo, not one lion dared to approach it. The mighty brutes lay crouched, roaring and growling so hard that their great frames shook, and each kept his terrific yellow eyes fixed hungrily on the meat. But not one of them stirred.

The trainer stooped, lifted the beef and tossed it to them again, and in a moment the lions were in a great tawny ball, rending and snarling and tearing, with blood from the mangled beef spurting all over the cage. The Englishman paid his bet and then tried to find out how the lion tamer had acquired such wonderful control over his beasts.

At first the man would not tell, but at last he consented to explain it. During the three weeks' period of preparation he had always starved the lions from the very beginning. Then on the fourth day he would enter the cage with a piece of beef which had been soaked in kerosene oil. The lions would no sooner pounce upon it, than they would shrink away, sickened by the stench. Then he would throw them a fresh and good piece of beef, which they would devour in a moment. The lions soon became so accustomed to expecting that the first piece of beef that was thrown to them was not good that at the end of three days they would not even move from their corners when the trainer threw it on the floor of the cage. They would not try to eat anything except the second piece. So the daring trick had a very simple

TASTES LIKE SOAPSUDS.

Samoa's National Beverage, Which is Made From Kava Root.

Like most countries, Samoa has its national beverage, and it is called "kava." It consists of the pulverized root of the kava plant. These roots are gathered, split, dried and cut into small pieces. The drink is made in a "tanoa," or hand carved wooden bowl, usually about one to two gallons in capacity, and is strained with a "fau," made from the shredded and scraped inner bark of fau trees.

When kava is wanted several pieces of the root are placed in a stone mortar and pulverized after the fashion of Indians grinding corn. When it is well powdered it is placed within the "tanoa," and water is poured on top of it to the depth of two or three inches; then the girl making it washes her hands, and, doubling the "fau," she will work the pounded roots thoroughly until all their strength is held in solution.

Using the "fau" as a strainer, she will dexterously envelop the useless kava grounds in its folds, wring it out and toss it to an awaiting assistant outside, who in turn thrashes the "fau" back and forth until the grounds are all disposed of, after which it is tossed back to the girl at the "tanoa," where the operation is repeated until the liquid is free from all sediment. Then more water is added until the solution arrives at the very light shade of brown which denotes the correct strength for drinking.

The first "ipu," or coconut shell drinking cup of kava, which a white man attempts to swallow will cause a shudder to permeate his system, and he will suspiciously affirm that he has been given a drink of soapsuds. But as with olives, the taste for kava must be acquired, and when it once becomes palatable it is very refreshing.

If taken in excess kava induces a weakness in the legs and numbness in the lips, but the brain always remains clear. This effect is doubly apparent if the root has not been thoroughly dried.—Los Angeles Times.

How Hens Roost.

The mechanism of the leg and foot of a chicken or other bird that roosts on a limb is a marvel of design. It often seems strange that a bird will sit on a roost and sleep all night without falling off, but the explanation is perfectly simple. The tendon of the leg of a bird that roosts is so arranged that when the leg is bent at the knee the claws are bound to contract and thus hold with a sort of death grip the limb round which they are placed. Put a chicken's feet on your wrist and then make the bird sit down and you will have a practical illustration on your skin that you will remember for some time. By this singular arrangement, seen only in such birds as roost, they will rest comfortably and never think of holding on, for it is impossible for them to let go till they stand up.

Unconscious.

"A proper understanding of a question is essential for an intelligent answer, but often when this is lacking a person may reply quite truthfully and yet be miles away from the essential fact," remarked a lawyer at luncheon, "which is illustrated by the perfectly truthful saleslady. An indignant shopper had left her and appealed to the floorwalker, who said:

"See here, Miss Perkins, that old lady complains that you didn't show her common civility."

"Why, she never asked for anything like that at all!" replied the saleslady, with perfect conviction in her tone.—New York Herald.

Domestic Economy.

"My wife threatened if I didn't get her a new hat she'd go home to her mother."

"Why didn't you let her?"

"Her railroad fare would cost more than the hat."—Boston Transcript.

HUMAN SACRIFICE.

It Appears to Be an Ordinary Occurrence in Liberia.

Of certain aspects of Liberia Captain Braithwaite Wallis writes in the Geographical Journal: "The population of Liberia is large, almost untouched by the so called civilization on the coast. It is typical of western Africa. The men have fine physiques and very black skins, and most of them plait their hair, which is worn about six inches to eight inches long. They appeared to be well armed with rifles, guns, spears and swords. While in this town I saw even slaves, who were held by the leg in wooden stocks. They had been in that position for some months. One of them told me through the interpreter that he had been kept thus for two years. He was a man of poor physique, and a purchaser could not therefore be easily found for him.

"That night, while asleep in my little hut in the town, I was awakened by hearing a gentle chorus of women's voices singing some yards away. After a few minutes the chorus ceased and a single voice began, in Bando, an African song. The voice was soft and melodious, and the tune was fascinating and weird and harmonized with the wild environment to which it belonged. After a few lines the other singers joined, and the result was most attractive and beautiful, containing as it did such delicate harmony with excellent taste. During the years I have been in Africa I do not remember having heard anything quite like this singing before, and I shall never forget it. The interpreter told me the next morning that the song was to the good spirits, asking them to guard and protect the white man and his followers on their journey."

Another incident: "A few yards outside the first stockade I noticed an empty grave, the newly turned earth of which showed it had been recently dug. This grave, it appeared, had been used for the purpose of burying a man alive as a sacrifice, and I was informed in a most matter of fact way and as if the occurrence was quite an ordinary one that the unfortunate victim's body had lately been exhumed to obtain certain portions for the purpose of manufacturing fetish medicines."

THE LION'S HEAD.

Origin of Its Use as a Decoration For Fountains.

"The sun glows in the Lion," says Seneca, meaning that when the sun enters the sign of Leo at the summer solstice the highest temperature of the year is experienced. We may say, on the other hand, that the Babylonian astrologers thousands of years ago placed the king of beasts, the fery and ferocious lion, in that part of the zodiac which the sun enters at the summer solstice.

The constellation which is called Leo bears very little resemblance to the outline of a lion. Probably the name was originally applied only to its principal star, Regulus. It is to this constellation in the zodiac that we owe the countless water spewing lions' heads which are found in ancient and modern fountains, because in the latter part of July, while the sun is still in the sign of Leo, the Nile is at its highest level.

Furthermore, the lion's head with widely open jaws is in itself very suitable for the mouth of a fountain or waterspout. This decorative motif was employed universally throughout the Greco-Roman world. Lions' heads are found used in this way at Athens, Ephesus, Olympia, Agrigentum and countless other places. It is not quite certain that this employment of the lion's head originated in Egypt. Curtius describes an Assyrian bas-relief from Balran showing water streaming from a ring shaped vessel. A lion stands as if on guard on either side of the fountain.

The water clock, which was used in judicial proceedings, had the form of a lion and a name which means the guardian of the stream. Hence the idea of protection may have been the origin of the association of lions with fountains, and this custom may have originated in Asia.—Scientific American.

The Rival Roses.

Perhaps the two most famous flowers in history are associated with the Temple gardens, for, according to tradition, it was in the gardens in 1430 that the two leaders plucked the red and white roses which became the badges of the rival houses of Lancaster and York. The gardens were for centuries famous for their roses. Among their floral curiosities one finds in the accounts for 1700 an expenditure on two perimic box trees and wonders what a perimic tree is until one remembers the custom of trimming box trees in a symmetrical or "perimic" fashion.—London Chronicle.

Beginning at the Foundation. The progressive people of the parish were anxious to reconstruct and adorn the ancient church, and the senior warden wrote to the bishop about it.

"There are but two things to be done in St. Gregory's," wrote the bishop in reply. "Let the sexton keep it clean and the parson keep it full."—Youth's Companion.

When France Washed in Holland. In the sixteenth century clothes were sent from all parts of France to be washed in Holland, where the water of the canals was supposed to have special cleansing properties. The cost of transport was about ten times greater in those days than at present.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.

One of the most striking figures in the French revolution was Maximilien Robespierre, who was born on May 6, 1758. He was the head and shoulders of the French revolution, frequently remaining in the background, however, leaving the work of carrying out his plans with Danton and Marat.

There had been turbulent political times in France for several years. The king had made repeated concessions to the Republicans, while he cherished schemes for escaping their control, but each month added to his humiliations and to the boldness of his enemies. Finally in September, 1792, the national convention was organized, the monarchy abolished, and France was declared a republic.

The convention was divided into two parties, bitterly hostile to each other, one called the "Mountain party" and the other the "Girondists." Of the former the leaders were Robespierre, Danton and Marat, noted for their wickedness and cruelty. One of the most eminent of the Girondists was Vergniaud, distinguished for his eloquence.

The Mountain party having triumphed in the convention, the Girondist leaders were guillotined. The reign of terror was then inaugurated, during which the revolutionary tribunal, controlled by Robespierre, caused thousands to be seized and hurried to the guillotine. Among these victims was the unfortunate Marie Antoinette (October, 1793).

Alison in his "History of Europe" says: "Night and day the cars incessantly discharged victims into the prison. Weeping mothers and trembling orphans were thrust in without mercy with the brave and the powerful. The young, the beautiful, the unfortunate, seemed in a peculiar manner the prey of the assassins. Fifteen only were at first placed on the chariot, but their number was soon augmented to thirty and gradually rose to eighty persons who daily went forth to the place of execution.

When the fall of Robespierre put a stop to the murders arrangements had been made for increasing it to 150. An immense aqueduct to remove the gore had been dug as far as the Place St. Antoine, and four men were daily employed in emptying the blood of the victims into that reservoir.

The cruel and wicked men concerned in these atrocities almost invariably met with a violent death. Marat was assassinated by Charlotte Corday. The faction of Robespierre, triumphing over that of Danton, caused him and his adherents to be guillotined, and a few months afterward this dreadful period closed by the execution of Robespierre himself in 1794.

When Robespierre ascended the fatal car to go to his death his head was enveloped in a bloody cloth, his color was livid and his eyes sunk. When the procession came opposite his house it stopped, and a group of women danced around the bier of him whose chariot wheels they would have dragged the day before over a thousand victims. Robespierre mounted the scaffold last, and the moment his head fell the applause was tremendous. In some cases the event was announced to the prisoners by the waving of handkerchiefs from the tops of houses.

A Crushing Retort.

In a certain New Brunswick county, where the councilors served without any sessional indemnity whatever, Councilor C. was defeated in a contest in the parish of X., and at the next session to which he was elected the councilors voted themselves $5 per day.

Councilor C. supported the resolution. He believed, he said, that his services were worth $5 per day to the electors of the parish of X. and that if he had not thought so he would not have offered his services.

"Mr. Warden," said a member who was opposing the increase, "there is nothing in that. Three years ago Councilor C. offered his services to the electors of X. for nothing, and they rejected him."—B. C. Saturday Sunset.

Toned It Down.

William Furst, the composer and orchestra leader, is in the habit of having his own way. He is, however, no match for Charles Frohman. Several years ago he was working with Mr. Frohman over a new production at the Empire theater in New York.

"That's too loud, Billy," Mr. Frohman remarked at a certain stage rehearsal.

"Well," observed Mr. Frohman imperturbably, "make it thirty-five."—Argonaut.

A FRIENDLY DRAGON.

In Manchuria a motorcar is naturally a fantastic if not a dangerous invention in the eyes of the natives. When Signor Scarfoglio and his party stopped their machine at one of the villages for a supply of water for the radiator the inhabitants fled in terror and watched the strangers from half closed windows.

I advance to parley, waving a ruble over my head, he writes in "Round the World in a Motorcar," and at last one man ventures to approach. He takes two or three steps toward me, with his eyes fixed on the ruble. At last by means of a hundred complicated gestures he is made to understand that the money is not merely a reward for his arrival, but that we require some water.

He turns to the silent crowd and in a voice full of anger and fury hurls at them a stream of violent invective. The men listen with bowed heads as the tempest passes over them. Then some ten or twenty hurry off, and an instant later there is a row of pails beside the car. The chief, for he certainly is a chief, regards me with a smile full of satisfaction and points to my pocket, where the ruble has disappeared, and to his own, in which it would find a grateful resting place.

When Haaga takes from one of the pails the small quantity of water that he requires the people become more courageous and approach the car, with their little eyes wide open with astonishment. They are led by a youth who appears to enjoy much authority in the land. The crowd listens with patient attention to his vivacious discourse, which is punctuated by eloquent and convincing arm play. He evidently explains the mysterious dragon.

Gradually the young Manchurian approaches the tires and with grim resolution touches them with a finger. The crowd is struck dumb with admiration. He takes another step and fingers the lamps. Something like a shiver passes over the crowd. A third step and he touches the radiator, but unfortunately for him it was still hot, and the experimental scientist burned his hand.

The crowd flees like a herd of surprised antelopes. Soon, however, they return under the persuasions of the more courageous experimenter and themselves touch the pneumatics, which fill them with wonder, make grimaces before the lenses of the lamps, which turn their images upside down, and finally one by one conscientiously burn their fingers on the radiator.

Writing In Bible Times.

Professor Flinders Petrie says that there is nothing abnormal, nothing to be questioned, in the general outlines of the Bible story of the exodus. He contends that the spread of writing in those days has been enormously underestimated.

"It is my firm conviction," he says, "that the Europe of a century ago was far more illiterate than the eastern world in Bible times. We have, for instance, a papyrus containing a cook's accounts scrawled in a very clumsy hand, with the reckoning all wrong, but it shows that even a common servant of those days knew how to write. We have another containing a petition from a peasant. These things are extremely important as showing the probability of documentary records of a historical nature existing at the time."—Jewish Chronicle.

An Easy Fit.

A number of years ago there lived in northern New Hampshire a notorious woman hater. It was before the day of ready made clothing, and, wanting a new coat, he was obliged to take the material to the village tailor. She took his measurements and when she cut the coat made a liberal allowance on each seam.

The man's dislike of women in general prevented his having a fitting. He took the finished garment without trying it on. It was much too large, and his disgust was apparent in the answer he made to the friendly loafer on his first visit to the postoffice, when he wore the despised article.

"Got a new coat, Obed?" said the loafer.

"No, I hain't," said Obed. "I've got seven yards of cloth wrapped round me."—Youth's Companion.

A Startling Reply.

A gentleman whose hearing is defective is the owner of a dog that is the terror of the neighborhood in which he lives. The other day he was accosted by a friend, who said:

"Good morning, Mr. H. Your wife made a very pleasant call on us last evening."

"I'm very sorry," came the startling reply. "I'll see that it doesn't occur again, for I'm going to chain her up in future."

By Wire to The Reflector.

New York, July 21.—The cotton market had a buoyant undertone this morning, opening with an advance of from 6 to 10 points, this was followed by further sharp upturns due to a strong bull market and heavy outside buying through commission houses, partly for European account. Opening: July 15.41; September 13.80 October 13.10; December 12.92.

New York, July 21.—A steady tone was shown at the opening market prices today on leading stocks, ranging near to yesterday's close. After the initial sales, a moderate supply caused sagging in values and a majority of issues showed fractional losses.

Chicago, July 21.—Corn, wheat and oats were up 1/2 to 3/4 cents. Provisions were stronger in sympathy with hogs. Opening: September wheat 108; corn 62 1/2; oats 39; pork 21.70.

Got His Reply.

A funny man indulged in a practical joke recently. He put an advertisement in a paper for a wife and requested each candidate to inclose her carte de visite. It was a foolish thing to do, but one of the candidates served him out very well by sending the following letter: "Sir—I do not inclose my carte, for, though there is some authority for putting a cart before a horse, I know of none for putting one before an ass."
