THE PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO BELOVED BILL NYE

TO BE $5,000 BUILDING AT STONE-WALL JACKSON SCHOOL.

Committee Appointed by North Carolina Press Association—Newspapers to Receive Contributions.

The committee appointed at the recent meeting of the North Carolina Press Association to take in the matter of a State memorial to Bill Nye, met in Salisbury, Wednesday, July 6, in formal session, and after hearing all the propositions before it unanimously decided:

1. That the memorial to the lamented humorist shall take the form of a memorial building, to be one of the group and a part of the Stone-wall Jackson Training School, generally known as the State Reformatory, in Cabarrus county, near Concord.

2. That the building, furnished and equipped as the trustees of the institution may direct, to the best advantage for the rescue of errant boys, shall cost not less than $5,000, and shall be known as "Bill Nye Memorial Building."

3. That the following newspapers be designated to receive and acknowledge subscriptions to the fund for this building, said funds to be transmitted promptly to the treasurer John M. Julian, Editor of the Salisbury Post:

The Observer, Charlotte,
The Evening Post, Salisbury,
The Citizen, Asheville,
The News and Observer, Raleigh,
The News, Greensboro,
The Star, Wilmington,
The Uplift, Concord

4. That while the committee believes that this memorial should be distributed North Carolina's tribute to the lamented man of letters, it deems it wise, in order to ensure the prompt success of the movement, and further to permit the friends of Bill Nye outside the state an opportunity to contribute to this movement, that contributions from outside the state should be gratefully received and acknowledged, while not solicited.

The committee believes further that it made a wise and happy selection in the form of this memorial; that nothing it might have conceived would have brought greater joy to the heart of the gifted, kindly man, whose memory it is designed to perpetuate, than the great work of making useful citizens of wayward boys, and that were he presented with us in the flesh to-day it would have the stamp of his approval. Furthermore the committee bespeaks the hearty co-operation of the brethren of the press especially, and all good citizens generally in this undertaking. It is a labor of love—one that has already been too long neglected, to the shame of North Carolina. Let us put our shoulders to the wheel and show the world what North Carolina can do for the man it delights to honor.

FIRE NEAR BRUCE.

About 11 o'clock Saturday night, on Mr. R. R. Cotten's Southwood farm on the river, near Bruce, the barn and stables were destroyed by fire.

The fire was discovered in the barn, from some cause unknown, and quickly spread to the stables, both buildings being entirely consumed. In the buildings were a lot of corn and forage and farm machinery, all of which was destroyed. Fortunately all the team were gotten out of the stables and saved.

One dollar looks small when its wrapper of a bank roll, but it looks mighty big when its the roll.

SCRAP SATURDAY NIGHT.

Messrs. E. H. Forbes and J. B. White the Combatants.

Saturday night there was a difficulty between Messrs. E. H. Forbes and J. B. White, on Evans street, in which only fists were used and no damage resulted except a bruise on the face of Mr. White.

Mr. Forbes is collector for the Taft & Boyd Furniture Co., and had an installment account against a colored woman who washes for Mr. White's family, and who gave an excuse for not meeting her payments that she was waiting to see Mr. White. It seems that when she went to Mr. White she made certain statements as coming from Mr. Forbes, which the latter says he did not make. It was out of these statements as made by the colored woman that the difficulty occurred.

THEY KEEP TALKING ROADS.

Other Citizens Send in Expressions—They are All Coming.

Mr. J. L. Warren, Falkland: "In my opinion, a complete organization of the citizens of Pitt county will be the best means of securing good roads—I will be present on appointed day."

Mr. C. M. Smith, Fountain, "I regret very much that I can not be with you at the convention in person, but will be with you in sentiment, and hearty approval and sincerely wish you much success in your laudable undertaking."

Jefferson & Brother, Fountain, "You can expect us to be at the good roads meeting on August first."

Mr. R. A. Fountain, Fountain, "I have been wanting to see good roads for a long time, and will be at the meeting on August the 1st, if possible."

Mr. H. C. Turnage, Fountain, "Relative to good roads meeting, let me say that I have my hearty approval. I am a citizen of Edgecombe county; am getting old and seldom go far from home without compulsion. I wish you good luck and much success in your laudable enterprise."

Mr. Abner Eason, Fountain, "I will be with you if possible on August the first. I think the best way to get good roads is to levy a special tax, have the roads worked and then we will be sure to get good roads."

Mr. W. M. Pugh, Greenville, "I am heartily in favor of good roads at almost any cost, but the bond issue is the most practical way to get results. I will try and be on hand the first of August."

UNDER PROTECTION.

Railroad Shops Strongly Guarded While Trains are Sent Out.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Montreal, July 25.—Under the protection of a heavy force of guards and special police, the Grand Trunk railroad re-opened its shops here today. The shops had been closed for several days as a result of the strike of trainmen and conductors. Crowds gathered about the railroad property where the guards were stationed.

Officials of the road say that with protection from the strikers they can restore freight and passenger service in a short while. It is also said that there had been many defections from the ranks of the union, but the leaders deny this. The road is again booking freights.

DESTRUCTION IN ITALY.

Hurricanes Destroy Hundreds of Lives and Millions of Property.

By Cable to The Reflector.

Rome, July 25.—Fully 100 people are dead, 1,000 injured, thousands of others are homeless, and property worth $5,000,000 destroyed as a result of hurricanes which have recently swept northern Italy. Troops and army supplies were today distributed in the afflicted districts. Owing to damage done to the railroads, the work of getting relief to the sufferers is greatly hampered.

Death of a Child.

The infant daughter, aged about 10 months, of Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Johnston, died early Sunday morning after an illness of several weeks. The funeral took place at 11 o'clock this morning, the service being conducted by Rev. J. H. Shore. The interment was in Cherry Hill cemetery.

A SLICK NEGRO HAS BEEN CAPTURED AT LAST.

HAD BEEN DOING SYSTEMATIC STEALING TWO MONTHS.

Mr. H. A. White the Victim and he lost About $170 Before Catching the Thief.

About two months ago Mr. H. A. White began missing money from his office, the losses varying from 50 cents to $8. Mr. White became worried at the frequency of these losses and set to work to find out the cause. He engineered a nice bit of detective work, and while his plans were a little slow he kept his patience and was finally rewarded by landing the thief.

A young colored man, Wiley Clark, has for some time been cleaning up Mr. White's office, going every morning to do this work. Being a slick and observant "coon" Wiley had learned to manipulate the day lock on the office safe. Mr. White began to suspect this negro as the one who was getting the money and went to work to catch him.

At first it puzzled Mr. White to get a run of the losses, but finally he made the discovery that they were occurring during the dinner hour when no one was in the office. Thereupon he engaged some one to watch the office door while he was at dinner, and to telephone him if Wiley was seen to enter the office. In the meantime some coins were carefully marked, a record made of them, and the coins placed in a convenient place in the safe.

And this is the plan that did work. Wiley was seen to enter the office several different times, and last Wednesday he was landed. On that day while Mr. White was at dinner, he got a 'phone call, and upon answering it heard the words "He's in there"

The signal was readily understood, and Mr. White hurried down in his automobile. The negro walked out of the office before Mr. White reached there, but the watcher kept him spotted so that he could not get away nor dispose of the money he had taken. Mr. White took a hurried inventory of his marked coin, missed some of it, had the negro arrested and searched, and the marked coins were found in his pocket.

The negro was given a hearing before Justice H. Harding and in default of $200 bond was placed in jail. On Saturday by mortgaging his home, the parents of Wiley secured a bondsman for him and he was released from prison. As soon as released he was again arrested under a warrant for stealing a pistol from Mr. White. Wiley was again taken before Justice Harding on this charge and was held under an additional bond of $100, which he failed to give and went back to prison.

Mr. White says that his total losses footed up about $170 before he succeeded in capturing the thief. While at times there was an opportunity to get a considerable sum, the negro tried to throw off suspicion by only taking a few dollars at a time.

INTERESTING DOUBLE OCCASION.

Farmers' Educational Meeting and Good Roads Association.

Congressman John H. Small, with the consent of the chamber of commerce good roads committee, has arranged for a farmers' educational meeting in connection with the good roads convention in Greenville on next Monday, August 1st. The morning session, which opens at 10 o'clock, will be devoted to the farmers' meeting, and the afternoon to good roads. Both these meetings are intended to impart practical information to practical men. They are for your benefit, and you should make it a point to come.

DISASTER OFF KOREAN COST.

Steamer Sinks to Sea and Two Hundred Persons Perish.

By Cable to The Reflector.

Tokio, July 25.—At least 200 persons are dead as a result of the sinking of the steamer Tatsuramoru, according to wireless telegraph reports received here today from warships cruising for survivors off the coast of Korea. Of all the passengers air crew, the list being large, only 40 were saved. The vessel ran upon rocks and was destroyed by an explosion. The few who were saved made their escape in life boats.

HAPPENINGS THROUGHOUT NORTH CAROLINA.

CREAM OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE EXCHANGES.

Fine Crop of Wheat—A. C. L. Laying Off Hands—Killed by Southern Passenger Train.

Mr. Charlie Cates, who does an immense pickle business at his farm, about two miles North of Mebane, has just gathered in a fine crop of wheat. From 40 acres he has cut and threshed out 607 bushels of good wheat. Some of this land made 25 bushels to the acre. Charlie is a practical farmer.—Mebane Leader.

On account of the lightness of the freight traffic the Atlantic Coast Line has within the past few days "laid off" thirty two breakmen and flagmen in the service of the company, and working into and out of this city. The lay off it is thought is entirely temporary and that the men will be put back to work as the traffic picks up. It is now mid-season between the handling of a large quantity of truckers products and the shipping of the staple produce and the merchants goods for the fall trade.—Rocky Mount Record.

This morning about 6 o'clock, a colored woman named Peggie Farmer was killed by southbound passenger train No. 83 of the Atlantic Coast Line, near the plant of the Guilford Plaster Company, just north of the city.—Wilson Times, 23rd.

NEW BERN'S BI-CENTENNIAL.

Large Attendance at the Opening—City Full of Visitors.

By Wire to The Reflector.

New Bern, N. C., July 25.—New Bern's bi-centennial opened today with about 3,000 visitors in the city. At the opening exercises addresses were made by Hon. Hannis Taylor, of Alabama, and Dr. Julius J. Goebel, of the University of Illinois.

The State Firemen's Association also meets here this week, and twenty-five companies from different sections of the State have already arrived to take part.

BRYAN HAS FIGHT ON HIS HANDS.

Nebraska State Convention About to Turn Him Down.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Grand Island, Neb., July 25.—William Jennings Bryan will have a hard battle on his hands at the Democratic State convention which meets here tomorrow. For the first time in fifteen years he must struggle for supremacy, and all indications today are that he is beaten before the battle begins. Governor Shallenburger is leading the opposition to Bryan's county option policy.

Why Stop?

"Yet some of us cease advertising in July and August and call it economy. I am speaking generally, of course. Nobody wants fur coats in July or woolen underwear in August. Nay, let us urge that nobody may want much of anything in July and August, but what a notion that demand ever ceases or even sufficiently to justify the average advertiser in quitting for a month or two at a stretch.

"Does a teamster turn his horses to grass when he comes to a hill? Does he not walk his horses up hill slowly Should the advertiser quit the fight in July and August, or should he not continue to do a little desultory firing? "Besides, to quit is to break up that cumulative effect which is a primary inducement to advertise. It is a gap in the firing line, a cessation of the gentle rain of argument, a break in the melody of persuasion, a missing link, a dropped stitch, a lost chapter, a Sahara of silence because it is hot, an obituary where a little nursing would have pulled the patient through a break of two small months in the life line of publicity, a cutting off of the lines of communication, a premature drop of the curtain while the play is on, a trifling with that eternal truth that advertising is reiteration everlasting, world without end!

The Asheville police judge ruled that Dr. Winston's roosters had a perfect right to crow.

Senator Cummins, of Iowa, is dealt blows beneath the belt to both Cannon and Aldrich. He says both are traitors.

The Republicans are having a big wrangle over who shall be chairman of their State committee. As usual, Marion Butler is taking a big hand in it.

Sandy roads collect their tolls, yet pay no dividends. Railroads that pay the largest dividends use the largest rails, therefore have hard roads and level beds.

That the book keeper of a Louisville bank could make way with its entire surplus, said to be $1,140,000, indicates that the other officers of the institution were not attending to their business.

The sixth district Democrats must be paving the way for a Republican to represent that district in congress. Possibly the Clark and Godwin factions feel that rather than see the other win they would let it go to a Republican. That is apt to be the outcome if a three cornered fight is carried to a finish.

As to Good Roads.

Good roads mean progress and prosperity, a benefit to the people who live in the cities, an advantage to the people who live in the country, and it will help every section of our vast domain. Good roads like the streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they enhance the value of the farm lands, facilitate transportation, add untold wealth to the producers and consumers of the country; they are the milestones marking the advance of civilization; they economize time, give labor a lift, and make millions in money; they save wear and tear and worry and waste; they beautify the country—bring it in touch with the city; they aid the social and the religious and the educational and the industrial progress of the people; they make better homes and happier hearth sides; they are the avenues of trade, the highways of commerce, the mail routes of information, and the agencies of speedy communication; they mean the economical transportation of marketable products—the maximum cost! they are the ligaments that bind the country together in thrift and industry and intelligence and patriotism; they promote social intercourse, prevent intellectual stagnation, and increase the happiness and the prosperity of our producing masses; they contribute to the glory of the country, give employment to our idle workmen, distribute the necessities of life—the products of the fields and the factories—encourage energy and husbandry, inculcate love for our science wonders, make mankind better and broader and greater and grander.—High Point Enterprise.

A Visitor's Impressions.

The fact which usually most impresses visitors to the South is that in this section are to be found the greatest opportunities just now pre-seated on the continent. Few days pass without illustrations of this impression finding their way into the press, one of the most recent emanating from Mr. P. Birwistle, of London, Ontario. Mr. Birwistle has traveled extensively, spending the past winter in Arizona and coming thence to Asheville some few weeks ago.

"The South," he tells an Asheville Citizen reporter, "is like a sleeping giant who is just beginning to stretch his limbs and rub his eyes and manifest other symptoms of awakening. The opportunities here for growth and development are without parallel anywhere, and this is peculiarly true of manufacturing enterprises. The plains of the provinces of Ontario and Manitoba in Canada are unsurpassed for wheat growing and other form of farming, but it is in the South that the big opportunities in other lines exist. The United States is destined to be the greatest nation on the earth, and the South will be the nation's garden spot."

This opinion from one who has had opportunity for closely observing different sections of this country is not a little encouraging. Truly the harvest is great, and its time of perfect ripening has come.—Charlotte Observer.

Aldrich's Exact Words.

Senator Aldrich on February 21, 1910, in the Senate, when speaking on the subject of government expenses, said:

"There is no intelligent observer in congress or out of it who does not know that the executive departments of this government are carried on either under obsolete business methods or without any business methods at all. There is no man who has given this subject any attention whatever who does not know or believe that at least 10 per cent of the thousand million dollars which we are appropriating annually can be saved by the adoption of business methods. This question of saving $100,000,000 per year—and it can be demonstrated in my judgment, that the saving will be much more than that—is a matter that should receive the serious attention of congress. If I were a business man and could be permitted to do it, I would undertake to run this government for $3,000,000,000 or less than it is now run."

When the Democrats are elected in 1912, they will run the government on $300,000,000 or more less than it is run for without the assistance of Mr. Aldrich.—Concord Tribune.

The recommendation of the State Merchants' Association that a law be enacted permitting all towns and cities in the State that desire to do so to establish a commission form of government is good. This method of handling the affairs of municipalities is growing rapidly in favor and it is only a question of time until North Carolina towns and cities will be wanting to give it a trial. Such a statute as the merchants' Association suggests would obviate the necessity for a special act in every case and give all municipalities desiring to make the change an opportunity to do so without unnecessary delay.—Salisbury Post.

Sometimes we see two business men side by side, one succeeds, the other fails; two young men start out in life, one succeeds, the other fails, and so on through various vocations, some succeed, others go down in defeat. There is a reason for all this. To make the greatest success in life in any vocation, it is necessary to know your work and meet the existing conditions as the changes come. The present age will not tolerate the business methods of the past generation. To be a winner we must have adaptability with persistent application.—Spring Hope Leader.

Dr. Henry B. Keeler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., married a woman in order to swindle her out of $13,500. She got mad and had it put in the papers. How different are those Brooklyn women from North Carolina women who may have regular husbands yet meekly put up with it so their next door neighbors can't find it out.—Wilmington Star.

There are two good reasons why no State-loving, self-respecting, reasonable white men should care to vote the Republican ticket in North Carolina. One is the horrible reconstruction era and the other is the nightmare of the fusion period. The record of the Republican party in the South and especially in North Carolina entitles it to indecent oblivion instead of tolerance.—Wilmington Star.

Another machine to pick cotton is to be put on the market. It is said to be able to do the work at one-fourth the cost by hand and do it well. We wish it success, but so many machines of the kind have been tried and failed that we have doubts on the subject. Still we all thought that a type-setting machine was an impossibility, yet it is here and more are coming every day.—Greensboro Record.

A HINDU LEGEND.

How the First Man and the First Woman Lost the Garden of Eden.

Brahma made up his mind to make the world and a man and woman. He made the world, and he made the man and then the woman and put them on the island of Ceylon. According to the account it was the most beautiful island which man can conceive—such birds, such songs, such flowers and such verdure! And the branches of trees were so arranged that when the wind swept through them every tree was a thousand aeolian harps.

Brahma when he put them there said, "Let them have a period of courtship, for it is my desire and will that true love should forever precede marriage."

Then they had their courtship, with the nightingale singing and the stars shining and the flowers blooming, and they fell in love. Imagine that courtship—no prospective fathers or mothers in law, no prying and gossiping of neighbors, nobody to say, "Young man, how do you expect to support her?" Nothing of that kind. They were married by the supreme Brahma, and he said to them: "Remain here. You must never leave this island."

Well, after a little while the man said, "I believe I'll look about a little."

He went to the northern extremity of the island, where there was a little narrow neck of land connecting it with the mainland, and the devil, who is always playing pranks with us, produced a mirage, and when he looked over to the mainland such hills and vales, such dells and dales, such mountains crowned with snow, such cataracts clad in bows of glory, did he see there that he went back and told his wife: "The country over there is a thousand times better than this. Let us migrate." She, like every other woman that ever lived, said: "Let well enough alone. We have all we want. Let us stay here."

But he said, "No; let us go." So she followed him, and when they came to this narrow neck of land he took her on his back like a gentleman and carried her over. But the moment they got over they heard a crash and, looking back, discovered that this narrow neck of land had fallen into the sea. The mirage had disappeared, and there was naught but rocks and sand, and then the supreme Brahma cursed them both to the lowest hell.

Then it was that the man spoke. "Curse me, but curse not her. It was not her fault. It was mine."

The supreme Brahma said, "I will save her, but not thee." And then she spoke out of her fullness of love, out of a heart in which there was love enough to make all of her daughters rich in holy affection, and said: "If thou wilt not spare him, spare neither me. I do not wish to live without him. I love him." Then the supreme Brahma said, "I will spare you both and watch over you and your children forever."—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Careful Unbringing.

While having dinner at a friend's home one evening little George refused, with self-conscious dignity, several unwholesome dishes which William, his tiny host, devoured with relish.

Finally, when William began to eat a huge slice of fruit cake, George eyed him wistfully for a long time. Then, leaning his head on his hand, with a sigh, he said: "Oh, dear; I wish my stomach wasn't being brunged up 'correctly'!"—Woman's Home Companion.

COATED WITH FOX FIRE.

We are told by some students there is a species of owl that has a phosphorescent glow in the dark and that it is a rare bird.

There may be such a bird, but a careful investigation on the part of a number of persons who have made such things a careful study has revealed the fact that certain owls and even bats and other creatures that are known to roost in old hollow trees that are in a certain stage of decay, producing that peculiar phosphorescent condition so often witnessed, and coming in contact with the matter that makes the glow, the feathers or outer coating of the creatures become saturated with the luminous matter and on damp nights give forth a brilliant glow, such as is often seen on old stumps, decaying logs and in some localities on ledges of limestone that protrude from the hillside.

On a number of occasions the writer has known persons to be badly frightened by coming suddenly upon a mass of what is known to many as fox fire. It is more frequently seen during the summer months, during or shortly after a shower. The brilliancy of the glow will depend much on the location, the temperature, and sometimes much is due to the person's imagination.

This same glow is often seen on small animals and a number of insects. The glowworms are quite common in various sections of the world, and in some localities insects have a brilliant glow coming from beneath their wings. The fireflies or lightning bugs are the most common in the United States.

In some countries certain vegetable growths are known to give forth such a glow, and it has been hinted that some of the crops harvested and stored in barns have the same properties and under certain conditions produce not only the glow, but actual flame, resulting in what is known as spontaneous combustion, destroying the barns and contents.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Welsh Legend.

In Wales there is a legend of Irish smugglers who arrived at Llanddona many years ago in a boat without rudder or oars. They were looked upon, according to the Irish custom of sending malefactors to a sea doom in this plight, as outlaws. However, they had been allowed to land, and a spring of water bursting forth in the sand at the place was taken as a sign of their right to a refuge. But they ill repaid the Welsh. The men lived by smuggling, the women by witchcraft. It was not possible to overcome the smugglers in a fray, for each carried about with him a black fly tied in a knot of his kerchief, and the moment the knot was undone the fly flew at the eyes of the opponents and blinded them. If the Llanddona witches attended a market and bid for anything no one ventured to bid against them.

A Love Story.

A teacher offered to her class a prize for the best short love story. Here is one of the results: "A poor man fell in love with a lady whose mother was a rich toy dealer. The poor man could not marry the rich lady because he had no money. A villain then offered him £10 if he would become a drunkard. The poor man needed the money to get married with, so he agreed, but when he got to the beer saloon he said, 'No, I will not become a drunkard, even for great riches. On the way home he found a bag of gold. So the young lady married him. It was a splendid wedding. Moral—Virtue is its own reward.'—London Mail.

Two Standards.

One of the strangest illustrations of the up and downs of fortune comes from Paris. A rich Parisian banker became reduced through unlucky investments to the sum of 10,000 francs. That amount was poverty to him, and overwhelmed by his loss and the hopelessness of the situation, he committed suicide. The 10,000 francs then fell to his brother, who had been for years a pauper, estranged from his family. But to him such a sum represented incredible riches, and his reason was overthrown. In a moment of delirium he jumped into the Seine and was drowned.

Windmills.

Holland is known to all the world as the land of windmills, but very few people know that the windmill did not belong to Europe in the first place, but originated among the Saracens. There is, it is believed, no instance of a windmill being used in Europe until the time of the crusades. In a typical wind driven flour mill in Asia Minor the planes of the wind wheel are made of a fabric and catch the wind as do the staysails of a sailing ship.

THIS IS A BIG COUNTRY.

One Man Traveled Away Out West as Far as Boston.

The ideas of foreigners regarding the size and characteristics of this country do not seem to grow less amusing with age, and the statement that in London there are people who think New York is a city of Indians is not so far fetched as some consider it.

The writer met at Long Branch last summer and Englishwoman, and a cultured Englishwoman at that, who had gone there directly after landing from a steamer in New York. Having casually mentioned that I was born in Brooklyn, she remarked that she had met some people named Henderson who lived on Long Island and wondered if I knew them. I asked in what part of Long Island they lived, and she naively answered, "Oh, down near the business section!"

A young Englishman whose cousin is in the grain business in this city came over to see his relative and also to see something of the country. One of the first places suggested to him was Niagara falls, and at train time the Englishman presented himself minus overcoat and hand bag.

"Where's your grip?" asked his cousin.

"Why, can't we run over and see the falls and get back tonight?" he asked.

On being assured that he could not be began asking questions regarding distances and ended with, "How big is this state?"

When he was told that it was bigger than the whole of England there were no fitting words to express his wonderment.

Another young Englishman came to New York during a very warm Indian summer. He spent a week there and then went on to Canada, returning to New York in March to embark for England.

He was asked the inevitable question, "How do you like America?"

His answer was: "It's a nawsty country. 'Arf the year you are roasted, and the other 'arf you are up to your waist in snow."

A New Yorker went to Brazil last year to put in a few months on one of the cattle ranges. One day a young Irishman rode into camp to see the New Yorker, saying that he had ridden forty miles to do so, as he wished to inquire of him as to the health of his brother, who left Ireland ten years before and was settled in New York city. There was no question in his mind but that the two would know each other.

Still our foreign cousins are not so much more vague on these subjects than are some natives. For instance, a man in Maine whom I met last summer told me in the course of a conversation that he had "been west as far as Boston."—Boston Herald.

The Soft Answer.

A politician running for office was very much incensed at certain remarks which had been made about him by the leading paper of the town. He burst into the editorial room like a dynamite bomb and exclaimed, "You are telling lies about me in your paper, and you know it!"

"You have no cause for complaining," said the editor coolly. "What in the world would you do if we told the truth about you?"

SMUGGLING IN ANDORRA.

It is an Honorable Profession in the Little Republic.

Sant Julia de Loria, the rival of Andorra la Villa, is the great trade and smuggling center. It has about 600 inhabitants only, but can boast several large shops and warehouses full of contraband commodities openly displayed. As a matter of fact, the whole nation is more or less smugglers—on principle. They have neither import nor export duties themselves, and they are fully persuaded of the benefits of free trade for everybody. France makes commodities wanted in Spain, Spain grows articles required in France, and Andorra lies between these two nations. What more natural, therefore, than that she should give aid to both her neighbors—for a consideration, of course? But smuggling in Andorra is not looked upon as a fraudulent business. On the contrary, it is considered an honorable and legitimate profession—almost an art—and one that in its higher branches requires many aptitudes—business capacity, astuteness, diplomacy, a thorough knowledge of the art of bribery and a military method for directing one's forces and commanding one's subordinates. For instance, a wealthy Andorran goes over the border into Spain and buys up cheaply thousands of sheep, which he pays for in Spanish money. They are driven home to his mountain pastures, where they are marked with his cipher. Then, in company with his headman, he strolls casually across to the French frontier—every inch of which he and his underlings know by heart—and drops into the hut of the commandant of the douaniers for a chat. Before leaving the commandant naturally offers him a petit verre, and banknotes of greater or less value are left lying on the table. Nothing definite is said; nobody's conscience or dignity is compromised. A few days later thousands of Andorran sheep are sold in the markets of France and paid for in French money. How did they get across the frontier? Ah, that's just the point. The mere fact of buying with Spanish money and selling for French means from 20 to 30 per cent profit without counting the difference in the prices of the animals. In addition to sheep, hides, tobacco, matches, olive oil, superior qualities of wines, salt, sugar and ultramarine are the principal commodities smuggled into France. The articles that go into Spain are mostly glass and china fancy articles, bric-a-brac, paper and cutlery; also a large number of mules. The latter are bought in a wretched state for almost a song in France, turned out to grass on the splendid Andorran pastures for a few months and sold in Spain at the end of the season for a high figure.—Wide World Magazine.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.

One of the most striking figures in the French revolution was Maximilien Robespierre, who was born on May 6, 1758. He was the head and shoulders of the French revolution, frequently remaining in the background, however, leaving the work of carrying out his plans with Danton and Marat.

There had been turbulent political times in France for several years. The king had made repeated concessions to the Republicans, while he cherished schemes for escaping their control, but each month added to his humiliations and to the boldness of his enemies. Finally in September, 1792, the national convention was organized, the monarchy abolished, and France was declared a republic.

The convention was divided into two parties, bitterly hostile to each other, one called the "Mountain party" and the other the "Girondists." Of the former the leaders were Robespierre, Danton and Marat, noted for their wickedness and cruelty. One of the most eminent of the Girondists was Vergniaud, distinguished for his eloquence.

The Mountain party having triumphed in the convention, the Girondist leaders were guillotined. The reign of terror was then inaugurated, during which the revolutionary tribunal, controlled by Robespierre, caused thousands to be seized and hurried to the guillotine. Among these victims was the unfortunate Marie Antoinette (October, 1793).

Alison in his "History of Europe" says: "Night and day the cars incessantly discharged victims into the prison. Weeping mothers and trembling orphans were thrust in without mercy with the brave and the powerful. The young, the beautiful, the unfortunate, seemed in a peculiar manner the prey of the assassins. Fifteen only were at first placed on the chariot, but their number was soon augmented to thirty and gradually rose to eighty persons who daily went forth to the place of execution.

When the fall of Robespierre put a stop to the murders arrangements had been made for increasing it to 150. An immense aqueduct to remove the gore had been dug as far as the Place St. Antoine, and four men were daily employed in emptying the blood of the victims into that reservoir.

The cruel and wicked men concerned in these atrocities almost invariably met with a violent death. Marat was assassinated by Charlotte Corday. The faction of Robespierre, triumphing over that of Danton, caused him and his adherents to be guillotined, and a few months afterward this dreadful period closed by the execution of Robespierre himself in 1794.

When Robespierre ascended the fatal car to go to his death his head was enveloped in a bloody cloth, his color was livid and his eyes sunk. When the procession came opposite his house it stopped, and a group of women danced around the bier of him whose chariot wheels they would have dragged the day before over a thousand victims. Robespierre mounted the scaffold last, and the moment his head fell the applause was tremendous. In some cases the event was announced to the prisoners by the waving of handkerchiefs from the tops of houses.

A Crushing Retort.

In a certain New Brunswick county, where the councilors served without any sessional indemnity whatever, Councilor C. was defeated in a contest in the parish of X., and at the next session to which he was elected the councilors voted themselves $5 per day.

Councilor C. supported the resolution. He believed, he said, that his services were worth $5 per day to the electors of the parish of X., and that if he had not thought so he would not have offered his services.

"Mr. Warden," said a member who was opposing the increase, "there is nothing in that. Three years ago Councilor C. offered his services to the electors of X. for nothing, and they rejected him."—B. C. Saturday Sunset.

Sweetness Wasted.

Have you ever looked in the bottom of your cup when you have finished drinking your coffee or tea or in the bottom of your neighbor's cup? If you have you have seen a lot of wasted sugar or sand. The average American is in too great a hurry to wait for sugar or anything else to dissolve. The result is that he puts about twice as much sugar as necessary in his coffee, tea or lemonade. The resulting waste is enormous. It is estimated that Americans throw away millions a year by not stirring.—Charleston News and Courier.

SHE SHUT HER EYES.

True to Her Principles, She Determined Not to See.

Mrs. Storey's life had been haunted for years by the fear that some day she might be called upon to serve as a witness in court. Her grandmother was a witness once, and when Mrs. Storey was a little girl she used to hear all about it. Grandma, it appears, had been so scared she couldn't tell the judge her own name.

"And," said Mrs. Storey to her husband, "if there is anything more disgraceful than to be unable to tell your own name I'd like to know what it is."

In order to reduce the possibility of such a calamity to a minimum Mrs. Storey would walk on with deafened ears and averted head whenever she happened to be near a fire, a fight or the scene of an accident. Only the other day she had occasion to shut her eyes and ears to the seething crowd around her. She was waiting in the Grand Central station for Mr. Storey, who had gone around to the baggage room to check a trunk.

Presently she became aware that something exciting was happening close beside her. Hastily she shut her eyes and stuck her fingers into her ears, but before those protective measures could be accomplished she learned that a female thief had snatched a hand bag which she had found lying on the floor and was being pursued by an excited crowd. Not being entirely devoid of the curiosity of her sex, Mrs. Storey would have liked to know more, but the old fear of being detained as a witness held her inert until her husband's return. Then she ventured to ask if they had caught the thief.

"Yes," said Mr. Storey, "but they couldn't do anything with her. Every one was confident the bag didn't belong to her, but as nobody appeared to claim it they had to let her go."

At that Mrs. Storey opened her eyes.

"I am so glad," she said, "that it is all over. I am ready to go now. But, oh, dear me! Where are my purse and hand bag? I had them here a moment ago. They must have dropped—oh, I wonder!"

"No use to wonder now," said Mr. Storey heartlessly. "Of course the stolen bag was yours."—New York Herald.

Willing to Chance It.

Here the lecturer threw upon the screen the portrait of a man well known in the financial world, says the Chicago Tribune.

"This," he said, "is one of the great captains of finance. I do not need to mention his name. His face is familiar to all of you. Look at his corrugated brow, the furrows in his cheeks, the pouches under his eyes, the deep lines about his mouth. That face, my friends, bears the unmistakable and ineffaceable stamp of care. Anxiety has marked it indelibly. It shows the traces of sleepless nights, weary days and bitterly fought campaigns, with millions of dollars at stake. Success brings such a man no happiness. Look at him! How many of you, my friends, would change places with him? How many of you would be willing to take his wealth if compelled to assume the terrible burden of responsibility that goes with it?"

His hearers rose en masse. "I would!" they shouted in unison.

Ze Game of Golf.

He had come over from France and had just been asked to give his views on the ancient game of golf. With much gesticulation he did so.

"Ah," he said, "your game of golf! Yes, I know him. You put on ze tunic so red as ze Inglesch rosbit underneath done. You strap your sack of sticks on ze back of a boy twice so small as ze bag.

"He scrape a wud pudding to make balance a leetle white ball. He make three bad tries to balance him, then very angry you call aloud, 'Feur!' Then you what you call address ze ball, and, ma foi, your address is sometimes of language to make afraid.

"You strike, and ze ball find himself in ze long grass.

"You call aloud for ze nib lunge stick and beat ze ground till your partner say, 'Ho, chuck it!' Ygu say— But, my friend, I excuse myself to repeat what you say.

"Ah, my friend, you are a great nation, but your golf game gives me what you call ze pip!"—Pearson's Weekly.

His Unfortunate Investment.

"It's astonishing," the old settler in the little town was saying, "how real estate has advanced in this town since I came here: The corner lot this building is on, for instance, sold once for $450."

"What is it worth now?" asked the stranger.

"Five thousand."

"Well, you had a chance to get rich by investing in land yourself. I suppose you bought some real estate?"

"Yes; I bought one lot—just one."

"That has increased in value, hasn't it?"

"Yes; over 900 per cent."

"That was a good investment."

"Not so awfully good, mister," said the old settler gloomily. "I paid $10 for it, and it's worth $75 now, but it's in the cemetery. The way I figure I've lost a heap of money by not dying forty years ago."—Youth's Companion.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Chicago, July 25.—Wheat was easier. Corn was up sensationally, because of hot weather. Yesterday's oats were higher with corn, and provisions easier with hogs.

New York, July 25.—There was a stampede of new crop shorts in cotton this morning that advanced late portions from 13 to 14 points over close of Saturday. Old crops were more or less neglected, with July six points lower. August unchanged; September two points higher. Opening: July 15.80; August 15.24; September 13.80; October 13.33.

New York, July 25.—The stock market opened with losses, and weaker. Some issues, however, recovered net declines and ranged slightly above close. Rock Island was the weakest feature, falling over one point, and establishing new low level for year. Southern Pacific, Reading and Steel on early declines, also made new low records. There was persistent buying in copper shares.

In Spite of It.

The wife of a new member of congress was much distressed by the unexpected appearance of an old sweetheart of her daughter—a big, good natured son of the west, though of a rather crude exterior.

"Alice," said the mother one day, "I don't understand how you can put up with Jim now that you've been associating with so many fine young men in the east. I should think he would grate on you. Don't you find him a little rough?"

"Yes, ma," answered she, blushing. "And yet Jim tells me that he shaves every day."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Talent and Vocation.

Each man has his own vocation. The talent is the call. There is one direction in which all space is open to him. He has faculties silently inviting him thither to endless exertion. He is like a ship in a river. He runs against obstructions on every side but one. On that side all obstruction is taken away, and he sweeps serenely over God's depths into an infinite sea. This talent and this call depend on his organization or the mode in which the general soul incarnates itself in him.—Emerson.
