MATTERS BEFORE THE TEMPLE OF JUSTICE.

AUGUST SUPERIOR COURT IN SESSION IN CITY HALL.

Judge Ward Makes Instructive Charge to Grand Jury—Solicitor Abernathy Representing State.

The August criminal term of Pitt Superior court opened at 10 o'clock this morning in the city hall with Judge G. W. Ward presiding and Solicitor C. L. Abernathy representing the State. In calling the jury list there were very few excuses or absentees. One who was drawn on the grand jury asked to be excused on account of deafness. "How long have you been deaf?" asked Judge Ward in a moderate low voice, to which the juror replied "About ten years." The question and answer convinced the judge that the juror could hear well enough to serve.

A. J. Moye, foreman; M. D. Yelverton, Iredell Moore, D. M. Johnson, J. H. Williams, B. N. Boyd, (colored), Jesse L. Cherry, J. W. Allen, C. L. Tyson, J. S. Williams, R. B. Summerell, J. T. Moore, W. J. Smith, W. H. Congleton, R. B. Bynum, A. J. Flanagan, L. D. Phelps, J. J. Oakley.

Judge Ward told the jury in his charge that great trust rested upon them, to sit in judgment for the State on one hand and for the people on the other, and it was a duty they should regard with dignity and impartiality.

The old saying that "it takes all sorts of people to make a world," is literally true, and it is not different in this county from elsewhere. While it is the sworn duty of a grand juror to give information of any violations of law within their knowledge, or any creditable knowledge from others, but it is not his duty to act upon the suggestions of those busy bodies who are usually around on the first day or two of court trying to get somebody indicted, but does not want his own name disclosed as the informant.

The grand jury is not a legislative body. You have seen men go into the grand jury box with the idea that certain laws are bad laws and they will not present any one for violation of such laws. That is a species of anarchy. If a law is a bad law the best way to get it repealed is to enforce it.

Judge Ward then went into a brief explanation of offenses against person, property and society, showing how fully these are protected by our laws. The crimes growing out of dishonesty could be largely corrected or prevented if our citizens would take hold of them at the proper time. Parents too often, perhaps unintentionally, implant impressions upon the minds of their children that in later life lead to dishonesty and crime. Examples of this were given in the man who misrepresents the age of his child when going upon a railroad train, and those who tell their children in packing up apples or potatoes for market to save out the larger ones to put on top in order to make them sell better. This is planting principles of dishonesty.

Upon the whole Judge Ward's charge was very instructive and listened to with close attention.

When the solicitor was asked what he had for trial, said about 120 cases. The first case called was J. F. King, for assault with a deadly weapon, who plead guilty, fined $25 and costs.

Advertising Defined.

At a recent banquet of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Erman J. Ridgeway asked, "What is advertising?" and answered himself as follows:

"Advertising is faith. The substance of things hoped for. Advertising is bread upon the prairies. Fertilizer upon waste places. Advertising is merchandising by wireless; the winged salesman, tireless, sleepless, silver-tongued hall fellow in office, kitchen and library, suggesting comforts and necessities before the need is born, creating new markets, building new factories, selling the surplus. Advertising makes for better furnished homes, better dressed people, better food, more health, big people, better food, more health, bigger life and greater comfort, and incidentally, advertising makes the advertiser a bigger, broader man—a national figure."

A little cuss now and then is given by the best of men.

AMERICANS READY TO ACT.

Nicaragua in the Hands of The Insurgents.

By Cable to The Reflector.
San Juan Sur, Nicaragua, Aug. 22.—The entire government of Nicaragua is now in the hands of insurgents, whose army is encamped only a few miles from the capital.
Last night Jose Estrado, on whom President Madriz conferred his toga, in turn surrendered his title of a few hours to President Estrado, his brother being in lead of the insurgents. Transfer of presidency was made in the hope that the announcement would serve to quiet the mobs who are pillaging and robbing, but it had little effect. Marines from American gun boats are ready to march from Carinto to Nicaragua and take possession of the city if necessary to restore order.

Big Colored Farmer.

Rembert Beverly of Cullledge township, one of the largest and most successful colored farmers in the State spent Thursday in Charlotte, returning to his home yesterday.
"How much cotton do you expect this year?" Beverly was asked.
"About 300 bales," was the matter-of-fact response, given without the least hesitation and without any effort to boast. Beverly is one of the best known and most popular colored citizens in Anson county, one who has always set a good example to his race. He enjoys the esteem of the white people especially.—Charlotte Observer.

New Industry in Wilmington.

It has been ascertained from a reliable source that the Pocomoke Guano company will install large manufacturing and storage fertilizer facilities here during the next few months. With this idea in view, it is stated that the company has purchased a most valuable tract of land on the west bank of the Northeast river, a mile or two above the city limits. It is stated that the property secured by the company embraces fifteen acres, more or less. The land is situated between the Swift Fertilizer factory and Hilton bridge. Quite a large sum is said to have been paid by the Pocomoke Guano company for the newly acquired property.

It is stated that the plans of the company are to improve the purchase at an early date with the erection of a large and modern fertilizer factory and storage plant. The business of the Pocomoke company is steadily on the increase. It is to be in a better position to handle the rapidly increasing volume of business that the company has acquired property of its own upon which to build. The tract has a river frontage for a considerable distance and it is ideally located for the purpose for which it will be used.—Wilmington Star.

Advertising Apothegms.

The Mahin Messenger—pocket-size, full of snap and all the way from Chicago—thus spices its August number:

—Advertising keeps a business healthy.

It tones up its liver, strengthens its biceps, steadies its heart and keeps its nerves in order.

Once in a while a man decides that he is doing too much business that he can stop advertising for a while and run on momentum.

Momentum is the gradual process toward a full stop.

"The momentum business is usually prematurely full-stopped by the straight left jab of the well-trained competitor who finds his opening in the fiftieth round.

If you want to stay in business stay in the advertising field.

No matter how much business you are doing, keep on the energy that makes it.

You might as well cut off your legs because you are running well in a foot race as to cut off your advertising because your business is too good.

You might as well tell the insurance man that you are so healthy you will drop the policy for a few years as to stop advertising because the orders are pulling up.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS.

Gathered From Our Exchanges Today of Events Just Happened.

Winston-Salem, Aug. 20.—The State Democratic Executive Committee is called to meet at Raleigh Wednesday night, August 24th, 1910, to receive the report of the special committee on the Sixth District contest.

Durham, Aug. 20.—Mrs. T. B. Edwards, wife of a well known citizen, died this morning of pellagra, making the second death today in the city of that disease. She was 39 years of age, and leaves five children. She had been ill many weeks, but not until yesterday was her complaint diagnosed definitely as pellagra.

Raleigh, Aug. 20.—There came Governor Kitchin today from the secretary of state at Washington, official information that this government is notified by the consul of Durango, Mexico, that the Supreme court of Durango has sentenced to death Jesus Monarres for the murder of W. R. Boggs, Jr., formerly of Winston-Salem and also sent to prison for ten years Emelio Montengro, as an accomplice. The murder was on November 17, 1907. Mr. Boggs was a mining engineer and was taking a hand in settling trouble with mine labor.

The Sun reporter was informed this morning upon arrival of the west bound Norfolk Southern train from Beaufort, that a passenger on the east bound train last evening bound to Beaufort, from where he would embark to Swansboro, was a victim of a severe loss. It was stated that this gentleman left New Bern last night, enroute to his home with $800 on his person. The weary traveler became tired and sleepy and while taking a little "snooze" he claims to be relieved of the fat wallet he had in his possession. Whogot is or where it disappeared to is the question.—New Bern Sun.

Cherryville, Aug. 20.—Ambrose Pruett was shot and instantly killed and Riley Gallant, his companion was arrested and placed in jail here this morning, following a chase of the young men by Chief of Police J. Lee Beam, and a posse of several citizens. The two men had been noticed early in the night dodging around residences in the town and suspicious citizens kept an eye on them. Finally, when they were seen skulking around the bank the chief of police and citizens decided it was time to act, the presence of a grip in the hands of one of the men lending color to the suspicion that they were safe robbers. The shooting was done by C. S. Reynolds, who was in the posse, when the men were brought to bay. Deputy Reynolds had called to the men to surrender and as he did so, Gallant reached to his hip pocket as if for a pistol. Mr. Reynolds fired, but instead of hitting Gallant, the load of buckshot entered Pruett who was instantly killed.

Tilling the Soil With Dynamite.

Probably no stranger use for dynamite has ever been devised than its substitution in place of the plow for the tilling of clay land. It is being put to such a use on a considerable experimental scale in Kansas and by a planter of Spartanburg, S. C., and a picture in the September number of Popular Mechanics shows how it was done.

The cartridges were planted three feet apart, in rows, and at a depth of four feet. The holes were made by driving crowbars to the desired depth. The dynamite was exploded by a line of men, provided with red hot irons. The line went rapidly down the field, the explosives following the men in a steady roar that was deafening. The explosions threw clouds of soil 30 feet into the air and covered the men from head to foot with dust and dirt.

More Spanish Troubles.

By Cable to The Reflector.
Lisbon, Aug. 22.—Secret orders were issued today to Minister of War Mikias, the premier, after conference with King Manuel. It is reported that the orders related to the suppression of the present unrest and the putting down of any trouble as serious as in Spain. Bloodshed is feared.

Explosion at Gun Works.

By Cable to The Reflector.
Berlin, Aug. 22.—One of the experimenting laboratories of the Krupp gun works was wrecked today by an explosion, and several workmen were killed.

WOMEN'S CLUBS EVERYWHERE.

The woman's musical clubs follow the flag. Skimming through the pages of the latest musical directory, the inquisitorial eye discovered the existence of the ladies' amateur club in Skagway and Nome, Manilla and Guam. Even Honolulu and Ponce, in Porto Rico, are in the record. But, sad to relate, the heavenly art, which soothes the savage breast, is as yet without classified disciples in Jolo and Samar and a few other haunts of our untamed little brown brothers.

A little arithmetical persistence reveals one thousand of these women's musical clubs in the record, with an aggregate membership of one hundred thousand and a geographical universality covering every urban community of importance under the Stars and Stripes.

The woman's musical club is entirely indigenous to American life, and it is to the credit of the American woman that, having attained leisure, she has employed it in acquiring higher standards of living. The one million enrolled club-women of America, the most intimate of the arts, the most general in its appeal, the easiest of appreciation has been the most widely seized upon as an avenue of growth in the feminine campaign for culture.

With growth in membership and increased musical activities, the musical activities, the musical club, particularly in the larger cities, has evolved beyond a parochial influence. Through its engagement of native artists and foreign virtuosos, its support of the great orchestras of the country, when on tour, and its promotion of music festivals, the music club exerts a potent influence on our national musical development.—John Warren in the Delinicator.

Terrace Farming.

Jean Napoleon Ingram, of Coker Park has recently made a tour through Georgia and Alabama and observed the terrace system of farming in those States, by which fields are protected from washes and the soil preserved from destruction by heavy rains. Every slope or hillside field, he says is crossed by a series of terraces of sufficient fall to guide the water from the land into main ditches, that carry it from the farms. By such means the slope and hillside soil is left on the fields and the washing of gullies by winter and spring floods prevented. The land is thereby preserved for posterity. The Georgia and Alabama fields are not destroyed year by year by unscrupulous cultivation and butcher farming; their crop producing elements and values are held in reserve for future generations. Such a system of land culture should be followed in North Carolina, where the fields are fast becoming barren by the old slave method of farming, the soil carried from the fields by rainfall, and the farmers made worthless, where future tillers will find the land a waste of naked and furrowed clay.

He thinks that the best way to bring the matter to the attention of the country land holders, is for the Farmers Union to charter a train and sell round trip excursion tickets to Montgomery for $5, to allow the people to investigate and study the Alabama and Georgia system of terrace farming, and enable them to introduce similar soil protection and establish similar land improvements in North Carolina.

A special car would possibly accommodate the first excursion, and the Southern Railroad would doubtless make low rates for such an enterprise, as transportation interests are benefitted by improvement in soil cultivation along railway lines. The professor also thinks it would greatly aid agriculture for the farmers to bring some tenants from those States familiar with the terrace system to show how such improvement can best be effected on the farms of this country.—Charlotte Chronicle.

DISASTEROUS FOREST FIRES.

Twenty Millions Dollars in Timber Destroyed—400 People Missing.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 22.—Five thousand square miles of timberland in western Montana and eastern Idaho are ablaze today, and as much more territory has been laid waste by the worst forest fires in history of the United States. The property loss is already $20,000,000, according to careful estimates. The known dead already number 50 and 200 persons are reported missing. A dozen towns in Montana have been destroyed. Great fires threaten Helena today and the city firemen are assisting in the fight. Similar stories come from all the northwest and nothing seems to check the flames. Rain seems to be the only hope of putting out the fires.

MONDAY, AUGUST 22, 1910.

It does not take much walking or riding around Greenville to convince you that the town is growing.

John D. Rockefeller has drawn the line on going up in a flying machine. He says the things are too dangerous to suit him.

The farmer who brings along some produce to sell when he comes to town is not in much danger of being short on pocket change.

Nebraska Democrats turning down Bryan and New York Republicans turning down Roosevelt gives an idea of some of the capers of present day politics.

That Indian affairs investigation out in Oklahoma, growing out of the charge of attempted bribery made by Senator Gore, is proving many things which were at first flatly denied.

The Butlers are wanting everything in reach this time, but Marion is not going to be able to pull George through for congress in the third district. Still by George making the run he hopes to be in line to get something from the administration.

R. W. Vincent, of the Charlotte Observer, is entitled to a high seat in the school of prophets. Two weeks ago in a special sent from Morehead City, where he was sojourning at the time, he predicted that D. H. Blair, of Winston-Salem, was going to be the Republican nominee for congress in the fifth district. The committee met in Greensboro Saturday and nominated him.

The recent change in leadership of the Republican party in this State has put the Greensboro News to guessing whose bank account it can hereafter look to for support. Duncan has heretofore been bearing most of the burden, but since his defeat for chairman he has withdrawn his check book from The News. Possibly Butler and Morehead will put their barrels on tap.

Thomas J. Pence, Washington City correspondent of the News and Observer, gives an interesting story of how Marion Butler after getting back to Washington from North Carolina, tried to palm off seven page type written interview on the correspondents of the big papers, and was much surprised the next morning to find that not one of the papers had printed it. Marion is foxxy, but he don't catch the newspapers every time.

R. A. P. Cooley, of Nashville, is acting in bad health by coming out as an independent candidate for congress in the fifth district. He was a delegate to the convention that renominated J. H. Pau, and it was on his motion that the nomination was made by acclamation. His action in now coming out as an independent candidate gives comfort to the Republicans, to whom he looks for support, but the election is going to show him the mistake he has made.

Both Parties GUILTY.

Neither Democratic nor Republican Congressman have any business using their franking privilege for mailing personal letters. We mentioned Sunday a case where Congressman Morehead, a Republican abused the franking privilege and The News on the same date uncarthred a letter written by Congressman Webb, a Democrat, and with equal impropriety franked in an official envelope. Men in high places are the ones who should have the keenest scrupulous about resorting to anything that is the least bit questionable.—Greensboro Telegram.

An exchange says: "The editor of today has to get his nose down to the grind stone and keep it there sixteen hours per day and 365 days in the year, or he falls by the wayside. There are men who quit work Saturday night and rest until Monday morning. They lay aside business cares at five or six o'clock every evening and do not resume them until seven or eight the next morning. Not so your editor. He has no elegant leisure. He knows no hours, no Sunday, no night. When he goes to a party, or to church, or on an alleged pleasure trip, it is all in the line of duty. Withall, your editor man is a cheerful long-suffering soul, going about doing good in his humble way. He returns good for evil. He writes long puffs of church sociables, and in return therefor, accepts a chunk of cake that would sink an ironclad. He notes the arrival of all the babies in his neighborhood and eternally per-jures his soul in telling how pretty they are. He rejoices with the gay and mourns with those who are sad. He booms every enterprise which makes his community rich and goes about himself clothed in gunny sack coats and one suspender. He glories over the fortune of his neighbor, and meekly eats his own repast of boiled corn cobs and colored labels off tomato cans. He can write a sermon, an account of a prize fight, a political speech, an obituary notice, poetry, split wood, pitch hay, wash dishes, preside at a camp meeting, carry horses, quote law or gospel, or anything else at a moment's notice."

The strawberry section of which Wilmington is the centre this season shipped to the Northern markets 428,581 crates of strawberries of the gross value of $3.25 a crate, aggregating nearly $1,400,000. Refrigeration, transportation, commissions and other expenses amounted to $471,439.10, leaving a net balance of $921,449.15. These interesting figures we pick from the report of Mr. H. T. Bauman, secretary of the East Carolina Truck and Fruit Growers' Association, which held its fourteenth annual meeting in Wilmington on Wednesday. An industry of such magnitude and tremendous importance requires the supervision of just such an organization as the East Carolina Truck and Fruit Growers' Association, and The Star is gratified to note renewed interest in its valuable work and increased determination to support an organization so well calculated to save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the berry growers.—Wilmington Star.

The imperial counties of Chowan and Washington are engaged in an intricate boundary dispute. The boundary in question lies somewhere in Albemarle sound, which divides them, and its exact location is a matter of much financial concern, since the Norfolk Southern Railroad has constructed a $1,000,000 trestle or bridge upon which taxes may be assessed. Chowan wants the whole bridge, while Washington claims that it is suzerian over at least half. The cost of carrying the matter to the Supreme Court may exceed the amount of the taxes desired, but the county pride renders it likely that such action will be the result. It does seem that a careful search of the county records and the employment of a first class surveyor would be quite as satisfactory and a deal cheaper.—Charlotte Observer.

A practical railroad man has estimated that the lack of good roads has cost the farmers of this country $225,000,000. If the farmers would set heartily and unanimously to work to save this little trifle, the present high cost of living might be partially offset. What's more, we believe the time is coming when the leak will be entirely stopped.—Charlotte Observer.

The American city that is not now considering the change to the commission form of city government is the exception rather than the rule. That plan is a success wherever it is being tried and there seems to be no good reason why this city should not join those that are making this experiment in the science of municipal government.—Winston Sentinel.

Death in a London Hotel.

Sometimes it happens that some one staying in a fashionable London hotel dies. Now, in hotels the management is not fond of deaths, so it comes to pass that the room in which the dead thing lies is locked, and nobody in the hotel save the staff, who know everything, is aware that the sable wings of death, passing, have shed a plume. When relatives arrive they are hurried upstairs lest their red eyes trouble the living guests. Late, very late, at night, when the most belated guest slumbers peacefully, the corpse is taken secretly out of the hotel by stealthy footed men who have crept up the stairs. In the morning the empty room, cleanly swept and garnished, is, with luck, let to some one else.—Fall Mall Gazette.

The Professional View.
An English physician of whom many stories are in circulation may not be as unsympathetic as a recent anecdote seems to make him. He is a specialist on all sorts of mental disturbances and the fits, spasms and convulsions which sometimes accompany them. One of his patients, a most excitable person, if suddenly alarmed or distressed, would fall into a curious comatose state from which she could not be roused until the effect of the shock had passed. The physician had been summoned again and again, but it always happened that he was away from home at the time, and before he arrived on the scene of action the patient had recovered. At last one night he was summoned and arrived at the house while the woman was still unconscious. He hurried upstairs and into the room where she was lying on the couch. He looked at her, and an expression of interest overspread his face.
"Now, this," he said in his most cheerful tone—"this is something like!"

Whistler's Ways.
It was Whistler's custom when drowsy to go deliberately to sleep, no matter where or what the circumstances might be. At one dinner party his gentle snore suddenly aroused his neighbor, who nudged him violently with his elbow. "I say, Whistler," he protested excitedly, "you must not sleep here!"
"Leave me alone!" snapped Whistler. "I've said all I wanted to. I've no interest at all in what you and your friends have to say."
One evening he was my guest at dinner at a hotel. Edwin A. Abbey was also there. Right after dinner Whistler went calmly to sleep. On the way to the theater he enjoyed another nap in the cab, and he slumbered peacefully through the greater part of the play. The next morning he blandly asked me: "What did Abbey have to say last night? Anything worth while?"—Century.

"Charms" in Cornwall.
Cornwall, England, is a county of "charms." "The passing of children through holes in the earth, rocks or trees, once an established rite, is still practiced in various parts of Cornwall," wrote Thomas Q. Couch about fifty years ago. "With us bolis are cured by creeping on the hands and knees beneath a bramble which has grown into the soil at both ends. Children afflicted with hernia are still passed through a slit in an ash sapling before sunrise, fasting, after which the slit portions are bound up, and as they unite so the malady is cured. The ash is indeed a tree of many virtues. Venomous reptiles are never known to rest under its shadow, and a single blow from an ash stick is instant death to an adder. Struck by a bough of any other tree, the reptile is said to retain marks of life until the sun goes down."

Halley's Comet.
A French scientist declares that Halley's comet was known to the authors of the Talmud long before Halley came into existence. This French scientist quotes from the Talmud: "Two wise men of Palestine, Gambliel and Joshua, made a voyage on the sea. The first had brought with him bread to eat. The second one in addition had brought flour. When Gambliel had eaten all his bread he asked him for flour, saying to him, 'How didst thou know we should be so long on our journey that thou didst bring flour?' To which Joshua did answer: 'There is a very bright star which appeareth every seventy years and which deceiveth mariners. I have thought that perchance it might surprise us during our voyage, lead us astray and thus prolong our voyage on the sea; hence it is that I have provided myself with flour.'"

The Falkland Islands.
The Falkland Islands are among the least known and most out of the way corners of the widely scattered British empire. They form a sort of British suburb of the south pole, some 500 miles from the antarctic end of America, Cape Horn. A former governor of the Falkland islands, the late Sir William Robinson, used to say that he would have committed suicide while there if he could have found a tree tall enough to hang himself on.—London Standard.

How Like a Man!
Mrs. Nocknoodle—Oh, Norris, if you would always be as good and gentle and kind as you are at this moment how happy we might be! Mr. Nocknoodle (losing his temper instantly and bellowing at the top of his voice)—Do you mean to say, madam, that I am not always as good and kind as I am at this moment?

Outdone.
Jones—Yes, sir; that boy of mine is a wonderful piano player. Why, he can play with his toes! Brown—How old is he? Jones—Fifteen. Brown—I've got a boy at home who can play with his toes, and he is only one year old.

The Sting of a Bee.
An eastern fable tells of a potentate who demanded that there should be brought to him the stings of a thousand bees killed because one of their colony had dared commit lese majesty by stinging the hand of royalty. When they were brought, a tiny golden thimble the king was so amazed to find that a thousand of the hypodermic points made such a little mass that he issued a manifesto to the effect that thereafter no person within the bounds of the kingdom should complain at the sting of a bee. The lesson of the fable is that petty annoyances hurt because they are exaggerated in the mind; that when they are seen in their actual proportions they are so slight as to merit only contempt. How much comfort would come to the majority of persons if they could but see the tiny size of the bee stings that lead them to acts of petulance, words of anger, expressions of reproach. The bee sting annoyances have caused lifelong breaches of friendship. They have broken up families and caused anger and resentment to take the place of love and fealty.—Baltimore American.

The Mississippi of Streets.
A street is like a river, with its human current carrying all manner of drift between its banks of residences or shops on either side. And if this simile be appropriate then New York's Broadway is the Mississippi of streets. Probably no other avenue in the world presents so many contrasts in the flotsam and jetsam it carries from Harlem to the Battery. Every type of humanity—uprooted saplings from farms and orchards, proud bulled craft in silks and satins—may be described in the surging mass. Banker and boot-black, the swaggering swell and the draggled derelict, walk shoulder to shoulder—rush, rather, for Broadway is a maelstrom, the embodiment of New York's bustle and hurry, the place where nothing can stand still. Richard Harding Davis once said that everybody "seems to be trying to reach the bank to have a check cashed before 3 o'clock."—George Seibel in Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Queer Collateral.
"Here is a fact as strange as it is true," said an Egyptologist. "Mummies in ancient Egypt were used chiefly as collateral."
"When an Egyptian wanted to borrow he gave his father's or grandfather's mummy as security. Sometimes, if he required a large sum, he gave his father and both grandfathers, and he would even throw in the mummy of his mother-in-law if she fortunately happened to be in a mummified state."
"Joking aside," the Egyptologist continued, "what I tell you is the truth. An Egyptian was not permitted to borrow without pledging the mummy of some near relative. It was deemed in Egypt both impious and infamous not to redeem so sacred a pledge as that, and he who died with a family mummy still in pawn was himself buried in unconsecrated ground."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Postage Stamp.
Consider the postage stamp. It says nothing regarding the difficulty of the task assigned to it, but by dint of close application it usually gets there; also it delivers the goods.
Again, if one isn't enough to carry the thing through, two or more by working harmoniously together see the thing to a finish.
No matter if the (mail) matter be weighty, it puts a good face (of Washington) on it and goes directly to the point. It gets licked and stamped upon, and men besmirch its fair features and oftentimes give it more to carry than the (postal) union allows. But, in spite of all this, it sticks unflinchingly to the matter in hand by virtue of the fact that it knows that it has good backing.
Its stick-to-it-ivity is worthy of emulation by you.—Judge's Library.

Water Colors.
Water color painting was gradually raised from the hard, dry style of the eighteenth century to its present brilliancy by the efforts of Nicholson, Copley, Sanley and others. The Water Color society's exhibitions began in 1805 and may be said to mark the real beginning of modern water color painting. The great master, if not creator, of the art was the celebrated Turner, of whom we read so much in the works of John Ruskin.—Exchange.

How Old They Were.
"I see you employ a number of old men."
"I do."
"How old are they?"
"Too old to be interested in canoeing or mandollins or race horses or girls or tennis. That makes them fine for work."—Washington Herald.

Rather.
The subjoined item appeared in a French newspaper:
"There was found in the river this morning the body of a soldier cut to pieces and sewed up in a sack. The circumstances seem to preclude any suspicion of suicide."
Customs and Habits.
"Our customs and habits are like the ruts in roads. The wheels of life settle into them, and we jog along through the mire because it is too much trouble to get out of them."
Why She Didn't.
New Employer—But why did you leave your last mistress? New Maid—Hilvens! Did you expect me t' bring her along wid me?—Cleveland Leader.

TRICKY ART DEALERS.

Acute Parisian Scheme For Booming a "New Master."

For the booming of a new artist an acute dealer is necessary. He catches his artist as young as possible, preferably as an exhibitor of crazy canvases at the autumn salon of the independents' exhibition, and commissions him to paint 100 pictures a year.

One by one, occasionally in twos and threes, at judicious intervals the dealer sends the pictures to the Hotel Drouot for sale by public auction. There he has confederates, who raise the price at each sale, and he buys them in himself.

After a few months the young artist's canvases have a certain market value, and the next step is taken to turn their painter into a modern master. The critics are attacked. One of them is asked to look at some daub, and when he cries out with horror the dealer says:

"What? You don't like it? Take it home with you as a favor to me, live with it six months and then!"

"What a masterpiece! The most modern thing in art I have seen for a long time!" he exclaims.

Doubt begins to invade the critic's mind, and when one or two more enthusiastic amateurs have visited him he is worked up to writing a column of panegyric on the new master. The amateurs are, of course, sent by the dealer.

One or two articles and the boom is in full swing. Wealthy and simple minded collectors, remembering how other painters have been decried in their early days and how their works later have commanded fancy prices, rush in.

The new master makes about 10 per cent of the profit and the dealer the other 90 per cent. The new master is at the mercy of the dealer. If he grumbles the dealer floods the auction rooms with a hundred or so of his masterpieces and orders his agents not to bid, the result being that the canvases sell at rubbish prices, and the boom is burst.—Gil Blas.

LONDON THEATERS.

They Charge From a Penny to Sixpence For a Bill of the Play.

At the London theaters when the young woman shows you to a seat she asks if you wish a program. If you do you pay sixpence in the orchestra or dress circle for a program handsomely printed on fine paper. The price ranges down through "thripence" and "tuppence" as the galleries ascend to a penny in the cockpit. The quality of paper and the general artistic merit of the program decline with the price, but exactly the same information is conveyed for a penny as for sixpence. The fastidious theater goer might prefer to pay a dime for a neat and simple program rather than to have a bulky bunch of advertisements gratis, as in New York, but these London programs, although not so thick as those of New York, are not devoid of advertisements. This gives the purchaser the feeling that he is being worked at both ends. A lady reminds me, however, that a program in a New York theater costs her 10 cents, as the smeary printing rubs off on her white gloves, the clearing of which costs a dime.

The quality of the performance at the better London theaters certainly averages no higher than that at similar theaters in New York. The music halls are the resort of the great middle class. These are great auditoriums with tier on tier of galleries, the seating capacity ranging perhaps from 3,000 to 5,000.—London Letter in New York Sun.

The Roman Tribunes.

The tribunes in ancient Rome represented the people in much the same way that the house of commons does in England and the house of representatives in this country. For a long time the patricians or aristocrats of Rome had everything their own way. But when the plebeians (or, as we would say, the "plain people") got their tribune the reckless tyranny of the patricians ceased. The tribune had great power. He could veto almost any act and nullify almost any law passed by the Romans. Liberty among the Romans dates from the time they first secured their tribunes.—New York American.

Friendship's Tributes.

Gladys—Did you see what the society column of the Daily Bread said about Nin Gillard the other morning? "She moves with ease and grace in our most exclusive circles." Maybelle—Yes, I read it. It's dead certain that the editor who wrote that had never seen her on roller skates.—Chicago Tribune.

Against His Convictions.

"Have some of this Welsh rabbit, Bjonson?" asked Bjonson as he stirred the golden concoction in the chafing dish.

"No, thanks, Bjonson," returned Bjonson, patting his stomach tenderly. "I am unalterably opposed to all corporation taxes."—Harper's Weekly.

Off Again.

"I met your husband in town. He was very much elated." "The villain! He told me he would never take another drop."—Houston Post.

He who would do a great thing well must first have done the simplest thing perfectly. Cady.

ONLY ONE OF HIS KIND.

The Reason the Judge Refused to Hang on to the Horse.

During the second Cleveland campaign Colonel John P. Irish, the golden tongued orator, and Judge Kinne of Waterloo, Ia., the man with lungs of brass, were stumping Iowa in behalf of the Democratic candidate.

They were driving in a buggy on the road to Sidney, a young city in the southwestern part of the state, when they came to a fork of the road where there was no sign board. Which turn to take was a question, as they had barely time to make the town anyway.

"There's a farmhouse over there a bit. You sit still, and I'll go over and ask questions," said Irish, and, climbing out, he started for the desired information. He got it and on his return saw the horse, evidently frightened at something, tearing down the road at runaway speed. Instead of trying to stop the horse, Judge Kinne dropped the reins, climbed over the seat and dropped off the back of the buggy into the road.

When Irish caught up to him the judge was busily dusting himself off after his roll in the roadway, not in the least disfigured by his acrobatic stunt.

"Why didn't I hang on to him?" rumbled Kinne in his deep subcellar voice. "I'll tell you why I didn't, my Christian friend. There's lots of horses in this world, but there is but one Judge Kinne."—Los Angeles Times.

TEMPTING TABBY.

Ruse That Won a Satisfactory Pose For the Camera.

The repairs on the house were completed and the shavings swept out; also a new coat of paint added dressiness to the outside. What next but a photograph of its new angles? That being considered, the question of moment was how to pose Katusha. Rolled into a ball every cat looks like every other cat; hence it was Katusha in action that must grace the foreground. Being abominably codded and fat, action was the last thing that appealed to Katusha. Coaxing and likewise prodding made no effect. She had been known upon occasions to be stirred by a morsel of delectable food. But fancy an aristocratic feline pictured in the attitude of tearing at a chicken bone! Impossible for Katusha.

There arose an emergency and with it the mistress, who disappeared into the house and brought forth a branch of Japanese paper cherry blossoms. A wave of them before Katusha's eyes was like making some hypnotic pass. She got up, stretched her body, while her nose just reached the pinkish flowers. That was it! They appealed to her aestheticism.

Snap went the camera. It was perfect.

"How"—began the man of the house.

"Just the alluring fragrance of a silver of chicken secreted in the bough," said herself as Katusha rolled back into a ball.—Kansas City Star.

Tame Eagles.

A man living near Tromso, in Norway, is a great lover of wild birds and has succeeded in taming three eagles. He took them on the mountain side while they were young and, according to the London Field, kept them a couple of years in captivity. As their craving for liberty, however, grew stronger and stronger he at last let them loose, but they have settled down in the neighborhood of his home, and when he ascends the height which has become their favorite resort with fish or a newly shot seagull they quickly discover him from afar and come majestically sailing through the air, settling down beside him. Their meal over, they willingly allow him to pet and stroke them before they again make for the rocky islets, but they will not allow a stranger to approach them.

The Thieving Arabs.

"Their whole lives are given up to the breeding of their flocks and herds and to systematic robbery," writes Douglas Caruthers of his experiences in northwestern Arabia. "The Bedouin lives in his tent for a week at a time or until the fit comes over him, and he calls his companions, and off they go on a foray to steal camels in order to increase their own herds. The Arab's great idea is to possess a rifle, for that means power. In order to do this he must steal camels. So, having stolen camels, he purchases a rifle. Then come more raids to take more camels, this time in order to buy a wife. Camels are their sole means of exchange."

Porosity.

Strictly speaking, there is nothing that is imporous. Glass has a very small degree of porosity.

The Air Brake.

To forget the inventions of the hour is an impossibility. They are before us at every turn, and many of them contain potentialities vast and much discussed. For that very reason it is well occasionally to contemplate some invention of the past which works unremittently and inconspicuously for the welfare of mankind. Consider the air brake. How many when they take a journey by rail ever take thought of the device which stands ready to insure safety from possible accidents? All are so used to sibilant noise below the cars that they never consider its portentousness. Yet by this application of the power of compressed air tens of thousands of lives have been preserved and railroad travel has been made more expeditious. All this is arrant truism; not a word of it but what has been said scores of times before. But we like to dwell upon the air brake as one of those typical inventions which are doing their work faithfully and humbly while recent creations get the glory and applause.—Collier's.
