POLICEMAN ATTACKED ON TRAIN

Gets Best of His Assailant Who Cries Out for Help.

Policeman G. A. Clark, of Farmville, was here Monday attending Superior court. On his way back home in the evening he occupied a seat on the train with Mr. J. N. Edwards. Just before reaching Farmville Policeman Clark received a sudden blow on the back of the head that knocked him forward and a man fell over him. Policeman Clark raised up with his assailant, and saw that he was Mr. J. M. Eason, a man with whom he had had some trouble in an arrest soon after he went on the Farmville police force.

As soon as he could get his hands clear, Policeman Clark pulled out his gun, and there was a tussle between them for the gun. When Eason saw that the officer had the best of the situation, and the latter commenced dealing him blows on the head, Eason called out for help and ran out the door of the car, jumping off the train as it was slowing up for the station.

There was considerable excitement among the passengers on the train while the trouble was going on.

FOREST FIRES STILL RAGING.

Rain and Snow Give the Fighters Some Hope.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 24.—New fatalities add to the horror of the forest fires in which the dead are now estimated at from 300 to 900, the first hopeful news in three days came out of the furnace like district today. Rain and snow have come to the aid of the fire fighters in Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. Not enough yet, however, to stop the fires, but it has given the troops and forest-keepers a new impetus. Two inches of snow fell in western Montana last night. Hundreds of people are still missing, some say as many as 10,000.

Attempted Suicide.

By Wire to The Reflector.

New York, Aug. 24.—An attempt was made to kill Guiseppe Diacornio with a bomb this morning. He and his 12 year old daughter were hurled from their beds and their store was wrecked. The explosion caused a panic among 150 occupants of the tenement and attracted so great a crowd that police reserves had to be called out.

New President of Monon.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Fairfax Harrison, who was elected president of Monon Railroad to succeed the late Ira G. Rawn, assumed his duties here today. He announced that he would relinquish his former position as vice president of the Southern Railway and make Chicago his permanent headquarters.

Mayor Gaynor Improving.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Hoboken, N. J., Aug. 24.—Robert Adamson, secretary of Mayor Gaynor, announced today that the mayor had so far improved that he would be taken out for a ride soon. Physicians say the mayor will be able to leave the hospital next week. One of the first things the mayor said this morning was that he would like to go to ride.

White Bribery Case.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Charles A. White was again subjected to a merciless grilling in the Brown bribery trial. Attorney Forest, for the defense, attempted to show that which had been promised immunity but White was evasive and refused to be pinned down to flat yes or no, as to whether he expected to be punished for his self confessed crime of taking a bribe.

Smith Wins Georgia.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 24.—Hoke Smith's majority over Governor Brown in the Democratic convention will be 25. His popular majority is estimated this morning at about 25,000.

Former Florida Senator Dead.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Former Senator William Call, of Florida, died here today. He was stricken with apoplexy Saturday. He served from 1879 to 1897.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS.

Gathered From Our Exchanges Today of Events Just Happened.

Raleigh, Aug. 23.—It is announced that Wednesday of the fair week is to be "Good Roads day," and that the entries of road building machinery are to be by far the most extensive that has ever been seen not only in North Carolina, but anywhere in this section of the country. Secretary Joseph E. Pogue says this will be the red letter day of the fair and that the exhibition of road building and conserving machinery will be an object-lesson well worth the while of traveling from every quarter to see. It's educational features will be of surprising importance in the campaign for good roads that has been on in this state for several years.

Mr. L. F. Lucas, who has a crop of thirty-five acres of cotton up Nash Road told a Times man today that with favorable weather from now on, he expected to make fifty bales of cotton on the thirty-five acres.—Wilson Times.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Master John Wright, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. M. J. Wright, of this city, met his death by drowning in Pamlico river this morning. It seems that the little fellow was playing on the Atlantic Coast Line docks, which are about ten or twelve feet above the water line, and in some unaccountable way he lost his balance and fell overboard.

Rocky Mount, Aug. 23.—In a fit of despondency due to bad news from home, so friends were told, Mr. John Beach, a nineteen-year-old young man and employe of the Record, last night attempted his own destruction by swallowing two ounces of iodine, claiming that he wanted it for an injured foot. The young man tried to purchase laudanum from another drug store, but not having a prescription there was not made.

WINTERVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

Items of Interest From our Hustling Neighbor, About Its People.

AYDEN CORRESPONDENCE.

Newsy Items About the Town and its People—Progressive Community.

Ayden, N. C., Aug. 24, 1910. Mr. Matt Slaughter, of Kinston, was here Saturday.

Mr. W. E. Hook, of Fremont, spent Monday in our town.

Miss Pattie Sutton, of Winterville, is visiting in town this week.

Mr. J. R. Smith left Monday for Norfolk, Baltimore and New York, to buy fall goods.

There was no service at the Christian church Sunday. Rev. Mr. Morton was in a meeting at Edwards.

The family of Mr. C. L. Parker arrived Monday. They will keep house on Lee street. Mr. Parker has a position with the Ayden Lumber Co.

The primary teachers of the Christian Sunday school assisted by other ladies, gave their classes a picnic at Spring Branch Tuesday. The children enjoyed it wonderfully, amusing games were played and at noon the dinner was spread. The day will be long remembered.

Mr. Jesse Braxton, of Reedy Branch has purchased the large house and lot from Mr. John O. Cox, and will make some improvements and run a dormitory for girls for the benefit of the Seminary. If we only had more men with the ginger in them that Mr. Braxton has, we would soon see a nice two-story dormitory on the school grounds. But we have learned to "labor and wait."

Miss Lillian Munn entertained her L. T. Society of little folks Monday evening from 5 until 7 o'clock, on the Seminary campus. Refreshments were served. Napoleon held no dearer place in the hearts of his soldiers, than Miss Munn holds in the hearts of her school.

Rev. J. R. McClasky left Thursday evening to hold a meeting in Selma.

Mr. Henry Stokes tells us he is going to return to his farm after January.

At The Christian Church.

Rev. Chas. E. Lee of Washington, will preach in the Christian church Thursday night, at 8:15 o'clock. Every member of the church is requested to be present. A business meeting will be held immediately after the service. The public is invited to attend.

WHAT IS TORRENS LAND SYSTEM

Mayor Barwick, of Ayden, Asked for An Explanation.

Editor Reflector: Having been informed by our brother Democrat—His Honor, the mayor of Ayden, that the tenth day of September is very near and that we had better be prepared now and the dawn of that great day of our choice, consider several facts and figures: namely the "Pioneer Leader" of the Torrens Land System for the Senate; I beg leave of our most esteemed brother of authority to ask him a few questions, not only for my personal benefit, but also that we Democratic voters of Pitt county, who have been so ardently appealed to, and not so well informed, might be better informed so that we can vote more intelligently upon such a momentous issue.

Is the fact that we "know that most any bill for the betterment of the doctor, lawyer or merchant's business could be passed in any legislature;" a fact that our trusted legislators do not equally as well guard the interest of their main support, the farmer? And again do the above facts prove to us that the Torrens Land System of Massachusetts, where there are many people and little land, applies to North Carolina, where there is much land and few people?

We are asked if we have not had a thought, and I think the word used, that is if it means for us to perfect socialism to the extent of equalizing the small land holder with the rich financiers. In lieu of the new and the ten and the twenties and the "under dog," I would like for you to insert the cost of surveys, land courts, etc., and see if it would make us the "big dogs."

I am not questioning the able leadership of Hon. R. R. Cotten, for he has made Pitt county an excellent representative, but if he is elected on this issue, Mr. Barwick, and devotes his time trying to make into a law a system that I dare say no man in Pitt county has been able to understand; I am afraid Mr. Cotten would have but little time for much else. Now, Mr. Barwick, my last and main request of you, is that in tomorrow's Reflector you will give us an enlightening and operative description of The Torrens Land System.

Yours very truly
D. M. CLARK.

WONDERFUL CLOCK.

It Shows Phases of the Moon, Position of the Sun, Etc.

Daniel T. Davis, who lives about five miles from Barnard, Madison county, is the inventor of perhaps one of the most remarkable clocks that has ever been invented since the original clock was invented. Robert R. Reynolds, the Democratic candidate for Solicitor of the fifth judicial district, who has just returned from a trip to Madison county, was at Mr. Davis' house this week and was shown the model by the inventor.

Besides being equipped with the ordinary hands for making the seconds, minutes and hours, and also having an arrangement for showing the day month and year, this ingenious time-piece has one face which indicates the exact position of the sun during each hour of the day, while a similar face indicates the position and phase of the moon when it is visible. This device has required considerable mechanical genius. Upon the clock face at the exact time of the rising of the sun each morning, there appears a miniature sun and this rises as the sun and disappears at the exact time of sunset. The device showing the position of the moon is equally ingenious, if not more ingenious than that of the sun for it shows quarters and full moon. The application for patent is now pending at the patent office at Washington.

Mr. Davis is 65 years of age and has a wonderful inventive mind. He has been working on his model for some while. His skill is even more remarkable from the fact that he was not enabled to have even a common school education, being able to neither read nor write. He has a comfortable home in Madison county.—Asheville Gazette-News.

Delegates to Waterways Convention.

TRIP AROUND THE WORLD.

Voyagers Find Interest Visiting the Different Countries.

The "Trip Around the World," given under the auspices of the King's Daughters Tuesday night, proved an occasion of much interest. A handsome booth was placed on the court house square where those who wished to take the voyage assembled to procure tickets. The trip was made in carriages, and the price of a ticket included refreshments at each station.

The first country was Africa, which was on the lawn of Mrs. C. S. Forbes. Here several children were blacked and dressed as picaninies and gave the travelers songs and dances. Mrs. J. B. Cherry also rendered some "coon" songs. The decorations were red and watermelons were served.

The next stop was Greece on the lawn of Mrs. C. T. Munford, where Mr. Edward Hearne in Grecian costume welcomed the visitors. The decorations here were white, and punch and sandwiches were served.

The journey was next to Japan on the lawn of Mrs. J. J. Laughinghouse, where several young ladies were in Japanese costume. The decorations were red and white, with numerous sprays of purple and blue flowers.

Then the voyagers turned their faces back to America on the lawn of Mrs. J. G. Moyer. "Old Glory" was prominent here, with liberty bells mingled amid the national colors.

A wigwag of Indians afforded much interest. George Washington was impersonated by Mr. Tom Dupree and Martha, Washington by Miss Lillian Burch. Mr. Burney Warren "Uncle Sam," and Miss Ethel Skinner "Columbia." Punch was served.

The occasion in addition to being a pleasant one proved quite successful to the cause for which it was given.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1910.

And Mr. T. Roosevelt made Mr. W. Taft sit up and take notice.

It is said Heinz, the pickle man, is going to wed an actress. Must be looking for more pickle.

Just watch them cry for Roosevelt when he gets through with that Western speech making tour.

You could not expect the breach to stand open long between Teddy and Bill. An election is coming on.

Maybe a self government plank is just a plank that governs itself, without anybody knowing what it is going to do next.

One reason for their getting together is that Mr. Taft knows that Mr. Roosevelt could get it himself if he would just say he wants it.

They are feeling so sure of Cannon's retirement as speaker that they are already looking about for his successor. The old man is going to give them a fight before he turns loose his job.

One might be led to think from the action of the New York Republican committee that a vice president is a bigger man than an ex-president. But the latter is only a has been, and maybe that accounts for it.

The Democrats are keeping up their record for carrying the country before the votes are counted.—Greensboro News.

And the Republicans are keeping up their record of claiming everything which they never carry.

Some Republicans are saying that the "local self government" plank in the recent Republican platform applied to the prohibition question, while others say it had no reference to that at all. Looks like it was put there to mean anything handy.

A Philadelphia girl stole a march on the old man by dressing in her father's clothes and eloping. Her sweetheart did not object to her wearing the trousers for the time being, if she just won't develop a notion to keep it up.

Virginia's Gift to France.
In the presentation to the French Republic a bronze replica of Houdon's statue of Washington the State of Virginia has given fitting expression to its old attachment for the nation which sent Lafayette, Rochambeau, d'Estaing, de Grasse and Suffren to hear arms in the cause of American freedom. The original statue of Washington stands in the Capitol at Richmond. Virginia's gift has been placed in the chateau of Versailles, where it is surrounded by the figures of Washington's French companions-in-arms.

In 1874 Jefferson was sent to Paris as Minister Plenipotentiary, "not to replace but to succeed Franklin," as he said to Vergennes, the King's Minister. He was commissioned by the legislature of Virginia to select a French artist to make a statue of Washington. His choice fell on Jean Antoine Houdon, the most distinguished sculptor of France in the latter half of the eighteenth century, who was then at the height of his fame.

Houdon came to America in 1775 in company with Franklin whose bust he had already made in Paris. He remained two weeks at Mount Vernon to make a study of Washington and took a plaster cast of his face, of which the original is still preserved. The bust was made by Houdon during his stay in this country, but the statue was not completed until after his return to France. It represents Washington in military costume as the plain, dignified, soldier, such as he was at the close of the war of the Revolution, rather than of that heroic mould and majestic manner affected by later sculptors. Although an unimpeachable likeness, as it stands on its pedestal in Richmond it does not give that impression of great size to which Washington's contemporaries among them Lafayette, have left their testimony. As a matter of fact, he stood six feet three inches and weighed 220 pounds.

Charles Wilson Peale, Trumbull and Stuart all painted portraits of Washington from life at various stages of his career, but Houdon's is the only statue made of him during his life, and it was made years earlier than he sat for his best known portraits by Trumbull and Stuart.—New York World.

Power to Arbitrate.

There is a discussion down at Raleigh growing out of a collision in which some were killed and others injured, which if pursued might result in correcting an evil. It seems that soon after the accident the agents of some lawyers went to some of the aggrieved parties and solicited suits against the railroad companies. This brought out many protests and among them was a general protest from the pastors of colored churches advising those who were injured or whose relatives were killed to deal directly with the railroad companies in the settlement of any damages.

The railroads have numerous lawyers in every state one or two in almost every town of any size and the retaining of these lawyers has been made necessary on account of the numerous suits against the railroads. At one time the number of damage suits against the railroads was alarming, many of which had been encouraged by anti-railroad lawyers. The veil has grown until an enormous expense account has to be maintained by the railroads as retainers and at the same time civil dockets of our courts are crowded. Any movement that tends to arbitrate in such matters should receive encouragement from every quarter and the action of the colored ministers at Raleigh is to be commended.

The Corporation Commission should be given the power of a court of arbitration with jurisdiction for final settlement, which would save both the railroad companies and the tax payers thousands of dollars annually.—High Point Enterprise

The Farm.

Why do men instinctively love the farm? Business men of city traits of long standing, whose love for the city might be thought to be well founded glow at the mention of the life producing farm, whose fertile fields in the South especially, are yet unexplored. Waving fields of grain and orchards and vineyards aglow with fruits are calling for someone to come and get them. The South is the "Garden of Eden," from which men have lately fallen from the abundant harvest season. "Till the soil," Nature says "and your reward will be many fold." The men who own the land (?) should see that the earth yields her increase, a million acres of untilled, unproductive land is of no use in feeding a nation, and those who own or control the land will have to give an account of their stewardship. Better get to turning up the soil in the South and see what is buried beneath its fertile folds. We should make an effort to induce staid land working immigration to Eastern Carolina. If we want to build up a substantial prosperity for this community Get busy!

Congressman Longworth gave out a very sensible interview yesterday in which he repudiated Cannon. The last sentence, however, spoiled the effect it would have had when he said that what he did say did not emanate from any other source; intimating that his father-in-law did not tell him to say it. Nicholas Longworth is quite an able young man and won his spurs before he got into the Roosevelt family. He is at a little disadvantage in having such a prominent father-in-law, but it is not necessary for him to emphasize this disadvantage.—High Point Enterprise.

Brief Rules For the Guidance of Unfavored Suitors.

WHAT TO DO WHEN REJECTED

Always Try to Parry the Blow With a Ready Reply, Because Staring in Reproachful Silence Gives the Lady a Chance to Change Her Mind.

Incredible as it may seem, proposals of marriage are sometimes refused, usually because the lady thinks she knows better.

To comport one's self fittingly when rejected is no easy matter. The young beginner is advised to give some thought to his next move in the event of his proposal being declined. To stand staring in reproachful silence displays a lack of savoir faire and incidentally gives the lady a chance to change her mind.

The really nice young man when rejected inclines to gloom. The average young man takes up an attitude of sprightliness. To display relief when rejected may not seem in the best taste, but if a girl has refused you that is sufficient evidence that she has no taste at all.

Let us consider the method of the really nice young man. He hints at a broken heart—a picturesque but improbable happening. He asks if there is no hope. Always he speaks in "low tone." There is the authority of the best fiction for this. Apparently he never shouts his query from the doorsteps as he is departing. He mentions suicide in a noncommittal way and eventually takes his leave "with one last fond, lingering look at her." One can only hope he does not spoil the dramatic value of his exit by tripping over the doormat.

So much for the really nice young man. The average young man has a variety of methods for keeping his end up in the event of being rejected. He imparts an air of levity to the proceedings which must be distinctly irritating when one is expecting time honored references to fractured hearts and blighted hopes.

Copying the average young man, you may therefore when rejected laugh heartily and then remark:

"Well, but, joking apart, isn't the weather beautiful?"

There is something about this formula which prevents the waste of any emotion except annoyance.

Another gambit in taking refusals is to smile with satisfaction and say the simple words:

"I win!"

While the damsel is puzzling out what the words may mean you can effect your escape.

In the event of an emphatic refusal you may instead ask smilingly:

"How did you guess I was jollying?"

An effective way to prevent a lady promising to be a sister to you is to get there first by promising to be a son to her, and you can follow it up by saying:

"Oh, well, I must be getting along. I've got another call to make."

There is a subtlety about this remark which enables you to take your leave quite easily.

Always try, however, to be ready to say something at once. If after her "No" you think you have been silent overlong, assume a puzzled look and say:

"Let me see--what were we talking about?"

Should the girl give reasons for refusing you remark:

"Yes, that's just what Jane Jones said last month when I proposed to her."

It may happen that the lady answers your proposal thus:

"No, Harold, I can never be yours. I am affianced to another."

The best thing to do to avoid exposure of your disappointment is to exclaim:

"Yes, I knew that when I asked you."

Another formula when rejected lies in taking a list of names from your pocket, consulting it and remarking:

"You're Miss Susan Smith, aren't you?"

Then you put a tick against the name, sigh relievedly and take your leave.

If you have come primed to say "Thank you, Harriet; you have made me the happiest man in all the world," in answer to her acceptance there is no reason why you shouldn't say it in reply to her refusal.

In the event of receiving a refusal by letter pretend that you did not get it. This has a disquieting effect. Or if you want to get even wait till she questions you about it and then say with every symptom of glad relief:

"Oh, that letter was from you, was it? I couldn't quite make out the signature, and I thought it was from some one else on a similar matter."

A sportive remark is permissible sometimes when one is refused with lofty contempt:

"That's all right, old girl. Truth is I only asked you because I was feeling a bit sorry for you."

The main point is to be ready witted enough to keep your hat and stick in your hand. Do not leave the house whistling, though. It prevents you from exhibiting an amused smile when she peeps at you from behind the front room curtains.

With luck and practice you will be able to take a refusal of marriage quite well. Don't propose merely for practice, however. Your luck may not hold out.—London Opinion.

A CARD TRICK.

The Sequel to a Challenge to a Duel in a Berlin Cafe.

"Sir?"
"Well?"
"You have been staring at me!"
"Not that I am aware of."

The young gentleman, evidently a student, was about to retire with an apology when the person addressed—a banker—thought proper to add:

"You are altogether too insignificant an individual for me to stare at you."

"Sir, that is an insult! I shall challenge you. Here is my card."

After a moment's hesitation the banker also gave up his card. The cards were inscribed as follows:

"Count Botho von Felsing, student of philosophy."
"Ernst Grunschuld, banker."

The scene occurred in a Berlin cafe, and the count at once took his departure. After his excitement had somewhat abated and he had had time to collect his thoughts, Herr Grunschuld also left. Fearing lest his better half might suspect something from his looks, he went straight to his place of business and began to write letters to his friends containing the customary last farewell greetings in case he should fall a prey to a "vindictive and quarrelsome opponent." It was 7 p. m., and the cashier called, as usual, to present his report. Grunschuld ran his eye listlessly over the balance sheet. Suddenly he gave a start.

"A thousand marks drawn for private use! What does this mean? Come; this is above a joke!"

"Have you forgotten, Herr Grunschuld? You were playing at the cafe, you know, and lost a thousand marks, and as you hadn't that amount on you Count von Felsing was good enough to call for the money on his way. He showed me your visiting card in proof of his statement."

Grunschuld hardly knew whether he should go into a fit with vexation or whether he should shout for joy. He had been done out of a thousand marks, but at the same time it was "off" with the duel. When he afterward learned that the imaginary student was a professional swindler he was thankful to have got off so cheaply.

FLAG ETIQUETTE.

Displaying the National Ensign at Half Mast.

There have been many mistakes made about the etiquette of the flag. When President William McKinley was assassinated thousands of loyal Americans raised flags at half mast over their places of business and let them fly by night and by day until they wore out. They undoubtedly thought they were showing respect to McKinley's memory. But they were not showing proper respect to the flag.

The United States government displayed at that time its flags at half mast from sunrise to sunset from the president's death until his burial. The government regulations provide that on the death of a president in office its flag shall be displayed at half mast only one day.

In memory of the 350,000 Union soldiers who lost their lives during the civil war May 30, Memorial day, each year the United States displays its flag at half mast at all army posts, stations and national cemeteries from sunrise to midday. Immediately before noon a dirge is played by the band or field music, and the national salute of twenty-one guns is fired. At the conclusion of this memorial tribute at noon the flag is hoisted to the top of the staff and remains there until sunset.

The idea is that the national ensign is too sacred an object to be long in mourning for any man or number of men, no matter how exalted their rank.

The flag reversed, with the union down, indicates distress. The flag on anything but a fort actually besieged should never be displayed between sunset and sunrise.

When the flag is to be displayed at half mast it is lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is hoisted to the top before it is finally lowered.—Washington Post.

She Sent It Back.

There has always been a lot of give and take in American women's social adventures in England. But American women have spirit, and if they have taken a good deal they have given back still more.

An Englishwoman called on an American countess in Belgravia.

"Oh, I thought you were out. That's why I called," the Englishwoman said in her sweet, clear, insolent English voice.

"Well, do you know, I thought I was out, too," the American replied. "My stupid man must have mistaken you for some one else."

The Kickless Dog.

"I wonder why so many people insist on keeping dogs that are no good?"

"Well," replied the proprietor of the village hotel, "I always keep a few dogs because it's a comfort to see 'em take their meals regular without kicking, even if they don't pay any board."

A Great Secret.

Old Bachelor Uncle—Well, Charlie, what do you want now?

Charlie—Oh, I want to be rich.

"Rich! Why so?"

"Because I want to be petted. Ma says you are an old fool, but must be petted because you are rich. But it's a great secret, and I mustn't tell it."

Every time a man comes across a lot of old clothes in the house he searches the pockets, though he never finds anything.

CANNIBALISM.

It is the Religion of the Savages Who Practice It.

In the course of his thirteen years as a missionary in the Fiji Islands the Rev. Joseph Nettleton learned a good deal about cannibalism and even saw some of his colleagues killed and eaten. "It is a common mistake to think that these men eat human beings because of hunger," he said. "Cannibalism is their religion. The ovens in the temple where they cook their human sacrifices are never used for any other purpose. I once witnessed the capture of a white victim. He was surrounded, bound hand and foot and dragged along to the temple, where he was dashed with terrific force against the altar. Then he was pushed inside the compound, while the chiefs arranged as to the division of the body and began a war dance. Their hideous war dance—the 'derina' they call it—makes one's flesh creep. An American sea captain who once visited the islands said he was not so much afraid of being eaten as he was of this dance. It took all the courage out of him."

Mr. Nettleton had to use extreme tact to avoid arousing suspicion among the savages. "My colleague, Mr. Baker, was murdered, cooked and eaten with seven others while exploring," he said. "The cannibals thought he was spying. I never carried a revolver. Why? Because the cannibals say at once, 'He doesn't carry that to kill himself; therefore he means to kill us,' and they act accordingly."

The Rev. J. Calvert, another of Mr. Nettleton's colleagues, had a narrow escape. He was surrounded by cannibals, and it was decided that he should be killed. By a miracle his life was spared. "My friend pleaded till he was hoarse," said Mr. Nettleton, "but it was of no avail. Suddenly one of the cannibals remembered that Mr. Calvert had doctored him when he was ill. That saved my friend's life."—Chicago News.

DEMONIAC PLEASANTRY.

Humorous Diversion of the Roman Emperor Commodus.

Professional barbers are said to have been introduced into Rome by Menas from Sicily, of which island he was praetor in the days of Cicero. Under the empire their shops in some instances became fashionable resorts at which every luxury of the toilet was enjoyed and the gossip and news of Rome and the empire were discussed. The means, luxury and weaknesses of personal adornment therein carried to excess are amply immortalized in the pages of Terence, Plautus, Horace, Juvenal and Martial.

Other barber shops were more retired, as we learn from the annals of the Emperor Commodus, who, having wearied at times of the wholesale tragedies of the Coliseum, wherein armies engaged in murder at his savage behest, and being desirous of a little humorous diversion, used, like the caliph of Bagdad in the "Arabian Nights," to disguise himself and sally forth, accompanied by two or more of his favorites, and, having hired a barber shop suitable for his purpose, would place one of his men at the door to solicit custom.

Having secured a customer, the emperor barber would politely affix the towel and apply the lather, all the time keeping up a running fire of the latest jests and little pleasantries until the customer and himself were almost overcome with laughter. Then the keen edged razor would slip, and among regrets and proffers of assistance the noseless victim would be assisted to the rear of the shop, where between threats and bribes he was kept from making a riot until one or two more victims were added to the number and Commodus, weary of his diabolical pleasantries, was ready to return to the palace or to the arena.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

The Mails.

When does a crime become punishable? When it is committed by mail. The mail is the most sacred thing known to the United States government except itself. Nothing but treason surpasses in egregiousness the misuse of the mails. So far as the federal authorities are concerned, one may steal, gamble and murder so long as it is not done by correspondence. Do ye whatsoever ye will one unto another, but do not write it down and stick a stamp on the upper right hand corner, for if ye do then in truth will all the demons of justice be unloosed upon your trail.—Life.

Startled the Natives.

Herrera, the Spanish historian, says that Pizarro when he landed in South America owed his life and those of his companions to the fact that one of the party fell off his horse by accident. The natives had succeeded in cutting off the retreat of the Spaniards to their ships, when one of the riders was, thrown. The Indians were so astonished at the dissolution of partner ship that they took flight at once. They had supposed horse and man to be one animal.

An Inference.

Rose—Why don't you pop in and have a game of bridge sometimes? Violet—Oh, well, you see—I've become a bit of a recluse lately. Rose—How much do you owe?—Illustrated Bits.

JUGGLED BY BRUIN

A Boy's Remarkable Adventure With a Pet Bear.

WHIRLED ABOUT LIKE A TOY.

After the Unique Performance Was Over Seventy-six Stitches in the Lad's Scalp and Rolls of Surgical Plaster on His Shins Saved His Life.

Ben was a pet black bear four years old and as good natured and friendly as if his ancestors had never had bad reputations. There is only one occasion on record, says his owner, Mr. William H. Wright, in his biography of Ben in "Black Bear," when even to appearances old Ben misbehave himself.

The circumstances being examined, however, the animal came off with his good name virtually untouched. Ben had been left in his shed as usual. Later in the day a crowd was seen about the door, I hurried home to find most of the women of the neighborhood wringing their hands and calling down all kinds of trouble on my head.

At first I could make neither head nor tail of the clamor, but finally gathered that that bloodthirsty, savage and unspeakable bear of mine had killed a boy, and upon asking to see the victim I was told that the remains had been taken to a neighbor's house and a doctor summoned.

This was pretty serious news; but, knowing that whatever had happened Ben had not taken the offensive without ample cause, I unchained him and put him in the cellar of my house, well out of harm's way, before looking further into the matter. Then I went over to the temporary morgue and found the corpse—it was one of the Urlin boys—sitting up on the kitchen floor, holding a sort of impromptu reception and, with the exception of Ben, the least excited of any one concerned.

I could not help admiring the youngster's pluck, for he was an awful sight. From his feet to his knees his legs were lacerated, and his clothing was torn to shreds, and the top of his head—redder by far than ever, nature had intended—was covered with blood. As soon as I laid eyes on him I guessed what had happened.

It developed that the two Urlin boys had broken open the door of the shed and gone in to wrestle with the bear. Ben was willing, as he always was, and a lively match was soon on, whereupon, seeing that the bear did not harm the two already in the room, another of the boys joined in the scuffle. Then one of them got on the bear's back.

This was a new one on Ben, but he took kindly to the idea and was soon galloping round the little room with his rider. Then another boy climbed on, and Ben carried the two of them at the same mad pace. Then the third boy got aboard, and round they all went, much to the delight of themselves and their cheering audience in the doorway.

But even Ben's muscles of steel had their limit of endurance, and after a few circles of the room with the three riders he suddenly stopped and rolled over on his back.

And now an amazing thing happened. Of the three boys suddenly tumbled helter skelter from their seats one happened to fall upon the upturned jaws of the bear, and Ben, who for years had juggled rope balls, cord sticks and miniature logs, instantly undertook to give an exhibition with his new implement.

Gathering the badly frightened boy into position, the bear set him whirling. His clothing from his shoe tops to his knees was soon ripped to shreds and his legs torn and bleeding. His scalp was lacerated by the sharp claws until the blood came. His cries rose to shrieks and sank again to moans. But the bear, unmoved, kept up the perfect rhythm of his strokes.

Finally the terrified lookers-on in the doorway, realizing that something had to be done if their leader was not to be twirled to death before their eyes, tore a rail from the fence and with a few pokes in Ben's side induced him to drop the boy, who was then dragged out apparently more dead than alive.

The doctor took seventy-six stitches in the lad's scalp and put rolls of surgical plaster on his shins. So square and true had Ben juggled him that not a scratch was found on his face or on any part of his body between the top of his head and his knees. He eventually came out of the hospital no worse for his ordeal, but I doubt if he ever again undertook to ride a bear.

How She Won Out.

"Oh, George," she cried in perplexed tones, "I'm afraid we must part."

"Part! Why must we part, dear?" he echoed.

"On account of father," she replied. "He fears we would be mismatched. We are so very different, he says."

"In what way are we so different?" he asked, with a show of dignity.

"Well, father says I am of such a ready and willing disposition, while you seem so—so backward, so reluctant and hesitating, so—so loath to come to the—the point, don't you know?"

"He does, does he?" blustered George, bracing up, and the very next afternoon she was showing her girl friends how stunning it looked on the third finger of her left hand.—Boston Herald.

Past Grand Worthy President Krauss, of Wilmington, Delaware, is one of the indicted men. They are accused of profiting in the sales of a receipt punching machine sold to local orders.

A Tribute of Love. The death angel hovered o'er the home of Mrs. George Baker and removed from earth to heaven the spirit of little George, her only darling, the idol of her heart. In him her joys and hopes were centered. Now all is so dark and lonely for the grief stricken bereft mother. He was such a lovable, sweet babe none knew but to love.

Oh! how we miss the sweet smile, the wave of the dear little hand, and we can only say, dear mother look beyond this vale of tears and think of him "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," waiting with other loved ones for the coming of mother.

One Who Loved Him. No prayer meeting will be held at the Christian church tonight.

Interest in Ancient Days. As a rule, the ancients frowned upon the idea of interest. They called it usury, and, except in the case of wardships and trusts, when the law insisted upon money being usefully invested they looked upon the man who lived by investments as a bad character and his trade as a disreputable one. Even Aristotle, a most advanced thinker in many respects, talked most energetically against money, calling it a "barren thing, which could produce nothing without violating nature." It was not until the crusades that the money lender had any standing or respectability in Europe.—New York American.
