EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA A GARDEN SPOT.

ON MIDDLE ATLANTIC SEABOARD
—PITT CO. ONE OF RICHEST

Most Fertile in This Favored Section, Possessing at Once a Combination of Soil and Climatic Conditions, That Make For the Very Best Development of an Agricultural People.

(Written by Mr. O. L. Joyner, for Messrs. Collins and Vanderburg, of Norfolk, Va., representatives of a North Western Immigration Bureau.

The soil and climate of Eastern North Carolina are about as near ideal as can be found in a temperate zone. This is one of the oldest sections in the United States, and many of the plantations of Eastern North Carolina have woven around and about them an historic association that goes well back into the Colonial period, yet there are many of these old plantations that have, in the last few years, been improved by crop rotation, and under new management are producing today larger crops of the same products than is produced per acre on much of the high priced land of the northwest, and there is no section of country in these United States where a greater variety of products of the soil can be made than right here in Eastern North Carolina.

Many of the abandoned farms of this section instead of becoming poorer would, under skillful management, increase in productivity and value but the old system of farming in this section embraced the cultivation of large areas on an extensive instead of an intensive system, the result of which was, in many instances, the deterioration of the soil, and the loss of its productivity. Where these farms have fallen into the hands of men who have employed the intensive system, they have rapidly increased in fertility, and although land in this section can be purchased at a much lower price than the same character of land in the newer states, yet, from every standpoint, it is much more valuable.

This section can produce almost every crop that is grown in the Temperate Zone. Corn, cotton, tobacco, peanuts, fruits and all kinds of vegetables for home consumption and for northern markets reach their highest development here. The principal money crops are tobacco, cotton and peanuts. Some estimate of the cost of producing these crops, with their comparative market value may be of interest.

The actual cost of cultivating, fertilizing, harvesting and selling a crop of tobacco depends largely upon conditions and the circumstances of the farmer who makes it. To hire everything done, at the present price of labor the cost of cultivating, harvesting and delivering an average crop of tobacco on the market in an average year will range from $65.00 to $80.00 per acre. The average yield per acre in an average year is from 700 to 1100 pounds. The average price at which tobacco has sold for the last few years on the Greenville market has been from 9½ to 11½ cents. There are exceptional cases, where some farmers produce as much as 1500 pounds of tobacco to an acre, and these farmers secure higher prices because of the superior quality of their tobacco, and consequently, this class of farmers have made a great deal of money out of the tobacco crop. The purpose of this article is to give to those not familiar with the cultivation of our money crops a general idea and therefore averages are mentioned in general terms.

Cotton costs something less to cultivate and market than tobacco, the principal difference being in the cost of the fertilizing material. The cotton crop does not require anything like the attention that tobacco does, although it is a crop that would pay very well for the extra attention given it. The average yield of cotton in this section, I judge, is from 300 to 400 pounds of lint in an average year. The cost of growing and marketing a crop of cotton will run from $35.00 to $50.00 per acre, where the labor all has to be hired.

Peanuts can be cultivated cheaper than either of the other two crops, requiring less high grade commercial fertilizer, and less cultivation, although, like cotton, peanuts respond profitably to good cultivation.

The swamp lands of Eastern North Carolina will yield anywhere from five to fifteen barrels of corn to the acre, which means from 25 to 75 bushels. In some places in Beaufort and Hyde counties, the yield of corn

's even more than this. The uplands of this section produce an average of from three to five barrels of corn to the acre without fertilizer, but with careful attention and the judicious use of the right kind of fertilizer, the corn yield in the uplands can be materially and profitably increased.

Owing to the close proximity of the Gulf Stream to the Carolina coast and the range of Appalachian Mountains on the west, which protect this section from blizzards and fierce winds of the Northwest, the winter climate of Eastern North Carolina is about all that can be desired. There are but a few days during the winter, from December until March, when almost at any time farm work cannot be carried on in comfort. We have some hot days in this section during the summer, but generally speaking, they are of short duration, and for the full development of the crops are necessary. However, the climate of this section, as a whole, both summer and winter, can hardly be improved upon in any section of our country.

There is no healthier section in the state than Eastern North Carolina.
The great "Bugaboo"—Malaria, which all the people fear, who live in other sections, is more a scarecrow than anything else. Some of the healthiest and stoniest specimens of humanity can be found here, while the general health of the section compares favorably with even the mountain section of the state. Under an act of the last legislature the drainage of the swamps of Eastern North Carolina will reclaim millions of acres of very rich land, and at the same time, remove to a large extent the cause of malaria.

PLEDGE YOUR CANDIDATES

They Should be Questioned on The Torrens Land System

We are glad to see the South Carolina Farmers' Union has joined the North Carolina Farmers' Union in advocacy of the Torrens System of registering land titles. Southern farmers by the thousands are getting thoroughly aroused to the importance of this useful reform, and every candidate for the next General Assembly in each State should be pledged to the support of the principle. And for the benefit of our readers who do not fully understand it, a brief explanation of the whole matter may not be out of order.

As it is now every time a piece of property is transferred, some lawyer must examine into the legality of the title. Old records—sometimes for hundreds of years—must be searched at great labor and expense; and the next time the property is sold, and the next, and the next, must be done again, and other big lawyers' fees paid.

Now, the Torrens System proposes that instead of this unceremonial investigation of the same thing, this perpetual marching backward and forward over the same ground with no purpose save that of supporting the lawyers, who might better serve their fellows in some other way—instead of all this, we say, the Torrens System proposes that that State shall examine the title once for all, guarantee it and register it—and henceforth it may be transferred as easily as a share of stock in a corporation or a bond issued by State or municipality.

The original cost of getting a Torrens deed will be little, if any, more than the present cost of once investigating the title, and with the Torrens deed once secured, land titles may be transferred at from one-fourth to one-tenth the present expense and without immeasurably less worry and uncertainty.

At present, moreover, a deed is only a registered certificate of claim; the State does not guarantee your right to the property described, and even after the lawyers have pronounced the title sound, you can not be absolutely sure. A deed under Torrens System, on the other hand, is an absolute guarantee from the State of your right to the property mentioned.

A lawyer said to us the other day that he knew pieces of property several times transferred on which at least one-fourth the total value had been spent investigating the title—and the next time the property is sold, the same ground will probably be gone over again. Under the Torrens System, at a fraction of this cost, the owner would have a guaranteed title requiring no further investigation and his property as easily negotiable as a United States registered bond.

Easily negotiable, we say—and right here is one single advantage of the Torrens System that ought to insure its adoption, even if it had no other attractions. As things are now, land—which should be the finest of all securities—by reason of the uncertainty of titles and the cost of making inquiries is in no such favor with the banker and money-lender as its value justifies; the farmer, in other words, is at a great disadvantage in borrowing money as compared with the city business man. But with the Torrens System not even a registered Government bond would be as attractive to the bank as land would be—because the Torrens deed would be as much guaranteed by the Government as the bond itself, while Nature having made land far more indestructible than governments, would better guarantee the safety of the deed. This would not only make it easier for the land owner to borrow money, but it would also certainly increase the market value of all farm property.

In the face of these advantages, it is singular that the Torrens System has not already been adopted in every State in the Union—apparently singular at least, until we recall the fact that the large majority of our legislators are lawyers, and a large majority of these lawyers fatten on the abuses of the present system. In the nature of things they cannot be expected to bring about a reform until a strong, unmistakable demand comes up from the people themselves. Until such a demand does come, the doom of the Torrens System must be sealed whenever a lawyer-legislator whispers to his fellows in the language of Demetrius, the silversmith: "Sir, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth."

The demand must come from the

A PROGRESSIVE SECTION OF PITT COUNTY.

A VISIT THERE AFTER TWENTY-YEARS BY FORMER TEACHER.

His Eyes Opened to Wonderful Progress Made—Better Farming, Better Roads and Better Schools.

In 1887, twenty-three years ago this month, I took charge of a public school, at what was then called Calico Hill, which the people of that section permitted me to teach, and generously paid me thirty dollars per month. I boarded with the family of the late Mr. George Venters. The people of that section were very good and kind to me then, and since, in my business career, some of the best friends I have ever had are the people I came to know at that time. Although actually engaged in the tobacco business in Greenville since soon after that time, I have not visited that section since. For some time I have promised to go down there, and Monday evening I fulfilled that promise. It seems to me but a short time since I was there, but when I was met at Sheldermine by the grown and bright young man, son of Mr. H. C.
Venters, with whom as a boy I associated when I boarded at his father's,
I was forcibly reminded of the flight of years.

I spent the night at the home of Mr.
H. C. Venters, and next morning together we rode around the country.
Although it has been more than twenty years, I have never seen more positive evidence of thrift and progress than there is in that section. Much of the land thereabout that was then an almost unbroken wilderness of wood land has been cleared, and thrifty crops are growing. The little 14 x 16 school house in which I attempted to teach has been replaced by a modern school building that would do credit to any town. The post office at that time was Calico, and occupied a small space in the back room of Mr.
Venters' store, the only place of business there. Our townsman, ex-register of deeds, T. R. Moore, was in charge of the store, post office and business of Mr. Venters. The Calico post office served the people of that day in the entire country around, including all that vast, progressive section across Clay Road swamp, Stokes Town. The mail went down twice a week, and the people across Clay Root, only one mile distant direct line, had to drive ten miles around to get their mail. There was a plank walk way across the swamp, which was the only means of intercourse between the two sections. One night while I was living there, Wat Quinerly, Henry Venters and I undertook to cross the swamp to visit some young ladies at Mr. Ed. Stokes'. As we were about half way over, I missed my footing, and in falling landed in the bottom of a cypress stump.

It required the assistance of both my companions to get me out. Slightly disfigured, but undaunted, we continued our way, and spent a most pleasant evening with the ladies at Mr.
Stokes'.

Along the line of that foot-way across the swamp, the people have built one of the best roads in the county, and as we drove along this road, Mr. Venters remarked: "The people here favor good roads, and as proof, we have built them." The best roads I have seen in the county are in this section. No longer do people travel miles once a week to get mail —it is delivered to them daily by the rural carriers. No longer do they spend lonely evenings in the seclusion of their own firesides. As Mr. James Stokes remarked: "While a few years ago, it required two-and-a-half hours to drive with a horse, he can now walk in thirty minutes."

The progressive people of this section are coming together almost as one man on the question of draining Clay Root swamp and Swift Creek; they are talking it, and agitating the question. They have arranged for large gatherings and public speeches by those who have given the drainage question careful thought. They expect Congressman Small to speak for them in the near future. In a word, they are going about it in an intelligent way, in a way to produce results. They will succeed.

The drainage of the lands along these swamps will reclaim thousands of acres of as deep, fertile lands as can be found in the United States and the people do not intend to leave this vast source of wealth untouched.

The people of this fine farming section are up and doing. They are farming with their brains as well as with their muscles. While talking a few minutes with Mr. Tom Stokes, he pointed to a beautiful field of corn, where the ground was literally covered with cow peas, and said: "When I consider how I have cultivated that field and the crop on it this year, I feel like my past life has all been wasted." I asked him why, and he said: "that field has not had a plow in it since it was planted, that he had cultivated it entirely with riding cultivators, that the mules did the work, and he rode, and to illustrate the ease with which it was done, said he could have done the work, wearing patent leather shoes and not soiled them."

This is the best illustration of modern methods that I have heard. I enjoyed every minute of my stay on this trip. It did me good to travel over this country, and note the wonderful changes in a few years, improvements that are just beginning, which in a few more years will give to those people a realization of their hopes and a reward of their industry.

WEDNESDAY AUGUST 31, 1910

If Mr. Roosevelt says he wants it, that will settle it. The president himself is very much aware of that fact.

President Taft admits that there is room for decided improvement in the new tariff bill. And there certainly is.

As the Republicans are noted for dirty tricks, Mr. Cannon will have no room to complain if they treat him that way.

No doubt Mr. Taft felt that the predicament of the Republicans needed a letter. But his words seem to have had little effect towards calming the troubled waters.

What you see in The Reflector today you find in other papers tomorrow. Good evidence that an afternoon paper with a press dispatch service is the one you ought to have. This paper gives this section the news much sooner than it can be had in any other.

The man who thinks the world could not get along without him, is a badly deceived man and is drawing greatly on his stock of self-esteem. Of course every man should think well of himself, and should endeavor to cause others to think well of him, but if he reaches the point of thinking himself indispensable, there are yet things he must learn to the contrary. While "no man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself," every man's life having some effect upon others, yet there is no man living upon whom the world so largely depends that his taking away would make much difference. So kind reader, if you think the world depends on you for existence and could not get along without you, the sooner that idea is out of your head the better. You have your place in the world, and should make it count for as much as possible, but there is somebody else to take it as soon as you are gone, and you will be missed but a few days at least.

Dead men are only fit to inhabit cemeteries. If they are decently dead, dead all over, we tenderly lay them away in the sleep of the tomb; but if they are dead to all the enterprise out of the narrow plane their own interests and yet persists in walking around, moving their dry bones, calloused hearts and consciences where real business is wont to throb and pulse with vigor, they are only like the drone bees, in the way until they are stung to death and dragged outside the hive of legitimate industry. Twenty real live men are worth more to the public generally than a round full thousand of useless material that lies around like rubbish in a rising stream that is acting and foaming to turn mills and factories. Yes, live men bless, and dead men curse a town.—Gaffney Ledger.

Visit Your Schools.

How many of our school children's parents ever visit the schools or even know the teachers when they meet them on the street? How many know what their children are studying or how they are progressing? Is there any of you who have a building to make or a fence to build; a dress to make; a house to paint, or whatever the job may be, that say to the one you have employed: "Here are the tools and material, go ahead and do it to suit yourself and it will suit me." Is not that what many of you are doing with your children? You say by your actions: "Here is my child, with its books, paper and pencil, I've furnished material and tools, educate him as you like." Now we hear some of you say: "The teacher knows better what they ought to study than I do." While that part may be true, the carpenter or a dress maker, or a painter, knows better how to do the work than you do, yet you do not leave it all to them. On the rising generation depends the welfare of this great nation. Patrons and parents, take more interest in our schools and visit them often, and by your presence give the teachers more encouragement; ask them how your children are doing. Perhaps a few minutes talk with them will save trouble that years to come can never undo. Think about this and ask yourself if you are doing right.—Gaffney Ledger.

Early Freeze-up This Year.

According to Head Keeper Snyder of the Central Park menagerie in New York, there is ahead of us this year an early winter and a long, severe one. Migratory birds have been usual. "The chipmunks," notes the usual. "The chipmunks," notes the wild-animal man further, "are very busy laying up a supply of beech-nuts and other provender for a long winter. Woodchucks up the State are going into their burrows for the winter with a big layer of fat on their ribs. Usually they stay out until September." In conclusion, Head Keeper Snyder confidently predicts early frost and resort to overcoats. This makes a rather bad prospect for the cotton crop, running about two weeks behind schedule time. We shall not harbor gloom, however, until we hear from the North Carolina weather prophets, who know the "signs" better than anybody else and have high reputation to sustain.—Charlotte Observer.

The wild Africans called Col. Roosevelt Bwano Tumbo. If he doesn't be careful the Indians will call him Heap Big Talk. If the colonel could do all he says he would do he might redeem the record of a Roosevelt administration which had lots of thunder in it and very little lightning.—Wilmington Star.

Social Sights.

"Mrs. Jangle says she can remember when that fashionable Cuprox family didn't know where the next meal was coming from."

"Well," replied Miss Cayenne. "It's evident she didn't invite them to dine with her then, so there's no reason why they should invite her now."—Washington Star.

Audible Sleep.

"Is Mrs. Schnorer in?" asked the caller.
"Yes, ma'am," answered the maid of all work in the boarding house. "She's at present in her room."
"Are you sure?"
"Yes, ma'am. I just overheard her taking a nap."

His Defense.

"What defense," asked the grafter's wife, "did you make when you faced the investigating committee?"
"I vehemently called the man who had brought the charges a liar."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Nothing is more disgraceful than insincerity.—Cicero.

ONE WEAK SPOT.

Most Greenville People Have a Weak Part and too Often It's the Back

Everyone has a weak spot. Too often it's the back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aching keeps up, day and night. Tells you the kidney needs help—For backache is really kidney-ache. A kidney cure is what you need. Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney-ache. Cure headache and urinary ills. Good proof is the following statement: Jackson Baxter, 424 Bonner street, Washington, N. C., says: "I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble for a long time. The kidney secretions were scanty at times, while at others profuse, and the passages were attended with pain. I had severe backaches and constant, gnawing pains through my kidneys. I was feeling miserable when I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. They gave me such great relief that I obtained a further supply and since using this, pains across my back have disappeared. I can heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone troubled by kidney complaint."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Chinese and the Morse Code.

Difficulties of the Chinese language were ably demonstrated when the problem arose of adapting it to telegraphy. How was it possible to apply the Morse alphabet to a language which has no alphabet at all, but consists of nearly 44,000 characters? Then it was impossible to treat Chinese phonetically, writing down the sound of the Chinese words in European letters and translating them into Morse dots and dashes, because no such system could deal with the Chinese niceties of intonation. The ingenious solution came from a Danish professor. He simply codified the 7,000 commonest Chinese characters, representing each by numerals. Thus the Chinese word for "cash" became 0030 in the code, and the operator had only to send the code signal for that.

Rachel's Onion.

I was amused by the observations of a retired actress who sat beside me at the Conservatoire examinations and in an undertone thought aloud as the recitations went on.

"Why so much weeping and wringing of the hands?" she said of a candidate attempting Andromaque. "How she spoils her nice young face in attempting to force tears from her eyes! At this distance nobody could scent an onion in her pocket handkerchief. Rachel resorted to that trick in 'Adrienne Lecouvreur,' and the tears flowed freely without facial contortions. I heard it said that as she left the stage she gave the onion she held to Prince Napoleon to eat in salad and that he did so."—Paris Letter to London Truth.

Insurance Gambling.

The Britisher's favorite gambling is insurance gambling. He will take out a policy against anything, from the death of the king to the loss of a horse race by a thoroughbred. Marine insurance gambling by those who have no direct interest in the safety of a ship or its cargo grew into such abuses that parliament was compelled to pass a drastic act to prevent such gambling on marine accidents and losses by those not otherwise concerned.

CLEAN SWEEP IN N. C.

Solid Democratic Congressional Delegation.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—Senator Lee S. Overman, who arrived in Washington today made the prediction that North Carolina Democrats would make a clean sweep at the coming election and send a solid Democratic delegation to the next Congress. "I had no idea that the Republicans were absolutely hopeless regarding the result of the congressional election until my arrival here today," observed the popular Tar Heel senator. "I have met many Republican acquaintances during the day and they seem to be without hope for the future. Most of them predict the election of a Democratic house by the largest kind of majorities. Public opinion seems to be approaching unanimity that the Democracy will again assume control of the government. The Republicans are being ground to pieces by factionalism. Insurgents and regulars are saying worse things about each other than they have ever said about Democrats."

"North Carolinians are not unmindful of the political tide that is swinging towards the Democracy in the nation," continued Senator Overman, and they will assert themselves by rolling up increased majorities for their candidates. I expect to see the Democratic vote in the State increased ten thousand over that polled in the Taft election. The Republicans have done a lot of talking, but they have more than they can shoulder in this contest. The people of North Carolina are not prepared to send Marion Butler to the senate, and that would be the result should that State be turned over to the crowd that controlled the recent Greensboro convention. While Morehead is the State chairman, Butler is the guiding genius of the party, and he would deserve election to the senate should such a thing as victory be possible for the Republicans."

"The Democracy in the State is in fine shape. Locally there have been differences, but these will adjust themselves. North Carolinians are determined to keep pace with the balance of the nation in rolling up Democratic majorities. They believe in the cry, 'Turn on the light.'"

"What of Theodore Roosevelt?" was asked Senator Overman. "Looks very much like the former President is a candidate for the nomination in 1912," was the reply. "At any rate that is the impression in Washington."—Thomas J. Pence in The News and Observer.

Why I am Opposed to Good Roads.

Greenville, N. C., Aug. 31, 1910.
Editor Reflector:

I am not opposed to any movement for the betterment of the county, but I am opposed to building roads for automobiles to run on and scare the farmers teams to run away. The majority of automobile drivers have no respect for other people. I know there are some exceptions, but the most of them don't care about the welfare of other people. The good road is indirectly responsible for those three promising young men's death; if it had not been for that hard road, Mr. Flanagan could not have run his machine at such a high rate of speed and Mr. Fleming, Mr. Skinner and Mr. Wooten would have been here living today, I have no doubt. If the automobile men want good roads let them get them a charter and build them one like the railroad does, and keep off the country roads.

I think it is for the farmers to say whether they want good roads or not, as they are the ones that have to haul over them. I would like to ask the good roads convention one or two questions. Why did they have their convention on the first Monday in August? Why didn't they have it on Saturday instead of Monday? They are like the Consolidated Tobacco Company, they wanted it when they knew the farmers could not attend.

Well, so much for the autos and now for the county. The county is already in debt to the amount of about $200,000, and it will cost about $500,000 more to build the roads, making a total of about $700,000. It looks to me like our taxes will be high enough without the roads now. It don't look right for us to vote for $500,000 bonds payable in 10, 20 or 30 years for our children to pay unless we are not willing to pay ourselves, and with the steady increase of taxes it looks to me like our children will have enough to pay without our voting for another additional bond. The Bible says "He that provideth not for his household has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel," and if we vote for bonds for our children to pay, that we are not willing to pay, we come under the same condemnation. For these reasons I am opposed to the good roads movement and shall fight it to the end.
