By Cable to The Reflector.

Rome, Sept. 12.—Three hundred members of dreaded Camarra are under arrest today charged with being conspirators in a plot that led to the assassination of Lieut. Petrosino, head of the Callan branch of the New York detective bureau. They will all be placed on trial at Vielerbo, near Rome, within a few days. Enrico Alfonso is declared to be the man who is responsible for Petrosino's death. At one time Alfonso fled to this country to escape Calabrian police. He was soon caught and sent back by Petrosino. Secrets of the Camarrists that led to the arrests were revealed by three members of the national military police, who have been working on the case ever since Petrosino was killed.

PRIMARY SCRAPS.

One Man Shot, Another Has a Broken Arm.

There seems to have been several little harmless scraps at the primaries Saturday. But at two places the scraps were a little serious.

In Belvoir, William Teel and W. B. Pollard were the participants. It did not result serious until Mr. Pollard met R. H. Coggins, who had a pistol in his hand. It seems that a struggle for the possession of the pistol took place, with the result that the pistol was discharged and the ball taking effect in Mr. Pollard's shoulder, making a painful and perhaps a serious wound.

At Black Jack there was also a scrap or two. That between Louis and Kas Anry and Snow Mills resulted in a severe cut on Mill's arm and Louis Anry getting an arm broken. No other damage.

At Bethel Lee James and Duke Whitfield had a dispute that ended in James striking Whitfield a blow on the head that drew some blood.

COLORED MAN LOSES LEG.

Jumped From Train and Car Runs Over Him.

Saturday night James Pettus was one of a crowd of colored men who got on the midnight Norfolk Southern train here to go to Washington. The train had just pulled out of the "Y" in to the main track when Pettus changed his mind about going. He jumped off the moving train and in falling was caught under the car and the wheels run over one of his legs. The leg was so badly mangled that it had to be amputated just below the knee. Pettus was drinking.

The umbrella can be seen at the drug store of Coward & Wooten. The monogram of the winner will be engraved on it free of charge.

Mr. Cox Withdraws.

We learn this afternoon that Mr. J. Marshall Cox, who was one of the candidates for sheriff in the county primary and received the second highest vote, his being 433 below Mr. S. I. Dudley who led the vote, has withdrawn and will not ask for another primary. The action of Mr. Cox lets the nomination go to Mr. Dudley.

WHAT MAKES GIRLS POPULAR?

Beauty, Grace, Intelligence and Radiance.

What can a young girl—who is neither a great beauty nor a great heiress, nor one to whom the gods stood sponsor at birth—do to make herself popular? Let us sit down and take our chins in our hands and think about it.

I should suggest that a young girl must have, at least in some small degree, four qualities. There are children of fortune who have them all, and in abundance; but as from a small pelette of primary colors a great picture may be painted, just so, out of a few elementary attributes, quite wonderful results are possible. The four qualities of personality that I would suggest are:

Beauty, grace, intelligence, radiance. Beauty may be that of face, or it may be merely an effect of beauty through style, charm, or even one of the other three qualities following.

Grace includes not alone symmetry of movement, but all accomplishments in activity, such as dancing, skating, swimming, riding, and also any especial gifts, such as talent for music or acting. In other words, the girl who has the "gift of grace" is the girl who does things well.

By intelligence is meant the sympathetic, adaptable quality of mind, rather than that of the brilliant order. But the one great attribute that crowns them all—gracing, of course, some gift of the other three—but without which beauty, grace cleverness are all as apples of Sodom—is the sense of enjoyment, the gift of happiness; I don't think I can better define it than by the word radiance. And best of all, radiance is a quality that can be cultivated—The Delinicator.

"A Gentleman From Mississippi."

The long looked forward to engagement of the big popular success, "A Gentleman from Mississippi," takes place in Wilson, N. C., September 15th. The effect of this play upon the scalp is absolutely nil, but it diffuses a cozy warmth. It suggests the better side of the stage, and when you go home after having witnessed the performance you will realize that you have been patronizing refinement marked "sterling" all over it. You will have escaped from the uproar and hoarse play of the footlights, from the sex problem and the past resurrection. You will have wandered into a region of naturalness. "A Gentleman from Mississippi" is certainly a revelation in play writing and has set a pace so hot that its competitors have been left far in the rear. Robert A. Fischer will assume the role of Senator Langdon and Wm. A. Brady has provided his special cast for this engagement.

The Norfolk Southern railway will sell round trip tickets, Greenville to Wilson and return, on account of this play, for 75 cents. Leave Greenville at 4:14 and return at 12:41.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1910.

You cannot always count on a primary in advance.

With some of the candidates it certainly was a close primary.

There will have to be another primary to elect a candidate for sheriff.

Now that the primary is out of the way, let every body get busy to make Greenville and Pitt county go forward.

Governor Patterson, no doubt foreseeing his finish in defeat, has withdrawn from the race for governor of Tennessee.

It took well into Sunday morning to get through counting the ballots in the Greenville precinct of Saturday's primary, but a crowd stayed by to the finish.

The Reflector is for the ticket that was nominated in the primary. That should be the decision of every Democrat in the county, regardless of who he voted for in the primary.

For a man who sticks to his job, even if there is nothing in it, The Reflector would point out Chairman F. C. Harding, of the Democratic county executive committee. He put in a lot of hard work in the interest of all the candidates in arranging for the primary, and he was on the spot until everything was over Saturday night. He looks well after the affairs of the party.

Pitt county has held another voting primary and The Reflector is frank to say that it does not like the kind of primaries that have been held here, and believes that many people of the county are of the same opinion. There was more debauching of voters Saturday than has ever before been in any election in the county. Whiskey was distributed freely and it was disgraceful, to say the least of it. We do not know and cannot say who was responsible for it, but the guilty ones whom they may, it should be condemned. The obtaining of votes by such means was a violation of law and decency.

It can be truly said that the Democrats of Pitt county nominated an excellent ticket in the primary Saturday. Every man on the ticket is well known and his character stands above question. Some of them are already in office and serving their county well, and the others will make a record equally as good. At the same time it can also be said those who were defeated in the primary were equally good men; in fact there was not a candidate in the race but who would have made a good officer. It is creditable to the party that only good men were in the race. Those who are nominated have cause for congratulation. The closeness of the vote shows that it was difficult to decide between candidates when all were so good.

Water on the Farm.

The Carolina Union Farmer is urging the farmers to equip their homes with water-works. Some of the Mecklenburg farmers have already done this, but The Union Farmer tells how, by a co-operative system, the work can be accomplished so cheaply that almost every farmer can afford it. In explaining its plan it says that a well-boring machine can be bought for four or five hundred dollars. Ten men in a local union could put in $50 each and buy a well-boring machine, and after you get the machine you can bore wells at an average cost of about seven cents a foot, and at that price you can afford to have more than one well on your place. With a two-inch tubular well 75 or a hundred feet deep you can get pure water and there will be no typhoid germs in it. Then you can erect a tank and with a $75 two-horsepower gasoline engine you can pump water into the tank, and thus have a supply of water ready at all times to turn in through pipes to your residence and barns. But it would, perhaps, be better to expend $125 for a five-horsepower engine so that you can have power enough to also run your wood-saw, feed-cutter, grindstone, churn, etc. These home conveniences can be had at comparatively small cost if farmers can get several members of their local union to co-operate with you. It is a good idea and one worth developing.—Charlotte Chronicle.

There is a Reason for It.

In the eyes of the world the average farmer is a much more important man than he was a decade ago. There is a reason for it. Farmers have awakened to a keener sense of the dignity and importance of the work in which they are engaged and as a result they are more independent and prosperous. Scientific discovery has done more for the farmers than for any other large class, not only showing them how to make their land more productive, but how to make their lives easier, pleasanter, and full of intellectual and varied interests. It has also along with industrial developments multiplied the markets for agricultural products. Farmers can now have about them comforts and pleasures of which the largest antebellum farmers never dreamed. Of course many farmers are slow to utilize their opportunities. Some will never make as much progress as they could. But the important thing is that great opportunities are within the reach of industrious and intelligent farmers. All professions and occupations have in their ranks hosts of failures, but landowning farmers who fall will soon be able to offer as little excuse as anybody.—Sanford Express.

"The Farmers' Union," says The Lexington Dispatch, "is doing more for the farmer today than all other agencies combined. It is going to the bottom of things, reaching the wealthy planter and the humble 'cropper,' fostering the spirit of universal brotherhood and catering to no man or class of men. It is avoiding the pitfalls that wrecked the Farmers' Alliance and like organizations in the past by keeping out of politics and confining its operations to those things which vitally affect farm life." The Chronicle can endorse this as a pretty fair estimate of the character of the organization which has been in session in Charlotte for three days. It is first organization of farmers the country has known that has been and is practically proof against the wiles of the politicians.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Some fool has put into the head of some negro leader the advisability and the necessity of starting a negro party. The colored race is making splendid progress along the several lines leading to development, and the relation between the races, happily for both, is pleasant—but that movement is fraught with death to the good feelings existing. It is pleasing to see several representatives of the colored race, having the good of both races in mind, speaking out boldly against the move.—The Uplift.

There would be fewer suicides if less detailed accounts of them found their way into the widely read public prints. Their number has been so large recently that it has become a subject of comment.—The Uplift.

One Type of Woman.

There is one type of woman whose thought of self is almost heroic. She is the one who, seeing a long line of persons waiting at a window, goes up to the head of the line and edges her way in. I have sometimes asked such women if they would like the right of suffrage, and they have said they would not, so it does not always indicate a "strong mind." But think how easily such a woman could vote, even though the polls were crowded. She would seize a ballot, brush aside the mere men who were in her way and, marching into the booth, deposit her vote—as inevitable as the sunrise or sunset or any of the phenomena of nature.—Smith's Magazine.

FINE LEGAL WORK

The Drawing Up of a Big Mortgage a Serious Matter.

CLOSE ANALYSIS OF WORDS.

Where the Document is to Be Used as a Basis For an Issue of Bonds an Expert on Definitions is Employed—Big Expense and Big Fees Involved.

Drawing up a big mortgage, especially when it is to be the basis for an issue of bonds it is desired to dispose of in the open market, is a task far greater than most people have any idea of. Sometimes months of continuous labor elapse between the beginning of the first draft and the final approval of the last revised copy by those most directly concerned. The primary object of such a formidable legal instrument is, of course, to define clearly and exactly what the mortgagor will do. The individual or company in whose favor the mortgage is drawn, however, through his attorney seeks to protect himself from every possible contingency. Some of these possibilities that are sought to be guarded against appear to be absurd to the lay mind.

Some years ago a boat line whose vessels plied on a certain river desired to mortgage its property and issue bonds. One of the provisions of the legal instrument provided what should be done in the event of the river drying up or becoming impossible to navigate. As the stream was a mighty flood of water at all seasons, the possibility of this contingency arising seemed out of all reason, but the attorneys for the mortgagee insisted upon its insertion. Nothing has happened to the river as yet.

The commonest weakness of a mortgage and one that may escape the ordinary eye is not the use of the wrong word to express the desired meaning, but the use of not exactly the right one. After the mortgage has been worked into shape so that its provisions are satisfactory to both sides the lawyers who draw the mortgage in the first instance prepare a list of words about whose meaning they fear there may be some dispute and turn this list over to the expert etymologist who is in charge of the library in every big office. This man prepares a report which shows not only the dictionary definition of each one of these words, but also furnishes a list of all legal decisions that have been made relative to its exact significance. This, expert, being advised of the particular shade of meaning it is desired to convey, also furnishes an opinion as to what is the right word, supporting his statement by a list of such legal decisions as may apply. All these reports are carefully bound together and become a part of the mass of papers, sometimes weighing many pounds, that accumulates while the mortgage is being drawn. They are fled away when it is finished.

After the mortgagor's counsel have completed drawing up the instrument as they think it should be it passes to the attorneys on the other side, who pick as many flaws as possible in it. They, too, pay special attention to the exact meaning of words, and frequently their experts question the definitions of those on the other side. After the two firms of attorneys have settled all their differences the mortgage is generally submitted to another set of expert legal advisers, who criticize it from every possible point of view. All this takes a great deal of time and costs a great deal of money.

The total legal expense of drawing up a big corporation mortgage frequently runs into more than a hundred thousand dollars. It is not uncommon for a single firm of experts to receive as high as $80,000 for criticizing and correcting one of these important legal documents. When it has been tested in every possible way and is finally passed upon and approved it is printed. It may cover between 100 and 200 pages and contain from 40,000 to 80,000 words. The latter is about the number in a novel of the ordinary size. If the interests affected have property in more than one county or state the mortgage has to be recorded in each of these.

It is not until all this work has been done that the bonds secured by the mortgage are placed on the market.—T. S. Dayton in New York Tribune.

Didn't Like the Lackeys.
The late John Heneghe Jesse, the well known author, had an aversion, amounting to a positive phobia, for the British Jeames. He has been known to stand in St. James' street on a drawing room day, at the edge of the curb, and with the end of his stick, which he dipped into the road puddle, dab the immaculate stockings of the passing flunkies, who, as he well knew, dare not move from their stations, accompanying the act with much opprobrious language.

A PUZZLING PINE.

Peaculiar Tree That Is Something of a Mystery to Botanists.

Upper California is the home of a tree that has puzzled botanists. It is a pine which will grow only near the seacoast. Its growth is slow, and it does not attain to great size.

The strange thing about it is that there are, to all appearances, insurmountable difficulties in the way of the perpetuation of the species. Some specimens of it exist in Kew gardens, in London. They have been carefully examined by competent authorities, and all admit that the tree presents a problem unlike anything elsewhere met with.

This pine produces at regular intervals the usual cones containing seeds; but, strange to say, the cones are so thoroughly protected that the seeds cannot be released. The cones are hard and tightly closed and have strong overlapping scales.

More extraordinary still is the fact that the pine, after producing its almost invulnerable cones, keeps them hanging on its branches year after year. Unless through some peculiar accident the seeds would apparently remain attached to the parent tree forever. Many of the cones on the trees in Kew gardens have been there for years, as is shown by the size of the branches and the formation of the bark.

It has been found that the seed vessels which this tree so powerfully retains are so well protected that it requires a strong knife with the assistance of a heavy hammer to cut the cone into sections. No ordinary conditions of temperature can make a cone open.

The following is the only explanation yet offered that seems to have any degree of plausibility: The species may be perpetuated by fire. One who has studied the tree asserts that nothing but the intense heat of a forest fire could compel the cones to release their seeds. It has been found that under the influence of intense heat they crack open and the seeds fall out uninjured.—Harper's Weekly.

TURKISH RED TAPE.

Getting the Kinks Out of a Custom House Tangle.

In the far east rules and restrictions may be made to yield to influence with a latent force behind it, as instanced by this serio-comic incident found in Captain A. B. Townshend's book, "A Military Consul in Turkey." A certain highly influential foreigner at Adrianople wanted a Christmas tree and ordered one from Sofia to come by train, but when the tree, an unpretentious little fir about ten feet high, arrived at Adrianople station some one discovered that it was illegal to receive "plants" from abroad.

"Yasak" (it is forbidden), said the custom house.

"Yasak," echoed the sentry on duty. The foreigner said whatever was the equivalent to "rubbish" and demanded the tree.

Here was a nice quandary for the authorities. Evidently it was a most fearful thing to receive a tree from abroad, and yet the consignee was capable of getting some one into very serious trouble if he did not get his tree, and he said he must have it within forty-eight hours.

Some one at the custom house soared above the difficulty. The tree was sent on to Stamboul on the Orient express, an eight hours' journey. It came back to Adrianople by the next train, and the person for whom it was intended received a notice that "a tree from Constantinople" had arrived for him and would at once be handed over to his messenger.

So the wretched little Bulgarian tree had become a Turkish one, brought from Constantinople, and by that means it satisfied officialdom and served its purpose in the end.

Gladiators.
The gladiators were originally male-factors who fought for their lives or captives who fought for freedom. They were first exhibited at the funeral ceremonies of the Romans, 263 B. C., and afterward at festivals about 215 B. C. When Dacla was reduced by Trojan 1,000 gladiators fought at Rome for 123 days in celebration of his triumph. It is said that in the triumphs of Pompey the Great 10,000 fought through a series of many days. These combats were suppressed in the east by the Emperor Constantine about A. D. 325 and in the west by Theodoric in A. D. 500.—New York American.

Her Protection.
"Why don't you marry, too?" he asked her, apropos of the marriage of her friend.
"I can't," she answered, "without committing bigamy. I haven't my divorce yet, you know. It's probably a good thing, a great protection. I might have married some good for nothing again if I had had it. I am so unfortunate in my selections."
"True," he said. "You might have married me."—New York Press.

A WOMAN'S HAT.

There's a Large Pot of Trouble Brewing For One Milliner.

Mr. Standish was mad when he went into the millinery establishment, and the longer he stayed the madder he got. Presently he walked over to a stunning black creation that hung on a peg near the window and said:

"This is the hat I want to see you about."

The proprietor came forward.
"What can I do for you?" he asked.
"You can fix this hat over the way my wife asked you to," said Standish explosively. "She wants the feather put on the other side, that bow moved to the front, and she wants the rim to bulge a little more over the temples."

Seeing a guilty flush creep over the proprietor's face, Standish went on with increased heat:

"She says you have refused to make any alterations on the ground that a stitch added to or subtracted from the hat is bound to ruin it, but I tell you that's all nonsense. My wife knows how she wants her hat to look, and if she can't stand up for her rights I'll do it for her. She is coming around this afternoon to try the hat on again. If it isn't ready by that time there will be no end of a row."

The proprietor twirled the black hat on his forefinger and looked from it to the head saleswoman lugubriously.

"I remember," he said, "that the lady who ordered that hat did bring it back yesterday to be remodeled. Perhaps it will be possible to make the alterations suggested after all."

The manager's humility made Standish feel very proud of himself.

"That's the only way to deal with those fellows," he said when he left the shop. "You've got to meet them on their own level. It takes a man to do that. No wonder women get cheated out of their very eyeteeth. They haven't got sand enough to say the things that have to be said to secure their rights."

Throughout the day Standish continued to revel in self congratulations, and he actually went home half an hour ahead of time to see if his wife's hat had been metamorphosed into the thing of beauty he had suggested.

"Well," said he jubilantly, "was the hat all right?"

"All right?" said Mrs. Standish. "They hadn't even touched it. How could you expect it to be all right when you didn't stop in to see about it?"

"But I did stop," protested Standish. "I saw everybody about the place and laid the whole establishment out in great shape. Here's their card to prove I was there. I picked it up as I was passing out."

Mrs. Standish took up the card and read the name aloud.

"O-o-o-h!" she cried. "Is that where you went? Why, you got into the wrong place. What on earth will that manager think? He must think you are crazy."

"I don't care if he does," said Standish limply, "but I would like to know what the owner of that black hat will say when she sees it made over according to my directions."—New York Herald.

Economical.
A good story is related of an English theatrical manager who by thrift and hard work had amassed a fortune. Previous to the production of one play the stage carpenters had to repair a trap, and the head carpenter went to the manager and informed him that it could not be done in the dark.

"Well, lad, thee won't have t' gas," answered the manager. "Here, tak' this and buy a candle."

And he handed him a halfpenny. The carpenter pleaded that they wanted two in order to get sufficient light.

"How long will t' job tak' thee?" asked the manager.

"About ten minutes," was the reply. "Then cut t' candle in two," was the answer. "Thee won't have any more money."

Physiognomy.
It is impossible to say just when physiognomy began to be a "science." It is said that the celebrated Pythagoras founded the science about B. C. 540. It is spoken of by Hippocrates about B. C. 450, but he does not attempt to go into the discussion of its origin. The first systematic treatise on the subject that has come down to us is that attributed to Aristotle. Throughout the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries there were many publications on physiognomy.—Exchange.

The Nautical Idiom.
In "Glimpses of East Africa" Mrs. Ethel Younghusband tells an amusing story of a venerable Parsee who was on board a big liner going to England. Some one wishing to make himself agreeable went up to him and said, "I hope, sir, you are a good sailor."
"Sailor, indeed!" said the Parsee. "Why, I am a first class passenger!"

A Rod In Pickle.
Mrs. Goodsole—Why, Johnny, are you just going home now? Your mother's been looking for you all afternoon.
Johnny—Yes'm, I know. Mrs. Goodsole—Just think how worried she must be! Johnny—Oh, she's near the end of her worrying. I'm jest beginning mine.

Proof.
"How do you know she's older than you are?"
"Why, she admitted it herself. She said 'You and I are just the same age, dearie.'"—Cleveland Leader.

The Talipot Palm of Ceylon.
The talipot palm of Ceylon has gigantic fanlike leaves, which when fully expanded form a nearly complete circle thirteen feet in diameter. Large fans made of them are carried before people of rank among the Cingalese. They are also commonly used as umbrellas, and tents are made by neatly joining them together. They are used as a substitute for paper, being written upon with a stylus. Some of the sacred books of the Cingalese are composed of strips of them.

PALESTINE.

Many Ways in Which it Strikingly Resembles California.

Palestine is more like the state of California than any other in the Union in everything except size. It lies between longitude 34 degrees 30 minutes and 38 degrees 30 minutes east and between latitude 30 degrees 30 minutes and 33 degrees 45 minutes north. It is practically a California reduced to about one-twentieth in size, but markedly similar in general topography, climate, vegetation and agricultural and economic possibilities.

Like California, Palestine is longest from north to south. Like California, too, it has both very high mountains, having an elevation of 9,000 to 10,000 feet, and very deep depressions. The Dead sea, 1,200 feet below sea level, is the greatest depression known, and, like the Death valley of California, it is situated in the southern extremity of the country.

In Palestine, just as in California, we have a dry, warm season and a humid and more temperate one. The rainy season extends from October to May and the dry season from May to October.

Palestine is even more favored than California with regard to the winter temperature. Although the thermometer rises as high in summer in Palestine as in California, with extremes of 110 degrees to 115 degrees F., though not so often, it very rarely drops in the winter to the freezing point. Snow is rare, even on the plateaus, and our farmers are practically safe from any damage by frost over nearly the entire extent of the country.—From Aaron Aaronsohn's "Agricultural and Botanical Explorations in Palestine."

KEPT HER BUSY.

The Way She Tried to Discover the Telephone Numbers.

"I don't believe that the public schools teach their graduates to use their minds," remarked a well known citizen of Philadelphia the other day. "Here's a story just to illustrate what I mean:

"I got a secretary last summer who had just been graduated with high honors from the Commercial high school. She had been picked out for me as the best girl in her class, and I found her excellent in all that required methodical, parrot-like work.

"One day I jotted down some telephone numbers that I wanted to remember and, having a poor memory, forgot in the course of the morning whose the numbers were or what the business was upon which I wanted to phone.

"So I called Miss Blank just as I was going out and said, 'Before you get your luncheon I wish you'd find out for me whose those telephone numbers are.'

"Two hours later I came back, and Miss Blank was sitting at her desk, weary and perseveringly studying the telephone book.

"I asked her if she had got some letters written that I had left, if she had lunched, if she had done several little things. She said no and then explained:

"You see, it takes me a long time to read through the book till I come to the numbers you want," she said. "I haven't had time to do anything else!" —Philadelphia Times.

Marbles.

Marbles got their name from the fact that originally little bits of marble were rolled down the hills and rounded and pounded by other stones until they became toys for the children to play with. It is said that the Dutch exported them to England. Whether they did or not makes little difference to the boys and girls of today. No matter who introduced the world to marbles as toys, they are with us and always will be. Some of you get them from other children, some of you trade postage stamps for them, but some persons originally bought them from the little store around the corner, whose owner got them from the greatest toyshop in the world—Germany. In the beginning marbles were called "bowls," and men and women played with them as well as children.—Dundee Advertiser.

A Tree Cut Down by Rifle Bullets.
In the sanguinary annals of the American war there was no more sanguinary episode than the fight in 1864 of "the Bloody Angle at Spotsylvania." "Every bush and every sapling that constituted the thicket there," says Mr. G. C. Eggleston in his "History of the Confederate War," "was cut away by a stream of bullets as grass is before a mower's scythe. Even an oak tree nearly two feet thick was worn in two near its base by the continual and incessant stroke of leaden balls until it fell, crushing some of the Confederates who were fighting beneath its branches."

A Neat Compliment.

That was a neat compliment paid by a French ambassador in London to a peeress who had been talking to him for an hour.

The lady said, "You must think I am very fond of the sound of my own voice."

The Frenchman replied, "I knew you liked music."

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the lone watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason. They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatic—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day in the Life of an English Lady in 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobert's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troy-novant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburgh. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred."

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lynx," said the first flea. "I'm fond of golf."

"The giraffe for mine," declared the second flea. "I need the highest altitude I can find."—Washington Herald.
