CIVIC BEAUTY AS AN ASSET

GOOD STREETS ARE VALUABLE TO A TOWN

IT ALWAYS PAYS TO IMPROVE THEM

Mr. Clark Shows How The World's Most Beautiful Municipalities Hold Prestige by Making Improvements—Greenville Has Done Well But Could Do Better.

Greenville, N. C., Nov. 2, 1910.

Editor Reflector.

It is quite gratifying, at least to all progressive citizens, to note the effort our town officials are making to secure better and cleaner streets. Such progress along the lines of municipal improvements as we have had, and the extreme financial difficulties, is commendable. Has it not been within the last two or three years that our business and adjacent residential streets have been changed from mud or dust to brick and sand-clay and our sidewalks from deep sand to granolithic pavements.

It is wrong to look upon such progress egotistically or as it affects our individual comfort. Improvements are made for a mutual good, as an asset to our town and community. The wide scope of influence that an improved and prosperous town wields upon outsiders as well as ourselves, cannot be realized all at once. Civic comfort and beauty is not only attractive to outsiders, but magnetizes our own interest in the town.

It is generally conceded that Paris is the most beautiful city in the world yet Mr. Burnham who is in Paris getting ideas for the "plan" he is preparing, by which Chicago is to rob the French metropolis of its laurels, sends back word that when the Parisians heard of his mission, they immediately voted $47,000,000 for further civic improvements. There are to be new boulevards where there are now slums, spacious parks and squares, magnificent public buildings a new system of street lighting and other ornamental additions to what is already regarded as the most charming of municipalities. Mr. Burnham says the people of Paris have learned the immense value of civic beauty, and of this there can be no doubt. When Napoleon rebuilt Paris the citizens protested. Now they realize that the rebuilding was the city's greatest asset, and that people come from all parts of the world to see the "city of dazzling beauty." Mr. Burnham cites the perspicacity of Pericles, who "when he saw that Athens was losing its trade to cities of the western Mediterranean, immediately began immense public improvements, with the result that Athens held her commercial and intellectual supremacy for hundreds of years."

Quoting from an editorial in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times in advocacy of bond issue for municipal improvement we have the following:

"Who can doubt the part of the beauty of a city plays in furthering its prosperity as well as the happiness of its inhabitants? Young men starting in business are often advised to wear as good clothes as they can afford in order to increase their chances of success, since 'the apparel oft proclaims the man.' The city of handsome appearance attracts not only visitors, but desirable permanent residents. And by the way, many of these items in the proposed bond issue which Pittsburg is to vote on next week will make direct for a more beautiful city, while all are concerned with making this a better place to live in. A word to the wise citizens should be sufficient."

We are glad to see such a strong stand taken against blind tigers by our most representative citizens assembled in mass a few nights ago. But is it not even more necessary from all view points that a stand equally as enthusiastic should be taken for civic comfort, beauty and progress? The morality of any community depends almost entirely upon the individual mind; while the success of that same community must depend upon the concerted efforts of all.

Let us not condemn, but rather put our shoulder to the wheel.

STRONG, PRACTICAL TALK.

By Gov. Jarvis to Students of E. C. T. T. S.

This morning ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis gave a strong practical talk to the students of East Carolina Teachers' Training school on "The Value of Attention to Little Things of Life." This causes success; neglect of it failure. It is given to few to do great things, but all can do well little things. You get out of life what you put into it, both in quantity and quality. If you put brightness and cheer you get happiness; if you put gloom you become a burden to yourself and others. Teachers above all others should appreciate the value of attention to details both in school and in life.

The students of the school are always glad when Governor Jarvis comes, and sorry when he leaves. His talks to them are always helpful.

Tobacco Selling.

Tobacco farmers are selling their tobacco as rapidly as they can prepare it for market. This is the case everywhere. The crop is practically all sold in South Carolina. In Eastern North Carolina the crop is nearly out of the hands of farmers, while the old belt markets have only been selling the new crop since October the first to amount to anything—farmers are rushing their tobacco to market rapidly. With good seasons for handling, a large per cent. of the crop will have been marketed by the holidays. Referring to the Winston-Salem market, we believe the tobacco editor of the Sentinel about covers the ground in the following, published about a week ago:

"Since the first day of last August, the beginning of the present tobacco year, the market has sold 4,144,198 pounds, which has brought $390,549.12, or an average of $9.66 for the total crop sold to date. Last year the first 4,129,905 pounds brought $343,335.77, an average of $8.31. It will be seen from these figures that the growers have received $1.35 more on every hundred pounds sold than they did last year up to this time. This proves what The Sentinel has claimed for some time, the opinion of others notwithstanding, that this year's crop is bringing the growers more money than did last year's. Of course, the quality of the offerings may be better, but as for us, we cannot see where this year's offerings to date have had anything on last year's in quality.—Winston Tobacco Journal.

Mill Plant Burned.

A few days ago part of a saw mill plant and a gin house, belonging to Mr. J. S. Moorling, at Staton, six miles from town was destroyed by fire. The loss was about $1,500 with $6.50 insurance.

It is better to make an excuse than to blame the innocent.

Farmer Near Mooresville Gathered 11 Bales of Cotton and Expects 4 More From 12 Acres—Chairman Eller Expects 50,000 Majority—Farmer Loses Arm

Democratic State Chairman A. H. Eller says there will be a very full vote in the election approaching and that the Democratic majority in the State will show considerable gains over the majority of two years ago. The fact is that workers in the state Democratic headquarters here expect fully 50,000 majority. Chairman Eller says he never knew the people to be more imbued with a purpose to administer a complete rebuke to Republicanism, Butlerism and other allied interests inimicable to the State.

While feeding a corn shredder on Mr. J. H. Robinson's place near Derita, yesterday morning at 10.30 o'clock, Mr. John Kerr met with an accident which cost him his left arm. It was caught in the machinery of the shredder and the merciless contrivance tore off his arm near the elbow. Bystanders rushed to his assistance and physicians were summoned from Charlotte by telephone. The wound was of course as painful as can be imagined, but Mr. Kerr is expected to recover.—Charlotte Observer

The Enterprise says Mr. W. L. Cook, of Mooresville, planted 12 acres in cotton this year and worked the patch for results. So far he has gathered 11 bales of 450 pounds each. He thinks he will get four or five more bales, or about 6,750 pounds of lint from the 12 acres.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON AT PARMELE WEDNESDAY

Greeted by Fifteen Hundred People and Makes Stirring Speech.

Fifteen hundred people gathered around the station at Parmele to greet Dr. Booker T. Washington, Wednesday afternoon, when the train carrying his special car arrived.

Principal Chance, of the Higgs Industrial school at Parmele, had thoroughly advertised his coming, and citizens in every walk of life were there to meet him. From the time the morning trains arrived people began to come—some on foot, some on carts, and the more fortunate ones in buggies. This continued until the last train bringing the Washington party arrived.

Major Morton entertained the great crowd with one of his favorite negro melodies, and then introduced Dr. Washington who was applauded tremendously. He held the great audience for twenty minutes with his usual force of eloquence urging hearers to become industrious citizens, to live in peace with their neighbors, and to purchase for themselves homes. He said the south was the best place in the world for the black man; that in the South the negro could not only buy land, but the white would lend him the money and then sell him the land. He captivated his audience by saying the negro would never the South. "If he did" said he "a strong wall would have to be built to keep him back in, and it would take two walls to keep the white man out."

Principal Chance has given out the statement that the speech has resulted in much good at a point where such advice is so greatly needed.

TROUBLE IN HONDURAS.

Valladares Denounced as an Outlaw.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Martial law has been declared in Honduras, according to state department advices today. Owing to fear of President Doulla of an insurrection being started by General Jose Valladares, who is illegally holding the post of commandant at Amapola. The government has denounced Valladares as an outlaw.

Building and Loan.

A new series of shares will open in the Home Building and Loan Association on Saturday, and it is a good time to take shares and begin with the series. The association is a great benefit to the community, both in helping people to secure homes and as a means of saving. It takes but a small weekly payment of 25 cents to carry a share, which even the small wage earner can afford and accumulate something ahead for a rainy day.

Everything New.

The political conditions this year—and, by the way, it is about the dirtiest campaign since 1884—must be pretty nearly bewildering to the old stagers of the last quarter of the last century, when the claims of party bound. All seems chaos, and a general political liquidation appears to be at hand. James A. Garfield said that every man chosen president should make a progress through a court of political bankruptcy between the Tuesday after the first of November leap year and March 4 the succeeding year; and pity it is that he, his predecessors, and his successors were not allowed to do it. And that recalls the wall of the first Harrison, who lived only for one month: on that very account—"I have precious little influence with this administration."

But the condition in Ohio is absolutely startling. There Joseph Benson Foraker is called off the stump—the most effective popular orator Ohio has known since Tom Corwin. Foraker is of Southern blood, Virginia stock, and, unlike others, his people did not leave Virginia for a lack of land, but for hatred slavery, as the cause with the parents of Joseph G. Cannon. Before he was out of his teens Foraker was a veteran soldier and captain in as fine a regiment as Ohio produced in that mighty struggle of 1861-65. For more than two score years he was an Ajax in the Republican camp of Ohio, the best loved and most admired of his own party, and the most hated and greatest dreaded by the opposition party. And Foraker is deposed from the stump! Truly, it is a new order of things. The old is past, and everything is novel.—Washington Post.

Sell on the Warehouse Floors.
From many years' experience and observation, and after making a close study of the sale of leaf tobacco, we are fully convinced that the best and fairest way to sell tobacco is by auction on the warehouse floor. We are in receipt of a letter from a gentleman who asks us how tobacco sales are conducted in the south. It may be of interest to many who do not know, how it is done, to know something of this great system.

The tobacco planter may sell his crop immediately after the curing is done, provided the weather is damp enough for handling. Markets are many and convenient; are open every day in the year except Sunday, and buyers are always ready for business.

The farmer strips his tobacco from the stalk, assort it to the various grades a barn at a time, generally, and if the market in which he elects to dispose of it is nearby, from a few miles to fifty or sixty he loads it into a long-bodied, canvass-covered wagon, and hauls it over the country roads if he lives convenient to railroad facilities, he packs it lightly in hogheads or crates and ships by rail. Reaching the warehouse his tobacco is unloaded, each grade put separately upon trucks, weighed upon platform scales, tagged with his name and number of pounds and then dumped on the floor, the piles being arranged in long, straight rows the length of the building. If the tobacco break is a full one the house will contain several hundred piles, often as many as sixteen or seventeen hundred.

Sales are conducted in a spirited manner and with speed astonishing to the uninitiated. From two to three hundred piles are sold each hour. The auctioneer takes his place at the head of the first row, with the buyers around him, and away it goes. In the wake of the auctioneer comes a young man who marks the price and the buyer's name on the tags, and behind him a lightening-calculating bookkeeper who makes out the seller's bills. These bills are sent at short intervals to the office, and checks drawn, signed and turned over to the farmers. If the farmer is not satisfied with his prices he has the privilege to "take it in,"—that is, as soon as a pile is sold he may announce to the warehousemen that the price is unsatisfactory, and it is declared "no sale." It may not be offered again that day but may be the next day, or week, or he takes it home or to another market. No charges are made by the warehousemen when a sale is not effected. Buyers have employees and drays waiting, and the leaf is removed from the floor as rapidly as it is sold. The last bit of it is transferred to the prize houses and factories each day. Buyers' accounts are presented the following morning at an early hour, and must be paid promptly. The whole business is done quickly and on a cash basis.—Winston Tobacco Journal.

Surmounting a Crisis.
Edward Everett Hale used to tell with a rueful smile a story of his boyhood, when, like other boys, he occasionally mislaid some of his belongings. His gloves in particular had a strange way of disappearing one at a time. At last his mother, by way of assisting his memory, sent him out one day with a red cotton glove on one hand and a white glove on the other. Even at this painful crisis, however, his wits helped him.

"I held one hand in front of me and one behind my back," said Dr. Hale, "and it seemed to me that people coming toward me would think I had on a pair of white gloves, while those behind would think I wore a pair of bright red ones."

Throwing the Dart.
Throwing the dart is a picturesque custom which is observed in Cork, Ireland. Every third year the chief magistrate proceeds to the mouth of Cork harbor in full state. Following immemorial custom, he throws a dart into the sea—a dart with a head of gold and a shaft of mahogany—saying, "I cast this javelin into the sea and declare that as far around as it falls extend the right and dominion of the corporation of Cork to and over the harbor as well as the rivers, creeks and bays within the same."

"THIS DO IN REMEMBRANCE OF ME"

Matthew 26:17-30—November 6

THESE studies are selected for us in advance. Otherwise our preference would have been to consider the incident connected with our Lord's closing of earth life in the Spring of the year about the season at which that occurred. But Truth is always precious to us and has always profitable lessons.

Jesus was a Jew and was, therefore, obligated to every feature of the Mosaic Law. He came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfill it. Today's study points us to the fulfillment of one feature of the Law—the Passover; not that it is already entirely fulfilled, but that the antitype has for more than eighteen centuries been in process of fulfillment and the complete fulfillment, sure to come, is, we believe, near at hand. To appreciate this study we must have clearly in mind the type:

Approximately 3,500 years ago God delivered the people of Israel from the despotic power of Pharaoh, King of Egypt. Time after time Pharaoh had refused to let the people go, preferring to hold them as chattels, slaves. Time after time God had sent plagues upon Egypt as chastisements. Under the influence of each plague Pharaoh repented and through Moses entreated God for mercy upon himself, and for the people relief from the plague. Nevertheless, every manifestation of Divine mercy tended only to harden his heart until finally the tenth plague, the severest of all, was necessary. That plague consisted in the execution of the death sentence against all the first-born of Egypt. But the Israelites in Egypt were exempt from its provisions under certain conditions. Each family was required to have its own lamb, not a bone of which was to be broken. Its blood was sprinkled upon the doorposts of the house and the family, assembled within, partook of its flesh with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, pilgrim-like, with staff in hand, ready for departure out of Egypt in the morning.

Israel's First-borns Passed Over
When that night the Divine sentence slew all of Egypt's first-borns, the first-borns of Israel were passed over or spared; hence the name—Passover. And this ceremony, as a reminder of the great blessing of the Lord upon Israel, was commanded to be observed yearly as a memorial of God's goodness and because it typed, or illustrated, a still greater mercy and blessing yet to come.

A little later on those spared first-borns were exchanged for one of the tribes—Levi. Thereafter the Levites were the passed-over first-borns and were specially devoted to God and his service.

The Antitypical Fulfillment
Those experiences of the Israelites and their first-born ones were very real and properly very interesting to them; but they are still more interesting to Christians, who themselves are antitypes now being passed over. By Christians we do not mean all who merely make profession, nor all who attend Church, however regularly. We mean merely the saintly few who are now being called and being tested as to faithfulness to the Lord and by faith being passed over—from death unto life. These are Scripturally styled, "The Church of the first-borns, whose names are written in heaven" (Hebrews xii. 23). As the deliverance of the nation of Israel from Egypt took place after the sparing or passing over of the first-born, so, correspondingly, the Divine blessing will come upon the world of mankind directly after the completion of "the Church of the first-born"—directly after their passing from death unto life, by the power of the First Resurrection. If there is a first-born class it implies that there will be an after-born class. Thus the Scriptures everywhere distinctly teach that the present call, trial, testing, proving and final rewarding of the Church will not be the end of Divine mercy toward humanity, but, on the contrary, will be only its beginning; for since the saintly are spoken of as the "Church of the first-born," or as the Apostle declares, "the first-fruits unto God of his creatures," we are assured thereby that after-fruits are equally part of the Divine Program.

Amongst the Levites were several divisions representing different ranks and grades of the Church of Christ. But the principle division or section of the Levites was the priestly family of Aaron, just as there is a special class amongst the antitypical Levites, the faithful few, known in the Scriptures as the Royal Priesthood.

The Antitypical Lamb and His Blood
In Jesus' day the time had come for the fulfillment of the antitype of the Passover. Jesus himself was to be the Passover Lamb. By faith the merit of his sacrifice, his blood, was to be sprinkled upon the door-posts of his people's hearts, and his flesh, the merit of his earthly perfection, was to be eaten or appropriated by them in their minds. With it they were to eat the unleavened bread of the Divine promises and the bitter herbs of trials and adversities, and withal they were to drink wine, the blood of the grape, symbolically implying their participation with the Lamb in his ignominy and sufferings.

The Lamb of God, Jesus, the antitypical Passover Lamb, was slain nearly nineteen centuries ago on the exact anniversary of the killing of the typical lambs. The sacrifice of Jesus needs

LAYING OF AN TYPICAL PASSOVER LAMB ON DAY OF TYPICAL PASSOVER ANNIVERSARY

AFTER THE TYPICAL SUPPER THE MASTER INSTITUTING A MEMORIAL OF HIMSELF, TO BE KEPT UP UNTIL THE AN TYPICAL FIRST-BORN SHOULD BE PASSED OVER

to be repeated, for by faith we all sprinkle this same blood today, and our hearts feed upon the merit of the same earthly sacrifice, and have plenty of bitter herbs of persecution and drink of the blood—share the Master's spirit and its reward of suffering for righteousness' sake.

Not many have appreciated these privileges during all these nineteen centuries—in all but a "little flock." Nor are there many who envy them their present experiences; nor are there many who appreciate how great will be their reward and blessing in the life to come. Then, instead of suffering with Christ, they shall reign with him in glory, honor and immortality.

"This Do in Remembrance of Me"
Jesus, about to begin the fulfillment of this type by dying as the antitypical Passover Lamb (Christ our Passover is slain for us—I Corinthians v. 7), instituted for us removers an annual remembrance which, in their minds, would take the place of the type and continually remind them of the great Antitype. Instead of the literal flesh of the lamb, the Master used bread, and instead of the blood, the fruit of the vine, and instead of a further commemoration of the type, he directed that "this" be done in remembrance of the antitype—"the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," and the passover coming to the Church of the first-born, as precedent to the great blessings to result for Israel and all the families of the earth.

Our Lord as a Jew was obligated to keep the typical passover, eating of the literal lamb, etc.; first; but subsequently, after that passover supper, he instituted with the bread and the fruit of the vine his substitutionary memorial of himself, saying, "Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup; and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them; and they all drank of it. And he said, * * * Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new in the Kingdom of God"—until his second coming in power and great glory to receive the Church as his elect Bride and Joint-Heir in his Kingdom and to shower blessings richly upon Israel and through Israel upon all mankind.

Judas, the Selfish Betrayer
The hour for the betrayal was drawing near. The Master knew by some power unknown to us who would betray him, etc. Breaching the matter to the twelve, he said, "One of you will betray me." Each asked, "Is it I?" Even Judas brazenly challenged the Master's knowledge of his deceitful course and said, "Is it I?" The answer was, "It is as you have said—you are the betrayer. The Divine programme was carried out by the traitor, and the Scriptures were fulfilled which declare that he should be sold for thirty pieces of silver; but the coincidence marks the Divine foreknowledge without implying that God in any manner instigated the traitorous conduct, hence the statement, "We unto that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed." From this standpoint we are to understand that there is no hope for Judas in a future life. His sorrow and anguish before his death were such as found no compensation in any happiness he had enjoyed in previous days.

In My Father's Kingdom
In giving the disciples the bread, which represented his flesh, and the cup, which represented his blood, the Master pictorially offered them justification and sanctification, and, as St. Paul explained, he did more than this—he offered them a participation

The Veiled Prophet.
The veiled prophet, Mokanna (Hakim Ben Allah), whom Tom Moore made the subject of his beautiful poem, was a real character and not a mere poetic fiction. Mokanna lived in the eighth century. Pretending to be an incarnation of God, he founded a sect in Khorassan which for a time was quite powerful. Rebelling against the caliph, he was for a time successful, but was subdued about 750, when he and the leading men under him took poison to escape the shame of a public execution.—New York American.

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

Lady Learned About Cardui, The Woman's Tonic and is Now Enthusiastic in its Praise.

Mount Pleasant, Tenn.—"Cardui is all you claim for it, and more," writes Mrs. M. E. Rail, of this place.

"I was a great sufferer for 2 years and was very weak, but I learned about Cardui, and decided to try it. Now I am in perfect health.

"My daughter, when changing into womanhood, got in very bad health. I gave her Cardui and now she enjoys good health.

"Cardui is worth its weight in gold. I recommend it for young and old."

Being composed exclusively of harmless, vegetable ingredients, with a mild and gentle medicinal action, Cardui is the best medicine for weak, sick girls and women.

It has no harsh, powerful, near-poisonous action, like some of the strong minerals and drugs, but helps nature to perform a cure in a natural easy way. Try Cardui.

Have Beautiful Hair.

Many women do not realize that attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.
The women of Paris are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, luster and strength to the hair.
Three years ago Parasian Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair tonic and dressing can be had in every town in America. MADE GOOD AS A COOK.

The Old Lumberman Got Supper
Without the Least Effort.

"Nowadays a cook is provided for each camp," said the old lumberman who has worked on the St. Croix, the Penobscot and the St. John, "but in my days of lumbering we took turns,
a week at a time, or one man would make all the bread, another the tea
and coffee, and so on through the bill of fare. Once in a while—generally before they'd got licked into their reglar winter mold—some fellow would kick against the routine; he's been hired to do something else, or he'd be hanged if he'd cook, anyhow. Then there were ructions.

"I remember one little rebellion that began hot and roaring and died down into a laugh all round, thanks to an ingenious old soul, all quiet good nature and fat—Uncle Ned, we called him.

"We got back to camp one night to find the fire nearly out and nothing ready for supper. We were all hungry —and grouchy, as sometimes happens in the best regulated crews. Each in turn declared he wouldn't be cook, and it looked like a supperless night till Uncle Ned spoke up in his quiet way.

"Dear me," says he, "what a time about cooking! Why, it's the easiest thing in nature to get supper. Now, boys, if you'll all wait on me I'll be
cook!"

"They all agreed. This being settled, Uncle Ned sat down on a spruce chair and let his assistants have it.

"Now, Dick," said he, "the first thing for you to do is to get a little wood and start up the fire."

"Isaac, just step down to the brook
and fetch a pail of water.

"You, Mac, while the fire's getting under way, wash a few potatoes and get 'em ready to put on when the pot boils.

"Now, Jake, you cut a few slices of pork and put it on over the fire to fry."

"But, Uncle Ned," we all shouted together, "you was to get supper!"

"Yes," said he, calm and easy as ever, "I was to get supper, but you were to wait upon me. Tom," said he,
"you'd better get the dishes ready."

"We kicked some, but 'twas no use;
we'd agreed to wait on him if he'd be
cook."

"When everything was ready for supper, there the old man still sat in his spruce chair—hadn't stirred an inch!"

"Dear me, dear me," said he, "here I have got supper, and 'twas one of the easiest things in the world."

"We were 'naught,'" smiled the old lumberman, "and we sat down to supper in good temper, and ever afterward
we had Uncle Ned's proposition for a byword; we'd agree to do any living thing provided we could be 'waited upon.'"—Youth's Companion.

No Use For Them.

"I watched your sister fixing her hair
the other day," said Mrs. Nagget,
"and I must say she's not the most refined person in the world."

"No," replied her husband, with a belligerent air. "You don't approve of her, eh?"

"Well," she retorted with a disdain-ful sniff, "you'd never see me with my mouth full of hairpins."

"Of course not," he snapped. "What would you want with so many hairpins?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Declined to Tarry.

Here is one of F. R. Benson's stories of his early days of tramping in the English provinces:

"At one town I was playing to poor business. The occupants of the gallery were few and not overenthusi-astic. I was about to make an exit on the line, 'Tarry awhile and anon I will return,' upon which a voice from the gallery exclaimed: 'Don't trouble to return, guv'or. We're going and shall not be back.'"—Chicago Tribune.

DEATH BOARDS.

Curious Custom That Prevails in Eastern Bavaria.

In the eastern half of Bavaria, says
a writer in the Wide World Magazine,
on the borders of Bohemia, lies the so called Bavarian forest. This part of the country, although it boasts beautiful scenery, is seldom visited by tourists, probably for the reason that the charms of the region are little known even in Germany. This part of Bavaria has been in many ways untouched
by civilization, and owing to its seclusion from the outer world some very strange customs are still in vogue, strongly reminding one of the middle ages.

One of these strange customs, strictly observed by the population, is the way in which they keep alive the memory of their dead by the erection of what are called "todenbretter," or "death boards." These are wooden planks cut in the shape of tombstones and roughly painted. Sometimes they bear also the image of a saint. They are erected—often in a row of thirty and more—on the roadside, in fields
and meadows, near chapels and crucifixes, in the village streets—in short, everywhere; they are even nailed to houses and barns.

They do not mark burial places, as might be supposed. As soon as a person has died the corpse is put on a board, and there it lies in state until it is put into the coffin shortly before the funeral. These boards, then, are the so called "death boards," and after the funeral they are cut into a suitable shape and decorated with an inscription containing the name of the deceased, his age and in most cases
some lines of poetry.

These short poems, which are, of course, meant in sober earnest, are occasionally very amusing. The boards are then stuck somewhere near the road or in the fields, where they sometimes accumulate to an alarming number. In the poorer districts these boards are not always cut into shape and painted, but are simply deposited just as they are at the foot of some crucifix, where they remain untouched
until they molder away.

A REAL POISON PERIL.

Venom of the Most Deadly Creature in
This Country.

One venomous creature there is in this country which may justly be termed a public peril in the wildest sense. Proportionately to population more victims fall to it yearly in the United States than to the dreaded cobra in India. Some 12,000 Americans are killed every year by its bite.
Three hundred thousand more are made seriously ill from the after effects. Unfortunately the virus works so slowly that alarm is stilled. The victims do not sicken at once. The bite is forgotten, but ten days or two weeks after the subject falls into a fever. His blood is poisoned within him. Eventually in extreme cases he becomes delirious, succumbs to a stupor and dies.

Loif and Columbus Dethroned.

The paths of great discoveries have always been thorny ones, as our aspirants for polar honors can testify, but it remains for an old farmer to put forth an as yet unheard of rival to the great Columbus.

The farmer's wife was greatly stirred up by the agitation of the woman's rights question. One evening the old lady was condemning the men in very strong terms and expressing herself in favor of women's voting. The old man got tired of it. He dropped his paper and exclaimed:
"Mareddy, the men hev made out to govern this Kentry ever since Robinson Crusoe discovered it, and I guess
they will for a spell longer, so you keep still."—Youth's Companion.

Told Him.

"What's that boy yelling at?" asked
the farmer of his son.

"Why," chuckled the boy, "he's just yelling at the top of his voice."
