TWO GREAT FOOTBALL GAMES

BETWEEN COLLEGE TEAMS OF CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA

CAROLINA WINS ONE AND LOSES ONE

A. and M. of North Carolina Wins Over V. P. I. at Norfolk, and U. of N. C. Loses to U. of Va. at Richmond—Thousands of People Witness Both Games.

North Carolina came more nearly moving over into Virginia at Thanksgiving day than at any time in the history of the two States, possibly never so many Tar Heels being at one time on Virginia soil as on that day. What took them there was interest in college athletics and the spirit of pride the home folks have for their boys. Norfolk and Richmond were the objective points and the North Carolinians who went over to root for their boys found the Virginia spirit equally as strong for the home teams. Both cities were thronged with Carolinians and Virginians, and there was a happy mingling together of the two States with friendly rivalry as to which could show the greatest enthusiasm and display the most pennants. Colors of the respective colleges were in evidence everywhere, and in every imaginable shape.

The A. & M. college team of North Carolina met the V. P. I. team of Virginia in Norfolk, and the Tar Heels came off winners in a score 5 to 3 after a beautiful game. The farmer boys always save the State, and this victory makes them the champions of Southern college teams. The teams of the University of North Carolina and University of Virginia played in Richmond. The Tar Heel boys put up a fine fight, yet they lost in a score 7 to 0. While North Carolina has a good University team, those familiar with the game could detect points at the most important parts of the contest. Greenville felt much interest in the University game, as one of her boys, Mr. L. Ames Brown, was on the team.

MUTINY IN BRAZIL.

Bombarding the Capital and Making Demands.

By Wire to The Reflector.

London, Nov. 25.—Dispatches received here by business men who have large interests in Brazil say that the mutineers have surrendered and that the government is in complete control. Other dispatches deny this and say the mutineers have guns and battleships trained in Rio and are threatening to bombard the city if their demands are not granted. They demand first of all amnesty, then want increased pay, and shorter hours of duty and abolition of capital punishment. They shelled the city slightly yesterday, killing two or three persons.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 25.—The Brazilian navy is still held by the mutineers, although they are ready to accept the terms of the government if amnesty is granted. Guns are still aimed on the city. The chamber of deputies at a meeting today refused to follow the lead of the senate in granting amnesty and adjourned until tomorrow. It is believed that the measure will pass tomorrow by a narrow margin. President Fonseca says he will sign the measure.

Demands Granted.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 25.—At a special session of the chamber of deputies following that at which members had refused to grant amnesty to the mutineers, all demands of the naval rebels were finally granted. Mutineers immediately surrendered the vessels. The demands were granted because the mutineers threatened to bombard the city.

Daily Paper the Best.

Of all the advertising schemes devised, we have yet to see one which can compare favorably with the daily newspaper. Such men, and advertisers as the late P. T. Barnum, the great showman and John Wanamaker, were and are still loud in praising the daily forum of the world's events. In placing your advertisement always have an eye to the reliability of the medium.—New Bern Sun.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN.

Puts on Broiler Parlor Cars Between Norfolk and New Bern.

Norfolk, Va., November 25. The Norfolk Southern Railroad, with its already excellent passenger service, announces today that beginning Monday morning its "Day Express" leaving Norfolk at 11 a. m., will carry the latest and most modern Pullman Broiler Parlor cars between Norfolk and New Bern, in order to properly care for the increased travel. With this improved equipment the road now operates Pullman cars on all its through trains between Norfolk and Eastern North Carolina. By the addition of these dining cars a novel opportunity is afforded passengers. While comfortably seated in a parlor car they can enjoy their lunch and at the same time pass over the famous Albemarle Sound bridge, about six miles in length, and said to be the longest bridge over navigable waters in the world. Passing the historic and pretty little town of Edenton at the lunch hour, the shores of the placid old Albemarle are reached and for six miles the route leads over this wonderful engineering project of modern times to the little town of Mackeys, originally called Mackeys Ferry, but which was changed with the passing of the old ferry steamer, "John W. Garrett," that plied the waters of the Albemarle for years. No other road in the country could serve meals in its diners to its patrons under such unusual and novel surroundings.

The Norfolk Southern has improved its passenger service wonderfully within the last few months. Only within the past few weeks a night service with Pullman sleeping cars was inaugurated between this city and Goldsboro. The vast fertile section of Eastern North Carolina through which its lines traverse is brought into closer and more intimate touch with the business interests of this city, and where before the bridge over the sound was constructed and transportation, both passenger and freight, was slow and unsatisfactory, fast and comfortably equipped express trains now operate, bringing the section south of the sound and as far south as New Bern and Beaufort into closer commercial and social relations.

REMEMBER ANNIVERSARIES.

Wives Should Drop Reminders to Assure a "Surprise."

Men are "not so much" when it comes to remembering anniversaries, says Erman J. Ridgway in the Delineator for November. Occasionally you will happen upon a man who has been married more than five years who remembers to provide some little surprise for his wife on the wedding anniversary without any assistance from her, but usually it's safer for her to drop a little hint a week or ten days before the event.

Just long enough before so it won't slip out of his mind again. For men are so busy, you know. So busy providing food, clothing, and shelter for the body that poor little Cupid is often forgotten—shrieking out there in the cold.

I wish I could think of some valid excuse for the men. But I can't. They are no busier providing food, clothing and shelter than the women. They forget. I fear, as "dogs delight to bark and bite"—because it is their nature to forget. They will tell you that they remember the occasion and its significance. That is only the date they forget.

A Famous Hotel.

The Reflector has received a beautiful menu card of Thanksgiving day dinner at Ricks Hotel in Rocky Mount. It in every way shows the excellence of that famous hotel, and that it is not surpassed by those even of large cities. Mr. T. L. Bland, the proprietor, who is a Pitt county boy, is to be congratulated on the reputation he has made for the Ricks Hotel. Before getting this menu card we had already heard people who took dinner there on Thanksgiving day speak of its excellence.

TO VISIT TOBACCO GROWING SECTION

MR. E. H. MATTHEWSON GOV. EXPERT HERE NOV. 30

WILL REPORT TO TOBACCO FARMERS

Practical Results of Experiments Made on Land and Fertilization Therefrom Obtain Quantity and Quality—Important to Every Tobacco Farmer.

Through the Tobacco Association of the United States, among whose officers are several prominent tobacco-growers of Eastern North Carolina and South Carolina, the centrally located markets in these sections will be visited by a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture. This movement is the result of a resolution, passed at the last meeting of the Tobacco Association, requesting the officers to take up the matter with the Department at Washington. The meetings will be held under the auspices of the several tobacco boards of trade at the following places and time:

Rocky Mount, N. C., Tuesday morning, November 29th.

Wilson, N. C., Tuesday afternoon, November 29th.

Greenville, N. C., Wednesday morning, November 30th.

Kinston, N. C., Wednesday afternoon, November 30th.

Timmonsville, N. C., Thursday morning, November 31st.

Darlington, S. C., Thursday afternoon, November 31st.

Mullins, S. C., Friday, December 1st, during the day.

The purpose of these meetings will be to hear a report formulated by Mr. E. H. Mathewson, of the National Department of Agriculture, giving the practical results of experiments made in these sections bearing on the character of the land and fertilization thereof, to obtain the best results as to quantity and quality, and especially having in view the improvement of the burning qualities.

There will be offered an opportunity to hear a practical discussion of subjects so important to everyone connected with the tobacco business and especially the farmers, on whom nearly every interest must depend primarily for their activities, should be very much interested. For the tobacco grown in these sections to more nearly possess the burning qualities demanded by consumers will not only hold in the greatest way everyone connected with the tobacco business, but it would so popularize this tobacco that there would be a considerably increased demand. To accomplish this and at the same time increase the yields so disappointing in the recent years, is the good that the Tobacco Association of the United States are making an effort to accomplish through the instrumentality of the department of agriculture at Washington, which will be ably and efficiently represented.

This representative has been working for some time in getting up the proper data for this trip, and everything points that it should be resultant of great benefits to everyone connected with the tobacco interests in these sections.

ENGINEER DIED AT POST.

Discovery Made by Signals Being Disregarded.

By Wire to The Reflector. Racine, Wis., Nov. 25.—The lives of 300 passengers on a train on the Milwaukee road hung in the balance when Michael Crawley, the engineer, died at his post. The fireman noticed that the signals were being disregarded. He called the engineer, and receiving no response, discovered that he was dead.

What North Carolina needs, is for our next legislature to put a State tax on dogs and place sheep on the free list. This would greatly encourage the raising of sheep within our borders and be a long step forward in reducing the present high cost of living.—Salisbury Post.

Best Managed City in the World

Frederic C. Howe, one of the foremost writers on governmental problems, points the way for American cities by telling them of the city of Dusseldorf in Germany. In the December number of Hampton's Magazine, he calls Dusseldorf a socialized city managed by business men who do not believe in socialism.

The cities in America's problem of problems, declares Mr. Howe, its solution will not be found in a business administration. Its solution does not lie in merely putting good men in office, or in finding better political tools, such as the Des Moines plan.

The sultan consists in making the city a humanized entity, with purposes and plans, with foresight and dreams; it consists in abolishing poverty and the costs of poverty, in raising the people properly, in raising their standards of living, of happiness and of morals.

"I have often dreamed of a city whose ideals rose above mere business, a city that was built like a home, that had a communal business of vision that was planned by builders, and that served its people as a father might serve his children," says Mr. Howe. "And I have seen such cities in Germany, the nation which alone recognizes the portentous significance of the change which has taken place in the distribution of population."

"Of all German cities, I think Dusseldorf is easily the first. It is not an old residence city like Dresden or Munich. It is a comparatively new city like Cleveland, Milwaukee, Indianapolis or Kansas City. Its population was but 69,000 people in 1871. It now is 300,000."

"Dusseldorf, too, is an industrial city of mills, factories and workshops. It is located on the lower Rhine in the heart of the industrial region that has sprung into existence since the Franco-Prussian War. It might be as unalluring as Pittsburgh. It might be ruled by business men in their own interest as most of our American cities; it might be built without beauty and suffer from the corruption that has brought shame to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Denver, Cincinnati, and a score more. But none of these things is true of Dusseldorf."

"This industrial city is one of the best governed cities in the world. It has dreamed dreams and dared to carry them into execution. It is almost as beautiful as Washington, full of the joy of living as Paris, and is managed with more scrupulous honesty, more scientific efficiency, and more devoted pride than almost any American business corporation. This city is built for the comfort and convenience of its people. It is designed as master architects might design a world's fair to which all mankind was invited for education, recreation and art."

"But the thing that most distinguishes Dusseldorf is this—her people and her officials seem to appreciate that congestion of population has made it necessary for the city to own many things. And these German citizens understand, too, that the things the city does not own must be regulated and controlled to prevent them harming city or citizens."

"Dusseldorf does more things for its people than any city I know. It owns its street railroads and the controlling interest in a system of inter-urban railroads; it owns its harbor and its docks and its slaughterhouses, its gas, electric light and water plants. It operates three separate bank and loan enterprises, a large wine business, several restaurants and milk depots; it owns and rents suburban villas and large apartment houses; it is a great land speculator and city land owner; it possesses art galleries, an opera house, museums and exposition hall, and indirectly owns the leading hotel in the city. It has public baths and cemeteries and pawnshops.

Dusseldorf has made a beginning at housing its people. It is the owner of suburban villas and model tenement houses and is a stockholder in a scheme of co-operative apartment houses in which the workmen are joint owners.

The country villas rent for from six to seven dollars a month. A three or four-room apartment in the city rents for about the same sum. The rooms in the latter are twice the size of those of the tenement house in America, and all of them have outside air. These apartments are as clean and sanitary as can be. The co-operative apartment are built about courtyards which serve as playgrounds and are surrounded by flower gardens. There is free water and a scullery with every flat of three rooms or more.

In order to secure an apartment in one of these desirable buildings, the tenant must become a shareholder in the company, buying five dollars worth of stock. The tenants are not the recipients of charity. On the contrary, they are part owners and cooperate in the management. They elect a house manager who collects the rent and represents them before the company. The tenant stockholders receive four per cent a year on their investment, and the company agrees to redeem their stock at any time on six months notice. There are five hundred such apartments in the city and ten large apartment houses in process of building.

"If the Dusseldorf workmen want a house of his own it is made easy for him to acquire one." Mr. Howe points out. "He can borrow money from the City Mortgage Bank, that annual business of which amounts to above $5,000,000. He can also place his money in the City Savings Bank which has deposits of over ten million dollars; and if he is in distress he can go to the City Pawn Shop and make a loan on his chattel at a moderate rate of interest. The loans of the pawnshop amount to $300,000."

The question of when to sell cotton is one to which we would not attempt to give any positive answer but we believe that, one year with another, there is one safe rule: Begin selling early, if prices are good; stop selling when prices begin to break; sell only enough at first to get yourself free from debt; store your surplus in the dry and market gradually keeping in touch with the market and refusing to sell when prices break. The man who is independent can sell when he chooses; the man in debt must sell at the demand of his creditors; hence our advice first get out of debt and then whenever the market is depressed. —Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

A Quaker Girl's Yes.
A young Quaker had been for some time casting diffident glances at a maiden of the same persuasion. While she, true to the tenets of her upbringing, had given him mighty little encouragement. However, one day the opportunity of placing the matter upon a more stable footing presented itself to Seth, and he shyly inquired, "Martha, dost thou love me?"
"Why, Seth, we are commanded to love one another," quoth the maiden.
"Ah, Martha, but dost thou feel what the world calls love?"
"I hardly know what to tell thee, Seth. I have tried to bestow my love upon all, but I have sometimes thought that thou wast getting more than thy share."

Waterproofing Woolen.
A simple way to make woolen garments waterproof is given in La Terre Vaudoise. It was told to the editor by an old forester:
Have two small tubs. In each put eight or nine quarts of rainwater. In one dissolve 150 grains of alum and in the other the same weight of acetate of lead. When dissolved pour one into the other. A white precipitate will fall. Then pour off the clear liquid into the other tub. In this dip the garments to be treated. Do not wring them out, but hang them up to drip. When they are dry a gray powder will appear, which may be brushed off. The colors will not be affected, and the cloth will shed water for a year, when it may be treated again.

The Simplon Pass.
The Simplon pass was a famous highway of travel long before Napoleon constructed the highroad. Milton came home that way from his grand tour, and so did John Evelyn. The latter traveler went in fear of his life, not only expecting avalanches to fall on him, but being apprehensive lest bears and wolves should issue from the caves in the precipices and assail him. The only actual harm which happened, however, was that his companion's dog killed a goat belonging to one of the peasants and that heavy compensation had to be paid—"a pistol," says the diary, "for the goat and ten more for attempting to ride away."

Why She Was Anxious.
This conversation really took place the other night between a man and his wife, who live in Lakewood.
"Have you fastened up all the windows and the door to the kitchen?" she inquired as they were about to retire for the night.
"Sure," he replied. "But what's the use? I gave you the last dollar I had day before yesterday to pay for that new dress of yours."
"Oh, yes, but the dress is in the lower drawer of the dresser in the front bedroom, just where the burglars would be most likely to get in, and they might ransack the drawers and get the dress all muddled up and ruined."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wild California.
The geography published in 1812 contains the following startling description of that section of our country which Charles Dudley Warner baptized "our Italy."
"California is a wild and almost unknown land, covered throughout the year by dense fogs as damp as they are unhealthy. On the northern shores live anthropophagi, and in the interior are active volcanoes and vast plains of shifting snow, which sometimes shoot up columns to inconceivable heights."
The book adds that some of these statements would seem incredible were they not so well authenticated by trustworthy travelers!

A Painter's Broken Arm.
A friend once entered the studio of George Inness, the American landscape painter, while he was at work and remarked that the picture on the easel seemed to him much better than certain former works of the artist.
"Right!" said Inness. "This is going to be one of my best things, and the reason is that I have had the good luck to break my right arm and am obliged to paint with my left hand. You see," he added, showing his right hand in a sling, "this hand had become so darned clever that I could not catch up with it, and it painted away without me, while this hand"—showing the left, with which he held his brush—"is awkward and can do nothing without me."

Lunch Room Repartee.
The young man with the iron cheek entered the quick lunch room and seated himself at the third table.
"Belinda," he called familiarly, "you look fresh this morning."
"Not half as fresh as some others," retorted the pretty waitress, with an elevation of her nose.
"Well, well! Have you calf brains?"
"If I did you wouldn't order them, for you have an oversupply now."
"My, but you are getting good for the matinee! With the high price of meats eggs come in handy these days, don't they?"
"No; they come in crates."
"Wow! Did you ever hear the story of the incubator chick? It's not out yet."
"That will do, sonny. Did you ever hear the story of the cold porridge? Well, it's on you!"
There was an unexpected tilting of a dish, and the young man with the iron cheek was showered with oatmeal.—Boston Post.

Consolation.
A little girl of thirteen or so found herself one day possessed of a new emotion—a desire to be pretty. She struggled with it, but finally went to the long mirror in the hall and for the first time in her life looked at herself critically from head to foot. She saw what most girls see at thirteen—a lanky creature, mostly legs and arms, hands and feet. It hurt her, and she went out of doors to think it over. Thought resulted in tears, and in tears she was found half an hour later by her particular chum, a boy near her own age. Anxious inquiry as to why she was crying induced her to speak.
"Oh, Harold," she wailed, "I've just looked at myself in the glass, and I'm so homely!"
The boy was puzzled, but sympathetic, and made an effort at consolation. He looked at her a minute, then awkwardly patted her, saying soothingly:
"Not homely, Alice; just funny looking."—New York Times.

In the Air.
East Wind—Well, they have us harnessed. West Wind—Yes, but they can't drive us tandem.—New York Sun.

Good Thing to Know.
If you own a Hyomei hard rubber inhaler Coward & Wooten wants you to know that they will sell you a bottle of HYOMEI for only 50 cents.
Remember this, all who suffer with catarrh—a bottle of HYOMEI (pronounce it High-ome) is put up in a separate package and sold for 50 cents, to accommodate the vast army of people who already own a Hyomei inhaler.
Coward & Wooten will sell it to you at that price and give you the opportunity to begin at once to rid yourself of vile catarrh and snuffing, hawking and spitting that go with it.
Many people through years of neglect have let catarrh get a strong hold upon them. Some of these people unreasonably think that one bottle of HYOMEI ought to cure them. No matter how chronic your catarrh troubles, HYOMEI is guaranteed by Coward & Wooten to cure them if you give it half a chance. Just breathe it three or four times a day, soothing, antiseptic properties will make you feel better in a day.
If you own an inhaler get a 50-cent bottle of HYOMEI at Coward & Wooten's today. If you do not own a Hyomei inhaler, ask for a $1 outfit, which includes inhaler.

STEALING A HORSE.

A Bold Afghan Robber Who Had a Sense of Humor.

An East Indian officer, writing of life in Peshawur in the early seventies of the last century, relates the following:

The medical officer of my regiment was informed one night that a valuable and favorite Arab steed of his had been stolen. Over the border, gone forever, he never expected to see his horse again, but next day, much to his surprise, there came to him a bearded ruffian riding bare backed the stolen steed.

He confessed that he had taken the animal, but, learning that it was the property of a hakim (physician), had brought it back. The horse had been tethered in line with others, with men, women and children sleeping in the open about them.

"How did you manage it?" asked the doctor.

"If the sahib will give the necessary order," he said, "I will show him."

The entire scene was reproduced, even to the night watchman asleep in a corner. Noiselessly the Afghan crawled toward the Arab, treading snake-like through the prostrate forms to where it was standing at the end of the row. Softly hissing to attract the animal's attention without causing alarm, he gently raised himself with arm extended.

In his open palm were some lumps of ghor (native sugar), beloved of horses, and while the Arab was enjoying these the man was caressing him with the other hand, whence suspended a watering bridle taken from his wallet. Quickly this was adjusted, and then, stroking soothingly, the robber passed his hand over the animal's back and down the hind quarters. Swiftly the heel ropes were unlatched, then the head gear released, and with a bound he was astride and away, his right hand backward flung, shouting triumphantly as he passed, "Thus was it done!"

The joke was that he never came back! A double restitution would have been too much of a wrench.

A MAN'S WHISKERS.

They Should Not Be Renovated With the Shoebrush.

If men would devote as much loving care to their whiskers as women do to their hair they would contribute greatly to increasing the dignity of the sex.

A woman wouldn't think of coming downtown without having her hair properly arranged. She combs it, and fusses with it, and pads it out with rats, and puts wire cages under it, and runs ribbons through it, and she is a vision of loveliness when she appears in the busy haunts of men.

But a man gives his whiskers no attention further than to brush the eggshells or clam chowder out of them with the shoebrush. It never seems to occur to him that his whiskers might be made beautiful if he would devote one-half the time to them that a woman gives to her hair. He might easily have made a wire cage to attach to his chin, and then he could weave his whiskers around it in captivating styles and tie the ends together with a pink or blue ribbon.

The alfalfa editor gets tired of seeing the same old fashions in whiskers when it would be so easy to devise new and striking ways of wearing them. There should be a whiskers club in Emporia. If such an organization

Sorghum.

Here comes Colonel Thomas W. Claws right into our own ballwick, telling us something about sorghum and its bi-product that we didn't know. We have fed cane to the mill and have seen the juice spurt from the iron cylinders, we have seen the juice poured in the big kettle and brog'd to a "bile." With a long handled ladle we have scooped off the scum and cast it away, but we have never seen it thrown into a barrel to convert itself into molckum. One consolation we have is that Brother Ashcraft of The Monroe Enquirer, who is fairly surrounded by sugar cane, had never heard of it, either. Molckum must be a drink fit for the swine. The praise which Colonel Claws bestows upon North Carolina sorghum is well placed and there are abundant evidences this fall of the revival of this industry. For some years past there has been a sorghum works on Ninety-first street, Charlotte, near Sugar Creek church, and there are more cane mills in operation in Mecklenburg county this season than there has been known in years. If we were given our choice for supper between a hotel lay-out and a set-down to sorghum, hot biscuit, fresh butter and a pint of unstripped milk, we would take the latter—for once, anyhow.—Charlotte Chronicle.
