BUILDING THE CHARACTER

IMPORTANCE OF OPENING EXERCISES TRAINING SCHOOL

OUR RELIGION AND LIFE ARE ONE

President Wright Devotes Twenty Minutes Each Morning to These Exercises, Giving Talks to the Students That are Timely and Helpful.

As we have had opportunity from time to time to attend the daily opening exercises of the Training school, we have been much impressed with them, and we feel that we can do nothing better for our readers than now and then give them an insight into what their sons and daughters are getting in this institution in addition to their training in books. The students of any school will generally imbibe the spirit of the institution and it is here largely that they get their ideals of life and character. There is no part of the work of this school richer in thought or more helpful in ideal than these daily chapel exercises.

Wednesday morning Pres. Wright talked to the students on the purposes of the opening exercises. Below we give in substance his remarks:

By promise to you yesterday morning, I am going to talk to you this morning on the purpose of our opening exercises. I want the attention this morning of every student in this school. Those who so far forgot to talk during the reading of the Scripture yesterday morning, and those who so far forgot as to study their books during the reading of the Scripture, I want your attention just as well as the attention of those who at all times give their attention to what is being said.

Last week, this week and next week, taking the three weeks as one unit, I have had the most important piece of work to do that has ever fallen to my lot to do. Planning and working for the future of a great institution for our State, that is intended to send out into our State well trained young men and women to teach the rising generation. To lead them to higher, nobler things. . . . I feel that now is the time that we ought to form a correct idea of the purpose we have in this twenty minutes' period of each school day.

Religion and life are one, and ought to be for every human being. There may be some here who feel these opening exercises are not of the right kind of religious exercises. I dare say that there are a great number who feel that way but to tell the truth it would be most unnatural if you, some of you, did not feel that way, because unfortunately religion and Christianity have been a matter for the Sabbath day alone and we put on our religion and take it off just as we put on our church clothes and take them off, and we have the feeling growing out of that, that religion does not enter into everything that we do at all times. Now I am fully cognizant of the fact that this, possibly, that there is not another institution in this State, public or private, that has the form of opening exercises as we call them, that we have. There is a purpose, if you will, in having these exercises just as they are. To me and I hope it will be to you, our worship, our religion, our Christianity should enter into everything that we do and should enter in at all times. If we are living the kind of lives that we should live, if we are conducting our lives in the way we should conduct them, if we as Christians are following the example of the One who came to earth and established what is known as the Christian religion, then we are putting Christianity into everything. Read, I believe it is, the 12th chapter of Matthew, 1-13, where Christ's Disciples did those things that were contrary to the law. I hope you paid attention to what I read you this morning,—how those people accused Paul of doing things contrary to the customs of Jesus. Everything that is done that does not exactly harmonize with an established custom is looked upon as something bad. I do not believe that the evil in this world is—I believe that we would not have had this growth and development in human civilization that this world has seen since the coming of Christ or before that had evil dominated in this world. Now some will say that is hearsay, but it is not. I do not mean to say that evil does not exist. There is a constant warfare and if we, as a people, could instill into our everyday life some of the spirit of Christianity some of the genuine religious spirit into our everyday life, we could have a glorious world this soon would be. But too many of us over look this, like the young lady whom I read of not long ago. She was going to Atlantic City to have a good time, so she thought she would say her prayers on the train. So she said them counting the beads on her neck, and after she had said them she found out she had been counting the beads of the chain on which she had her fan.

Now, just let's hold to the motive of her saying her prayers before she arrived at Atlantic City. In order that she might throw her religion away while she was there and have a good time, she said them on the train before she got there. Now, there are too many of us in this world that treat our religion in the same way. We go to church and we get enough religion in one short sermon to last for the next seven days. Now that is not my idea of Christianity. If she could not live the Christian life while she was at Atlantic City, she was not living it when she was away from Atlantic City, and if we in the work that we are undertaking as students in this institution, cannot put Christianity into our work, with the work, if you please, right with the work, we are not living the type of Christian life that we ought to live.

Now the purpose of these opening exercises are to set a daily example of this very principle of Christianity. We do not put into these exercises just the devotional part and nothing else, as devotional is usually interpreted. But it is our purpose as near as possible, that everything we do here shall be of such a nature as to bring out our best, the noblest, there is in human character, and it is put this way on purpose, that we as students in this school may realize the opportunity that we have while here, and make our religion a part of our work. One thing has come to my mind is, that it throws it right into the work of the day.

So many of us want to pray or the train and frolic after. Don't frolic if you cannot engage in that amusement that can carry into it the right kind of living. May the principles that tend to lead and elevate you to higher and nobler lives and make you better men and women, go on with you and through you with others forever, and may the evil influences that come into your lives perish, yea, before they shall perish with you in the grave.

Now our trouble has been this. We haven't had much trouble but the most of our trouble with reference to our opening exercise lies in the fact that we are, some of us, not all, but some of us are accustomed to have religion as one thing and live as another. A few of us have been well raised and I don't want you to go out from here this morning and say I said you have not been well raised, but some of us haven't conducted ourselves as we should and you have in that way reflected discredit upon the honor from which you come, and there is more blame—you are more to be blamed than the person, whoever he or she may be, who has not been properly raised, but some of us compared with you, blameless. God holds us responsible for the environment that we have just as much as he holds us responsible for the opportunity we have and if in these opening exercises we are not able to conduct ourselves as we should and change our attitude toward the exercises, I say the blame lies with you.

They say that the people in North Carolina are slow and that it takes us a long time to make up our minds what to do. Well, that is also absolutely false, but there are people in North Carolina and out of North Carolina and every where else who can not respond quickly to the demand of the hour and minute.

Now, from this day, I hope that at the opening exercises of this school, that we will, all of us, the ninety and nine have already, but I want one hundred per cent, all of us to throw our souls into the religious part and to take from these minutes that we spend together here, take each moment something into your life that will help you to live a better and nobler and purer, & more

TURKISH MASSACRES.

Horrible Deeds Perpetrated by the Fanatics.

By Cable to The Reflector.

Jerusalem, Dec. 15.—Hundreds of inhabitants in many Turkish villages in Syrian Villayet, have been massacred at the hands of Berdoin fanatics, according to reports from refugees arriving here today. Horrifying details of the wholesale slaughter of the Turkish garrison and Turkish officials were told. Soldiers were put to sword and no mercy was shown by the frenzied tribesmen. The maddened tribesmen drove women and children before them and carried off many prisoners from the devastated villages. In cases where defense was made the defenders of families were subjected to the most brutal torture.

AFTER ELECTRIC TRUST.

Attorney General Plans to Smash Them All.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Attorney General Wickersham has laid plans to smash every trust this is now operating under patent rights and directly controlling prices to wholesalers and retailers. For two weeks the attorney general has had special agents working on a case that is to be filed against the electric trust. Today it was ascertained that among 28 or possibly 35 defendants who will be criminally or civilly prosecuted are included the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Company. A mass of evidence has been collected.

Insurgents Oppose Nominations.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Senate judiciary committee today reported favorably upon the nomination of Associate Justices VanDevanter and Lamar for the United States Supreme court. The commerce court nominations were referred to a sub-committee because of insurgent opposition to Messrs. Knapp and Archibald.

Twelve Entombed in Mine.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Denver, Col., Dec. 15.—An explosion in the Leydon coal mine today entombed twelve men, possibly more. The fate of the men is unknown, but it is feared they are dead. The upper works about the mine caught fire and prevented the escape of the men.

Robin Cooper Gets Married.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 15.—The marriage of Robin Cooper, slayer of Senator E. W. Carmack, and Miss Eva Lee Smith, daughter of Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, will take place today at the home of the bride's father.

viceable, and I do hope, yes, I hope and pray that every student in this school will realize that to live a real Christian life means to take that life with you in every act of your life and to make it a part of your life. Now I have touched only one or two purposes this morning, but I must not keep you longer.

Saw Mill Boiler Bursts in Sampson County, Seriously Scalding Five Men—Charlotte Club Wins Verdict in Liquor Case—Found Pearl in Oysters—Mule Killed Cow Near Wadesboro.

In a quart of oysters which she purchased at Hooper's market yesterday, Mrs. Margaret Moore who lives on West Horah street, found a beautiful pearl which has considerable value. Fortunately the pearl was found before the oysters had been heated and it retains all of its beautiful colorings and lustre.—Salisbury Post.

Saturday Mr. Tobe Tice, who lives on Mr. W. P. Ledbetter's place four miles north of town, had a cow killed in a very unusual manner. He turned his mule loose in the lot where the cow was and the mule, after wallowing, got up and kicked the cow in the head, crushing her skull and breaking her neck.—Wadesboro Messenger-Intelligencer.

What we need in North Carolina is intelligent farming. The farm demonstration work in the corn growing contest in this State shows that all the acres entered in the contest produced an average of little more than 58 bushels per acre. This shows that the land is all right and that only method and intelligent farming is necessary to make it yield not only abundantly but astonishingly.—Wilmington Star.

Wilmington, Dec. 14.—News has just reached Wilmington of a dreadful accident that occurred near Orange, Sampson county, late yesterday afternoon. The boiler of a saw mill, owned by Samuel Faircloth, exploded and Samuel Faircloth, Daniel Bass, Cleveland Williams, Henry Tew and Adolphus Sessions, were all seriously scalded. It is feared that the injuries of the first three named will prove fatal. All of the men are white.

Raleigh, Dec. 14.—The Supreme court in the case of State vs Colonial club, of Mecklenburg, through the controlling opinion of the court by Justice Manning this afternoon reverses the verdict of the lower court, thereby declaring that the club has not violated the State prohibition law in keeping indiscriminate storage of beer for members and dispensing it to members and their friends on presentation of coupons held by members to the face value of the beer they have in storage. Dissenting opinions by Chief Justice Clark and Justice Hoke pronounce the Colonial club system, a co-operative bar room.

Lecture in Training School.

Rev. B. W. Spilman will deliver a lecture in the auditorium of the E. C. Training School Saturday evening at 8 p. m. There are few more popular lecturers than Mr. Spilman and a rare treat is in store for those who will be so fortunate as to hear him. The public is cordially invited.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The People Who Come and Go on Our Trains.

Col. Harry Skinner left Wednesday evening for Washington City.

Miss Lena Matthews, of Kinston, is visiting Mrs. J. G. Moye.

Mrs. R. J. Cobb went to Norfolk today.

Mr. H. McClelland went to Hobgood today.

Mr. George S. Oden, bookkeeper for the Raleigh Creamery Co., of Raleigh, spent today here with his sister, Mrs. J. G. Latham.

'Uncle Betts' Here.

It was a real pleasure to see Rev. A. D. Betts, "Uncle Betts" as we all love to call him, here today. He and his good wife came in Wednesday evening for a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Brown. This is the first visit to Greenville in some time, and he was hurrying around today to shake hands with his many friends. He says Greenville has made such progress he could hardly recognize the town, and that the Training School was a beautiful scene to him. Everybody here loves "Uncle Betts."

DEATH OF TRAINED NURSE

Cabarrus Young Woman Leaves Sick Room to Die.

Perhaps the saddest death The Post has ever recorded was that of Miss Emily Bernhardt, a trained nurse, which occurred at the Whitehead-Stokes Sanatorium at 9:05 o'clock Saturday. Her death was really tragic and is but another evidence of the terrible danger these brave girls must face who take up nursing as a life work. About two months ago Miss Bernhardt waited on Dr. Chritzberg, at Monroe, N. C., who had a violent attack of typhoid fever, and who succumbed to the disease. Returning to Salisbury after his death she waited on a patient at Spenser for several weeks. Her next work as a professional nurse was at Mr. C. M. Brown's where she was nursing Mrs. Brown and where she was taken ill.

When resigning her duties at Mr. Brown's she stated that she did not think it safe to remain there longer as she was afraid she had the fever. Going at once to her home at Mr. M. H. Woodson's she became dangerously ill. After a few days she was removed to the sanatorium where she received the best attention from loving friends and companions, but her soul passed to rest Saturday night.

With the deceased at the time of her death was a sister, Miss Alice Bernhardt, who lives in Greensboro. She recognized her sister during Saturday. Early yesterday morning Mr. W. P. Smith, an uncle from Charlotte, arrived in the city. Miss Bernhardt had one sister, Mrs. James McClelland, who recently moved to Charlotte.

The deceased was 27 years old, and born and reared in Cabarrus county near Harrisburg. She graduated as a trained nurse from the Whitehead-Stokes Sanatorium nearly two years ago and has since made her home in Salisbury, practicing her profession. She was a beautiful character, loved and admired by all who knew her.

The remains were taken to Harrisburg yesterday morning. From there the body was taken to Rocky River.—Salisbury Post.

Cotton Seed Selection.

Mr. J. W. Fox, of Stoneville Miss., director of the agricultural experiment station there, thinks that the cotton producing area of the United States is destined to be extended northward under the influence of advancing prices and shortage in supply as regards the world's demand. He points out that in the past cotton has been grown on a commercial scale in Delaware, Maryland, Indiana and Illinois. "According to tests made with twenty or more varieties of cotton by the experiment stations of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi," says this authority further, "the average yield of the best varieties was 275 pounds greater than the poorest. In other words, the best varieties made 50 per cent. more cotton than did the poorest varieties." The moral is that proper seed selection is among the most important factors in the profitable production of cotton anywhere.—Charlotte Observer.

A GENTLEMAN FARMER.

Electricity Is His Hired Man and Does All His Work.

E. E. Miner lives on a farm near Oriskany Falls, Oneida county, New York. When he moved to the farm he noticed that Oriskany creek, if dammed at a certain place, would produce a six-foot waterfall. He built a dam, and put in a waterwheel—a $300 turbine that yielded twenty-five horse-power. Over the waterwheel he built a power house in which he placed a dynamo for the water wheel to run. The electricity was wired 1,700 feet to the farm buildings.

Mr. Miner had imagination. He put his electricity to work in every possible place about the premises. He heated and lighted the house with electricity; did the cooking with electricity; did the washing and ironing with electricity; did the sweeping with electricity; beat eggs—and at three different speeds, too—with electricity; turned the ice cream freezer with electricity, and, in summer ventilated the house with electric fans.

Nor is that all. Electricity, working through a vacuum milking machine, milks twenty cows, two at a time; drives the cream separator; churns; pumps water into every room in the house and into the stall of each horse and cow; drives lathes and drills in workshop; drives a circular saw to cut cord-wood; drives an ensilage cutter. The water wheel and the dynamo run weeks at a time without attention. Rather than be bothered to go to the wheel-house and shut off the water, Mr. Miner installed a device that causes the current, when not in use, to enter resistance coils, from which it is dissipated in the form of heat.—The Delinquent.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1910.

The president seems to know where to look for a good man, and he finds him in the Democratic ranks.

We doubt if President Taft gains any Democratic votes by it, if he should be the Republican candidate next time.

The wife of the wealthy West Virginia pork packer who tried to poison him, is going to plead insanity. We thought as much.

There is nothing like climbing up in the world. A Cincinnati bell boy has fallen heir to $125,000 left him by an uncle in Ireland.

An Asheville citizen has demanded $1,000 from the city for the cutting down of two trees in front of his property. They must have been valuable trees.

When people get robbed of money hid about their homes, we could have lots more sympathy for them if they were not disregarding the oft repeated advice to put their money in the bank.

The less than 25,000 crowd are still waiting. Bob Phillips has already given it out that Greensboro is looking for only about 15,000. Guess to speak in advance to avoid having to explain about the balance of the 42,000 claimed.

Next week will be "home coming" week everywhere, and the absent ones will be getting home to spend Christmas. A joyous time it will be, the happiest of all the year. We hope every home will have a real touch of the Christmas spirit.

Drainage as a Developer.
What drainage will do for a country is evidenced in the great drainage project in the Florida Everglades, the most immense morass on the American continent. The drainage of this great fertile region was undertaken a few years ago under State auspices, backed by private capital, and it is opening virtually an empire embracing a vast region of timber land and soil of unsurpassed fertility in the midst of a glorious climate.

At first the proposition to drain the Everglades was looked upon as the phantasm of dreamers and there was tremendous opposition to it but progressive ideas prevailed and those who believed in the possibilities of that region, as a result of drainage, triumphed. The drainage project called for the expenditure of a mint of money and many miles of canals have been constructed, drying off the land and concentrating the swamp waters into navigable streams, so that not only are the lands being reclaimed but water transportation has been provided in a territory of many hundreds of square miles. Thus the wealth of timber is made available and the rich lands brought into service. The jungles are giving way to the march of progress. The alligator is driven from his haunts and the wild beasts from their lair to make way for productive man. Better still, the breeding place of malaria is being destroyed.

One big scheme calls for another, and consequently the expenditure of capital attracts more capital. That is the inevitable result when people do something. Thus, the drainage of the Everglades called for a railroad and made a project of that kind so necessary that capital was attracted and forthcoming for the purpose. The possibilities emphasized by the great drainage project induced the Florida East Coast Railway Company to undertake the construction of railway lines of 135 miles at a cost of more than $1,500,000. The Star's Associated Press dispatches yesterday morning announced that the contract for the railroads had been let, that work is to begin within 30 days, and the road or roads completed in three years. The main line of the new railroad will run to Lake Okechobee in the very heart of the Everglades and it will open up a territory of great extent, covered with virgin timber worth millions of dollars in lumber and naval stores, to mention the millions of acres of land re-claimed for trucking, agriculture and cattle raising.

Development depends upon sizing up the possibilities of a country and doing something instead of dreaming and talking. The drainage of the Everglades made way for a branch line of Mr. H. M. Flagler's great East Coast Railroad, and the new railroad will have the way for the expenditure of many more millions in the development of the lumber and land resources of a heretofore waste place given over to malaria and wild animals. The investment in the drainage of the Everglades will be a bagatelle compared with the millions in resources to be developed.

The drainage projects in the swamp regions of North Carolina become more important when we consider the tremendous results of drainage in Louisiana, Texas and Florida. Let the good work go on without delay.—Wilmington Star.

Farmers' Institutes.

Some valuable suggestions as to the importance of the farmers' institutes carried on under the auspices of the State Department of Agriculture are to be found in a recent report of Mr. T. B. Parker, who is in charge of this particular work. Mr. Parker traces an intimate relationship between improved methods of farming and attendance upon these institutes. The work was inaugurated in 1903, when 17 institutes were held. During 1910 there have been 369 institutes, 196 for men and 173 for women, at which the total attendance reached 50,000. This very gratifying growth in the work is good evidence that the people who attend them realize the very great benefits derivable from such attendance. The farmer goes away with a more thorough grasp of the possibilities of his fields when subjected to modern processes, while his wife gets new ideas as to household economics, general sanitary laws and other equally vital phases of rural life. The institutes have proved a wonderful assistance to the forward movement in agriculture which is such a feature of the history of the decade in North Carolina, and it is earnestly to be desired that attendance upon them be increased to include the entire body of farmers. It is very certain that the department of agriculture will see that the supply of facilities for holding such gatherings continues equal to all possible demands.—Charlotte Observer.

Better Seeds.

I believe that there is as much to be done in the improvement of our crops by good breeding and selection of seed as in any actual improvement of the soil, and when both go hand-in-hand there is bound to be the greatest improvement. But as to the improvement of seed in a rational way. Do not imagine, as one of my correspondents recently wrote that planting cotton when the signs in the twins will give you twin-bolled cotton, for it will do nothing of the sort unless your seed has a hereditary tendency to produce twin bolls. It may be questioned too, whether the twin bolls are best, or whether a large single boll will not usually give a better staple. We must have in mind an ideal plant, and select seed from plants that come nearest to the ideal we have in mind. Careful selection year after year, and the elimination of inferior plants around, either in corn or cotton, will result in establishing a hereditary or a tendency to come true to type. In improving cotton, or corn either, I would plant with the best seed obtainable a patch remote from other lands, and in the seed cotton patch I would pull out every plant that seemed to be a rogue and not the style of plant I wanted, so that none of its pollen could be carried to the plants I wanted to save for seed. Then select for the new seed plot seed from the plants that come nearest to your ideal of what a cotton plant should be, and use the remainder of the seed for the general crop. Keep this up year after year till you find there are no long-legged rogues in the seed plot, and getting a uniform type, you can easily keep up the type in the same way.—W. F. "NOW IS CHRIST RISEN"

Matthew 28:1-20—December 18
"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world's age."—Matt. 28:20.

THE Scriptures give very particular details respecting the death of Jesus and his burial in Joseph's new tomb, wherein none had previously been buried and respecting the sealing of the tomb and the setting of a guard lest the body should be stolen at night. But while these matters are interesting to us, they probably do not now have the same importance that they had when they were written. From this distance we feel inclined to ask about the general character of Jesus' disciples who declared his resurrection, rather than to inquire particularly respecting all the details which they enumerated. In broad terms we say, if the characters of the Apostles prove themselves satisfactory to us, we are ready to take their word respecting the resurrection of Jesus and his subsequent appearances to them. On the other hand, if they were bad men or otherwise unworthy to be believed, no amount of details respecting the tomb, the watch, the seals, etc., would be satisfactory to us, because cunning and designing men could make up the story to suit their desires.

Jesus, the risen and glorious, appeared to the eleven in an upper room, in a form similar to that in which he was crucified.

He ascended up on high, the leader of a multitude of captives, here to appear in God's presence forever.

But it was not so at the time of our Lord's death and resurrection. It was then very necessary that every little detail should be explicitly specified. The parts of three days and nights, for instance, were unimportant to them because of Jesus' words, which they remembered. He likened his period in death to the period in which Jonah was in the whale's belly. There are some today disposed to quibble over the matter and to claim that Jesus died on Thursday and not on Friday. Surely, however, all can concede that it matters nothing to us on which day of the week he died, nor the number of hours he was in the tomb, whether seventy-two hours to the minute or a less exact time. With us the important question is, Did he die? Did he arise from the dead? Was there a value in his sacrificial death, from the Divine standpoint, and how is that value or merit made applicable to mankind, and have we obtained our interest therein according to the Divine terms?

"He Rose Again on the Third Day"

With the majority of Christians for these many centuries we agree that Jesus was in the tomb parts of three days and nights; that he died on Friday afternoon, and that he arose from the dead early on Sunday morning. But we are not contentions. Let who likes believe that he died on Thursday or Wednesday or Tuesday or another day; this is a matter of no importance. The all-important matter is, "He ever liveth to make intercession for us." (Rom. 8:34.) The stone at the mouth of the scowlschre was not a large boulder, as many suppose, but was shaped like a wheel—like a large grindstone. It rolled in a groove, but being heavy, would be cumbersome and difficult for the women, as suggested.

The sorrowing friends of Jesus did not realize at the time what he had taught them respecting his crucifixion and subsequent resurrection. Hence they were surprised with every incident of their experience on that eventful Sunday morning. The angel appeared in dazzling brightness, that he might not be mistaken for a man. He told the women who brought spices for the embalming of the Lord's body that their Master was risen from the dead—that he was no longer dead; that they would see him in Galilee; and to so tell his disciples. On the way Jesus met them and revealed himself to them.

Another account tells us, that Mary, separated from the others, met Jesus alone and, mistaking him for the gardener, asked whether the corpse had been removed. Then Jesus revealed himself to her. Recognizing her Master she clasped him by the feet as though afraid that he would leave her; but, different from his previous course, he declared, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my Father and your Father, to my God and to your God." Instead of delaying to commune with me, hasten at once to tell Peter and the others of my resurrection. How crucial was the Master that Peter should be mentioned by name; that he should feel that he was forever rejected because of having denied him!

For forty days Jesus was with his disciples and during that time he appeared some seven or eight times, according to all the different accounts. Once he appeared as a gardener. Once he appeared as a traveler to two of the disciples going to Emmaus. Again he appeared on the shore of the Sea of Galilee to some of the disciples who were returning to the fishing business. They knew it was Jesus, yet he was different from formerly. But we read that they did not dare ask him respecting the matter. He appeared again to above five hundred believers in the mountains of Galilee, and finally, by appointment, he met the eleven at the top of the Mount of Olives and ascended out of their sight—a cloud receiving him. Only on two occasions are we informed that he appeared with nailprints in his hands and the spear wound in his side. And on these two occasions we are distinctly told that he appeared in their midst, the doors being shut, and that he vanished again from their sight.

Thus did Jesus demonstrate to his disciples the fact that he was no longer dead, but alive, and additionally, the other fact equally important, namely, that he was no longer alive as a man, but as a spirit being. As St. Paul declares, "He was put to death in flesh, but made alive in spirit." But every precaution was taken to permit their natural powers of observation to comprehend the spiritual truths revealed to them respecting Jesus' resurrection and ascension. It was ten days after his ascension, on the fiftieth day from his resurrection, that the holy Spirit came, and thus demonstrated at once that the Redeemer lived, and that he had appeared in the presence of God on the spirit plane and that his sacrifice had been presented and was acceptable to God; and, on the basis of his sacrifice and the imputation of his merit to the disciples, the sacrifices which they had presented in his name were accepted, and they were begotten of the holy Spirit, that they might also become New Creatures and share in his Kingdom and glory.

His Death and Resurrection Needed!

It is needless that we seek to dispute as to which was the more important event—the death of Jesus or his resurrection from the dead. Both were equally important. Had he not died there would be no basis for a reconciliation of Adam and his race condemned to death. Had he not risen there would have been no one to apply the merit of his sacrifice. Had he not risen there would have been no call of the Church during this Gospel Age to be the Bride of Christ. Neither would there have been use for the promised Mediatorial Kingdom to be established at his Second Coming for the blessing of Israel and the world.

Thus Jesus explained to the two with whom he walked to Emmaus on the day of his resurrection, saying, O slow of heart to believe all that God hath spoken in the Law and in the Prophets! Was it not necessary that Messiah should die and should rise from the dead, that in his name repentance and remission of sins might be proclaimed? How could any be invited to come to God until a way had been opened, until the redemption price had been provided? Whoever can hear this message and accept it may properly be invited to repent of

He is not here. He is risen. He is become the first-fruits of them that sleep. But to death in the flesh. Quickened in spirit.

Jesus in another form, as a stranger, overtook two of the disciples as they went to Emmaus.

sin and to reform and to live contrary to the tendencies of his fallen nature, because, in so doing, through the Redeemer, he may attain unto eternal life.

The eleven Apostles were commissioned, "Go ye, disciple all nations." (V. 19.) This did not signify, as some suppose, a command to convert the world. It meant that they should make disciples out of people of all nationalities—and not any longer, as formerly, of the Jews only. And the Master's injunction has been fulfilled. Disciples, followers of him, have been found in all nations. But, as Jesus did not say, Convert all nations, neither has the Gospel message done this. Those accepting discipleship were to be baptized with Christ's baptism in the name or authority of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. In all, these have been but "a little flock." (Luke 12:32.) But theirs is the "high calling" to joint-heirship in his Kingdom, which is soon to bless the world.

But even this permission to disciple people of all nations could not, and did not, begin at once. For three and a half years after the cross, in fulfillment of Divine prophecy, the Gospel message was kept from the Gentiles, until the door for them into this High Calling was opened by St. Peter—Cornelius being the first to enter it.

A Language Problem.

The new state of Arizona has a problem before it that has troubled but few states of the Union—namely,
a language problem. As is well known, there is a considerable proportion of the population of Arizona, which, though native born, is of Mexican or Spanish descent, and these people speak Spanish almost exclusively. The framers of Arizona's organic law propose to exclude from the franchise all who can not read the constitution in English. Similar conditions exist in New Mexico, although it does not appear that the language difficulty has yet arisen in that Commonwealth.

It would be wise for the framers of the Arizona constitution to go slow and avoid causing a language controversy if possible. It would serve the purpose equally well to insist upon voters being able to read the constitution in Spanish, where they were unacquainted with English. Of course it is wise to encourage the use of English as much as possible by teaching it in the schools to the children of Spanish-speaking citizens.
After a generation or two the difficulty will solve itself, as the rising generations are pretty certain to gradually adopt English as their venacular in place of any other central tongue.—New Orleans-Picayune.

In Regard to Spelling.

Commenting upon some recent remarks of ours concerning the course of study in the public schools, a correspondent of the Oxford Public Ledger says: "If I were asked what should be taught in primary and grammar schools I would say spelling. Then what? Again, spelling. And then? Still spelling. In fact would it not be right to keep a student in the spelling book until he learned how to spell, even if it embraced his college course? We think there is much meat in this opinion. Some are born spellers, some achieve spelling while others have to have spelling thrust upon them and it is a safe guess that the majority of our fellow citizens belong to the last-named category. In other days Webster's "Blue Back" was thoroughly digested and the thoroughness of the aspiration was put to serve test at many a spelling bee. Since the honored college text-book has been laid upon the shelf in favor of more modern complications, it can scarcely be denied that there has been a great decline in the practice of the noble art it so ably inculcated. It would be a great thing if a wave of spelling revival would sweep the entire school world and elevate the study to approximately its former place in the curriculum.—Charlotte Observer.

There are fortunes galore in the cheap lands in central and eastern North Carolina, if some men only had the foresight to invest. There are thousands of acres of land there that can be bought for a mere trifle. In the course of ten or fifteen years the people will realize that the uncultivated lands will produce rich harvests. The land that can be bought today for from two to ten dollars an acre will be worth from twenty-five to fifty dollars. Tim Murphy, the New York millionaire, is about to undertake a philanthropic scheme of colonizing city dwellers of the north on these lands and when he does he contributes to his own fortune and the welfare of those whom he induces to a farm life vocation. We are not crowded in this state and if North Carolinians would take an option on these cheap lands and sell off small farms to outsiders they would make themselves independently rich, do a great act toward the agricultural upbuilding of the state and the relief of city congestion.—Charlotte Chronicle.
