A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY AT WILSON

NEGRO KILLS DEPUTY SHERIFF AND CHIEF POLICE

POSSES ARE SCOURING COUNTRY

The Feeling Is High That if the Negro Is Caught A Lynching Is Feared, and to Prevent Such an Occurrence Troops Are on Duty.

Wilson, N. C., Feb. 4.—Deputy Sheriff George Mumford was shot and killed, and Chief of Police A. O. Glover probably fatally wounded yesterday, while with other officers, they were attempting to arrest a negro wanted by the Dunn authorities for breaking into a hardware store.

The Wilson county and city officials received notice to be on the lookout for a gang of negroes who had broken into stores in the towns of Fayetteville and Dunn. At once, when it was learned that the desperadoes had arrived in Wilson, county and city officials, jointly, began to devise ways and means to apprehend the rascals.

Officer Wynne was the first to get a glimpse of them going in the direction of a near-beer joint, known as the "Bell Place," on South Goldsboro street, about half a mile from the court house. He communicated his find to Chief Glover and Deputy Mumford, and these three, with Police Officer Wynne soon started on the trail, and learned while near the Norfolk Southern depot that two of the gang had just gone into the home of a negro woman near the depot.

Quickly the house was surrounded, Officers Warren and Wynne guarding the back way while Deputy Mumford and Chief Glover entered the front way. When the door was entered the brave officers met a fusillade of bullets (parties who heard the firing say that least 25 shots were exchanged). The officers came out and covered the exits, though badly wounded. Louis West, the most desperate of the pair, went to the back window, when officer Wynne shot at him. He then dashed out of the front door, when Deputy Mumford sent two balls in his direction.

From loss of blood from wounds this brave and fearless officer sank to the ground, when the brute passed by him and said: "Damn you, you are not dead yet, but I'll finish you," and shot him in the head two or three times.

Chief Glover was shot in the shoulder, and, it is thought, through the lungs. Both were taken to the Wilson Sanatorium. It is said that the deputy died before reaching this institution.

The woman, Mary Young, in whose house the tragedy occurred, is under arrest. Both parties evaded the angry crowd and made their escape, going past the Contentnea Guano Factory. John D. Mercer's bloodhounds were sent for.

Lewis West is a tall yellow negro, and wore, when he committed the crime, a red sweater and a cap. Officer Warren shot at him four times when he dashed from the house.

The other negro, according to Mary Young, answers to no other name than "Stetson."

Several negroes, one said to be from South Carolina, have been committing depredations at Dunn. They broke into a hardware store at that place, and it was for that crime that they were wanted.

The Wilson Military scoured the woods in every direction soon after the tragedy, but could find no trace of either of the gang. Six arrests have been made, three women, who may be able to throw some light on the matter as to the identity of the gang, and three men—one at Middlesex and two at Baileys. A negro from Edmondson's bridge reported that a negro answering the description of West was in that neighborhood when he left, and that he was badly wounded. Sheriff Sharp and a posse in automobiles left at once. There is no clue as to the whereabouts of any of the others of the gang. West is an escaped convict from the South Carolina penitentiary.

Bloodhounds from Tarboro arrived at 9.25 and started on the hunt.

WINTERVILLE ITEMS.

Notes From Our Hustling Neighbor—What Its People are Doing.

Winterville, N. C., Feb. 4.—There was a very large crowd of people in town yesterday to attend the big land sale. People from the adjoining towns and from the community all around Winterville were present. The real estate company which sold the land, had an excellent band from Aurora and two fine auctioneers from Wilson. We had very good music, the lots sold well, and every body present seemed to enjoy the day.

A lot of new shoes just in at Harrington, Barber & Company's. Mr. P. T. Anthony, of Greenville, was in town on business yesterday evening.

We are all grieved very much by learning that Mrs. Elliott, an old lady of our town, while going out the door yesterday evening fell down and broke both arms just above the wrist. Dr. Laughinghouse, of Greenville, was at once summoned. We all hope Mrs. Elliott will soon recover.

Mr. J. B. Kittrell, of Greenville, was in town yesterday.

Special sale on clothing at Harrington, Barber & Company's. The stockholders of the Winterville bank were very much surprised when holding a meeting Thursday night, they found that the bank had earned a dividend of twenty-four per cent. This shows that the Winterville bank has been doing more and better business for the past year than it ever has before.

Harrington, Barber & Company are adding new items to their 5 and 10 cents counters.

Mr. John C. Duffy left for Wilson yesterday evening to visit his parents. Miss Elizabeth Boushall went to Belcross yesterday evening to visit her father.

Miss Addie Copeland went to Grainger last night to visit Miss Eva Langston.

Prof. Brinson went to Ahoskie to spend last night.

Mr. D. B. Forest is all smiles this morning—it is a girl.

In the auditorium of Winterville High School Friday morning a most interesting and practical lecture was delivered by Rev. C. A. Upchurch, of Kinston. The subject of his address was "Dreams," or "He can who thinks he can." He showed what dreams had meant to the world in bringing to pass their dreams, though scoffed at and ridiculed before their ideals were perfected. He referred to the struggles of Columbus in his ideals of finding the great western world, of Elias Howe, the inventor of the sewing machine, of Westinghouse, the inventor of the air brake, who went to Vanderbilt to ask aid of him and was called a fool. He spoke of the attitude of the world toward her dreams before and after accomplishment of their dreams.

Mr. Upchurch made a fine impression upon the student and he will always have a hearty welcome in our town. While here he also lectured to the Bible class, which was very much enjoyed. He returned to Kinston on the 1.25 train.

BIG CORN DAY FOR PITT COUNTY

TO BE HELD IN GREENVILLE SATURDAY, FEB. 18.

MESSRS. HUDSON AND SCHAWB

Every Boy in Last Years' Contest, and All Who Will Enter This Year, Should be Present, as Well as Every Farmer Interested in Corn Raising.

Greenville, N. C., Feb. 4, 1911.
Editor Reflector:

There never was as much interest in corn raising in Pitt county as was created last year by the "boys' corn contest club," composed of about sixty boys in the county. We wish to increase this interest the present year. Already a suggestion has been made in your paper by Mr. A. J. Moye as to a plan to do this. After consideration we have thought it best to call a meeting in Greenville on Saturday, February the 18th, to mature plans whereby we can arouse the entire county to the opportunity we have of creating enthusiasm and interest in the matter of corn raising.

Mr. Hudson and Mr. Schawb, from the agricultural department, will be in Greenville on the 18th and we desire to invite every boy who was in the corn club last year to enter this year, together with every man in the county, who is interested in the matter of corn growing, to be with us on the 18th. You are requested also to bring some corn with you and Mr. Hudson and Mr. Schawb will aid you in seed selections that day.

We propose also at this meeting to arrange premiums to be offered in every township in the county so that each boy will have a chance to win one, the territory of his contest being no larger than his own township.

Committees to put the plan in operation will be appointed at this meeting and it is therefore exceedingly important that you be here. This county won more certificates, signed by the governor, as expert corn raisers, than any other county in the state with probably one exception last year. If these are not delivered before, they will be presented to the successful boys at this meeting.

There were some prizes offered last year here in the county, and these will be delivered at this meeting.

In our judgment, the meeting to be held here on Saturday, February 18th, if properly attended, will mean much towards awakening our people to a conception of the possibilities of the county from an agricultural standpoint. Let every one who is interested be present.

W. H. RAGSDALE,
County Superintendent of Schools.

MRS. HARRISON CONFESSES SHE OPENED GRAVE

Says The Lord Commanded Her to do So, and Worked With Her.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Stanford, Ky., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Amanda Harrison today confessed that she opened the grave of George Saufly. When arraigned in court today she declared she had been commanded by the Lord to go open the grave, the result of which would be the reincarnation of Saufly. Although Mrs. Harrison was held for the grand jury, it is believed she is insane and will finally be sent to an asylum. Mrs. Harrison said, "The Lord was good to her and worked by her side while she was digging into the grave, and when she reached the top of the box, she was unable to get the lid off and returned to the village for a screw driver, then the desire to open the coffin left her and she did not return to the grave."

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1911.

Near-beer certainly got a knock.

The legislature is now on its second and last month.

As the government is now after the power trust, something may blow up.

The defeat of the bill to call a constitutional convention indicates that the legislature saw no use for it.

Instead of gaining a congressman because of increased population, under the new apportionment North Carolina is more likely to lose one.

Both sides have had their say in meetings for and against the proposition to issue bonds to build good roads in Greenville township. Now let the people take the question in hand and settle it as they think best for the public good.

The legislature should not overlook the cocaine evil. Every North Carolina paper you pick up to read has a story of some crime committed, directly traceable to this "hell-like" drug. If there isn't something done to abolish its importation into this country it is going to work a greater calamity than whiskey ever could. Its sob and use among the negroes is especially alarming, and the man who would sell or give it to them should be dealt with severely.

SOUTHERN PROGRESS.

Annual Blue Book for 1911 Published By Manufacturers Record.

All men of affairs who wish to have in form handy for ready reference the facts of what the South has done in the past 30 years, what it is doing now and what it possesses for greater doing will find them in the "Manufacturers Record's Annual Blue Book of Southern Progress" for 1911. This pamphlet of 64 pages is the most compact and convenient source of information about material development in the South that has ever been given to the public. It is the statistical epitome of the past and present of the South, and bristles with information about the elements of certainty as to the South's great future.

In this comprehensive volume are the records showing that 41 cities in the South, each now having a population of more than 25,000, have in the past 30 years increased their aggregate population from 1,506,915 to 3,670,770, or by nearly 137 per cent, an index to the growth of industry in the South, that of 9,000,000 estimated horse-power in Southern streams only about 1,000,000 horse-power has been developed, and that the value of the cotton crop of the South in 10 years has exceeded by more than $1,781,000,000 the value of the gold and silver produced by all the mines of the world in the same period, while the value of exports of raw cotton has exceeded the value of all the gold mined in the same time. The cotton crop, with its seed, now approaches $1,000,000,000 in value a year, and yet that amount is less than 40 per cent, of the total value of all agricultural products of the South, $730,000,000, for instance, being the value of 1,104,000,000 bushels of cereals harvested in 1910. Comparison of the progress of the South and that of the country marks the industrial advancement of the South, shown in more active cotton spindles in the South now than were in the whole country in 1880, in a greater cut of lumber in the South by more than 5,000,000,000 feet, in pig-iron production and in petroleum output nearly equal the country's 30 years ago, and in the greater amount by 30,000,000 tons of coal mined. Increased in 30 years in railroad mileage from 20,612 to 71,907 miles, in the value of exports from $265,000,000 to $628,000,000 and in resources of national banks from $171,000,000 to $1,371,000,000, are among other items treated in the "Blue Book of Southern Progress" by States and in comparison with the rest of the country.

Among the special new features in this issue are the figures of live stock in the South, while to all the statistics of the 14 Southern States have been added, where possible, the figures of Oklahoma and Mississippi, without, however, including them in the Southern totals.

For each of these 16 states and the District of Columbia is presented a separate table summarizing the facts of 30 years set forth in the tropical tables. In the statistics generally the latest and most authoritative figures available have been used and, where estimates have been made, the effort has been to give conservative results.

For nearly thirty years the Manufacturers Record has published as quickly as they have become accessible the magnificent facts of Southern achievement, upon which these latest and most up-to-date statistics are based, and has in addition issued from time to time more or less elaborate summaries, which have carried to the four quarters of civilization the knowledge about the South which has been so effective in hastening its material development. Coincidentally the Manufacturers Record has furnished in printed matter or in personal correspondence to thousands of statesmen, educators, business men, newspapers and magazines similar material for orations, essays, editorials and other articles in the desire to neglect no opportunity or means of furthering the work and keeping the South and the rest of the world informed of the vast possibilities within the area stretching from Maryland to Texas.

This pamphlet contains the cream of all these efforts. Copies of the "Annual Blue Book of Southern Progress" can be had of the Manufacturers Record of Baltimore, for 25c each.

Telephone Etiquette.

One of the most irritating things imaginable is to answer the telephone call and have the person at the other end of the line bawl out at you, "Who is that?" first thing. The Charlotte Observer tells of one man's experience:

"Telephone etiquette needs to be taught everybody," declared a prominent banker of the city yesterday who had been irritated by some rudeness over the line. "It's a curious thing to me that people who are entirely civil when they meet you in the street and pleasant as they can be when in one's company, go to the telephone and forget all the manners they were ever taught. The telephone is a valuable instrument in many instances, but when these people get busy on the line it almost becomes a nuisance. Everywhere I go these days it seems that somebody wants me over the phone.

"I went home the other night and had just retired when the telephone bell rang. "Who is that?" said the voice at the other end of the line and I stood out there in the cold telling the fellow who I was when he knew already.

"The people need education along this line. For the sake of brevity of conversation and general manners when in such communication, one ought to give his own name first when making a call and then state that he wants to speak to the party whom he wants at the other end of the line. If the servant answers or some other member of the family, the person wanted can at once be notified and the name of the party speaking can be told him.

Another nuisance is the man who insists on speaking to some certain person when the message is in no sense confidential. It very often happens in a business office that the person called for is particularly busy and hasn't the time to answer the telephone, but responding to the insistent call, leaves his work and answers, only to find that it is a matter that anybody in the office could have attended to. Some people abuse Central, but Central's worst offenses, or seeming offenses, never tax the patience of the average person as do the nuisances at the other end of the line.—Raleigh Times.

A New Industry.

The prospect is that the next few years will see a new industry assume considerable proportions in this great southern country. This will mean a vast improvement in conditions, mean large financial gain for southern farmers, who are beginning to be interested in cattle feeding. For the past few years, especially since something of the value of cotton seed meal and hulls as feed has become generally recognized, cattle growing has been on the increase on the farms of this section and more and more farmers are breeding pure-bred cattle. As a natural result, the farmers who are raising cattle are the owners of the most productive farms, the manure from cow stables being the best manure procurable anywhere. The fattening of cattle for the market, however, is something comparatively new here and is attracting not a little attention.

The results of long and careful investigation of the question of animal nutrition show that as a score of digestible protein and fat cotton seed meal stands unrivaled. In proportion to its cost per ton it furnishes these elements in the cheapest form available to the farmer. While it is now always desirable with any of the foodstuffs mentioned, improving the feeding qualities of both and providing a more efficient ration than is now generally utilized. It is only a matter of a little time until every pound of this splendid food-stuff is used at home as it should be, and when this is done our live stock industries will receive a new impulse and the fertility of our lands be increased by reason of the rich manure secured from feeding all the cotton seed meal produced here at home.—Durham Sun.

The Red Cross Flag.

The American Red Cross asks the collector general of the United States what steps are necessary to enforce that section of its Federal charter which prohibits the use of the association's flag and name for advertising purposes. A determined effort is to be made to stop a practice said to have become rather common. By law such a use of the well-known Red Cross flag is prohibited, the penalty in aggravated cases being imprisonment for a year.

Public sentiment will uphold the Red Cross in its endeavor thus to protect its emblem. The flag has come to be recognized as standing for humanity the world over. On the battlefield it is an emblem of hope; in the community stricken with disaster it represents man's helpfulness to man.

The use of the national flag for advertising purposes has long been frowned upon and been made the subject of legislation. Practically the same considerations demand that the Red Cross flag be kept equally free from contamination of being used as an advertising emblem.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A man's shortcomings are the things his neighbors first take pains to become cognizant of.

MY DOCTOR MIGHTY FINE

Mrs. Hattie Cain of Carrsville Thinks all the More of Her Doctor Since He Advised Her to Take Cardui.

Carrsville, Ky.—"My doctor," writes Mrs. Hattie Cain, "who advised me to take Cardui, for my troubles, is a mighty fine doctor, and I say God bless Cardui and the people who make it.

"Before I took Cardui, I suffered with female troubles for sixteen years. I would have to send for a doctor every three months, and oh! how dreadfully I suffered!

"I would cramp and have convulsions and it looked like I would die. At last I took Cardui and oh! what a surprise I found it was the medicine for me!

"From the first bottle, I began to mend and now I am well, can do more work, can walk and go where I please and it don't hurt me, and I owe it all to Cardui."

Cardui helps sick women back to health. It has been doing this for over 50 years. It is not a laxative, or a heart or kidney medicine—it is a woman's medicine.

If you are a woman, try it.

Protect The Water Powers

In a great factory where power is used on a large scale, its cost, though large in the aggregate, is small in comparison with the cost of labor and raw materials. But for the small user of power the cost is relatively high. The manufacturer can, sometimes, bear exorbitant rates for power, while to the farmer they may quickly become prohibitive. The farmer has this peculiar reason for demanding freedom to purchase electric power developed from streams in his neighborhood, at prices which will insure the power company a reasonable return on the capital invested, and no more. To attain this end certain restrictions are necessary.

First—Actual development should be encouraged and the holding of water power sites undeveloped for speculative purposes should be prohibited. In some parts of the country the Federal public land laws and the State water laws have been perverted to stimulate such speculation in undeveloped power sites.

Second—Every power site should be developed up to a maximum capacity, reasonable in relation to commercial and engineering conditions.

Third—Combinations to restrict output should be prohibited, and continuous operation should be encouraged.

Fourth—Water power privileges should be limited in time to a period not longer than 50 years, so that the generations that follow us may be free to deal with this natural resource in the light of the greater wisdom of their day.

Fifth—A reasonable charge should be paid to the public.

Sixth—Capitalization should be limited to the actual cost of the generating and distributing works.

Seventh—The public should so regulate the prices charged to consumers as to limit the profits to a reasonable return on the actual investment. In order to stimulate development this return should be quite generous, especially in the early stage of the industry.

These restrictions can only be imposed by public authority. They should be enforced by competent public supervision and by forfeiture in case of persistent violation. Legal warrant for such public regulation is found in the Federal ownership of water power sites on the public lands of the West, in the Federal rights to control navigable streams all over the country and in the police powers of the States over their streams and over public utilities in general, and in particular to condemn property by the law of eminent domain.—Gifford Pinchot in Raleigh Progressive Farmer.

Liberty but not License

The United States, as a whole, is a liberty loving country, and it offers the opportunity as a place of residence to those people who crave freedom of speech and who want to be allowed to conduct themselves free from the tyrannical rule of monarchy or the iron heel of oppression. But it is not a place to harbor criminals of foreign countries, nor is it a place where those of red thoughts can take license to run riot on the streets and preach the doctrine of anarchy. That often foreigners do take license, under the freedom allowed in this country, to indulge in turmoil and stir-up strife is plainly to be seen. For this reason the immigration laws of the country must be made strict and enforcement of these laws must be rigorous. The United States does not want to keep back one industrially inclined peaceful foreigner from taking up his residence here. In fact, this type is to be desired, sometimes sought, but the criminal, the anarchic class must be stopped, and care must be exercised and vigor used in keeping them away. Showing the undesirable nature, the really harmful effect of some of the immigration of a big parade of anarchists, of "Reds" as they are often called, was held in New York Sunday. The parade was featured by the holding aloft of a big red flag and shouts of "Kill the Japanese!" split the air. The mass of people, including scores of women, was on its way for further demonstration at the Japanese consulate, when stopped by the police. It was all because an anarchist had been put to death in Japan. But what did these people have to do with the matter? What right had they to disturb the Sabbath and to sow the seed of anarchy in this country over the affair? And the leaders were all foreigners. In fact, the entire gang was likely made up of foreigners. The flag bearer was arrested. He was a Russian. A woman interfered with the police about to make the arrest and she, too, was nabbed. She was also a Russian. Three others of the crowd were more demonstrative against the police than the rest and they were also arrested. They were a Russian, a Swede and an Italian.—Wilmington Dispatch

Educational Trimmings.

"The idea of teaching every girl to thump a piano and every boy to be a book-keeper," declares The Cantor Vindicator, "will make potatoes worth $10 a barrel in ten years. We are not opposed to education, however." The principal upon which The Vindicator's remark is based is no one to be encouraged. Its vogue—which is wider than many people imagine—is due to imperfect understanding of what "thumping the piano" and "learning book-keeping" are primarily intended to accomplish for the pupils thus engaged. The three "r's" are indispensable if the children are to be given a fair start in the battle of life, but by themselves they are not sufficient. The aim of our system of public education is not only to equip the next generation with bare necessities but, in so far as may be possible to broaden its outlook and deepen its intellectual grasp. The thumping a piano" is a valuable exercise for the girls. It opens the door to a realm which is outside of the ordinary hum drum routine of existence, whether that realm be entered, or not depends upon the natural gifts and individual industry of each girl. The "book-keeping" for the lads is equally important, although in a different way. If more North Carolina farmers had been addicted to even a mangle system of book-keeping, diversification of crops would long ago have obviated the necessity of importing food-stuffs at prices three times as great as would be required to produce them at home.

Where the piano and the book-keeping are allowed to crowd out the necessary fundamentals they work an undoubted and costly evil but it is not necessary to lay the ax to the root of the tree in order to remedy matters. Experience has proved that careful attention to proportion in the schools enables the course to be so arranged as to include fundamentals and trimmings alike. The trouble is to be corrected not by abandoning all effort to widen the pupil's horizon but by a readjustment which shall bring it about that such widening is not accomplished at the cost of neglecting the elements of any sound education.—Charlotte Observer.

It doesn't increase the size of anything to look at it through a magnifying glass.

A good deal of hospitality is administered accordingly to the homeopathic school.

PLAISTED, OF MAINE.

Attending to State Business and Letting National Politics Alone.

Democrats, insurgent Republicans, and tariff reformers generally still feel grateful to Maine, because the Democratic victory won there in September was advertised as an overthrow for "Hale and high prices." Politicians have speculated curiously on what figure Gov. Plaisted might try to cut in the national political game on the strength of this.

But Gov. Plaisted and his associates hadn't heard about all this, except in a vague way, when I saw them recently. Nor did they show much interest. An Ohio politician of deputy sheriff grade, let loose in Maine, would have had a first-class Plaisted vice presidential boom flourishing before this. A New England candidate would be very available, say, with a Harmon nomination. Gov. Foss, of Massachusetts, has seen this possibly.

It was a novel emotion to Gov. Plaisted's friends. The fact is that sanny Maine is minding its own business politically. Gov. Plaisted, elected on local issues, is inclined to look strictly after Maine's business and to leave national problems to congress.

"You see, I am governor of Maine," he says.

"Did your campaign have any national significance, then?" I asked the governor.

"Well, no; perhaps not," he said, slowly, and then he smiled. "To have national significance seems to us in Maine rather a large order. We haven't bothered much about it, haven't gone after it, and whether we have it or not is for the rest of the country to judge, I guess.

"The young men of Maine supported us, voted for us, and put us in power. It was their campaign, their election, and they won it. That means that the young men of Maine—and I suppose the young men of the rest of the country are like them—can't be delivered. They won't be slaves to partisanship as the older generation has been. They refuse to be herded submissively into the Republican pasture because their fathers have always stayed there. Nor is it any guarantee that they will vote the Democratic ticket next time because they stood with us in this campaign. We'll have to make good on our promises to keep their support.

"Did it look like a miracle to you folks outside when we Democrats carried Maine? Well, with Maine's young men in their present temper that miracle is apt to be repeated pretty frequently. The Republican solidity of this State is gone. I imagine 'solid' States will get more and more uncommon in the next few years. You can say this election puts Maine in the line of States which are no longer 'sheep States,' ready to follow blindly the party bellweather. Maine is progressive, and she will continue to be progressive and independent.

"You might put that fact down as of 'national significance,' even if our campaign issues were local. Eh, what do you think?"—W. S. Couch, in the New York World.

Intensive Farming in Holland.

It has often been said that a Dutch farmer can make a better living from an acre of ground than the ordinary wasteful American farmer can make off of an average one-horse farm of 20 to 30 acres. Land is so precious in Holland, where vast areas of it have been wrested from the sea and made to yield abundant crops that practically every square inch of space is utilized. Holland is a stock country and with the large dairy herds it is natural to presume that almost every acre of land in the kingdom has been brought up to the top-notch of productivity. The top-notch of productivity was thought to have been reached but recently. Dutch farmers have gone in for intensive cultivation according to Consul Frank W. Mahin, who writes from Amsterdam as follows:

"Fertilizers are now extensively used in this district. Stable manure was used at first, but in the present intensive farming chemical products are chiefly employed. Their use has caused a remarkable transformation in Dutch agriculture. Land which once produced sparsely now yield abundant crops. Chemicals for fertilizing purposes are imported, but a superphosphate factory has been established in Amsterdam which supplies much of the demand.

"A feature of the intensive agriculture is the multiplication of small dairy farms, which, by their ready consumption of grain and fodder are valuable customers of other farmers. The increase of vegetable products is another result of intensive farming. These are found to be especially profitable in sandy soil, some of which, without scientific fertilization, would be almost worthless. Large farms are still practicable, mainly in clay-soil districts, but even there the cultivation is concentrated and intensive.

America has gotten many important lessons from Holland and this one is one of the most important of all. America, and the South in particular, is just beginning to realize her tremendous resources and the greater possibilities it would seem in agricultural lines, not in the addition of more acres probably, but the correct cultivation and proper fertilization of what is already being worked. The South is beginning to come into her own and is making rapid progress along agricultural as well as industrial lines.—Charlotte Chronicle.

A Child's Idea.

Unfamiliarity with money gives children a queer idea of the value of certain coins. A 50-cent piece dropped from the pocket of a visitor in a downtown school and was returned by a small girl with the remark: "Here, sir, is your $10."

The man laughed in spite of himself, but the teacher looked sad.

"Poor little things, she said. "How can you expect them to know any better? They never see a piece of money bigger than a quarter. They are as sharp as a coin collector on cents, nickels, dimes, and quarters, and can almost tell the date across the room, but a piece of money bigger than that is such a rarity in their homes that they are apt to call anything from one to a hundred dollars.

"When I first took charge of this class there wasn't a child in the room who could name the denomination of a coin above a quarter. They had heard of big money, but had never seen it. They have several lessons in identifying Uncle Sam's money, but that particular girl happened to be absent, so it is not strange that she should take your half dollar for $10."—Boston Herald.

Realistic.

Mamma—For goodness' sake, Elsie, why are you shouting in that disgraceful fashion? Why can't you be quiet like Willie?

Elsie—He has to be quiet the way we're playing. He's papa coming home late, and I'm you.

Holly, charged with the murder of Edward Cronwell, a 16-year-old lad, by poison with strychnine, and with firing Rock Spring Hotel, in order to conceal the crime.
