

THE CONGRESS HAS ADJOURNED

CLOSING SCENES OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE

CANNON GETS A BIG OVATION

Efforts to Rush Bills Through Fell Down—Senate Adopts Usual Resolution of Thanks—Champ Clark, the Next Speaker, Offers Resolution to Retiring Speaker.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Democrats Win Out.
Washington, March 4.—Adopting filibustering tactics the Democrats defeated the tariff bill in the house. The scenes were most exciting the house has seen in some time. Republicans tried to run the steam roller over them, but were unsuccessful. Democrats using every dilatory tactic and yelling at the top of their voices. Finally, fifteen minutes before adjourning time, Representative Payne withdrew his motion to pass the bill, as the post office appropriation bill had not been endorsed and signed by the president.

Washington, March 4.—Just before time for the senate to adjourn, Senator Scott again called up his pension bill and tried to get it through. Senator Lodge interposed strong objection and Scott had to admit defeat. A committee was then appointed to wait with the house committee on the president and tell him they were ready to adjourn. The senate after passing the usual resolution of thanks adjourned sine die at 12:25.

Washington, March 4.—Just before the house adjourned today Champ Clark offered a resolution extending thanks to Speaker Cannon and wishing him a long life of health and prosperity. Cannon had vacated the chair and Underwood was presiding. The resolution was unanimously adopted amid enthusiastic cheers. Mr. Clark and Mr. Mann escorted the aged speaker to the chair and when he entered the chamber he was greeted with the greatest ovation any man in congress has ever received. He addressed the house and that body at 12:41 adjourned.

PASSING AWAY OF ONE OF GREENVILLE'S OLDEST CITIZENS

COLONEL WILLIAM MAY KING.

Closing of A Long and Honorable Useful Life.

In the death of Mr. William M. King, which occurred at 9:30 o'clock this morning at his home on Fifth street, there passed away one of Greenville's oldest, best and most esteemed citizens. He was 77 years of age, had been in feeble health since November and confined to his bed about three weeks.

William May King was born November 18th, 1833, in Falkland township, Pitt county, and spent his early life on the farm. He was a member of the Home Guards in 1861-'65, and became a colonel of the militia. His first official position was as justice of the peace under appointment of Governor Holden. In 1870 he became a county commissioner, serving them for two years, and was one of Pitt county's members of the State constitutional convention in 1875. He was elected sheriff in 1882 and served six years, being chosen to that office three times in succession. In 1894 he was elected register of deeds and served two years, and was again elected county commissioner in 1896, serving for two years.

Mr. King moved from his farm to Greenville early in the year 1885 and spent the remainder of his life here, but never losing interest in his farm. He was an exemplary citizen, strong in his character and personal convictions yet always respecting the opinions of others, and was noted for his abundant charity and deeds of kindness. For 54 years he was a Mason, being for many years Worshipful Master of the lodge at Falkland and also at Greenville after moving his membership here. He was also a Royal Arch Mason, being a charter member of the first chapter ever established in Greenville.

In November, 1856, he married Miss Dicey Almata Peebles, the aged wife surviving him. They celebrated their golden wedding in 1906. There are four surviving children, Mrs. Pattie Winstead, of Rocky Mount; Mrs. S. C. Wells, of Wilson; Mrs. G. B. King, of Washington City, and Mrs. L. I. Moore, of New Bern. These were all with him in his last hours. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. A. V. Newton, of Fountain and Mrs. Ben Moore, of Farmville.

At 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning the body will be taken from his late residence, under Masonic escort, to the Universalist church (Delphia Moyer Chapel) on Dickinson avenue, where services will be conducted by Rev. W. O. Bodell. From the church the body will be taken to the old home place near Falkland, where the burial will take place at 3 o'clock, p. m., with Masonic honors.

PRESIDENT'S TARIFF COMMISSION MEASURE PASSES SENATE

BUT IS BLOCKED IN THE HOUSE.

Fitzgerald Leads Filibuster Which Prevents Action.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Washington, March 4.—The tariff commission measure for which President Taft has fought all through the present session of congress, was passed in the senate this morning by a vote of 55 to 23. It was immediately sent to the house where Republican leaders planned to adopt a special rule to force it through. When the bill reached the house, however, Representative Fitzgerald started a filibuster to block this. A gag rule was presented by Dalzell and Fitzgerald made the point of no quorum. As a roll call began Democrats walked out. It is the intention of Fitzgerald to keep the house tied up till noon and thus defeat the measure. Both houses were in session all night with only a short adjournment this morning so as to make this another legislative day.

HOW ONE MULE CAUSED A GENERAL MIX-UP

STARTED WITH A BALE OF HAY.

But Came To An End With Only Small Damage.

Friday afternoon a mule drawing a cart in which were three men, was coming up Third street. One of the men sat in front driving, while the other two sat on a bale of hay behind. Just before reaching Evans street that bale of hay took a notion to tumble out of the cart, and it also rolled out the two men who thought they were holding it down, the hay and men piling in the street together. This frightened the mule and he jumped off for a run, giving the driver all he wanted to attend to. The split log drag drawn by a pair of mules was at work on Third street at the time, going westward, and the runaway mule to dodge this outfit hung a wheel of the cart into the wheel of a buggy hitched to a horse tied in front of Dr. S. Hassell's office.

The collision of the two vehicles upset the cart and threw the driver out into the split log drag, but the driver of the drag held his mules and they did not seem to mind the extra weight on their load. The shafts of the buggy were broken and the horse between them turned around with his head to the buggy to get a view of what was going on, but did not break the tie rein and get away.

The running mule went only a little further when the cart wheel tangled with a telephone pole in front of Mr. J. G. Moyer's, and things came to a stand still, except the crowd of folks attracted by it rushing up to see what had happened. The sudden taking-up of the mule at the telephone pole caused him also to reverse ends, so that his head instead of his tail was next to the cart.

It was an amusing spectacle from start to finish, and about the only damage out of it all was the broken buggy shafts.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1911.

OF INTEREST TO THE SOUTH.

Mr. S. Wilbur Corman of the advertising firm of N. W. Ayer & Son, has, without saying so in so many words, expressed the greatest difficulty in the way of the South's rapid growth—she is not advertising enough nor in the proper way. Advertising is Mr. Corman's business, but every word he uttered in a recent Atlanta address was true.

The writer only the other day had this very subject in mind and out of curiosity went into two or three stores in an endeavor to find a cracker different from those of the Uneda brand, but practically everything of this kind was found to be in a package bearing the name of the National Biscuit Company, the concern that makes the Uneda crackers. There are numerous cracker factories throughout the South, but they are not known extensively outside of the counties in which they are operated, and it is because they do not put their goods up in attractive packages and advertise them.

There is no table syrup in the world better than could be and is being made right here in the South, and yet simply because of aggressive and attractive advertising by certain firms in the West and Northwest we do not seem to know how to call for anything but their particular brand of corn syrup; and if we did call for other syrups the grocer would not know anything about them.

There are being made in the South as good brands of cotton hosiery, knit underwear, and shoes as anywhere in the North, and yet we are prompted to call for those that are made in New York and Massachusetts, simply because we see the names in almost every magazine and newspaper we pick up.

It is said that Concord, N. C., can make enough towels to supply every hotel in America, but Concord herself is not known outside the State, to say nothing of her towels.

If one great industry, in North Carolina, for instance, would start an advertising campaign like that of say Karo corn syrup or Shawknit hosiery, in five years the State would show a population of 3,000,000. This question of advertising is as vital to a great success as buying rolling stock and machinery and building plants. —Greensboro Telegram.

In this connection The Reflector wants to say that there is manufactured here in Pitt county an article that is better known and advertised North Carolina more, especially throughout the cotton belt, than any other article made in the State. It is the Cox cotton planter, made by the A. G. Cox Manufacturing Company, at Winterville, hundreds and hundreds of which go into every cotton growing State. It has merit, is extensively advertised, hence is known everywhere that cotton is raised. If other manufacturers and dealers would follow this example of the right kind of publicity they would gain recognition. The lack of advertising is truly a hold back to the State's progress.

MARCH.

Sounds the Heraldic Blasts of a Better Month Coming.

If there is any truth in the venerable adage, this uproarious and generally ill-mannered month, having come in as Mary's little lamb, agitated and scared to the point of running into a schoolhouse, ought to go out like a lion, that is, if lions go roaring and tearing, howling and cawing, blowing, raining, slobbering, blubbling, blustery and bullyragging around like they had no sense and had never been to Sunday school or a Durham county Republican county convention. That is March's alwaysable style, first or last, at one end or other. Shaking signs loose, rattling shingles and shutters, driving the peach tree limbs against old country house windows, upsetting rickety ashheppers, taking liberties with young girls' skirts and dazzling an appreciative universe with lightning-like glimpses of animated barber poles. Poking his noisy nose everywhere, wrestling around the street corners, groaning through the pine woods, bothering bustling housewives and twisting good Christian's religion out of joint to find adequate language in which to address their fugacious hats. Impudent, boisterous windy and profitless, fit emblem of many American statesmanship, he only prepares the way, sounds the heraldic blasts of a better month coming. —Durham Sun.

The Same Old Error.

"Love comes alike to high and low," sings the crew of H. M. S. Pinafore in the Gilbert and Sullivan opera. The capture of the last member of the gang of desperate negroes who participated in the recent tragedy at Wilson calls attention to the often-observed phenomenon that jealousy is quite as indifferent to the social rank of the bosom in which it lodges. The man took to his heels after the trouble and was located only this week in Richmond, Va. It seems that he left in Wilson county a wife who did not take kindly to the attentions he was paying another woman. With genuine feminine fury she informed his pursuers as to his whereabouts, with the result that he is now in custody awaiting trial. The case has yet to go upon record in which a man has incurred the jealousy of a woman and lived any considerable length of time without rueing it. —Charlotte Observer.

Federal License for Auto.

A bill for the relief of automobile tourists, introduced by Representative Wanger of Pennsylvania, has received a favorable report from the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. This bill provides a federal license in addition to local license or licenses in the owner's home state but provides exemption from licenses in all other states through which the car may pass. It is desired to prevent the inconveniences which several states, particularly New Jersey, have caused. The object sought is a legitimate one, but if such federal licenses may be granted, why not exclusive federal licenses for hunters and a great variety of sportsmen and tradesmen also? This bill contains serious possibilities. We are not at all convinced that it should pass. —Charlotte Observer.

Gentle Farmers.
Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, mistress of millions and high princess of a faction of American suffragettes, has announced her intention of opening a school in which girls may be taught farming. The location of this experiment is a large estate on Long Island. Its ultimate aim is to win converts to the cause of votes for women. "The more that women come to be owners of the land," thinks Mrs. Belmont, "the makers of homes that are real homes, the more they will insist on having the ballot to protect what is theirs." We are not sure we agree with the lady in the probable result of the girls' coming to make homes that are homes. When a girl has been installed queen of her own domicile she usually finds it difficult to manifest any absorbing interest in politics. She generally discovers that there are enough other problems to occupy her time fairly well. Furthermore, the idea of women doing the actual work in the fields—ploughing, planting, cultivating, harvesting—to the total exclusion of their brothers is rather unattractive. It has been given a thorough try-out on this continent—by the Indians—with rather doubtful results.

As the beginning of a new era we cannot see the rosiest of prospects for Mrs. Belmont's farm school. As a means of making the pupils happier, healthier and better satisfied it has a large field, however. The girls are to be taken from among factory workers and are to be paid wages while pursuing this very practical course in agriculture. It is almost impossible that the change from the fresh air of the fields can fail to be for the better. If Mrs. Belmont will only take a leaf out of the books of some enthusiasts in this section and slip a little tomato-growing into her curriculum, her trouble will be more than repaid, whether she increases the suffragette strength or not. —Charlotte Observer.

A WEAK WOMAN AND HER STORY

In Floral, Ark., Lives a Lady Who Feels That Her Strength Was Restored by Cardui.

Floral, Ark.—"I must speak a good word for Cardui," writes Mrs. Viola Baker, of this place.

"About a month ago I was in very bad health. I was so weak and nervous that I was not able to do my housework.

"My husband bought me one bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic. I took it according to directions and now I am in good health.

"I think Cardui is a fine tonic for weak women."

And you are not the only lady who thinks so, Mrs. Baker.

Thousands, like you, have written to tell of the wonderful benefit Cardui has been to them.

Cardui contains no minerals, or other powerful drugs. It contains no glycerin or other mawkish-tasting ingredients.

It is just a pure, natural extract, of natural vegetable herbs, that have been found to regulate the womanly functions and strengthen the female system.

She Drew the Line.

"Washington is one of the most interesting places in the world for the observation of social and official phases of life," says a representative. "And let it be understood that the lines are sharply drawn, as is illustrated by this incident. The wife of a fellow member during my term once took her six-year-old daughter to task.

"Marjorie," said she, "you've been playing with those toy soldiers all afternoon. That's not proper amusement for a big girl like you."

"But, mamma," replied Miss Marjorie, "I'm not playing with the soldiers. I picked out all the officers and played with them."—New York Herald.

NEWSPAPER PRESS FOR SALE.

Having placed an order for a new fast newspaper and book press, to be installed the middle of April, we have a newspaper press that will be sold at a bargain for delivery May 1st.

It is a Monona Leverless Press, large enough to print four 6-column pages, or two 9-column pages and has steam fixtures so that it can be run either by hand or power. Been in use six years.

It is a splendid press for a weekly paper and is in good condition to do many years good service. We used a press from the same factory for 17 years before installing this one, printing a daily paper with small circulation about 10 years of that time. Its speed, 800 an hour, is too slow for a daily paper with the present circulation of The Reflector, and for that reason we are having to displace it with a faster press.

Any one interested and wanting a good press for a weekly newspaper, can see this press at work every day in the Reflector building, before our new press is installed. Any one who cannot come to see it at work and examine it, can get particulars by addressing

THE DIVORCE EVIL.

Increasing at an Alarming Rate in America.

While the country generally is deploring the divorce evil, we find the North Carolina legislature wrestling with a bill making it easier to secure a divorce, just as if it were not easy enough already. What has become of the bill we are unable to say.

A most astonishing statement was recently made by Charles A. Ellwood, professor of sociology, in the University of Missouri, who has been investigating very carefully the divorce question. It is his opinion, according to the Richmond Times-Dispatch that at the present rate of increase of divorces, before the end of the century one out of every two marriages will result in a divorce. That is a rather strong assertion, but Professor Ellwood relies on the ratio of increase that has already been shown. In 1885, American courts granted 25,000 divorces as against 24,000 for all the rest of the civilized world. In 1906, the American courts granted 72,000 as against 40,000 for the rest of the world. In forty years, then, the divorce increase has been three times as great as the increase in population.

The present ratio of divorce and marriage is 1 to 12. In France, it is 1 to every 25, in Germany 1 to every 40, and in England 1 to every 400. In Missouri, one divorce is granted to every eight marriages. In the State of Washington there is one divorce to every four marriages. In Colorado and Montana the ratio is one to five, and in Texas, Oklahoma and Indiana it is one to six.

Professor Ellwood predicts a great upheaval in America unless something is done to preserve the family ties. He says:

Free divorce is just the same as free love. It is just swapping of families, and the free love advocates are more dangerous to society than are anarchists.

I believe the family is in a period of transition in America. I believe we are passing from the old to a new and higher type of family—a family in which there won't be coercion, or authority, or consideration of property in marrying. A place will be reached where love will govern all. The family will be ethical, will be democratic. The equal rights of every member will be regarded and preserved. In this the child will be taken more into consideration than it is now. The family of the future must rest on the rights of the child. Divorce, thinks Professor Ellwood, is materially an American institution. More native born Americans get divorces than there are foreigners or international couples. More Protestants than Catholics or Jews get them. More childless families obtain them than families where there are children. More city residents than rural residents are divorced.

The cause of this state of affairs is, thinks the same authority, that people are growing to look at marriage as a personal convenience. Industrial conditions and city life enter into the problems. Before there were factories, all the work was done at home. The family was kept together in the day; it was not so separated. Now, with our great manufacturing, in which the father works in one place, the son in another, the daughter in still another, and perhaps the mother in another, the family is divided to its detriment. An other cause of divorce is childless marriages. The number of such unions has increased from 2 to 20 per cent, since the beginning of the nineteenth century.—Greensboro Record.

WILLIAMS ABLE DEMOCRAT.

May Take Bailey's Laurels As He Emerges Again Into Limelight. Nevertheless, before the next session of congress comes to an end, the chances are that John Sharp Williams will be more discussed than Champ Clark. Temporarily, he is relegated to the rear. His name has not been seen in a newspaper for nearly two years. Yet, with the possible exception of Governor Harmon, of Ohio; Governor Wilson, of New Jersey; William Jennings Bryan and Senator Joseph W. Bailey, of Texas, the Mississippi cotton planter, is the ablest man in the Democratic party.

Two years ago Williams was elected to the United States senate. Under the peculiar Mississippi law, 2 years had to elapse before he succeeded to the seat now occupied by Senator Money. In those two years he might have returned to the lower house, but he wanted to write a history of Thomas Jefferson. He knew Jefferson was a comer. He felt it in his bones that prominent Democrats were going to shout about Jeffersonian principles as they had never shouted about them before. Wherefore, he stayed at home and wrote a book.

Williams' course was directed partially by the thought that, inasmuch as he had been elected to the senate and would not, therefore, be able to occupy the chair of the speaker of the house, it would be more just to give Champ Clark an opportunity to prove his leadership and make himself eligible to the speakership. He nominated Clark to the minority leadership.

After two years of comparative obscurity Williams is now coming back. Senator Bailey, who, by his knowledge and his oratory now dominates the Democratic side of the senate, will have to look to his laurels. Williams is an orator. He is a fighter. He knows parliamentary and international law. And, from the standpoint of the galleries, he is as good a drawing card as Bailey.

Very absent-minded is Williams. "I can't help it," he says. "My wife complains about it. I rarely go out into society except when she insists. We have a chiffonier in our room and I remember once, when I was dressing before it, I tried to keep my mind on what I was doing. With my nice white bow-tie and full dress coat I thought I looked pretty presentable, when I surveyed myself in the small, high looking glass. I went to the parlor where my wife was waiting and asked her how I looked.

"Why, John Sharp Williams," she exclaimed, "where are your trousers?" Williams is short and thin and has a rumpled appearance. His committee rooms in the capitol used to look as he put it himself, "like hoorah's nest." The leather lounge would be buried under piles of books and pamphlets. His desk was a maze of papers and journals and law reports. Every chair in the rooms would be covered with books. Visitors who called would look around and, seeing nobody, would think they had entered some dusty equipment rooms. Then Williams' head would be reared over a mass of books and papers and the visitors would receive a taste of real old Southern hospitality.

"Sit down," Williams would say, "No chair? Wait a minute. We'll soon fix that." And Blackstone and a few old English reports would go hurling across the room to make way for the visitors. The next week, Williams would spend an hour hunting for one of the English reports, puzzled as to its whereabouts.

Educated at the Kentucky Military Institute, near Frankfort, Ky., the University of the South and the University of Virginia, Williams took a finishing course at the University of Heidelberg, in Baden, Germany. He mixed with the German students, played their games and was one of them. He is at one with anybody with whom he is thrown into contact.

His knowledge of the law was acquired at the University of Virginia, and, later on, in a law office. He is considered one of the greatest lawyers in the South. He has more satire in his system than any other Democrat in congress. With Dolliver dead, there will be no members of the senate who can touch him in this respect.

If there are not some pretty battles of wit when the next congress is called into session, it won't be the fault of John Sharp Williams.—Thos. Logan, in Philadelphia Inquirer.

We Are All Servants.

Week before last about forty newspaper men, members of the North Carolina Press Association, attended a banquet at the Zinzendorf hotel in Winston-Salem. When they entered the dining room and gathered about the festive board some twenty-five white girls came in and waited on them. These girls belonged to respectable North Carolina families and they serve the tables regularly at this hotel. Twenty years ago white girls could not have been induced to do this kind of work in North Carolina. Today, however, white girls serve not only at a number of the leading hotels, but they have accepted service in many private homes. Before such service can become general certain fundamental truths must be brought home to the hearts and minds of all good people and kept there. One is that wages, no matter how small, if honestly and conscientiously earned, are no less dignified than salaries, and that the president of a railroad in essence is no less a servant of the stockholders than the switch-tender or the two-dollar-a-week cook in a home. Another is that subordination in service does not necessarily imply personal inferiority. It is especially hard for the white people of the south to draw the distinction between these two terms. A third is that no person can possibly be independent of others and that, therefore, consideration for the rights and feelings of others, that fine quality which enables one to put himself in imagination in another's place, will do more to solve social problems than all the agitation and the organization that may possibly be devised, and that, too, without involving any recognition of impossible theory of racial or social equality. White women may do much to simplify the domestic problem if they will only adopt with common sense and courage these fundamental principles to the administration of their homes. The white people must bring household service back into repute and make it so that a white girl can cook and serve in any white man's home and be honored for it rather than despised. When it is recalled that the motto of the Prince of Wales translated into English is, "I serve," the nobility and dignity of the word servant may readily be appreciated. We're all servants.—Sanford Express.

Mule Is In His Heyday.

Do not waste any sympathy on the poor mule. He is neither a has-been nor a candidate for that class. He, like the horse, is not suffering any setback as a result of the advent of the automobile. The long-eared animal seems only to have come into the heyday is his popularity, if we may judge from the price he brings on the market. Evidently he prospered will not depend for artificial support on the advertising he might derive from Champ Clark's heralded promise to drive a span of Missouri mules up Pennsylvania avenue. It rests upon something more substantial.

The mule is more in demand today than it has been at any time since the Boer war, when the demand surpassed all records. But in price he has far outstripped the Boer war days. Mules are from 30 to 40 per cent higher today than they have been in ten years, and, according to the Kansas City Star, a mule of fourteen and one-half hands that could be bought on the Kansas City market during the South African war for from $70 to $105 today brings from $185 to $210. Evidently, the automobile for hauling purposes, and the motor, popular as it is for propelling farm machinery heretofore driven or pulled by mules, have failed to undermine the mule's stability. They may not have increased it, but something has—Omaha Bee.

Maybe the reason nearly all women are so good they don't really like to be.

BIGOTRY LOST CANADA.

Province Would Have Joined Revolution But for Jay's Attack.

But for an exhibition of religious bigotry at the beginning of the American revolution, Canada, with which the United States is now seeking a reciprocity treaty, would most probably have joined the colonies in the war against England and would probably be a part of the Union today. Had the two sections joined hands, great would have been the results. The revolutionary war would have been shorter; the war of 1812 would probably never have taken place. The North would have had such predominating influence over the South that the slavery question would have never divided the Union, and the war between the States would have never been fought. There would have been other results. There would be no reciprocity treaty pending today and the country would not be facing the prospect of having an extra session of congress "on its hands."

In the beginning of the revolutionary struggle Canada was favorably disposed toward the colonies, and would most probably have joined in the war against England but for an untimely display of bigotry. Three noted Marylanders had exerted themselves to establish friendly relations between the colonies and Canada. They were Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, the Rev. John Carroll, a relative later Catholic archbishop of Baltimore, and Samuel Chase, with Benjamin Franklin, of Pennsylvania. They were sent by the Continental Congress to Canada on the embassy, which had the effect of securing for the American patriots the neutrality of the French-Canadian population.

While the American ambassadors were endeavoring in Montreal to enlist Canadian sympathy there came to that city an address to the Canadian people from the Continental Congress, in which John Jay, the writer of the address, alluded to the Catholic religion, dear to every French-Canadian heart, as "religion which had deluged their land in blood and diffused impiety, persecution, murder, and rebellion through every part of the world!" That the ambassadors, in the face of that open insult to the Canadian Catholics, were able to secure their neutrality was certainly a great diplomatic victory, and yet that is what they did accomplish. Had Jay's bigotry not shown itself as it did, there is scarcely a doubt that Canada would have joined hands with the American colonies against Great Britain and now form a part of the United States.—From the Baltimore American.

WOMAN 136 YEARS OLD.

The Oldest White Woman in the World Born in North Carolina.

The South Carolina papers now throw fits, sure enough. Read this from the Baltimore Sun—it is a special from Fort Worth, Texas: At the great age of 136 years and undoubtedly the oldest white woman in the world, Mrs. Lucy Owens is dying at the home of her daughter, a centenarian, a few miles west of Long View. Mrs. Owens was born in North Carolina when the Revolutionary war broke out, and three years later she saw George Washington. She is the only living person who has seen Washington. Many have questioned her age, but investigation of records shows that she gives her age correctly. Until a year ago she could see and hear exceptionally well and could walk about her room with the aid of a crutch." Born in North Carolina, one hundred and thirty-six years ago, and not dead yet! And her daughter alive at 100! No use for South Carolina or any other State to try to beat that.—Charlotte Chronicle.

WILL HELP THE SOUTH.

Significance of the Cotton Picker to The Farmer.

In The Chronicle yesterday appeared an interesting item regarding the Price-Campbell cotton picking machine, which World's Work has declared will revolutionize the cotton growing industry in the south during the next few years. It is interesting to speculate on the new cotton picker. That it is a success there is no longer any doubt, although no one claims that it has reached the height of perfection. Probably within two or three years, however, the machine will be in such shape that they will be found available and profitable for use throughout the cotton belt.

The south is paying now something like $100,000,000 a year to harvest its cotton—to pick it. The Price-Campbell machine picks an acre of cotton an hour, or about 10 acres a day. The expense of running the machine, including fair pay for the driver, is about 60 cents an hour, or $6 a day for ten hours. The cotton crop of the south last year averaged about 700 pounds to the acre and with the machine the picking of this 700 pounds would cost 60 cents, or less than 9c a hundred. It can be readily seen that when the picker comes into general use, negro cotton pickers will have to come down on their price for picking cotton and possibly have to change from picking by the hundred to picking by the acre. If the entire cotton crop were picked by a machine the cost would be something like $20,000,000, instead of $100,000,000.

Probably the most important effect of the perfection of the new picker will be the larger cotton crop and the intensive system of cultivation. With the cost of harvesting the crop lowered from $6 and $9 to as little as $1 and $2 a bale, allowing from $5 to $8 more margin for profit on each bale the crop will certainly increase, especially since cotton seed has come to cut such a figure and yield so much additional income to the cotton grower.

That the new picker will have a tendency to promote the intensive system of cultivation is readily seen. The picker can cover an acre with a bale or more cotton in the boll as quickly as it can an acre with from 500 to 700 pounds, so that the cost of picking from the heavy or intensive crop would be one-half or one-third the cost of picking the same number of pounds from the acre of scrawny cotton. The farmer who raises two bales to the acre will pay no more for the picking of those two bales than his neighbor who raises half a bale pays for picking that half bale, paying in reality just one-fourth the amount per pound that the unprogressive farmer pays.

The intensive cultivation of cotton generally will mean much for the south. Not only will it mean more staple for manufacture into cloth, but it will mean a greater income for the farmer for his seed, more meal and hulls for cattle feed, more meal for the excellent fertilizers into which it is manufactured, and greater business for the several hundred cotton oil mills throughout the cotton belt, many of which have been organized by the farmers themselves. It will mean a greater pouring of wealth into the south generally.—Charlotte Chronicle.

AIR PRESSURE WATER SYSTEM Water under pressure for kitchen, laundry, bathroom, sprinkling lawn and garden, watering stock and for fire protection.

An air-tight steel tank in the basement, or in an out house, stores the water as it is pumped by hand or power and forces it through the pipes and faucets by compressed air in the upper portion of the tank. No elevated or attic tank to freeze and become stagnant. Water kept cool, clean and pure.

If you want anything of the kind, see me and I can make you low prices on the complete system installed in your home or farm.
