FRACTURED SKULL

One Negro Strikes Another On Head.

Thursday afternoon two negro youths, Freeman Hemby and John Robbins, who worked at the plant of the Greenville Lumber and Veneer Company, got in a difficulty, in which Hemby struck Robbins on the head with a brick, severely fracturing his skull. Physicians operated on Robbins, finding it necessary to remove a part of the broken bone, and he is in a critical condition.

Hemby's version of the difficulty is that Robbins was advancing on him with a drawn axe, when he picked up a brick and threw it at Robbins. This seems hardly plausible, as the blow was on the back of the head and indicated that Robbins had his back to him at the time the brick was thrown. Hemby was arrested and held to await developments of Robbins' injury.

GIVES UP HIS PRACTICE

Dr. P. W. Covington, of Rockingham, To Fight Hookworm Disease.

Dr. P. W. Covington, of Rockingham, has given up his private practice to assume the duties of district director of the campaign against hookworm disease. Doctor Covington is to be congratulated on receiving this important appointment, and on having the opportunity for extending his valuable work over a large territory. He, like the other three directors already in the state, is well fitted for his office. He received his academic education at Davidson College, and his medical education at the University of North Carolina and the University of Maryland. After serving as hospital resident physician for one year, he located at Rockingham. There he has built up a splendid practice, has held important medical appointments, and won the esteem of the country at large.

The three physicians already holding positions as district directors are Doctors B. W. Page, C. F. Stronssider and C. L. Pridgen. These, with Dr. Jno. A. Ferrell, the state director of the campaign, make four physicians giving their entire time to the hookworm campaign. Besides the physicians there are six microscopists in the laboratory of hygiene at Raleigh devoting their entire time to making the examinations for hookworm infection.

Since the beginning of the campaign more than 20,000 people in the state have availed themselves of the opportunity for having free examinations made for the disease. Approximately one-third of them have shown infection. The rapid progress made in educating the people on the eradication of the disease and general sanitation and their splendid response point to the ultimate education of this and allied diseases. The workers should have the hearty co-operation of every citizen.

COLD DAMAGING COTTON.

SOME CHANGES

The Interstate Commerce Commission And The Railroads.

Rebates and free transportation now exist only as history, and have been expunged from the vocabulary of the railroad man, as well as the shipper. All of the old-time subterfuges for manipulating rates have been abandoned, such as free storage of freight on docks, in cars or in freight stations; absorption of demurrage and litherage charges; absorption of fictitious "arbitraries," from so-called points of origin, up to steamship piers on freight for shipment via "water and rail;" underbidding in weight and underclassification; false description of contents of packages; filing of fictitious claims for loss or damage and their payment through connivance of the railways. All these unlawful expedients to stimulate business were made impossible by the never-ending vigilance of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which recruited a detective or investigating force from experienced railroad traffic men throughout the United States. By this plan the technical unraveling of violations of the commerce laws that was centered in the hands of trained men.

The indiscriminate issuance of passes to public officials, politicians, shippers, consignees, "drummers," and railroad employees without official title, has absolutely terminated. Special legislation has driven the ticket "scalper" from his occupation. The luxury and clerly and safety of traveling have been augmented emphatically.

Railway traffic associations are now bureaus, devoted to uniformity and unanimity of legal action; the standardizing of tariffs and division sheets; and the non-combative adjustment of perplexing problems. The traffic manager is no longer harassed by the question of a shrinkage in freight tonnage or in passenger revenues, for the reason that his chief executive has already tested the pulse of business conditions and can interpret the correct cause therefor in advance.

It must not be assumed that all the railways willingly conformed eventually to those sections of the commerce act repressing rebates and free transportation. Their acceptance of conditions was gradual, but ultimately enforced upon them by the tremendous number of indictments and convictions and penalties assessed under the provisions of the commerce act.

Competitive traffic is sought for much more actively now than ever before, but upon the advanced ideas of superiority of service and facilities, whilst the personality of freight and passenger men and their activities figure not a little in the results.—American Review of Reviews.

The Exclusive College Girl.

Just about the time when the lillies blow and the clouds are highest up in air, or, perchance, a little sooner, some earnest seeker after truth raises the issues of the college girl's indifference about matrimony. Or, let us say, concerning her alleged indifference, for, no matter what the investigators may think they have discovered concerning the college young woman's antipathy to wedlock there is the offsetting fact that the great majority of college women do, sooner or later, and never much later, get married.—Philadelphia Press.

GREENVILLE BANKING AND TRUST COMPANY

ENLARGED TO $75,000 CAPITAL.

Enthusiastic Meeting, Directors and Officers Elected.

Under the enlargement of the Greenville Banking and Trust Company, and the increasing of the capital stock from $25,000 to $75,000, a large meeting of those interested as stockholders was held this morning in the office of the bank.

The meeting was called to order by President J. R. Spier, who asked Vice-President E. G. Flanagan to preside as chairman. In behalf of the officers and old stockholders, the chairman requested Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse to extend a welcome to the new stockholders. In doing this most cordially, Dr. Laughinghouse said there was enough brain, energy and money represented in this institution to make it lead the state, and to put Greenville and Pitt county in the front rank. He also went back to the organization of the bank in 1903, and said that notwithstanding the prophecy made by some at that time that, because of the size of the town and there already being one bank here, it would not succeed, its success was shown in its rapid growth and having paid an aggregate of 142 per cent in dividends besides creating a surplus almost as large as its capital stock.

When the National Bank of Greenville was organized some years later the same prophecy was made, and had been proven unfounded by the success of that institution. He was rejoiced at the prosperity of every enterprise in the community and bid them God speed. With the Greenville Banking and Trust Company now enlarged to seventy-seven stockholders and increasing its capital three fold, there is no reason that, in working together, it should not be a leading financial institution.

Mr. S. J. Evrett responded in behalf of the new stockholders, saying the welcome was accepted in the same spirit it had been extended, and that the new stockholders had come with heart and hand to join in carrying the institution and community forward. Messrs. E. B. Higgs, Albion Dunn and some others also made some remarks.

New by-laws for the bank were then read and adopted, and the following directors were elected: J. R. Spier, E. B. Higgs, C. O'H. Laughinghouse, S. J. Everrett, R. O. Jeffries, A. M. Moseley, C. T. Munford, R. C. Flanagan, D. W. Harjee, H. A. White, W. A. Darden, J. L. Hassell and R. L. Smith.

After adjournment of the stockholders the board of directors met and elected the following officers of the bank: President, J. R. Spier. Vice-President, E. G. Flanagan. Cashier, C. S. Carr. Assistant Cashier, A. J. Moore. Teller, N. O. Warren.

The Assessor.

The assessor will soon be abroad in the land, and on and after next Monday there will be a wonderful shrinkage in the value of property in this state. What a wonderful difference in the value of any property when the owner is trying to sell it and when he is listing it for taxation.

A good joke, illustrative of this, is told on one of our countrymen, who is of a decidedly economical turn of mind. An acquaintance met him recently and pretended that he wanted to buy his farm and inquired his lowest cash price. The owner told him that he would not sell for less than $30 an acre and that it was worth much more. They argued the matter for awhile, and finally when the owner would not reduce his valuation his friend told him that he was employed by the assessor of the township to go around and ascertain the value of land. This announcement nearly took away the breath of the owner, and he began at once to abuse the Democratic party for passing a law allowing the assessor to go to a man's home and find out what he owned!

Every beautiful thing in the world has been made by one who know.

Birds Find Warm Spot.

Kenneth D. Owen, a civil engineer, of 70 Christopher street, is an early riser, and for this many birds, including robins, in the trees near his house are grateful. Mr. Owen is the owner of a car which he takes from the garage for a spin before breakfast. When he returns he leaves the machine in front of the house while he takes his morning meal. The heat from the automobile warms the ground over which the car stands, and the birds suffering from the chill of early spring, assemble on the spot. The other morning it was extremely cold, and when Mr. Owen came out he found a hundred birds or more under the automobile. The most darling robin was perched on top of the radiator.—Montclair Dispatch.

Advertisement in Japan.

Some Japanese advertisements possess a wealth of imagery unknown to the Western advertiser. A Tokio draper announced that "our goods are speed of a shot from a rifle." A large store displayed a poster inscribed: "Why not visit our shops? We can satisfy every possible want of yours. You will be as welcome as a ray of sunshine coming after a day of ceaseless rain."—Tit-Bits.

Cotton As An Asset.

A British expert at Manchester writes to the Department of Commerce and Labor that "any material reduction in the cotton crop of the United States through vagaries of weather, attack of parasites or other causes would be followed by disaster to the cotton trade and great loss and suffering to the people. A crop of 12,000,000 bales in the United States added to 8,000,000 produced elsewhere is now regarded as necessary to meet normal requirements and every successive year increases the world's mill capacity. In less than ten years at the present rate of natural increase in the demand, the requirements of the mills may be 28,000,000 to 30,000,000 bales per annum."

The New Orleans Picayune figures it out that last year, our cotton crop "brought into this country $550,000,000." But the Picayune does well to explain that "this amount represents the raw cotton sold abroad, and since manufacturing increases its value according to the character of the articles made from it from ten to one hundred fold, think what that $550,000,000 worth of raw cotton would be valued at if manufactured." As to the future, The Picayune says that one day last week, in an address before the South Carolina Bankers' Association at Charleston, Mr. John M. Gardin, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, is reported to have made the statement that in the not distant future no American cotton in the raw state will be shipped because it will be found more profitable to manufacture it at home and ship the woven fabrics to the world's trade. It is said that every sagacious man of business who has recently been in the South has been impressed with the belief that cotton manufacturing is to be greatly increased in the South soon after the opening of the Panama canal. That artificial ocean highway, will make it possible for American manufacturers to reach the foreign markets much more speedily and economically than the cotton manufacturers of Europe can do—at least the markets of South America and the Orient.

It is with this increase of cotton manufacture in the South in view, that already capital in large amounts has been invested in the development of water powers whose energies is to be converted into electricity and utilized in the operation of cotton mills.—Charlotte Chronicle.

King George and Early Hours.

One of the new fashions instituted since the accession of King George is that of dining at an earlier hour than has hitherto been the custom. The king and queen were the first to set the fashion. It is well known that both the king and queen are advocates of early hours. King Edward preferred to dine late, and this, no doubt accounted for the fact that till the end of his reign late dining was popular. M. Gustave, of the Savoy Hotel, informed an Empress representative that the pendulum was slowly swinging in favor of the early diners.

"King George's exaltation," he said, "is being followed by his people. At first it was a matter of a few minutes now the difference is evident.

"There is no doubt that among select circles the time of dining has changed. For a while the hour became later and later, until 8:45 was a favorite time" Now the usual hour is 7:30—London Express.

Keep The Facts Straight.

Some of the newspapers that make a business of carping are ringing the changes on the establishment of the office of county assessor at $4 per day. The readers of these papers are told that the legislature created 100 new officers at a salary of $4 per day for each officer. It is just as easy, and much better every way, to keep the facts straight and tell the truth. Under the old system of assessing property a list-taker was appointed for each township and when real estate was to be re-assessed, as is the case this year, two assessors were appointed for each township, and these, with the list taker, made the assessments. In Iredell, for instance, 32 men were appointed—and had to be paid, of course—to assess the real estate. Under the new law one man, the county assessor, takes the place of two in each township—takes the place of 32 men in Iredell. The one assistant assessor in each township takes the place of the list-taker and these and the one county assessor do the work. Under the change the assessment work in Iredell disposes of the services of 31 men; and instead of two men in each township in the state—several thousand—there is one to each county—just 100. It has always been so, and always will be, we suppose, that many people prefer to misstate facts rather than speak the truth.—Statesville Landmark.

The days of the dishonest merchant are numbered. He may get away with a big haul at first, but in his greed for gold he eventually runs his boat high and dry upon the quick sands of public condemnation. Does honor in business pay. It pays a thousand times the profit of trickery and avarice; it builds the firm foundation upon which reputation and prosperity rear themselves. Clever imitations of reliable goods are to be seen on all sides, and the purveyors of these goods do not hesitate to label them and advertise them as worthy products. The public is deceived for a short while and then the dealer loses what might have been a good customer. The only remedy is for a merchant to set his face sternly against deception and misrepresentation.—Gaffney, S. C. Leader.

Efficiency in National Government.

Except for Mr. Cleveland's two separate terms of four years each, the Republicans have held continuous executive authority for exactly fifty years. It is now fourteen years since the end of Mr. Cleveland's last term. In almost every department and bureau of the executive government, as it seems to us, there has been continuous improvement in the intelligence and efficiency with which public business is transacted. But many parts of the executive machinery are overloaded with supernumerary and inefficient people, while other parts are undermanned. The most upright and painstaking department head finds himself heir to conditions that he is without power to reform. Some of these situations,—freely mentioned as they are in private conversation among conscientious officials in the present administration,—might be radically improved as a result of Democratic investigation, which could be drastic without being unjust. We have reached a period when it is imperative that we should put efficiency into the work of popular government all along the line, from our local and city administrations up to the national.

Take, for example, the public service that is of the most widespread popular interest, namely, the post-office. The people of the country are clamoring for great extensions of the work of this department. They desire a parcels post, they have committed themselves to a general system of postal savings-bank, and frequent arguments are heard or read in favor of the addition of the telegraph and the telephone to our postal service, as in various foreign countries. But how can we intrust these added responsibilities to the post-office department until we give it a modern business organization? From top to bottom it is permeated with politics. A bi-partisan, joint commission of the two houses of congress recently investigated the post-office department, as regards various aspects of its business, with unusual thoroughness. The report of that commission declared that a business reorganization of the post-office department was absolutely necessary as the starting point for all other reforms and changes. As now carried on, the department is unbusinesslike, chaotic, and without reliable statistics of its own transactions. Judge McPoon, the new chairman of the post-office committee of the house, was himself a member of the commission that made this important report. Nothing could be more valuable from the standpoint of the citizenship of the entire country than a determined effort on the part of Judge Moon and his committee to pass a bill reorganizing thoroughly the work of the post-office department, and providing for a permanent director of posts with a group of competent assistants.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for May.

The Pythian Banquet
Thursday Night.

It is characteristic of Greenville
that whatever is undertaken is done, and well done. If it is to secure an enterprise, that enterprise is secured.
If it is something of a social nature that is engaged in, it is not allowed to be surpassed in either brilliance, excellence or pleasure. Hence when it was announced recently that Tar River Lodge, Knights of Pythias, was to give a banquet, at once an interest was awakened, all knowing that it would be in keeping with the town's well established reputation.

When the occasion arrived on Thursday evening, it was to fulfil the highest expectations that had been formed of it. The Pythians and their wives and invited friends, assembled in the Pythian hall where a concert was given by the Forbes orchestra, of Washington, which also furnished delightful music through the banquet.
After an hour of pleasure here they repaired in a body to Perkins' hall, where the banquet tables had been prepared by the Ladies' Aid Society of Memorial Baptist church. The ladies had truly transferred the hall into a place of beauty, the decorations being in appropriate Pythian colors and mottos. Two long tables extended the length of the hall, decorated with vases of cut flowers and lighted candelabras, and laden with plates for 125 guests.

After all had taken their places around the festive board, Mr. D. M.
Clark, chairman of the committee, extended a welcome that was as eloquent as it was cordial, interspersing

It with several witty hits that gave an insight into what was to follow.
He then turned the meeting over to Toastmaster R. C. Flanagan, who, after a few added words of welcome, called on Rev. J. H. Shore for the invocation.

Attention was then given to the enjoyment of the splendid menu which the Ladies' Aid Society had excellently prepared and provided a bevy of charming young ladies to serve.

The menu was as follows:
Grape Fruit Cock Tail.
Chicken Salad.
Sandwiches.
Beaten Biscuits. Pickles.
Tomatoes. Mayonnaise.
Banquet Wafers.
Ice Cream. Cake.

Coffee.
Cigars.
Between the courses and following the menu, Toastmaster Flanagan announced the toasts and called upon speakers to respond. In these announcements and introductions his remarks were indeed happy, his frequent sallies of wit and personal hits keeping the guests in constant expectancy. Truly he made an ideal toast-master, and his equal would be hard to find. The toasts and responses were as follows:

"Woman"—Mr. E. L. Daughtridge.
"History of Pythianism"—Mayor F.
M. Wooten.

"Why I Am A Pythian"—Rev. C.
M. Rock.
"Good of the Order"—Prof. H. B.
Smith.

"Fraternity"—Dr. D. L. James.
"Our Wives Who Direct Pythian Affairs"—Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse.
"Our Babies; They Comfort Us in Our Sorrows and Should be Remembered in Our Festivities"—Mr. Albion Dunn.

"Model Husbands"—Mr. W. H. Dail, Jr.

"Friendship Universal"—Prof W. H.
Ragsdale.

"Our Hosts"—Mr. D. J. Whichard.
"Why I am Henpecked"—Mr. C. S.
Forbes.

"Our Absent Friends"—Mr. J. B.
James.

All but the first four of the responses were impromptu, taking the speakers unawares, yet every one was of the highest excellence and to the point, showing the readiness of those called upon.

In every way the banquet was a brilliant success, reflecting the highest credit upon the Pythians as entertainers. They have abundant cause for congratulations.

STATE OF NEW YORK } ss.: ROCHESTER, N. Y.
COUNTY OF MONROE }

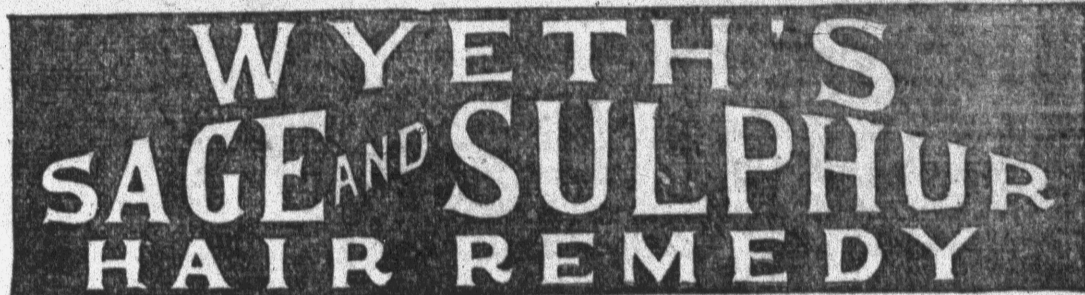

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my friends and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers, but as I grew older it commenced to come out. When my hair was quite thin and gray, I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to try a bottle; and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found my hair was fast coming back to its natural condition. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur until my hair was as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I began using Sage and Sulphur and my hair is in splendid condition.

Sworn to before me this 14th
day of July, 1902.
