DEBATE ON FREE LIST CONTINUES

MEXICAN SITUATION GRAVEST YET

Rioting Breaks Out in Mexico City—Orders Are Ready to Send 9,000 Additional Troops to the Border—President in Conference With Military Affairs Committee Chairman.

By Wire to The Reflector.

President Taft, Dickinson and chairman Hay, of the military affairs committee, held a conference over the Mexican situation. Orders are ready to send 9,000 additional troops to San Antonio. Other orders have also been ready a month to mobilize national guard if necessary. President Taft declares the United States will not intervene without the action of congress. Ambassador Wilson telegraphs that rioting has broken out in Mexico City, and is now in progress. The situation is the gravest yet.

COWS AND SNAKES.

The Latter Mortally Afraid of The Former.

Did you ever hear of a cow being bitten by a snake? Maybe you did, but it was only a report. The cow was not snake bitten. Something else caused the swelling you thought was the bite of a snake. At least that is what a gentleman who observes things and has handled cattle for a long time says, and he says, too, that he would be willing to turn the finest cow he ever owned into a pasture in which there was a rattlesnake on every square yard of land. A cow in a pasture goes into the very places most infested by snakes, puts her nose right into the grass, weeds and briars where snakes are found and is naturally more exposed to snakes than any other animal, but you never saw a cow shying around a snake-infested place, never saw her show any signs of fear of a snake, like a horse does. A cow has absolutely no fear of a snake, but they do say that a snake is mortally afraid of a cow and will make most frantic efforts to get away from it, and if the snake cannot get away and the cow comes along and blows its breath on the snake that snake will be just as still as if it was made of stone. The great law of nature, which is perfect, protects the cow. If there was war between the cow and snake then the cow in the very act of getting her living would be exposed to the greatest danger and would surrender life in getting her daily food. The cow was not made to protect herself or young against the snake, but was so made as to protect herself against the beast of prey.—Monroe Enquirer.

Passing of the Fence Rail.

Some years ago the farmers of this country were wondering what they would do for rails for fencing purposes when the timber was all used. Wire fences have solved the problem and now they are burning the old rails for stove wood and nearly all pastures are enclosed with two or three strands of barbed wire. Nowadays a farmer would not use rails to make a new pasture if he had plenty. It takes too much time handling the rails when a fair-sized pasture can be fenced in a day or less with wire. Mr. H. C. Griffin, of east Monroe township, has this season sold on the Monroe market a number of loads of stove wood cut of short lengths from old rails off his farm. He says these old rails have sold for enough to place two or more wire fences around the fields they originally enclosed, and had the timber from which the rails were cut been left standing it would have been of great value now. Years ago when rail-splitting was in vogue, no tree was considered too good to fell and make rails.—Monroe Enquirer.

PRESIDENT DIAZ REJECTS GENERAL MADERO'S DEMANDS

RIOTERS SURROUND THE PALACE

Business Men Demand the Resignation of Diaz.

By Wire to The Reflector.

Mexico City, May 6.—President Diaz rejects the demand of General Madero in the official note to the peace negotiators at Juarez. Ten thousand rioters surround the palace shouting "Viva Madero." Coahuila has been captured by LaJero. The annual military parade in celebration of the taking of Pueblo has been postponed. General Blanque defeated Pueblo, losing 1,100 men. The cabinet met to receive the petition of business men for the resignation of President Diaz.

HORSES FOR CORONATION

Kentuckian Gets Fancy Prices For Animals in London.

His pockets bulging with 5 pound notes, John C. Weaver, proprietor of the Forrest Farms, just outside of Lexington, Ky., where the finest of coach and carriage horses are bred, has just returned from London. When he went over, a month ago or more, he took with him 30-odd horses. He brought back the money for them.

"I wish they'd have a coronation every year," he said when asked about his good fortune. "If I'd had sense, I'd have taken over twice as many as I did. I could have sold them all, and then some more. I've got orders for half a dozen matched pairs as it is, and if I can rake together a dozen besides, I've a notion to hurry back to Lunnon while the market is good."

"Anybody who's got a pair of carriage horses standing more than 17 hands high can dispose of them for spot cash just now, for the supply of big horses for the coronation festivities is far short of the demand. And it's all due to the motor car, strange as that may seem."

"The advent of the motor car put horses out of the running for many purposes, and the horse-breeding business received a severe setback. Of course, there always will be a demand for good horses, but just now the call is for automobiles, and horse breeders have had to take a back seat. Lots of them have gone out of business altogether."

"Then along comes the coronation, if it were possible to use motor cars in the pageants attendant upon that function, there would be no trouble in getting enough to have one every week in every city in England, but a motor car coronation won't do just yet. Tradition surrounds the ceremony, and precedents must be observed. No one would consider motor cars and coronation pageants in the same breath."

"What are wanted are big-boned yet lithe horses, standing 17 hands high. They must have a certain dignity about them, be not too spirited for a slow gait, with well-shaped head, carried high. They must be perfectly matched teams, bays and browns preferred, blacks acceptable, whites not wanted at any price, except they be extraordinary fine animals."

"Ordinarily American horses are not in demand in England for carriage use. They say our horses lack the aristocratic appearance that is indispensable and a result of long breeding. But just now they are willing to take ours, seeing their own market has been swept absolutely dry."

"Agents of London dealers have been here buying horses and sending them to England, and it was this that gave me the idea of taking my own animals over. I reckoned that I could get better prices there than here, and that, in addition, I would have the trip over, which I needed for my health. "I found that it was just as I had anticipated. Where I could get only $200 to $250 for my horses here, I had no trouble in disposing of them over there for $400 or more. The people there simply have got to have horses, and they are not standing on the price."

"So scarce are horses that just answer requirements that the agents of foreign dealers here have been even visiting private stables in their efforts to induce owners to part with their own private horses, offering high prices for fine animals."

"One of them told me that a big livery stableman in London, who owns many public buses has rented most of his big horses for the festive week, getting as high as $50 for their exclusive use during that time. I don't believe many of London's old families would wish it to be known that their coaches in the coronation will be drawn by bus horses, but it is so."—New York Times.

Specimen of What a Farmer Makes.

There is nothing like having the proof of a thing. Reflector readers have learned something about what an excellent farmer Mr. W. A. Darden is, and that he makes the best of everything about his place. He lives in the Willow Green section of Greene county, not far from the Pitt line, and frequently comes over this way. He was here Thursday and calling around to see The Reflector man handed him a tin bucket with the remark "Here is something to put on your biscuits." It did not take long to find that the bucket contained some of the finest butter that can be made, and it was made right on Mr. Darden's farm.

COMPLIES WITH JUDGMENT.

Pitt County Man Satisfies Judge and May Not Serve on the Roads.

Governor Kitchin today announced the conditional commutation of the sentence of W. B. Smith, convicted in Pitt county at the April term of false pretense and sentenced to six months on the roads. The reasons for commutation are thus set forth:

"The trial judge desired to suspend judgment if the defendant would pay the costs and pay the prosecutor the amount he had lost. The term of court expired before defendant was able to do this, but he has since complied and the judge strongly urges me to pardon him on these terms, stating that he would relieve him of the judgment now if he had the power. For this reason, I commute the sentence to payment of all the costs on condition that he first pay prosecutor the amount he caused him to lose, and on the further condition that he remain law abiding and of good behavior."—Raleigh Times.

ERROR IN STATEMENT.

Concerning the Earnings of Greenville Banking and Trust Co.

An error crept into the article in Friday's Reflector regarding the enlargement of the Greenville Banking and Trust Co., that was due to a misunderstanding. It was stated that the bank since its organization in 1903 "had paid dividends aggregating 142 per cent. besides creating a surplus almost as large as its capital stock". It should have been that the 142 per cent. was the aggregate earnings of the bank during that period which includes the surplus.

OVERCROWDED SCHOOL.

The more The Reflector sees of the overcrowded condition of East Carolina Teachers' Training School in accommodation of students who desire to enter and obtain the benefits to be derived at this excellent institution, the more impatient we become at the short-sightedness of the last legislature in not making an appropriation for the enlargement and equipment of the school. Notwithstanding the needs of this school was called to the attention of the legislature, that body made liberal appropriations to every other state school for additional buildings and equipment, while the school here was given not a penny except for maintenance. And this in the face of the fact that the town of Greenville gave the school within $16,000 of the total sum, the state has put into it, and the town and county of Pitt together $33,000 more than the entire state appropriations for it. Such treatment is a shame to the state.

Now what are the conditions? This school, which occupies a hitherto practically untouched field by a state educational institution, a section, too, where the need of such a school was greater than in any other section, finds itself in the second year of its existence overcrowded beyond its capacity. For the spring teachers' course that is now in progress there were more applications than could be accommodated, and twenty-five were turned away for want of room. It is yet a month to the beginning of the summer course, which starts June 6th, and already every applicant that can be accommodated for that course has been registered. Two weeks ago President Wright saw that the applications would exceed the number that could be taken in the dormitories, so he appealed to the people of Greenville to open their homes and take students to board for a few weeks. While the response to this appeal was generous, enough names have come in to fill every home that was offered and this source of assistance has about reached its limit.

With such a condition existing there is nothing left to do but deny admission to further applicants, and this alternative has already begun, though every denial is made with regret. And with applications averaging twenty a week, by the time the summer course begins fully one hundred public school teachers seeking the advantages of this splendid school will be denied admission. As these teachers have an average of thirty pupils in their respective schools, and want to better equip themselves for teaching these, it means that three thousand children throughout Eastern North Carolina will be deprived of advantages that by good right belong to them.

Oh, the short-sightedness and niggardliness of the last legislature in its treatment of East Carolina Teachers' Training School, the school that, without exception, is doing better work for teachers than any other in North Carolina.

If a good thing costs no more than a bad thing, it looks like the part of wisdom to have the good thing. Yet there are people who prefer to have bad roads, when it would cost them less to have good roads.

If there was as much co-operation for manufacturing enterprises in Greenville as there is for some other things, you would see this town hum.

Next Friday, 12th, will be the meeting of the board of governors of Pitt County Fair Association. Every member of the board should be present.

What is the use of passing that two ticket window law if every place in the state except seven is to be excepted from its operations?

What Transportation Means.

If we don't carry the roads to the farms the farms will come to the roads. At any rate the farmers will abandon out-of-the-way lands to move in on the good roads or to settle along the railroads, in the event there are no modern rural highways.

This movement to the railroads and the good roads is going on every day in eastern North Carolina. Nothing so acutely emphasizes the advantages of rural highways and railroad transportation to make the farms of this country valuable. It strikingly demonstrates the need for more good roads and branch line railways in the remote sections where the lands are just as good if not better than the lands located where the farmers can haul and ship their products with greater economy and despatch.

Where lands are located on good roads and near the railway lines, values are jumping upward, while lands that cannot be reached over good roads are depreciating in value. Farmers in isolated sections are simply not in it and are selling out to settle where they can profit from highway and railway facilities. We hear of some of these abandoned lands being offered at $1 per acre, depreciated from lack of good roads, while lands on improved highways bring good price and are steadily increasing in value. If that doesn't demonstrate that good roads are an investment with a sure profit for any people and any country, we fail to recognize what a knock down argument is.

The counties all around Wilmington need good roads and branch highways or trolley lines for their complete development and if the counties will prove that they are progressive capital will come along to develop their waste places.—Wilmington Star

The Cash Payer.

Just at this time, near the first of the month when the bill collector is busy, it is well to discuss the question of paying accounts. A merchant in the city was short a salesman in his store Monday. He stated that the man was out collecting, that it took from three to five days to catch creditors and then only a few of them paid. The experience of this merchant is the experience of all of them, and of every man in business where credit is allowed. This does not speak well for the honesty and integrity of the people, for when a bill is due it should be paid, or if the party who has been indulged cannot do so, he should see the merchant himself and have his account extended and not wait until he sends a man around at extra expense. Did it ever occur to the average man who runs an account that it is the cash payer that enables the merchant to continue in business? With the cash he takes in he meets his bills, pays his pastor, the teacher who instructs his children and every other thing where ready cash is required. The account may be good but it will not pay any of the merchant's bills.

The writer once collected for a business concern. Several of its creditors were building homes for themselves and put off settling their accounts from time to time. They said the bill is good; we are building now and as soon as we are through the accounts will be settled in full. They were, after a year or more, but what about the concern? The proprietor was trying to build a home and before the accounts were paid he had failed and with it went all his credit and hundreds of other accounts that were never settled. The men who built homes, while they allowed the concern they owed to fail, were partly criminal—not to make the case stronger. Remember, the man who pays cash is the man who is pushing forward the wheels of progress.—Salisbury Post

EDUCATION OF THE MASSES

EAST CAROLINA A FIELD OF POSSIBILITIES

THE WORK OF THE E. C. T. T. S.

Delivered by Pres. R. H. Wright, Superintendent of the East Carolina Teachers' Training School, at the Closing of the Stantonsburg School.

On an occasion of this kind it seems to me well that the speaker should leave you a few thoughts worth your while. You should not come here and go away without some thought that is worth while.

(Being teachers, students and parents I take it for granted that you are interested in the great problem of education.) I am therefore going to talk to you about the American public school—its place in our civic life.

To one interested in the growth of our nation—its constitutional history and its economic history—to one interested in the growth and development of our institutions, there is nothing more fascinating than to trace the evolution of our public school system; for this growth and development is peculiar to our own nation. Many educators would have us believe our public schools have been developed from European systems. This statement is not based upon the facts of history. Many sections are trying to claim priority in the establishment of the public school of today. To all such let me say: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive."

The truth is our system is not fully developed today; for we are now undergoing the first stage of its metamorphosis. But, what we have, has been a slow but steady elevation of the public consciousness for the need of universal education as the real foundation for our institutional stability.

When this new nation sprang into existence, July 4, 1776, it is true as stated in the immortal Declaration of Independence that governments are instituted among men to derive their powers from the consent of the governed. But, as the idea then for the first time given a national birth, the idea of political liberty as it grew and developed we reached a stage we no longer believe government derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, but from the will of the governed. In America it is not a matter of what we will consent to, but a matter of what we wish done. The government is not a thing apart from our life, but our life is an integral part of the government.

It is a noticeable fact in the history of civilization that people have political liberty in proportion to public intelligence. Educate the masses and you eliminate the classes in government. Education is the tyrant's greatest enemy and the people's warmest friend. As a nation we are beginning to realize that in a civilization like the one in which we live, in a nation like ours where the government rests upon the heads of an intelligent citizenship, not only the government itself but the very civilization depends in no small measure upon public education. Our nation, our state, or our county will prosper in just the proportion that public education is fostered. We may believe this or not, but it is as true as fate; for it is a natural step in our evolution.

What is the function of our public schools? Are they to be fostered simply to keep alive patriotism and teach government, or are they to touch the heart and life of our people? Is education with us to be as it has been in the past for leadership alone, or is it to reach itself down to the very foundation of our life, lay hold of the masses of mankind and bring us to a more vivid realization of our obligations and opportunities and thus raise the standard of living and advance our civilization? As I see it, the public schools, and I include all state supported educational institutions in the expression, "the public schools," must not only train for leadership, but they must touch in a vital way the every day affairs of our people. We must have leaders in church and state, but we must have also, an intelligent citizenship, and of the two we most need an intelligent citizenship; for from the rank and file we will develop leaders, provided that rank and file is intelligent. It is the substantial yeomanry of England who have preserved that great nation in many crises. And, the safety, to say nothing of the great prosperity of our state, depends upon the intelligence of our yeomanry.

Our system of public education from the State University down to the kindergarten while not perfect is based upon correct principles. We realize that "the difficulties of Democracy are the opportunities of education," (N. M. Butler), and that each generation is not only the inheritor of a glorious past, but also a trustee for posterity. And that "to preserve, protect, and transmit its inheritance unimpaired is its highest duty. To accomplish this is not the task of a few, but the duty of all." (N. M. Butler.) Again we realize that "Democracy alone will triumph which has both intelligence and character. To develop them among the whole people is the task of education in Democracy." (N. M. Butler.) That "there is no smack of charity about the public educational system of America. It is for all. It is the universal and inalienable right of every man and woman, every son and daughter of the realm. It is the corner-stone of our plan, the essential factor of our government purpose. The public schools are to train boys and girls—not to support the thrifless or the unfortunate." (Draper.)

We realize that "whatever adds to the real enlightenment of the multitude adds to the happiness, the strength, and the security of a republic which rests upon the common intelligence and equality of rights for all." (Draper.) This does not mean socialism if by socialism you mean a kind of paternalism. It does mean equality of rights under the law, but not equality of results in spite of moral and legal rights.

We realize that the educational purpose of our state would make the work of the schools aid the industries, that it would give as much prominence and as much honor to manual skill as to intellectual occupations, and yet its educational purpose reaches to the very mountain tops of human learning.

"It is time for all to realize that that purpose points not only to a free elementary school in reach of every home, but also to a free high school," and a free university, college or training school for every young man or woman who can avail himself of these opportunities.

Realizing these things our state system is divided into two types of schools:

a—State schools to train for leadership.
b—Public schools that will lay for us at least the ground work for an intelligent citizenship.

In the former class are schools to prepare leaders in practically every field open to our people for useful occupation. The state owes it to itself to equip these institutions so they may do in an efficient way the work for which they have been established. And then it owes it to itself to see that these educational plants turn back to the state the type of person for which they have been built. I stand here this morning as the head of the youngest of these state schools and I say to you that if we do not give back to the state well trained teachers we have no claim upon North Carolina for state aid. If we do, the Old North State can not afford to let the school at Greenville suffer for a lack of financial aid. The same is true of every other one of our state educational institutions.

Turning now to the other division of our educational system, our public schools, the schools for the great masses of our people, yes the schools for over ninety-five per cent. of our people. The task that confronts us here almost staggers me. But after all it is the most important side of our system; for it is here that the system reaches itself down to the home of every citizen of our state, here it is that the system comes into vital touch with the people who constitute the yeomanry of our state. Here it is after all, that the people will get their education. These are schools that are the real educational expression of our Democracy. These state schools that train for leadership are in part the out-growth of European civilization, but the public schools are the pure expression of American Democracy. They did not begin until long after our government had been established. There were a few free schools in a few localities, but they were not the expression of the American idea. It is only quite recently that the real American public school has come forward. It is destined to grow and develop until every child everywhere in this great land of ours has the educational opportunity that belongs to him as an inheritance of our government.

Never before in our state's history have our people been so wide awake to our needs, educationally. A few years ago it was not hard to find communities in eastern North Carolina where good citizens honestly questioned the advisability of spending public funds for public education. It was indeed a question in the minds of many whether the state could with justice to the taxpayer spend the money raised by taxes for the education of all the children in the state. Today we find our leaders advocating larger and ever larger appropriations from the state treasury for the education of our children. Yes the question now is, shall we as a state not only furnish the money, but force the parents to send the child to school? Why this great change in so short a time? Simply because our people realize that ignorance is a blight upon our civilization. They realize that the unlettered boy has an almost impossible handicap in the great race of life. Also, that the safety as well as the progress of the state is dependent upon the education of our young citizenship.

Educate a boy, truly educate him and he will unfurl his sails to the winds of actual life and steer his course straight to the harbor of success. Remove the handicap of ignorance from the next generation and the material wealth and happiness of our state will know no bounds. Indeed this part of our dear old state will become one of the garden spots of the world.

In the last twelve months I have been through our country to Massachusetts in the northeast, to Wisconsin in the northwest, on through the southern states to Mississippi, and I can truthfully say to you I have not seen a section with greater possibilities than we have here at home. I see no reason why we should not have here as prosperous, as happy a people as the world in all her fullness can produce. Our climate for the twelve months is as fine as can be found; our soil is rich or lends itself to fertility, and the native ability of our people is as great as any to be found. The key to success for us in EDUCATION spelled in capitals. We are about the most homogeneous people on the American continent, and we will remain so if we do not awake to our opportunities, struggling humanity in less favored localities will straggle in and take possession by degrees and our sons and daughters will gradually sell their birthright for a mess of pottage.

Friends let me insist upon it, the safe guard of our liberties and the key to our prosperity, is education. But our people will never be properly educated until the teachers have been properly trained for this most serious civic duty. It is because of a conscious realization of this fact that our state has established and is maintaining the school at Greenville. You may call me an enthusiast, a crank, if you will, but the burden of my life, yes, my life, itself is in this work. I care not for riches, or honor, but I do care for that little child, who is soon to assume the stern responsibilities of life. I want him to be able to face those responsibilities with the preparation that will enable him to cope with them successfully. Fellow teachers, do you not see the responsibilities resting upon your shoulders? Are you prepared to meet those responsibilities as they should be met? I am not making this plea to get you to go to Greenville; God forbid that I should be so base, but I do appeal to you from a conscious realization of the responsibilities resting upon you to make the preparation you can to meet with success the noble work you are now undertaking and I don't care where you get your preparation, just so you get it. But the trained teacher must have the support of the people.

The hope of our state is in the education of its youth and the hope of this education is in the trained teacher. Get the knowledge necessary and couple with that knowledge a high and noble purpose and your efforts will be crowned with success.

Mark Twain's Answers.
A series of questions submitted to Mark Twain once was answered by the humorist in this fashion:
What is your favorite object in nature? A dumb belle.
Where would you like to live? In the moon, because there is no water there.
If not yourself, who would you rather be? The Wandering Jew, with a nice annuity.
What is your idea of happiness? Finding the buttons on.
What do you most dread? Exposure.
What is your aim in life? To endeavor to be absent when the time comes.
What are the sweetest words in the world? Not guilty.

"At The Door."

I thought myself indeed secure,
So fast the door, so firm the lock;
But lo! the toddling comes to lure
My parent ear with timorous knock.

My heart were stone could it withstand
The sweetness of my baby's plea—
That timorous, baby knocking and
"Please let me in—it's only me."

I threw aside the unfinished book,
Regardless of its tempting charms,
And opening wide the door I took
My laughing darling in my arms.

Who knows but in eternity,
I, like a truant child, shall wait
The glories of a life to be,
Beyond the Heavenly Father's gate?

And will that Heavenly Father heed
The truant's supplicating cry,
As at the outer door I plead,
"Tis I, O Father! only I?"

One of the prettiest of the marriages this far this spring took place at 8 o'clock last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ramsburg No. 23 Peyton street, when their eldest daughter, Miss Lillian Love Ramsburg, became the bride of Mr. Roland Cooper Ryan, the youngest son of Mrs. Nettie R. Ryan and the late Mr. Arthur Ryan, of Winchester. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. H. Lacy, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of which the bride is a member, and he was assisted by Rev. Dr. George S. Bowers, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, which the members of the groom's family are prominently connected. The marriage was attended by a large number of family connections and friends of the bride and groom from a distance and this city. The front and rear parlors of the Ramsburg home were elaborately and beautifully decorated for the occasion in white, yellow and green, and the young couple plighted their troth under a huge marriage bell of field daisies, wild apple blossoms and honeysuckle, the ring ceremony being performed by the officiating clergyman. The wedding march was rendered by Prof. J. A. Ide, the well-known composer and music master, as the bridal party entered the parlors. The bride wore a handsome gown of white messaline with crystal trimmings and diamond ornaments, her veil was caught with bride roses and she carried a large bunch of the same flowers. She came in on the arm of the groom.

The maid of honor, who was her younger sister, Miss Elsie Ramsburg, wore baby blue satin and silver trimmings and pearl ornaments and she carried bride roses. Mr. William B. Ryan, of this city, a brother of the groom, served as best man.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony, and later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Ryan motored to Martinsburg, W. Va., where they boarded a main line Baltimore and Ohio Railroad train for an extended wedding journey, which will terminate at Buffalo, New York, where they will make their future home.

The bride is a native of Winchester, and is a very pretty and winsome girl, being a general favorite among all her friends and acquaintances. She was graduated several years ago from the Episcopal Female Institute, and is an accomplished musician, having won high honors in the music class of the institute. She will be missed greatly by the young people of Winchester. The very large number of handsome and costly presents of gold and silver, cut glass, fine linens and other gifts she received as expressions of good wishes from numerous friends attest most certainly the high regard in which she is held by all within the circle of her acquaintance.

Mr. Ryan is a young man of excellent character, being a member of one of Winchester's oldest and most substantial families, and for a number of years he has been successfully engaged in business in Buffalo.—Winchester, Va., Star, May 3rd.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Ryan lived in Greenville many years ago, he being engaged in business here. If we are not mistaken, Mr. Roland C. Ryan was born here. After the death of Mr. A. N. Ryan his widow and children moved back to Winchester, their former home.

What the Printer's Book Will Show.

It has been agreed that newspaper subscriptions are an infallible test of a man's honesty. They will sooner or later discover the man. If he is dishonest he will cheat the printer some way—declare he has paid when he has not; sent money in the mails which was lost; take the paper and not pay for it on the ground that he never subscribed for it, or move off and leave it coming to the office he left. Thousands of alleged Christians are dishonest in this particular, at least, and the printer's book will tell fearful tales at the final judgment.—Fort Mill Times.

AWFUL PAINS FULLY DESCRIBED

A Lady of Pizarro Tells Story of Awful Suffering That Cardui Finally Relieved.

Pizarro, Va.—"I suffered for several years," writes Mrs. Dorna A. Smith, "with that awful backache and the bearing down sensations, so fully described in your book."

"I tried doctors and other medicines and found little relief, until I was induced to try Wine of Cardui, when I found instant relief and today I can heartily recommend Cardui to all suffering women and think there is no other as good."

In some instances, Cardui gives instant relief; in others, it may take a little time. But in all cases of female trouble Cardui can be depended on to be of benefit, as it is a specific remedy for women and acts in a curative way on the womanly organs.

As a general tonic for women, to build up your strength, improve your appetite, bring back rosy cheeks and make you look and feel young and happy, nothing you can find will do so much for you as Cardui.

Your druggist has it.

DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR STOPPED

Harmless, Old-Fashioned Remedy Brings Back Color to Gray Hair and Makes it Grow.

How many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old-time, tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy nothing equals our grandmothers' "sage tea." Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer.

Nowadays, when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garret for herbs and making the "tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.

Druggists are authorized to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agent, Moye's Pharmacy.

Great Expectations.
A notoriously close fist man was taking his golfing holiday in Scotland, where he hoped to improve his game, and by driving a hard bargain had managed to secure the exclusive services of a first class caddy, who was known to be a very good player. "Mind, now," said the ambitious Englishman, "I expect to receive some really good tips from you during my stay. You understand?"
"Aye," replied the Scotsman, hitching up the heavy bag, "an' Ah'm expectin' the like frae ye, ye ken."—Golf Illustrated.

Valuable Skimmilk.
The value of skimmilk as a food is not generally appreciated. Alone it is an unsatisfactory article of diet, as it must be taken in large quantities for a sufficient amount of nourishment, and it does not "stay by" very long, but combined with bread or used in cooking it forms a nutritious addition to the diet. Two and one-half quarts of skimmilk will furnish nearly the same amount of protein and about the same fuel value as a pound of round steak. Two quarts of skimmilk have a greater nutritive value than a quart of oysters.—Designer.

MANHOOD.
Labor, calling, profession, scholarship and artificial and arbitrary distinctions of all sorts are incidents and accidents of life and pass away. It is only manhood that remains, and it is only by manhood that man is to be measured.—Josiah Gilbert Holland.
