SCHOOL LUNCHES.

Feeding School Children—A Strictly Educational Policy.

But, in the last analysis, it is as an educational measure that we must regard the feeding of school children. The English Board of Education has expressed this idea in a circular to the local school authorities on the Provision of Meals. act. "Its object is to insure that children attending public elementary schools shall, as far as possible, be no longer prevented from profiting by the education offered in our schools, and it aims at securing that, for this purpose, suitable meals shall be available just as much for those whose parents are in a position to pay as for those to whom must be given free of cost." These words show that in England they have faced a fact which we are slow to recognize—namely, that wholesome food is inextricably a part of any system of compulsory education that is to be really effective.

That, in the medical examination of school children, and the teaching of personal hygiene, we have acknowledged the truth that education rests upon physical fitness, only emphasizes the inconsistency of stopping short of the supremely important item of food. Training in the proper knowledge of food values should be as much a part of the curriculum as are arithmetic and geography, and the best way to begin this training is to see that every child in our elementary schools gets at least one proper meal a day. That the practice, followed by the theory, of wholesome food in school will react upon the home, admits of no reasonable doubt. Let us hope that in the near future our boards of education will recognize the necessity of dealing adequately with this vital matter of school lunches.—American Review of Reviews.

INEFFICIENCY IN CHINA.

Ignorance and Graft Will Long Delay The Yellow Peril.

The inefficiency of the management of Chinese undertakings is heartrending in its waste of sweet-won wealth. The superintendent of construction of a railroad will be a worthy mandarin, with technical knowledge or experience, who has to rely wholly on his subordinates. Or the prominent financier chosen president of the company feels himself quite above the vulgar details of management and so delegates the task to some one of lesser consequence. This gentleman, too, feels above the work, and passes it down to some one else. So the big men become figureheads and little men run the enterprise. Any government undertaking suffers from the conceit and unpracticability of the mandarins. The initial price of the cement from a government plant was fixed at a dollar a barrel more than the cost of good foreign cement. The officials thought that the people would beg for "imperial cement" regardless of price.

The fact is the faulty past lies too heavily on the mind and the character of contemporary Chinese. The real strength of the race will not generally declare itself till another generation, is on the stage, bred in the new education, and enforcing a higher code. Perhaps, the moral atmosphere will not clear till there has come a marked let up in the struggle for existence. At the back of the business man's mind lurks, I fancy, a dim sense of a myriad clutching hands. People do not judge one another very strictly when each acts with the abyss ever before his eyes. The excellent reputation enjoyed by the Chinese business men in Malaysia suggests that only in a land of opportunity does the natural solidity of character of the yellow race show itself.

It is not likely, then, that the march of industrialism in China will be so rapid and triumphant as many have anticipated. Jealousy of the foreigner, dearth of capital, ignorant labor, official "squeeze," graft, nepotism, lack of experts, and inefficient management will long delay the harnessing of the cheap-labor power of China to the machine. Not we, nor our children, but our grandchildren, will need to lie awake night. It will be along in the latter half of this century that the yellow man's economic competition will begin to mold with giant hands the politics of the planet.—Prof. Edward Aisworth Ross in Century.

NOT ENOUGH RAIN TO GERMINATE SEED

MAKES CROP PROSPECTS POOR.

Wells Getting Low and A Water Famine Threatened.

Ayden, N. C., May 11.—We have a most beautiful day after so long a dark, cold spell with scarcely any rain. This rain question causes us to note the fact that the wells on our farm are about to go dry, although they are from 20 to 25 feet deep. We fear a water scarcity before the middle of the summer unless there should be considerable rain fall from now on for some time. In getting water to set out tobacco yesterday and the day before, we could get only about two barrels of water out of our lot well. The bottom can be seen in our hog lot well, although it is over 20 feet deep.

As to the crop prospects at this writing, I should say they are poor. Stands of corn, cotton and tobacco are sure to be poor unless the dry spell is soon broken. This is one of the springs it would have been well to have planted corn and cotton real early in order to have gotten sufficient moisture for the germination of the seeds. And again, it is one of the springs when it would have been well to have made our list for planting cotton and setting tobacco on at least two or three weeks before planting and setting, so that the soil might have settled and thereby held the moisture better.

There has not fallen on our farm for two or three months sufficient rain to settle the first plowed lands together. On account of this fact, and the further fact that we failed to harrow or replot our tobacco land, we have already had one setting to die and have begun to set it a new. It ought to have been harrowed, rebroken and reharrowed, and we would not have had to reset, but might have gotten a reasonable stand, though it has been so cold tobacco on exposed land could not live, especially plants from a bed sown too thick.

GREENVILLE DEFEATS KINSTON

The Score Was Close, Ending Nine To Eight.

A large crowd witnessed the ball game in the park, Wednesday afternoon, between Greenville and Kinston. It was not a fast game, consuming two hours, but it was interesting and there was some good playing on both sides, the result being a close score of 9 to 8 in favor of Greenville. The features of the game were a home run by Ludlow, a running catch by Phillips and James' fine fielding at short stop.

A Rubber Tired "Blind Tiger."

An alderman of Salisbury has been arrested as a "blind tiger." One John F. Ludwig, who had just been honored with office, was nabbed Saturday, charged with breaking the prohibition law. Breaking it, however, does seem to be a sufficient allegation. According to appearances he had about annihilated it so far as he is concerned. He was a sort of fashionable, polished, sightless beast, too, because when arrested he was riding in an automobile. When his machine was searched there were found seventy-three pints of booze. Now as well as trying to make folks tight, he is in a tight place. Just how he is going to escape from the meshes is hard to see. In fact, the only plea left open to him appears to be that of "conspiracy." No doubt, he will be able to clamor loud and shout hysterically that his enemies conspired against him and secreted the booze in his joy-machine. Such please seem to be more popular now-a-days than were brain storm, "emotional insanity" and the like several years ago.—Wilmington Dispatch.

TO END PATENT MONOPOLY.

Bill Digested to Reach Trusts Based On Inventions and Machinery.

Means of reaching such trusts and combinations as the Shoe Machinery Trust, the Electrical Trust, the cigarette-making monopoly of the Tobacco Trust, and other combinations which exercise monopolistic control in business and industry because of their ownership of patent rights, is provided in a bill presented to the house recently by Representative Oldfield, of Arkansas, chairman of the house committee on patents. The bill would amend the present patent laws by inserting a compulsory license clause.

Its purpose is to prevent the locking up of valuable inventions from which the public should benefit, and also to provide for the use of all patents by corporations and individuals upon the payment of a reasonable royalty to the owner of the patents rights.

In brief, it is Mr. Oldfield's intention to destroy monopoly based upon patent rights by making it possible for anyone to use the patented invention who is willing to pay what may be determined to be a proper royalty.

According to Mr. Oldfield, Great Britain and several other countries have this provision in their patent laws, and the United States alone adheres to a policy which enables the owners of the patents upon shoe machinery to absolutely dominate the shoe industry in the United States.

If the legislation is as feasible as Mr. Oldfield believes, its importance to the public will be tremendous. For not only have monopolies like the Electrical Trust and combination like the telephone combination been formed upon patent rights, but great special privilege corporations have for years made a practice of purchasing inventions, not to use them, but to suppress them.—Philadelphia North American.

It is do the fly or the fly will do you.

One reason for it is that Diaz likes his job better than he does peace.

Salsbury's blind tiger alderman peddled it around in his automobile.

There are many good books, but the best to have handy is a bank book.

While a town is judged largely by its newspapers, a county is judged by its roads.

The longer President Diaz holds out against resigning, the worse conditions get in Mexico.

If some of our enthusiasm was turned on manufacturing enterprises they might come this way.

Weldon is about to begin building a $40,000 hotel. It looks like Greenville ought to do that well.

Do not bank too much on the free list bill until you see what the senate is going to do with it.

Perhaps if the Mexicans are allowed to fight it out they will settle the trouble that much sooner.

It is noticed that aviators do their share of falling out, and when they fall something is apt to happen.

They are trying to bring ex-Governor Glenn into the senatorial race, but he is busy at something else just now.

and Trade reports that in the February number of the Agricultural Journal of the Union of South Africa considerable space is devoted to cotton growing in the Transvaal, an industry which for some time has been receiving the close attention of those in charge of the cotton division of the Agricultural Department of the Union. That the Transvaal possesses large areas of land especially well suited to the production of cotton is an accepted fact, and experts have devoted considerable time in efforts to induce farmers whose lands are situated in those parts of the country where favorable soil and climatic conditions exist to give the plant a fair trial. These efforts, it seems, have been attended with no small measure of success. Prizes for Transvaal-grown cotton were offered by the Witwatersrand Agricultural Society at its annual exhibition held in Johannesburg in April and May, 1910, and many growers competed. The samples were sent to England and were judged by the British Cotton Growing Association, the first prize being awarded to a farmer in the Zoutansburg district. All of the samples were favorably commented upon by experts in the center of the cotton manufactures of the world.

Just so. And here comes in the cost of production. The report from which we are quoting says: "Estimating the total cost of production per acre at $9 and the value of the yield at $30, it is figured that the Transvaal cotton grower should realize a profit of $21 per acre on the crop, notwithstanding the fact that allowance must be made for the expense of shipping to England, which would be slightly higher than the cost of shipping to that country from the United States. Altogether it is conceded that the South African grower can not hope to realize quite as much for his cotton crop as does the American grower, nevertheless it is thought that the industry, once established, will prove a commercial success." It is these same English cotton growers that have stirred up President Barrett, of the Farmers' Union, about the experiment in Mississippi. It will be observed that the Englishmen do not estimate their crop by the pound, but by the acre. If we remember aright, the African cotton cost the grower, from ground to gin, twenty cents a pound, when the Englishmen start in to grow cotton, they do not stand back on expenses. And for that self same reason, we are welcoming them to the South. Some things they may not do, but it is certain that they will do one thing—they will put out a lot of good money within the zone of their operations.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Superintendent Gray's Report From The Mountain Boys.

Printer's ink cunningly distributed provokes discussion, and discussion produces amongst other crops, corn. The gospel of intensive farming, with acre-yield of corn as its simple text, was first preached seriously in the mountain section of the state by some of the papers a little more than a year ago. Once started on the theme the press hammered along with an insistence and vigor that at first caused some complaint at the noise from a few persons who were not apt to realize what it was all about. Counting only the actual acres in contest, it was a case, last season, of great cry and little wool. However, there were contestants and very good yields in a number of the counties.

But the dictum, fewer acres, more corn; more bushels, less cost; is a compelling one in this age of economy. The West is today as alert as the Piedmont county. The county education boards are interested, and the county superintendents are active. The boys have been marshaled into clubs. In Buncombe, where there were three of four boy contests last year, more than 50 are now enrolled. James M. Gray, of the State Agricultural Department, was in that section the latter part of last week, visiting the young farmers and helping with instruction, assistance and encouragement. He found scores of boys enlisted in the United States Club and the State Club. The young mountain farmers will be heard from when the returns come in next fall.—Greensboro News.

A Southern Mother.

In the course of a brief article called forth by the recent death of his own mother, Editor Clarence Poe, of The Progressive Farmer, pays the following deserved tribute to a rapidly-vanishing type, the woman of the Old South:

I sometimes wonder if the world has ever known a higher type of womanhood than the Southern women of my mother's time. They grew up on the plantations of the Old South in what proved to be the sunset glow of a practical civilization that has vanished as completely as the social order of Homer's time, but whose charm and romance still lure us to dreams of its beauty. They were just budding into womanhood when the fateful war drums sounded in '61, and their young souls were tested in the four years of epic struggle and distress that followed. And then, with spirits made perfect through suffering, with dignity which poverty had not altered and a courage which defeat had not shaken, they took up life on the small farms of the South and became the inspiration of the best that was wrought by the men in tattered gray is the long ordeal of our rebuilding.

To that generation my mother belonged, and I think her spirit was sweeter for the times through which she had lived. * * *

Before her marriage in 1880, she was a teacher; and not so much to any aid from the schools as to the instruction and inspiration I received from her do I owe whatever material progress I have been able to win. Yet I feel, and I know she feels, that this is the smaller part of the debt that I am due her. If I have kept, if I have hope to keep, in Tennyson's fine phrases, my "trust in all things," if I may have hope that "though I trip and fall, I shall not blind my soul with clay," I must pay tribute to the influence of a mother and a father whose well-lived Faith enabled them to appraise life's values fairly. They fired me with ambition for achievement and success, but they taught first and most of all that the truest victory or defeat is within one's soul, and that the earth knows no more tragic failure than the man who has bought so-called Success at the cost of his only enduring treasures—his manhood and his ideals.

FARMER'S WIFE HAD HEAP TO DO

Mrs. Shepherd Was in Bad Shape When She Could Not Stand on Her Feet.

Durham, N. C.—"I am a farmer's wife," writes Mrs. J. M. Shepherd, of this city, "and have a heap to do."
"Four months ago I could not stand on my feet, to do anything much, but at this time I do the most of my work. I took Cardui and it did me more good than all the doctors."

"You don't know half how I thank you for the Cardui Home Treatment. I wish that all women who suffer from womanly trouble would treat themselves as I have." Ladies can easily treat themselves at home, with Cardui, the woman's tonic. It is easy to take, and so gentle in its action, that it cannot do anything but good.

Being composed exclusively of vegetable ingredients, Cardui cannot lay up trouble in your system, as mineral drugs often do. Its ingredients having no harsh, medicinal effects, and being non-poisonous and perfectly harmless, Cardui is absolutely safe for young and old.

Ask your druggist. He will tell you to try Cardui.

N. B.—Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., for Special Instructions, and 64-page book, "Home Treatment for Women," sent in plain wrapper, on request.

Including attractive side trips, to Virginia Beach, Mount Vernon and Arlington.

The purpose of the Tour is Educational—a trip to no other place is as instructive and interesting as to the beautiful City of Washington, the seat of our National Government. The Congress will be in (extraordinary) session.

Interesting features of the program will be a reception at the White House, by President Taft, and a visit to the Capitol of the United States, where the North Carolina Senators and Representatives will welcome the party.

A side trip will be made to Mount Vernon the Home of our first President.

Still another equally interesting side trip will be to Arlington, the home of the great Southern Chieftain—General Robert Edward Lee.

The journey up and down the historic Potomac River on the palatial new steamer, "Southland", of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company, will be one delight after another. The entire trip will be full of interest.

NEW PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER.
 Will Begin His Work Here Next Sunday.

Rev. Robert King, of Richmond, will arrive in Greenville tomorrow to begin his work as pastor of the Presbyterian churches in Pitt county. He will hold services in the Greenville church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and in the church at Falkland at night. Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, he will preach at Bruce.
 Mr. King is a minister of much promise. While he was in college he made unusually fine grades, and graduated an honor man at Davidson College. He was perhaps the best and most active Y. M. C. A. student Davidson has ever had. Since leaving college, Mr. King has been in the Union Theological Seminary at Richmond. Recently he was awarded the Hogue fellowship, the highest and most desirable scholastic prize the seminary offers.
 The Presbyterians of the county are greatly pleased with Mr. King's acceptance of their call to him for his services.

Woman Cigarette Smokers.
 How many women in the United States smoke? asks the Richmond Times-Dispatch. A New York cigarette manufacturer is of the opinion that no less than 2,000,000 American women smoke cigarettes, basing his estimate on the consumption of special brands. The "lady size," anyway, was consumed to the amount of 500,000,000 last year. If 2,000,000 women smoked that many they used 250 cigarettes each in the course of a year or less than one "tack" the day.

It is apparent, of course, that any one who averages less than one cigarette the day is not a very enthusiastic user. Ten a day is a reasonable amount for the average cigarette smoker. Two million women smoking at that rate would consume 7,300,000,000 cigarettes in a year, or practically fifteen times the quantity on which the manufacturer based his estimate.

The total consumption of manufactured cigarettes in the United States in 1910, was only 7,875,000,000, and if it were doubled by those who make their own cigarettes, we should have only 4,000,000 cigarette smokers, men and women, on the average of ten a day consumption.

More Sermons on Immortality.
 "I want to hear sermons on immortality," said a well known young woman of Charlotte.
 "I would like to hear 40 sermons on it. To me, the belief in immortality carried everything with it. I want to hear what ministers who have devoted their lives to the study of such subjects has to say. I want to believe and to understand. I want to stop arguing with myself and thinking."
 "To believe that we live again is all that will be necessary. Why is it so few sermons are preached on immortality?"

A fierce religious discussion had been dealt in. It was not a matter of creeds or churches. It wasn't a matter of the divinity of Christ, but everything had come into the discussion which ended in the chaotic appeal—Charlotte Chronicle.

A Prayer.

There is a sick baby in town. She is only six years old. Her malady is one that involves great suffering. It is always pitiful to see a child suffer.
 The other day the little one was in an agony of pain. She cried for help but no relief could be given her. At last, realizing herself that human help was unavailing, she lifted her blue eyes toward Heaven, and breathed this prayer: "Oh, Jesus, let me sleep." In a minute or two the lines in her face relaxed, the eyes closed and the child fell into a gentle slumber.

The Master heard her cry. It is easy to imagine that His eyes overflowing with tears as He soothed her suffering. It had in it all the elements of prevailing prayer. We trust the child may live; but if she falls into the dreamless sleep she will be perfectly at home in Heaven.—Charity and Children.
