

INTERESTING TALK BY MEDICAL MISSIONARY

ONE WHO HAS BEEN AND KNOWS

Dr. J. G. Meadows Spoke in the Baptist Church on China.

Dr. J. G. Meadows, medical missionary to China, who is back on a visit to his native land and spending a few days of this week in Greenville with his brother, Prof. L. R. Meadows, spoke in the Baptist church Wednesday night. While his talk was a long one, his great subject fully justified it, and he was listened to with great interest by all present. It was by far the best missionary talk our people have ever heard.

Dr. Meadows is a native of Louisiana, and has been a medical missionary in China for seven years. He is head physician of a hospital in Woo Chow, and while not a regular preacher but only a layman, he has that gift of fluent speech that enables him to preach to as well as practice his profession among the people he is called to serve. He says the physician has really better opportunities of reaching the heathen in missionary work than does the preacher, for while healing their bodies they can be told of the love of Jesus and how He will heal their souls.

In his talk he first told of the woeful lack of faith and want of real missionary spirit in this country, and the failure to heed the command of God to carry the gospel into all the world. He had been chided by some for going into the foreign field and was asked why he did not stay in his own land to practice his profession, but he could not resist the call to serve God in serving humanity and counted it the greatest joy and honor that could come to him to do the work in which he is engaged. Of course it takes personal sacrifice to do this but the joy far outmeasures the price. Serving humanity and leading souls to Christ is laying up treasures in heaven, and that is what he is doing. God had promised to take care of him and go with him, and he is willing to trust Him.

Dr. Meadows also talked of conditions in China and the erroneous idea people here have of the people there. We cannot judge them by the "cooley" class who come to America. China, he said, has statesmen as great as are found in any nation of the world. The charge that they are non-progressive is wrong, they are endowed with progressive ideas and patriotism is strong with them. They are an industrious people, and the agriculturist takes higher rank than the merchant and tradesman. They have financiers equal of those found anywhere. The idea that they are an uncivilized people is a grossly mistaken one. Their civilization dates centuries prior to the civilization of America, for it has only been four hundred years since our ancestors were barbarians and some of them cannibals. It was the gospel of Christ that changed our condition in America, and the gospel is the great need in China. It was 104 years ago that missionary work first started there and it has made wonderful progress. China today is in a plastic state and the people are hungry for the gospel. As they learn and receive it, they often ask with surprise why it was not carried to them sooner. The opportunity to Christianize those people is great, and the wonder is that America does not send more missionaries to the work.

Dr. Meadows also stated a few instances of his personal work in the hospital and in preaching that were exceedingly interesting. In one city he mentioned seventeen temples for idol worship had been converted into school houses. He is enthused with his great work, and it is a privilege to hear him tell of it.

FROG CATCHING CONTEST.

Legs Now Ripe And The Sport Is On.

This is the time, from bog and swamp, marlhole and river bank, a splendid bass floats musically, for frogs' legs are in season. The wily epicure has evolved many schemes for apprehending this delicacy, but it remained for Mr. J. C. Tyson, city clerk, to introduce a method that, for him at least, is quite a success, as it insures frogs' legs and perch on the same trip with one equipment. Mr. Tyson takes hook and line and bait for robbers, thus at the outset disarming the frog of suspicion, which, sitting upon the river bank, thinks he is watching a man catch fish. And so he is for awhile, but with one eye on the frog, and gradually approaching, the fisherman proceeds until within the length of his pole. The next move is to pretend to be battling the hook, but the bait is removed, and with a deft movement of the wrist the back-action for a cast is apparent until the naked hook reaches a spot directly under the chin of the frog, when a reverse movement drives the point through the lower lip, and the astonished and justly bewildered frog is lifted into the boat. It's very simple, really, and there is no patent on the process.

York and Cobb, of Raleigh, Awarded The Contract.

More than $50,000 will be spent on remodeling the Yorborough Hotel building, the Grimes Realty Company having awarded the general contract for this work to Messrs. York & Cobb, contractors of Raleigh. The contract calls for completion of the building by October 1, when the lessee, Mr. B. H. Griffin, of Goldsboro, will take charge. The hotel will be known as the Yorborough.

It was expected that the sub-contracts would be awarded today. The Westbrook Elevator Company will place the elevators, but it was not known today who would do the plumbing and fitting—Raleigh Evening Times.

Hard to Get Jury.

It was almost as hard to get a jury in a suit being tried, Wednesday afternoon, as if it had been a murder trial. Sheriff Dudley was hard run to get men enough to pass examination, and when the lawyers finally declared themselves content with the jury, he said there was left but one man in the court room whom he could call.

HISTORIC WASHINGTON HOME

General's Headquarters at Rocky Hill N. J., A Colonial Museum.

In the little village of Rocky Hill, N. J., some four miles beyond Princeton, stands the old Berrien farmhouse, in which George Washington spent the autumn of 1783. The active operations of the revolution were over then, so his days at Rocky Hill were passed in writing the farewell address to the army, in sitting to Peale and William Dunlap for his portrait, and in receiving the distinguished statesmen who sought him here and talked over the country's future. From here he rode frequently to Old Nassau Hall at Princeton, where congress was then sitting, and it was here in this very house that he received news of the signing of the definitive treaty of Paris, which recognized American independence and gave to the United States all the territory from the Alleghanies to the Mississippi. It may, therefore, not be claiming too much to say that the Rocky Hill headquarters witnessed the most triumphant day of Washington's life. And those who love to visit places hallowed by such associations may now, thanks to some patriotic women of the neighborhood, add this last revolutionary residence of Washington to the number.

It is a plain white frame building, claiming nothing more in the way of beauty than those good proportions that make all old farmhouses admirable. At the time in question it was the property of Mrs. Margaret Berrien, widow of a prominent New Jersey judge; and, as she wished to dispose of it, Congress having invited Washington to be present at its session, hired it for him pending its sale, and he and his retinue moved into it on August 24, 1783.

As a museum of colonial furnishings Rocky Hill is far more representative than either the Morristown or the Newburgh headquarters. Down to the minute household appliances, everything of the period is there, and, what is more, every piece is fully authenticated, having been donated by some revolutionary family of the neighborhood. The tables, chairs, clocks, cabinets, and the built-in mantel-pieces and china cupboards all have that artistic, vital quality that machine-made moldings and ornaments long ago drove from the field. The lover of stout old mahogany and of delicate old china, of rosy copper and dull pewter could not find a richer collection to study in all the country.—New York Press.

Many Holidays for Miners.

One of the queerest phases of hard coal mining, in northeastern Pennsylvania, is the celebration of dozens of different holidays by foreign-born mine workers. Sometimes one of these celebrations, unannounced, and not expected by the mine management, draws away enough workers to stop completely the operation of the mine.

The difficulty comes from the varying nationality of the men. At one colliery there may be workers from twenty countries; often a visitor sees regulations, posted at the head of the shaft, printed in a dozen or more languages. Each nationality or religious sect has its "holy days" and "feast days" and other occasions for celebration. The colony of Hungarians cannot understand why, just because they happen to be in America, they should forego the practice of their native land.

The worst part about it is that, in many cases, they do not notify foreman in advance; they seem to take it for granted that everybody knows that they are not going to work on certain days. To keep the many foreign holidays in his head a foreman would have to be a sort of human almanac.

It has proved impossible to bring about uniformity in regard to the observance of holidays. The attempt to do so is much like it would be to try to get all the foreign-born mine workers to speak the same language. The mine workers' organizations, as well as the operators, have tried in vain to find a remedy for the situation.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS.

Was News But is no Longer—Rapid March in Progress.

What is a news item? That depends altogether on when it is written. In The Enquirer away back yonder there is about a half column about a man riding a bicycle through the streets of Monroe. The bicycle is described in detail, its cost is given. The item tells how fast a man can ride on a bicycle and all about the use of the wheel. That was a good piece of news when it was written on toward thirty years ago. Another item of good news we find in looking over the files of the paper is that two of our citizens had put in telephones and it is told in that article that talk over the phone is clear and distinct and that the phones will prove a great convenience. A good piece of news then but it is no news now to say that a Union county citizen has a telephone. Then there is a few lines about one of our progressive citizens buying a rubber-tired vehicle—that item was worth the space given it just a few years ago, but editors and higgers ride in rubber-tired buggies now and a newspaper man would be laughed at if he were to write about the purchase of a rubber-tired vehicle and try to put it off as news. Then along came an automobile one day—a real horseless carriage—chugging along and making horses and mules take to the tall timber—and telling that an automobile passed through, describing the machine, telling its cost, its speed and all about it, was, when it was written, worthy all the space it took to carry the piece of news. It is not news worth the paper on which it is written to call attention to the purchase of an automobile by any citizen now, not much more news to say that a man bought an automobile than it is to say that he bought a horse. One of these days one of our citizens will buy a flying machine and then there will be something to write about, and it will be interesting, too.—Monroe Enquirer.

Prevalence of Insanity.

Among the stories and traditions which make up the gossip of every hamlet and village, one of the strangest chapters is that about the man who "went crazy." The men as they talk at their work, the women in their households, and the children on their way to and from school, pass on from one to another the account of the strange doings of a man who tried to harness his team to the wagon, wrong-end foremost, or to drive into the barn without opening the doors or who thought the angels were talking to him, or that devils were after him, or who chased children, or who unexpectedly attacked a friend. The recital usually ends with the phrase, "and they had to take him off to an asylum."

It is for many reasons unfortunate that this kindly removal of the afflicted person to a hospital in which he may be humanely cared for, protected from injury to himself or others and receive the best of medical treatment, removes him from further observation by the community. The lessons which would be learned by each community if its insane were cared for in its own sight, so to speak would be exceedingly valuable. If people generally saw more of the insane after the first onset of the disease they would learn many things which now are known only to a few. They would learn, for instance, that most of the insane are practically harmless; that mental troubles differ greatly in degree and in kind; and that patience, kindness, and sympathy are the chief factors in healing the diseases of the mind as in healing many other ills. The seriousness of the affliction and the burden which it imposes on the community would be more fully realized, and there would be readier appreciation of the importance of any new light thrown by science upon the nature, origin, and preventability of insanity.

It will doubtless surprise most persons to know that the number of insane persons in hospitals in the United States on January 1, 1894 (no later figures are available for the country over as a whole) was not less than 150,151. This was more than doubled in number in 1899, which was 74,028. From 1904 to 1910 the insane in hospitals in New York alone increased 25 per cent. It is safe to say that the insane now in hospitals in the United States number at least 200,000. These unfortunates, if gathered together in one place, would make up a city approximately the size of Rochester, St. Paul, Seattle, Denver, or Louisville. The population of the state of Delaware in 1910 is almost exactly the same as the number of insane in the United States in 1904. The population of Nevada and Wyoming in 1910 together is about equal to the population of the hospitals for the insane in the United States. The total annual cost for caring for the insane in the United States is in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 per year. About one-sixth of the total expenditure of the state of New York is for the care of the insane.—Homer Folks, in the American Review of Reviews.

THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1911.

A STITCH IN TIME.

In his annual address before the National Fire Association, in New York, President W. H. Merrill stated that "More than 20,000 lives and two billion dollars' worth of property have been sacrificed to fire in the United States during the past fifteen years." Leaving out of consideration this appalling loss of human lives, home owners and business men may well reflect upon the causes of such disaster. However variable the circumstances attending the origin of fires, in the majority of cases, doubtless, the primary cause if simply inexcusable carelessness; and as to fire control the most significant condition is that of unpreparedness. This is the case in the country and in many towns. Sensible caution and precaution are the twin remedies for this situation; avoiding the necessity of contending with flames, but being equipped for the necessity. For home use chemical fire extinguishers may be had at no great cost. Hose sufficient to reach any part of the house from the water pipe should be handy, and means for getting on the roof quickly should be provided. Safety lies in attending to the small blaze. A match may be smothered under a thumb.

But in spite of these measures, fire will occasionally get beyond control; and a partial remedy has been provided. Under ordinary conditions fire insurance is too cheap to be neglected, considering what it means in time of need. "Too late to lock the stable after the horse has been stolen."

THE FARMERS' WISE MOVE.

A noteworthy change in Southern agricultural conditions is apparent in the statement by Grossvenor Dawe, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, that, owing to diversification of crops and the influence of the boys' corn growing contest clubs, shipments of Western corn into the South have fallen off in one year eleven per cent. Whether blameless or not, the farmers of the South have thrown away millions of dollars in swapping cotton for Western meat, hay and grain. The profit on cotton has not been sufficient to offset the difference between the price of these supplies and the cost at which they could have been produced here at home. Whether the one-crop practice is being abandoned in tardy recognition of this fact or as a result of more favorable conditions is not so material. By diversification, intensive methods, modern implements, and a greater appreciation of his resources, the farmer of the South is coming into his own. Home grown

SELECT GOOD ALDERMEN.

In another week Greenville will nominate candidates for aldermen to be elected the first Monday in June, and candidates are being talked. There are no more important positions in connection with the town's affairs than the aldermen, and the people cannot be too careful whom they select for these. Just picking up anybody because he happens to want to be an alderman is not wise. There is too much at stake. Good men who have ability are needed to conduct the affairs of the town, and no man who has little or no interest in the town should be selected. It is not a time to be "grinding axes" or trying to engineer certain schemes. Good government with good men in office should be the first consideration of every voter.

The Presbyterian General Assembly's committee on temperance reported $2,256,324,447 as being the amount spent by the people of the United States for liquor in 1910. If the reader is clever at figures, and, by reason of unusually fortunate circumstances, not aware of the nature of liquor, and its effects, nor of the incidentals of its manufacture, sale and consumption, beyond the properties and appurtenances of a popular beverage, he could doubtless arrive at a very creditable demonstration of prosperity in the United States in 1910.

Some of the papers are commenting on the fact that Senator Simmons and ex-Governor Aycock are still friends, and both of them candidates for the senate. Nothing strange about their remaining friends. It is exactly what they ought to do.

Major L'Enfant was nearly a hundred years getting the honor due him. Some people never get it at all, neither while they are living nor after they are dead.

Talking good roads is one thing and building them is another. What Pitt county needs to do is get busy with the building.

Some of them are "cussing" about the dog tax law. All the same they better "give in" their dogs when they list taxes.

Greenville is better known today than ever before. People are learning that we do things here.

Yesterday it was that Diaz would resign, but there is no telling what he will do today.

Talk about cyclones, the one in Indiana that blew all the clothes off a lady was certainly very impolite.

Immigrants and the Church.

Senator Dillingham, of Vermont, gave the Northern Presbyterian Assembly convened at Atlantic City, some very plain talk the other day on the subject of the church's attitude towards the immigrants who are pouring into this country. After denying that these newcomers are, as a class, unlearned, vicious or idle, and calling pointed attention to the fact that they are much more apt to send their children to school and keep them there than many native-born Americans, the senator continued: "The trouble is that these people when they come here live a life of isolation. They have come to us in such numbers as to be regarded as nothing more than so many elements of production. I think we ought to open our churches to them and let them sit down with us. It seems to me that we should give them such a welcome as to make them truly feel that they are one of us."

That Senator Dillingham's views are strictly in line with Christian principles will hardly be questioned. Christian practice, however, needs not infrequently to be bolstered by considerations somewhat more material than the spiritual principles of the system. The isolation the speaker referred to is harmful not only to the churches but to the other institutions of the country as well. The hundreds of thousands of newcomers who are seeking America every year must be assimilated by the body of the people—must be tintured at least with our angles' of vision—if they are to do their part in the up-building of the nation. It is difficult to see how such influence is to be brought promptly to bear upon them if they are allowed to remain isolated.

From a purely ecclesiastical standpoint, too, Senator Dillingham's words are worth weighing. The glory of the Christian churches is that they make their appeal to the entire race, regardless of nationality of previous training. The particular church which practically confines its labors to the native American population thereby neglects a factor which of however slight importance it may be deemed at present will inevitably play a tremendous part within a few generations. Not a few of the most influential men in the United States are sons or grandsons of humble immigrants. It would require a reversal of all logic to believe that among those who have landed at New York within the last decade there is none who possess the brains and the character to forge to the front. The church must indeed reach out after these people unless it is to shirk all attempts to influence a large proportion of the elements which will combine to make the America of the future.—Charlotte Observer.

Asia's Most Important Lesson.

No, the prosperity of every man of every interest, of every industry depends upon the prosperity of the average man with whom that individual or industry has to do. You prosper today, you live in greater comfort, simply because men in other ages have encouraged knowledge, education, and as a result of knowledge, have better tools and machinery for men to labor with. That is our debt to the past; to the future we owe the duty of encouraging knowledge in constantly-increasing degree.

Pity—may God pity!—the man who fancies he owes nothing to the schools, who pays his tax for education grudgingly as if it were a charity,—as if he had only himself to thank for the property on which the government levies a pitiable mill or so for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge among mankind. Pity him if he have not considered he is small enough of soul to repudiate the debt he owes the race. But for what education has brought us from all its past, but for what it has wrought through the invention of better tools and the better management (through increased knowledge) of all the powers with which men labor, our close-fisted, short-sighted tax-payer would himself be living in a shelter of brush, shooting game with a bow and arrow, cultivating corn with a crooked stick. Most of what he has he owes to his racial heritage; it is only because other men prosper that he prospers. And yet owing so much to the past, he would do nothing for the future; owing so much to the progress the race has made, he would do nothing to insure a continuance of that progress.—Clarence Poe, in Progressive Farmer.

Lo! The Poor Man.

Lo! Man is few of years and full of one darn thing after another. In the rosy days of his youth he goes forth to conquer some fair maid. Life to him hath resemblance of romance. He buyeth the flowers and his outflow of wealth goeth a long way toward creating profitable industries, such as manufacture fine confections and bon-bons. Alas! He conquereth nothing! He is captivated, captured, fettered and bound with the bonds of matrimony. Alas! His latter days are full of prevarications and excuses for not coming home early and often, and the penalty is pushing the lawn mower at early morn and putting out the trash barrel by the pale light of the moon. Woeful is man that the beginning is romance and the end is reality.—Wilmington Star.

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my friends and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers, but as I grew older it commenced to come out. When my hair was quite thin and gray, I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to try a bottle; and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found my hair was fast coming back to its natural condition. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur until my hair was as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I began using Sage and Sulphur and my hair is in splendid condition.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR MAYOR.

To The Voters of Greenville.

I respectfully announce myself a candidate for the office of mayor of Greenville, subject to the will of the Democratic primary. I have retired from the drug business that I may live more in the open air and purpose, if elected, to devote myself to the detailed discharge of the duties of the office.

My past record as an officer is known to you. I have used my best efforts to enforce the laws, and if elected, shall continue to do so.

Gratefully,
5 15—tfd
FRANK M. WOOTEN.

To The Voters of Greenville.

I take this method of announcing myself a candidate for mayor, subject to the action of the Democratic voters of the town. As has been the custom heretofore, and as there is more than one candidate for the nomination, I suggest the holding of a voting primary to decide upon the nominee. In announcing my candidacy, I wish to state that I have no special interests to serve, and am no particular person's candidate, and if nominated and elected, will do all that I can for a more economical administration of the town's affairs, and to serve all the people to the best of my ability.

5 15—tfd
W. F. EVANS.

To The Voters of Greenville.

At the solicitation of several prominent business men and many personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for mayor, subject to the action of the Democratic primary, and take this means of announcing my candidacy and soliciting your support.

The Secret of Real Efficiency.

Many fairly successful men are constantly pointing to the man higher up and draw comparisons which, while fair to him, are equally as favorable to themselves. They admit that Mr. so-and-so is a good fellow, the right man in the right place, and all that. But they analyze him point by point and draw the parallel between him and themselves and when they get through they cannot honestly see any difference between the two columns at all. Then they wonder why it is that Mr. so-and-so is above them. They get well up on the ladder, they reach the very rung next to the top one, and there they stick. Somehow they cannot make the last step. Sometimes they halfway make it but they invariably fall back. The ascent up to this point has been comparatively easy to their splendid abilities and accomplishments. Naturally they cannot understand why it is that they cannot get to the top rung. Most likely they never will. For the line that differentiates them from the man at the top is drawn so fine that they cannot see it at all. This is the real reason of which the vast majority remain in ignorance for life.

Ambition, hope, energy, ability, education, character—these are all good, but they alone will not enable you to reach the summit.

Genius has been defined as the infinite capacity for taking pains, and the truth about these men is that they cannot magnify their brainvision to that power whereby they could see the line of demarcation clearly and with unblurred judgment. They go to a race and see a horse win by a nose but they do not realize that a distance of one foot may mean the loss or gain of a fortune, that a difference of one ten-thousandth or one one hundredth of one per cent. represents exactly the difference between one horse and another as far as results go.

Again they wonder why Dan Patch won and the other horses lost.

Examine the fellow on the top rung. Did he not gain that eminent place because he trained himself unremittingly in a Spartan school of his own making?

The winning horse has a scientific trainer to develop every point, no matter how minute, that may have ever the remotest bearing on the result. The winning man must train and develop himself. There is no one who can do it so well for him. The failure to attain the top rung is because of the lack of appreciation of the fine points of the game or an utter ignorance of them. Or if there is an appreciation of them the man may not be willing to make the necessary sacrifices to gain and maintain that extra one hundredth of one per cent that counts so tremendously in the final reckoning.

Measure and develop your ability scientifically, exactly, correctly, and with the utmost precision. Study the fine points of the game; they count in the final inning.

It is not so much the determination to win of itself that does so; it is the earnest desire to be perfect, or nearly so, in your chosen field, amounting to a passion, of you wish to call it so, that really wins and accomplish that which is truly worth while. Work for the real work's sake is what puts your genius on the top rung of the ladder. And nine times out of ten he is totally oblivious of the ladder under him—he is only looking at the stars in the infinite space above him, seeking earnestly for new worlds to conquer. What to such a man is the small tumult that rages 'round the lowest rungs? Nothing.

Tennyson said that our echoes roll from soul to soul and go on forever. So it is. To do work that is work and be of service to our fellow men, and through them to ourselves, we must realize that the smallest details count. It is this marvelous devotion to singleness of purpose that made Langley give us the bolometer which registers temperature correctly to one millionth of one degree, that made Brashear construct a mirror level to one millionth of an inch in thirty-six inches, that made Edison, Bell, and a score of others achieve wonders for the benefit of the world, that resulted in scales so delicate that if you balance a slip of paper on them, then write your name in pencil on the slip, it would register the difference in weight!

Develop, expand, reach out. Do not be content with the outward seeming success. Train yourself mentally, physically, spiritually to occupy the top rung of the ladder—and to be worthy of it. There is but one to train you; and there is no one who will do it so well as yourself. Learn now to know the difference, to see clearly the line that separates the man on the top rung and the thousand just one step lower down. Success is not mere love of success alone, it is love of an ideal. Strive toward that goal and do not let your selfish self say you nay.—The Merchants Journal.

To Try Business Manager.

Some of the towns in the state are making a move toward the Staunton, Va., plan of municipal government—a plan which has proved most satisfactory and which is certainly a business one—and that is to employ a business manager to look after all the business of the town. Employ a competent man, pay him a good salary and require him to take the town's affairs and manage them with a view to securing best results for the money expended, just as practical business men engage the affairs of a corporation or any other business. The idea is to give the business manager absolute control to hire and discharge help. The mayor and aldermen act as the president and board of directors of a corporation and the business manager makes reports to them.

The towns of Monroe and Thomasville propose to try this plan, at least in modified form. The greatest difficulty in putting it into effect, as The Landmark sees it, will be to secure a competent man for the job. He will have to be an all-round man; will have to know how to have street work done, how to manage water and light plants, etc.; but certainly a man should be found, even at the salary the ordinary town can afford to pay, to have all this work done as well, if not better, than it is usually done under the slipshod methods necessarily in vogue in the average town under the usual municipal style of management.—Statesville Landmark.

Absorbed in Literature.

A vaudeville woman in New York, who had had several matrimonial experiences, married for the fifth or sixth time. This time she took a man in her own profession. Not long after the wedding, when the happy pair settled in a theatrical boarding house, the wife did not get home one Sunday night until after her husband had arrived.

The husband was sitting in the room poring over the comic supplement of a Sunday newspaper. His wife gave him a loving greeting. He did not respond, but continued his investigations of the comic pictures.

She spoke again—and he remained silent, absorbed in his comic supplement. She looked at him disgustedly.

"Don't I play in the worst luck with my husband!" she exclaimed. "This time I've married a bookworm.—Saturday Evening Post.
