ALDERMANIC PROCEEDINGS

Regular Monthly Meeting of the Board Thursday Night

STREET WORK STILL PROGRESSING

Several Committees Make Reports—Water and Light Revenues Increase Sufficiently to Reduce Expense For Service to the Town—Claim For Property Submitted to Arbitration.

The board of aldermen met in regular session, Thursday night, in the mayor's office. Every member was present promptly on the hour appointed for the meeting.

The finance committee reported the general fund overdrawn.

That it had held a conference with the Water and Light Commission that the commission is now receiving sufficient revenues to enable it to recommend to the board of aldermen that the monthly allowance for public service be reduced from $350 to $200, beginning June 1, 1911.

The street committee reported Fifth street work well progressed.

That the Atlantic Coast Line crossing on Fifth street will be made more safe by the railroad company, with Mr. Roy C. Flanagan's consent, will grade down the embankment on the south side of Fifth street so that the trains approaching the street may be seen from a safe distance.

The street committee was directed to grade Fifth street between Pitt street and the Atlantic Coast Line railroad.

The cemetery committee reported work being done to put the cemetery in better condition.

H. C. Edwards, having filed a claim against the town for a strip of land taken from him, to widen Evans street near the court house, the claim was not allowed and the board made a counter proposition, which was not accepted. The parties agreed to leave the matter to arbitration.

The officers made their reports for the past month, which were approved.

The meeting adjourned to meet Tuesday at 12 o'clock to caucus the election returns.

EASTERN TOBACCO MARKETS

Will Begin Sales This Season on September 1st.

Representatives of the Tobacco Boards of Trade of Greenville, Kingston, Rocky Mount, and Wilson met in Wilson Thursday, to consider the date for opening the markets this season. September 1st was selected as the date for the opening, and all the markets will begin sales then.

E. B. FICKLEN, President, Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade.

TRADE REPORT.

But Little Tobacco Planted in North Carolina or Virginia.

Richmond, Va., June 2.—Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity: Continued dry weather which has been only slightly relieved by showers, has continued to retard crop growth and trade has shown a tendency to lag. Little tobacco has been planted in Virginia or North Carolina, and in the latter state cotton is in poor condition. Vegetables are scarce and high. Shipment of berries have commenced but the quality is below the average. A between season dullness exists in the wholesale dry goods and shoe trade. Provisions are moving slowly. Building locally is active, permits showing an increase of 100 per cent over last year, this has increased the demand for builders hardware and the local plants cannot meet the demand for building brick. Continued curtailment in production by cotton mills is noted in the South. Mechanics at locomotive works are working on short time. With few exceptions, railroad reports show a decrease in receipts for the month of May. Retail trade shows some improvement. Collections are fair.

Something to remember before making mistakes is that being sorry about it afterward won't unmake them.

MR. BROWN GETS PRIZE.

Gives Correct Answer in Reflector Advertising Contest.

In the last advertisement reading contest of The Reflector, Mr. J. W. Brown was the only one who made a satisfactory answer. He found all the words and gave them as follows: "Read The Daily Reflector, because it is neatly printed. Has a large guaranteed circulation, good service is given, and the every day advertisements are read."

The question: "Why should merchants and business men generally use The Reflector as an advertising medium, and which are good days on which to use space to insure the ad being read?"

The answer correctly reads: "Because The Daily Reflector is read, it is neatly printed, has a large guaranteed circulation and good service is given. Advertisements are read every day."

STOOD WELL AT SCHOOL.

Our Eastern Boys Make High Records.

We are pleased to note that Mr. William A. Darden, son of Mr. W. A. Darden, of Ayden, who has been attending Bingham school, located at Mebane, N. C., for the past two years, has been standing so well in that institution.

Mr. Darden was distinguished in deportment and stood well in his class work. He was one of the high officers in the battalion of cadets, and served as one of the marshals at commencement. He is held in high esteem by both the president and teachers of the school.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Darden has acquitted himself so creditably at Bingham and wish for him continued advancement and success.

Sermon in Story and Song.

Next Sunday night in Memorial Baptist church there will be another service in story and song, the subject being "Saved at Sea." Those who attended a similar service some weeks ago will be glad of the opportunity of enjoying another. The choir has been at work the past week on the music for the service Sunday night, and the singing will be good and the story very interesting.

By Wire to The Reflector.
Washington, June 2.—The government cotton crop report issued today shows the area planted to be 104.7 per cent of the area planted last year. This is equivalent to about 35,004,000 acres as compared with 33,418,400 acres last year, an increase of about 1,586,000 acres or 4.7 per cent. The condition of the growing crop May 25th was 87.8 per cent, compared with 80.2 for the same date in 1910, and 80.9 average condition for the last ten years.

ABOUT COTTON FARMING

How to Grow Cotton Under Boll Weevil Conditions.

The average cotton planter did not select his seed, but took it as it came from the gin. Dr. Knapp taught that the first necessity of a growing crop is good seed. He found and furnished seed through careful selection for many years had developed strong reproductive powers. A seed requires well-prepared soil. Dr. Knapp taught the planter how to prepare the seed-bed by deep fall plowing and adequate fertilizing. The cotton plant, like all other plants, gets most of its growth from light and air. Dr. Knapp taught the planter to plant his cotton in rows wide apart, to thin out the "cotton weed" in the rows so that the plant might have the benefit of light and air, and to run the cultivator constantly. The result, well known are familiar with this chapter of experiences, was that the cotton plant, under intensive cultivation, produced its boll before the weevils were ready to lay their eggs. This insured a crop, and in the very regions where the boll weevil had done its most deadly work cotton was again successfully grown.—Wallace Buttrick, in American Review of Reviews.

GREENVILLE GRADED SCHOOL

Arrangements Are Made for the Next Year

MOST OF TEACHERS RE-ELECTED

Report of Superintendent For Past Year Showed Enrollment of 482 in White School And 409 in The Colored—Average Daily Attendance White 410, Colored 192.

The board of trustees of the Greenville graded schools held a meeting Thursday night in the school office. The report of the superintendent was read, and plans made for taking care of the schools for next year.

The present corps of teachers was re-elected, Miss Lewis and Principal F. C. Brewer excepted, they having resigned. Miss Lewis will be in charge of the drawing at the Training school hereafter. Mr. Brewer will teach in his native state of Louisiana.

For the colored school, C. M. Epps was re-elected principal. Amy D. Bowen and Isabelle Spaulding were re-appointed as teachers.

The report of the superintendent shows a total enrollment of 482 pupils at the white school, and 409 at the colored. The average enrollment of white children per month was 434, and the average daily attendance for the year was 410. The average attendance at the colored school per day 192. The average cost per pupil enrolled this year was $1.29 per month. The cost per eligible pupil in the district has not exceeded $1.00 a month.

The enrollment at the white school will exceed 500 children next year. With limited funds and house room, the school authorities have a big task ahead of them to care for so many children.

NORTH CAROLINA HAPPENINGS

And Briefly Stated for Our Busy Readers.

Asheville, June 2.—A special dispatch from Balsam this afternoon says that a fire at that place destroyed the large two-story building where was located the Bryant Hill store, the Odd Fellows hall and the Balsam post office. The origin of the fire is unknown. The Odd Fellows occupied the upstairs portion of the building as a lodge room and all their furniture, paraphernalia, etc., was destroyed, with insurance amounting to about $1,000.

Raleigh, June 1.—United States District court came to a close here today after a session of more than ten days, during which time many important criminal cases have been disposed of. Seven prisoners were sent to Atlanta for a year or more each, four prisoners were sent to the county jails and one to the reformatory and the fines imposed amounted to more than $4,500. The amount of fines, considering the fact that no large ones were imposed, make this one of the most notable terms in this respect ever held. The government came out way to the good by this term. District Attorney Seawell, of Carthage, with assistance of assistant district attorney, I. M. Meekins, of Elizabeth City, were very successful in their prosecutions. Judge Connor will be here June 5 to hear motions in the suit of the Ware-Kramer Tobacco Company against the American Tobacco Company for $1,200,000 damages for alleged crushing them out of business. This case comes up June 13 for trial.

POOR TOBACCO OUTLOOK.

Some Farmers Are Substituting Other Crops.

It is true all over Pitt county, and reports from other tobacco growing counties are to the same effect, that the outlook for a tobacco crop this season is very poor. The continued dry weather rendered it almost impossible to set out plants and get a good stand, and much that was set out died in the fields. In not a few instances farmers have plowed up their tobacco patches and are planting the land in some other crop. Some are setting out tobacco now where plants can be obtained. It is not too late to make a crop if subsequent seasons are favorable.

COFFERDAM IS A SUCCESS.

And the Raising of The Maine Will Begin About June 15th.

Washington, June 2.—Without precedent in engineering practice and projecting only a foot or two above high tide level, the cofferdam built around the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor is assured of success, in the opinion of army engineers. The land locked harbor is not disturbed by high waves and engineers say that if the dam should ever be threatened with flooding, from the top, its height could be easily augmented.

Pumping out of the water probably will begin about June 15. It has been delayed because some of the steel rails driven to interlock the circular tubes that make the wall were bent, permitting water to pass through. Limited facilities handicap strengthening these rails.

It is expected that some leaks will develop as the water level in the dam is lowered, but that is true of all large dams and the leaks can be controlled.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1911.

GREENVILLE MUST GO AFTER TRADE.

The Reflector can remember when three mercantile firms did practically the business of Greenville, and their trade covered not only Pitt county, but extended into the neighboring counties. There were no other towns of consequences nearer than twenty-five miles, therefore Greenville drew trade from a large territory, and without making special effort to get it. Things are not that way now. Greenville not only has more than half a hundred merchants to divide the trade that comes here, but the springing up of good towns all around in the county, as well as numerous country stores have greatly circumscribed the territory from which trade can be drawn. These new towns have enterprising business men, too, and they are working to draw business their way, just as they have the right to do if they get business.

Greenville cannot do business on its past prestige alone, nor can it get trade without making the effort for it, as was the case a quarter of a century ago when there was no competition to speak of. Just because it is the oldest and largest town in the county is not going to bring unsought trade here. The newer towns have young blood in them, and the business men go after business in the way that gets it. Take Farmville, for example. A look at The Enterprise published there shows the advertisements of more Farmville merchants than the two Greenville papers combined show of Greenville merchants.

This is an age when people read and observe things. There is not a home of any consequence in the county in which newspapers do not go, the people read these papers, they see what the business men have to say, and their trade is influenced accordingly. Greenville certainly owes it to herself not to let the smaller towns outstrip her in the race for trade. If our business men make no effort to bring trade, they are not going to get as much as they would otherwise.

Of course somebody is going to say that this article is written to induce more merchants to advertise, but every word of it is true, think about it what they may. It is noticeable that the Greenville merchants who are the best advertisers get the best trade.

cord has yet known.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Why can't Greenville have a trolleyless car system like Concord? We believe it would be a paying investment here, too.

The fellow who buys blind tiger liquor had better mind what they do hereafter. The Federal court has ruled that the purchaser of such liquor is equally as guilty of violating the law as is the tiger. Now if a fellow is caught with blind tiger purchased liquor, he stands the same chance of being sent to the roads as the fellow who sold it to him.

Showing the progress in good roads building throughout the country, Director Page, of the government public roads bureau, says a million dollars a day for good roads is the record that will be established in the United States soon.

Another thing Greenville needs is for the merchants' association to associate together more and devise some plans to help along the business and progress of the town.

The Greensboro News wants to know "how are you making out with those new year resolutions?" Guess they have almost struck midway by now.

The way they run themselves to death in automobile races and fly themselves to death in aeroplanes, makes business for the undertakers.

No wonder scores of Greenville citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements; like the following are but truthful of the daily work done in Greenville by Doan's Kidney Pills.

I have used them on different occasions and have found that they are a preparation of great merit. Kidney complaint and backache made me miserable and it was not until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from the John L. Wooten Drug Co., that I found relief. The Legislature And The Dog

Referring to the discovery by a Charlotte lawyer of a constitutional requirement for the promotion and encouragement of sheep husbandry, as related in The Chronicle a few days ago, The Statesville Landmark observes: "Thus it appears that the legislators have gone on these years disregarding the plain mandate of the constitution, for which all of them deserve to be impeached. But a better day is dawning, for which we owe no thanks to the politicians, for they would never enact a dog law if public sentiment did not force them. But the public sentiment which is aroused for good roads, good schools and all the civic improvements which make life better and happier, is also aroused against the dog, and if the friends of the sheep and the enemies of the roving dog will but push their cause, The Landmark has a comfortable hope that the next legislature will be composed of men who will be hospitable to a dog law." The news papers can help. The Chronicle has already mapped out its campaign. It is going to look for legislative candidates who will swear, or affirm, or give bond to do two things—to vote for the Torrens land title bill and to vote for a state dog law. The people of the state have been making a mistake in sending men to the legislature on account of their personal popularity and not knowing how they will vote. The Chronicle believes that if the papers of the state will put the legislative candidates on record, good results could be secured. For itself, it proposes to require its candidates to speak out either for the sheep or the dog. It does not hesitate to say that if there should be a Democratic dog ticket and a Republican sheep ticket—a very remote contingency—it would vote an unfolded ballot for the sheep.—Charlotte Chronicle.

The Tramp Problem.

In undertaking to deal with the tramp evil, the New York legislature has tackled a problem extremely difficult of satisfactory solution, but one that is fast assuming such proportions in different states of the Union as to compel serious consideration. The army of "Weary Willies" that wander up and down the land, numbering tens of thousands and timing their movements with the changing seasons, are not only an incubus upon the prosperity of the country, consuming without producing, but constitute a great and growing menace to the public safety. The fire-loss occasioned by their carelessness with matches, lighted pipes and such like amounts of itself to hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, while the criminal expenses incurred by reason of their frequent infractions of the law impose a burden only less heavy upon the producing elements of the country's citizenship. Especially harassing and expensive are they to the railroads, which are the chief sufferers from their depredations and whose slaughter records are largely augmented by the toll of human life and limb occasioned by the constant trespassing of hoboes upon tracks and other rights of way. The number of tramps annually killed or maimed by the railways of the United States runs well up into the thousands.

The legislation touching this problem proposed in New York provides, among other things, for the erection of houses for the detention of wanderers until they can obtain employment or have demonstrated a willingness or an unwillingness to earn a living. While detained they are to be put to work, and inspection to be made so as to ascertain which are incorrigible and which are capable of being reformed. Habitual law-breakers and the mentally diseased are to be held after examination until they can be transferred to other institutions. This proposal follows in its main feature, the plan which has for some time been in effect in Germany and which has proved fairly successful there. The German houses of detention serve as asylums for honest wayfarers where they are given opportunities and encouragement to recover and begin life anew when they have fallen in the struggle. For others they are penal establishments, in which those detained are treated as violators of the laws.—Virginia-Pilot.

A Thought For Today.

The purest altar from which prayers ever ascended to heaven is a mother's knee. The strongest strand in the cable that binds a man to his God is a wife's devotion.

Monotony.

If all the people cherish
Were easily obtained;
If all the pests would perish,
And not an ill remained;
If those we love would love us,
And those we hate would die;
If clouds ne'er spread above us,
To darken the blue sky;
If all the flies made honey
And gold filled every brick
If all the leaves were money
That any one might pick;
If swindlers never stung us,
And babies never cried,
I wonder who among us
Would be satisfied?

If life were only pleasure
With neither toil nor care;
If every hidden treasure
Were suddenly laid bare;
If every girl could marry
A marquis or an earl
And every boy could carry
Away some other's girl.
Life still would be unpleasant,
And sadly day by day,
We'd sigh for what at present
We lightly throw away;
Joy soon would be a canker,
And none would think it strange
If each and all should hanker
For trouble, for change.

TAKES A TRIP TO "LAND OF THE SKY"

A BROTHERLY LOVE THAT BINDS.

Takes in a Convention and Enjoys Freedom of City.

Hanrahan, N. C., June 2, 1911.

About May 15th, 1893, I boarded the train at Kinston, went to Goldsboro, had about an hour to lie over there in a very uncomfortable waiting room. So rather than spend the time in that smothered-up and dingy looking room I strolled across the railroad to the other side of the street, feeling sure I would not get lost if I did not get out of sight of that old dilapidated building which stood right in the heart of the city. While across there I stumbled into a book store, and looking around I saw a beautifully bound volume of Thos. Moore's poems. I was sentimental in those days, so I bought it and as it was drawing near to train time, I sauntered back, watching the beautiful ladies as they came and went. Again reaching that same old waiting room I purchased a ticket to Asheville. Soon the train for Raleigh pulled out and I got a comfortable seat, and opened my new book at Lalah Rookh. So from there to the historic old town of Hillsboro, I had what I deemed then a feast of good things. By the time I reached the sight of those three little mountains near Hillsboro, I expect I felt like I could say as charming words as did that disguised prince. So I wrote a little note and placed it in the front part of the book and carefully wrapped the volume up. On reaching the station a little to one side of the town, I saw several men standing there, all strangers to me, but I noticed one especially who had a more pleasant look and not that of an iceberg. I stepped towards him and as I approached, he said, "Good morning," and extended his hand. Said I to him, "Do you know Miss J. J. Mast?" assuredly I do," said he. Said I, "She lives, I think, about three miles in the country," "yes," said he, "Well, will you get her this package by tomorrow noon?" "I will even go on foot and much out of my way to help or in any way to accommodate a man who I believe worthily wears that pin."

There was pinned on the lappel of my coat a miniature slipper with perhaps some other emblems engraved on it. Said I, "Thank you," and we clasped hands again and I boarded the train which was then moving off. I had never seen him before, nor have I seen him since. The note read thus:

"Miss ———, I am on my way to Asheville to spend three days, will pass Hillsboro Friday on the 1 p. m. train, will have 4 hours to stop over, and would be pleased to spend that time with you, as I am aware you will be in Hillsboro for a few days at that time. You will please accept this, my most frequented volume, and believe me that many of those sentiments are mine with reference to you, only they are more beautifully expressed than I can ever hope to speak through tongue or pen. Hoping to see your bewitching eyes, golden tresses and stern countenance next Friday, I am, sincerely,

I shall not attempt to describe the beauty and grandeur of the scenery from Hillsboro to and that surrounding Asheville. Other pens far more gifted than I have done this. Suffice it to say that I did not read any more books written by human hand, but looked and tried to drink deep from the great book of nature that greeted me every where.

Asheville reached, we were met at the depot, and driven four in hand to Battery Park and given the freedom of the city. We listened to a few learned papers and heard a few great speeches, and even attempted myself to read a paper which was afterward published and, of course, I was eager to read it when it came from the press. I was agitating the great importance of pure drinking water as a preventative for diseases, and said this among other things:

Pure water from the fountain me thinks
Is nectar such as the gods used for drinks,
When the people as a beverage, this elixir will use;
Health to the nations Hygeia'll not refuse.
So when it came out in print, behold these lines were marked with quotations, then I thought, well, that was about the only real original thing I did get off, and now the publishers make me quote that.

As I said they gave us the freedom of the city, they dined us, they banqueted us, and oh, in such splendor as some deem splendor. The courses were by the dozen, the champagne flowed free as water. A few turned their glasses down, or instead took ice tea. Many of our men, who of all men should have clear heads, I am sorry to say, drank until they dozed and fell from their chairs, but be it said to the credit of this body of leaders, for the next year they adopted a resolution to exclude wines from their annual banquets. And today the brightest lights of this profession are proclaiming to the world that there are no medical properties or nutriment in alcohol, it is only a dangerous stimulant, and that there are many others that will answer a better purpose. I said I heard a few speeches. I was too busy beholding the beauties to listen. I stood on the banks of the French Broad and thought of the inspiration she had given so many pens. But my time came to an end, and I must wend my way home again.

Southern Feeds Not Deficient.

Right here is an important matter which is often referred to in connection with the growing of live stock in the South. It is often claimed that the absence of lime in large quantities in our soils makes the growing of live stock impracticable, because they do not get sufficient ash, or lime, or mineral matter, to build up large bone and develop large bodies. We admit that our animals do not get sufficient ash or mineral matter for their needs; but we do not believe it is because of a lack of lime in our soils; for there is usually enough for the needs of the plants. Nor do we believe it is because of a deficiency of mineral matter in our commonly used feeds. To prove this we refer to Henry's Feeds and Feeding, page 593. In considering these facts it must be kept in mind that the mineral parts of the bones of animals are largely made up of the phosphate and carbonates of lime and magnesium.

Henry gives the lime, phosphoric acid and magnesium in twenty common feeds, and here are the feeds standing first or containing the largest amount of these mineral substances:

- The three out of twenty common feeds, selected by a northern writer, that are richest in lime (Ca. O.) are:
 - (1) Alfalfa hay.
 - (2) Red clover hay.
 - (3) Cowpea hay.

The two richest in phosphoric acid are:

- (1) Cottonseed meal.
 - (2) Wheat bran.
- The one richest in magnesium (Mg. O.) is: Cottonseed meal.

Now, this does not look as if our feeds are deficient in the mineral elements. Cottonseed meal, cowpea hay, soy bean hay; in fact, all our numerous feeds rich in protein, are also rich in mineral matter. Our animals do not get sufficient ash, but it is simply because they do not get sufficient feed. They do not get a balanced ration; nor do they get enough feed of any kind.—Tait Butler in Raleigh Progressive Farmer.

The Lessons of American Cavalry Operations.

It may surprise non-military readers to learn that the United States unprepared as it is for war, and un-military as are its people, has yet become a model for the most powerful armies of Europe, at least in respect. The leading generals and teachers in the art and science of war now admit that our grand struggle of 1861-65 was rich in examples of the varied use of mounted troops, in the field, which are worthy of imitation.

Lieutenant General von-Pele: Narbonne, in a lecture before the Royal United Service Institution of Great Britain, emphatically maintains that "in any case one must remember, that from the days of Napoleon until the present time, in no single campaign has cavalry exercised so vast an influence over the operations as they did in this war, wherein, of a truth, the personality of the leaders has been very striking; such men as in the South the God-inspired Stuart, and later the redoubtable Fitzhugh Lee; and on the Northern side Sheridan and Pleasanton."

For a long time after our civil war, except as to its political or commercial bearing, that conflict attracted but little attention abroad. A great German strategist was reported to have said that "the war between the states was largely an affair of armed mobs"—a report, by the way, unverified, but which doubtless had its effect upon military students. In the meantime other wars came to pass in succession—Austro-Prussian (1866); Franco-German (1870); Russo-Turkish (1877) and later the Boer war and that between Russia and Japan. In none of these campaigns were the cavalry operations conspicuous for originality or importance.

Meanwhile, the literature of the American war—official and personal—began to be studied, and its campaigns were made subjects for text-authors which found ready publishers. Nevertheless, the American cavalry method has not gained ground abroad without a struggle. On the one hand, the failure of cavalry in recent European wars to achieve success has been made use of by one class of critics, who hold that "the cavalry has had its day"; that "the ticable"; that it has degenerated into mere mounted infantry, and that its value as an arm of service has been greatly impaired.

On the other hand, it is held by men who have seen service in field—Field Marshal Lord Roberts, Generals French, Hamilton, and Baden-Powell (of Boer War fame), de Negrier and Langolis of France, and von Bernhardt of Germany, and others, (1) that while the method of using modern cavalry has changed, the arm itself is more important in war than ever; (2) that its scope is broadened; (3) that its duties require higher order of intelligence and training of its personnel—officers and men; and (4) above all, that it is quite possible to turn out a modern horse-soldier, armed with saber and rifle, who will be equally efficient, mounted or dismounted.—From "The Cavalry of the Civil War" by General Theo. F. Rodenbough, U. S. A., retired, in the American Review of Reviews for May.

A girl can look at the portrait of her curly-haired grandmother for hours, wondering how she did it.
