

THE AMERICAN PUBLIC SCHOOL

Its Place in Our Civic Life--The Evolution of Our System

SPEECH OF PRESIDENT R. H. WRIGHT

Delivered at The Commencement of The Eastern High School for Girls, in Baltimore--The Evolution of Our Public School System--To Train Boys And Girls, Not to Support The Thriftless or The Unfortunate.

President R. H. Wright, of East Carolina Teachers' Training School, was in Baltimore last week and delivered the commencement address at the Eastern High School for Girls, in that city, the school of which he was superintendent before coming to Greenville. We have the pleasure of giving the people here at home his speech, and feel that they will read it with much interest, for what he said bears upon our public school system.

Mr. Wright said: I would not be true to you nor to myself were I not to express the pleasure it affords me to be with you on this happy occasion. On the other hand, I would not be true to myself were I not to say making an address never affords me pleasure and rarely affords pleasure to any one. My new field of labors has caused much torment along this line to me and to many others. On one occasion a stranger asked my little girl, "What does your father do?" She replied, "He doesn't do anything but go off occasionally and talk."

"O wad some Pow'r the giftie gie us To see ourselves as others see us!"

On an occasion of this kind I deem it proper that the speaker leave at least one idea that may have in it food for thought. Being students in a public school, or parents or friends of those who are students in a public school, I take it for granted that you are interested in the great problem of public education, I am therefore, going to talk to you about The American Public School--Its Place in Our Civic Life.

To one interested in the growth of our nation--its constitutional history and its economic history--to one interested in the growth and development of our institutions, there is nothing more fascinating than to trace the evolution of our public school system; for its growth and development is peculiar to our own nation.

Many educators and students of educational history would have us believe our public schools have been developed from European systems, but the facts of history will not justify the statement. Many sections are trying to claim priority in the establishment of the public school of today. To all such let me say, "Oh what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive."

The truth is our system is not fully developed, for we are now undergoing the first stage of its metamorphosis. In a Democratic state, democracy must be established before the people can see the need for public education.

When this new nation sprang into existence July 4, 1776, it was true as stated in that immortal Declaration of Independence that governments as instituted among men at that time, did derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. But as the idea of political liberty, then for the first time given a national birth, grew and developed, our people soon reached the state where they no longer believe governments derive their powers from the consent of the people, but from the will of the people.

In America it is no longer a matter of what we will consent to, but what we wish done. The government is not a thing apart from our life, but each life is an integral part of the government.

To live as a useful citizen in a nation with such an ideal, calls for a high order of citizenship. The public school of today is the result of a slow but steady evolution of the public consciousness for the need of universal education as the real foundation for our institutional stability.

PISTOL DIDN'T HIT SO BRICK BAT

FRANK HOPKINS IN FIGHT.

Wounds Andrew Moye Over The Latter's Wife.

An ugly fight between Frank Hopkins and Andrew Moye, colored citizens, occurred Sunday afternoon on King's Row. Hopkins seemed to have gotten out of his jurisdiction and within that of Moye. Moye made a protest against the intrusion and trespass there omitted, which waked up Hopkins' fighting blood, whereupon Hopkins pressed in service a pistol, aimed it at and fired it towards Moye, failing to hit his target, he forthwith abandoned his pistol, seized a brick and having better aim than with the pistol laid out Moye. So moye in addition to bearing the wrong trespass, is now suffering with a wound inflicted by Hopkins with the brick.

THE EDITOR IS AWAY.

And You Are Asked To Help Fill The Paper.

The editor of The Reflector will be away for a few days this week attending the meeting of the North Carolina Press Association, in Lenoir. While he is away the printing department and paper will be in charge of Mr. C. W. Hearne, and the business department in charge of Mr. C. B. Whichard. Neither of these will have opportunity to get out and hunt for news for the paper, and friends of the paper can render much assistance just now by sending or phoning any items of news to the office. If you know anything that would interest the readers, whether it be personal or news item, please send it along. This will be much appreciated by all concerned.

A LETTER FROM SPEAKER CHAMP CLARK

APPRECIATES PRESS COMMENTS.

But is Going to Stick to Job and Not Run After Another.

Washington, D. C., June 26, 1911. Editor Reflector:

I want to thank you for the kindly things you have said about me in connection with the presidential nomination, and otherwise. While I am not a candidate for president and may never be, I consider it a great compliment to be thought of or mentioned in that high connection by my fellow citizens.

The victory of last November was won on the fight that was made by the house Democrats against Cannonism, the rules and the Payne tariff bill. That was a great victory; we not only elected a Democratic house, but carried into office with us half a dozen Democratic governors of Northern states. As a result of it the party placed me in the most responsible position it had to give. My duty is here, helping the house to make good, and I am going to stay here as long as there is anything for me to do. In other words, I am not going to neglect the work here in order to run around the country after another office. I regard the record we are making in our Democratic house as superb. We are busy carrying out our promises to the people and we will continue on that line.

I thank you for the kind things you have said about me and am glad to observe that you are pleased with the way the Democrats are demonstrating their capacity to run the house. They can run all branches of the government just as successfully if given the opportunity, and I believe the work of the house will result in our controlling them all after the next election.

Sincerely yours,
CHAMP CLARK.

IS THE YOUNG MAN SAFE

Rev. C. M. Rock Delivers a Timley Sermon.

IN BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY NIGHT

Commends Greenville For The Good The Town Possesses, But Points Out Several Things That Are Dangerous To The Safety of The Young And Are Wrong.

Sunday night in Memorial Baptist church Rev. C. M. Rock preached a strong sermon from the text "Is The Young Man Safe," in which he made forceful application on certain conditions in Greenville.

He first gave a narrative of the life of Absalom. He was a young man of splendid physique and of fine ability, and was capable of doing much good, capable of leading people with whom he came in contact, if he had used his ability in the right direction. But with all his personal attainments and capabilities, he went down the road to disaster and death. If the propensities of the flesh are uncurbed and unbridled, no matter how fine a mind the person possesses, his end is disgrace and death.

Absalom was selfish and sought to gratify his desires and lusts, hence met shame and defeat. The only safety is living on right principles. A man may go deep in sin and yet lift his eyes and cry to God and He will forgive, but the mark of sin on the life remains. You cannot defile your mind and body and disregard God's commands without bearing the world of sin.

The doctrine of the world today is to let people go on in sin and enjoy themselves in sinful indulgence, and after a while repent and come back to God. That is a dangerous doctrine and accounts for so many spiritual dwarfs.

No young man or woman is safe in bad company. If they come into the church, but continue as their associates those who were their companions in sin, they are not safe. More boys are seen on the streets at all hours, often late at night, in contact with bad company and hearing all kinds of vile language. Are such boys safe?

I do not know a better town of its size in North Carolina than Greenville. Taken as a whole it is a splendid, good town, and has much to be proud of. In many senses it is a splendid town and has a splendid people. There are good homes, real homes that are not mere houses, and young men and women with bright minds and prospects. I do not know a place I would prefer to this. But there are some things here that need to be spoken against, things that are open and flagrant.

Boys have too much liberty of the streets where they hear men use profane language and tell vile stories. Unless we take care of the boys and girls, the time will come when they will not be able to take their places in life. There are men who willfully and knowingly take God's name in vain, and they are men whose character is honeycombed. Is the young man safe in contact with these?

There are men who boost of selling liquor and there are citizens who uphold them in it. Let one be caught, a warrant issued and bound over to court; he goes before the judge and jury and confesses his guilt, a little cost is imposed and he is set free. This is simply a license to continue in this business. Any town or community that will back up its officers can have a law enforced. To say that you cannot do so is an admission that you are weaklings. Every citizen should stand back of the law and see that it is enforced.

Is the young man safe in the home? Yes, if the home is what it should be. The greatest safety there is to establish a family altar. A young man reared under such influences may stray from the path of right, but he is apt to come back.

Is he safe in business? He is if the business is clean and conducted on right principles.

Is he safe as to keeping the Sabbath? I am glad the Men's Prayer League recently considered this and recommended to the authorities that they keep business places closed on

PATRIOTIC TOPIC FOR NEXT SUNDAY

BY THE MEN'S PRAYER LEAGUE.

The Last Meeting Was An Interesting One.

"Known by Their Fruits" was the subject discussed with much interest at the meeting of the Men's Prayer League in the Baptist church Sunday afternoon. The leaders were Messrs. J. S. Norman, J. A. Bland and W. H. Ragsdale, and much good thought was presented in their talks. Men choose the lives they live; they set standards by which to judge each other; the fruit of their lives shows just what they are and has its effect for good or evil accordingly. Men should stop to think of their lives and see if they come up to the true standard of God's word.

The meeting next Sunday afternoon will be held in the Methodist church at 4:30 o'clock. That Sunday coming nearest to the Fourth of July, the devotional committee selected a patriotic topic. The subject is "Patriotism as it Relates to Christianity." Scripture references, Psalm 33:12, Proverbs 14:34; Isaiah 60:12; Matthew 22:21. Leaders, Messrs. O. E. Warren, C. C. Pierce and R. M. Hearne. A quartet will give a patriotic song at this service.

TODAY'S EVENTS IN NATIONAL CAPITOL

GOMPERS MUST APOLOGIZE.

Witnesses Before Various Investigating Committees.

Clarence S. Funk, manager of the International Harvester Company, was the first witness before the Lorimer committee. He told of a talk with Edward Hines, who wanted a $10,000 contribution from the harvester company to help reimburse donors $100,000 fund spent for "putting Lorimer over."

John D. Spreckles was the first witness before the sugar trust committee. He described how his father, Glus Spreckles, after the rate war with Havemeyer in 1891, combined his interests with Havemeyer, and Joseph F. Smith, head of the Mormon church, who will testify this afternoon or tomorrow. This created a commotion among the women, who had come to the hearing for the first time to see him.

Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell are in contempt of court in the Buck case, until they apologize. If not, they run the risk of imprisonment. The commission has reported to Justice White, who issued an order returnable July 17.

White Girl Burned to Death in North Henderson--Little Child Scalded to Death in Kinston--Boy Fell Sixty-Five Feet Into Well at Spencer.

A most horrible accident, and, all the circumstances considered, one of the most pathetic deaths occurred Thursday, when the two-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hood fell into a tub of scalding water and died a short while after as a result of its burns. Mrs. Hood had poured up a tub full of water to do some cleaning in the house and stepped from the room a minute. The little one stumbled into it backwards and was scalded pretty nearly all over her body. The father is serving a term on the country roads for selling liquor, a circumstance that adds to the pathos of the case. He was allowed to come to attend the funeral of his child.--Kinston Free Press.

Spencer, June 24.--Olin Dunlap, a ten-year-old son of J. C. Dunlap of Norwood, Stanley county, fell sixty-five feet into a well yesterday and was but slightly hurt. The well was being sunk by two colored men who were in the well at the time. The lad was playing around the top outside. Seeing the boy falling one of the colored men braced himself, stretched up his arms, caught the lad and saved his life. He was however himself crushed to the ground by the force of the body of the lad falling 65 feet. The colored man was taken from the well in a semi-conscious condition.

Spencer, June 24.--Mrs. C. A. Rozzel, wife of a well-known employe of the Southern, at Spencer, was knocked into insensibility Thursday night and the house robbed by an unknown young white man. The house was entered by a window, which was broken. A bed slat was used by the burglar, who assaulted Mrs. Rozzel. When she was awakened her screams were heard by neighbors and she was found unconscious on the floor. Every room in the house had been ransacked by the burglar, who accomplished a greater part of the work before awakening the family.

Shelby, June 24.--Evans Crane, the 8-year-old son of Mr. Frank Crane, operator of the water pump station was severely crushed by a turntable at the junction of the Lawndale and Seaboard tracks, 2 miles east of Shelby, yesterday. The young fellow and his mates were playing on the revolving track; when it caught him on the hips and crushed his hip bone. Last night he was operated on at the Shelby hospital and rested well during the night. He is internally injured and doctors fear his recovery.

Henderson, June 24.--There was a terrible fire in North Henderson last night at one o'clock, two stores, four residences, a Methodist church, were burned. A white girl, Miss Pierce, was burned to a crisp and a white boy named Johnson, was also badly burned. The stores were Mr. George Wortham's and Mr. Gill's. The fire company was promptly on hand, but the four buildings were burning at once, calling for heroic action. Miss Pierce moved here five weeks ago from Wake Forest.

Gastonia, June 24.--The power plant of the Spencer Mountain Power Company, which furnishes the town of Gastonia with all its lights and power and which also furnishes power for a number of factories in the country, is tonight a mass of ruins, the work of lightning followed by fire. The loss is roughly estimated at $200,000.

Salisbury, June 24.--Allen Little, of Salisbury, was severely injured near Spencer this afternoon by being run over by an automobile. He had stepped off a street car and not seeing the auto, was struck at full force and knocked to the ground in a dazed condition. He was taken to his home where a physician attended his injuries and it is thought will recover. The auto was driven by a colored man and belonged to a distant state.

LIBERTY OF THE PRESS.

A citizen of Durham who was caught in the class of tax dodgers and whose duplicity was exposed in an article in the Durham Sun, made an assault upon the local editor of that paper and attempted to strike him with a cane but was prevented by bystanders. The newspaper man would not swear out a warrant for the citizen, but a police officer did, and the matter was heard before the city recorder, Judge R. M. Sykes, who after hearing the evidence made the following remarks:

"The case now before the court is one of such general interest not only to our community but to the entire country, that I desire to express my views with regard to it.

"The liberty of the press, next to our political and religious liberty, is perhaps the most cherished tradition of the American people. To it we owe most of the reforms that have taken place in our political and civic life; and the great fight now waging all over the country between the forces of good against the powers of greed is made possible and victorious largely by the power of the press in educating and enlightening and, in many instances, leading the public mind. Without the liberty of the press the wholesome results of the conflicts of our forefathers would be a nullity, and we might easily become a land of serfs rather than the great free and independent nation that we are. Any man, therefore, who would intimidate the press or curtail its power in any proper directions, is at least an undesirable citizen.

"On the other hand, some people misconstrue the word 'liberty,' and seem to think that it implies a 'license' to use these powers in an arbitrary and oppressive manner. While the newspaper must be given considerable laxity in the line of its duties, yet there are limits to which even a newspaper cannot go without being held to answer for its misdeeds. A newspaper man who will use his columns to vent his private spleen against an individual, or who for selfish or other motives will unnecessarily persecute or hound down a citizen, is as cowardly as the public official who simply because he is clothed with power will oppress the defenseless or who stultifies himself and his position by using it to punish his enemies. Sometimes newspapers do overstep these bounds, but the law has provided a peaceable means of redress for any citizen who feels himself aggrieved. He can, by our statute, demand a public retraction of the offensive statement, and if this is not forthcoming the courts are open for a suit for damages. By using this method the offended party does not himself become a law-breaker; but in the present case the defendant has felt that the newspaper article in question was of such gravity that it called for personal chastisement, but this court is not called upon to pass on the merits of this phase of the controversy. By the timely and fortunate intervention of friends, no actual battery was made and no physical damage done; but the offer and attempt to strike with the weapon used by the defendant does constitute a breach of the peace and makes him guilty of an assault, for which it is the judgment of this court that he be fined the sum of $10 and the costs."

There is too much recklessness in running automobiles. Sunday's papers chronicled four serious accidents occurring in North Carolina when people were run over by automobiles. More care should be used in driving the cars.

Along this time of year comes the announcement that there will be only "clean shows" at the state fair. But when the fair comes it is noticeable that almost any kind of show gets a stand. The Pitt county fair is not going to have any shows at all.

This week belongs to the editors of North Carolina, and they will make the most of it at their meeting at Lenoir.

Friends of the Farmer.

The department of agriculture has come to the relief of the grosbeak. He is a very much maligned bird, this high authority avers and instead of being destructive to crops, is of great benefit to the farmer.

A bulletin just issued by Secretary Wilson says that seven kinds of finches known as grosbeaks summer within the United States. They are easily distinguished from other finches by their stout form, bright plumage, massive bills and melodious voices. Those which most interest the farmer are five in number—the rose breasted, the cardinal or red bird, the black-headed, the blue and the gray. The bulletin concludes as follows: "Present investigation prove that the services of the grosbeak in destroying insect pests are invaluable. Each kind pays especial attention to certain pests which if unchecked would cause enormous lots. Few of our birds are to be credited with more good and with fewer evils than the grosbeak, and none more clearly deserves protection by the practical farmer."

The probability is that the farmer would do better to protect the whole race of birds than to look with toleration on their indiscriminate slaughter.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

The Bread Trust.

(From the Boston Post).
The promoters of the $25,000,000 bread trust that has taken two big local concerns into its capacious maw make proper haste to declare publicity that it does not intend to be oppressive monopoly and is not going to raise the price of bread.

It would better not. In the first place, the temper of the people nowadays as regards any kind of trust is rather touchy and apt to produce bad results for the monopolists. And in the second, the small bakers could compete against high trust prices and be supported by the public. If the bread trust behaves itself, well and good. If not, it will have a strenuous fight on its hands.—Boston Post.

A Charming Woman

Is one who is lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But its hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate stomach, liver and kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion.

Remorse and economy are faithful followers of the races.

Making School Attractive.
A young woman having charge of the so-called "ungraded class" in one of the public schools on New York's East Side was sought out recently by a mother whose tears and lamentations evidenced her deep distress. "What is it you have done to my Harry?" the woman wailed. "Every day of his life he runs away from me and goes to school. Always they have told me that child is crazy and I would not believe them! Now I see for myself he is crazy, or I could sometimes keep him away from school."

A few weeks earlier Harry had been subject to a series of tests, classified as mentally and physically "defective," and thereupon assigned a place in a newly formed special class. During five or six years previous to this he had been submitted to the common injustice of being forced into competition with normal children. This meant derision on the part of his schoolmates, continual combats with his teachers, and retrogression rather than progress for the unhappy boy himself,—with, of course, a constant and unconquerable tendency toward truancy. Suddenly he found himself in a school-room with but fourteen other children—the classes are limited to fifteen. Some were more, some less developed than he, but all were, in the rather pitiful colloquialism, "crazy". Here there were pleasant, interesting things to do all day long, and nobody imposed the torture of keeping still while one did them. A friendly person who was called a teacher but who didn't act like one, suggested, persuaded, encouraged, praised, but never coerced or punished. School therefore promptly became for Harry a place one had to be coaxed to leave. Very naturally his mother believed that the teacher had "put a spell" upon her unfortunate child, and it was no easy matter to explain to her that he was for the first time being scientifically taught, and that he liked it.

Instances of this sort occur continually. A teacher often has to leave her work to pacify an angry mother whose child has been told to stay at home and help with housework, but has obeyed the irresistible lure and run to school. Jewish parents have repeatedly to be consoled because their children obstinately evade observance of the religious festivals in order not to miss a day of this new and engrossing variety of education. All the symptoms of truancy, in short, that these children exhibit are of a quaintly reversed order. Perhaps no children have ever before regarded school as so great a privilege.—American Review of Reviews.

Rain as a Beautifier.

Rain as a beautifier of the complexion is advocated by many New York society women. In the spring and summer they are fond of tramping through the rain so the drops pelt against their faces. They like to put on old clothes, raincoats, strong shoes and a turban and start out through the woods. The pelting of the rain may harden the skin, but it gives color and health to it. Such treatment removes minute particles of grit and other matter whirled against the cheeks on dry, dusty days in the city, it is said.—New York Press.

A Washington paper says that the New York girls' dress out of sight. That's nothing—the Orange girls do the same thing. Where is any nice girl that would do otherwise? Now we would just like to know where the Richmond and Norfolk girls dress at.—Orange, Va., Observer.

The Bride.

The orange blossoms crown her,
The bridal satin gowns her,
The happy anthems ring;
Girlhood's gay reign is over,
She goes to meet her lover,
While Eden's voices sing.

The marriage vow is spoken,
The wedding bread is broken,
With blessings and with tears;
These two set out together,
Through storm and sunny weather,
To journey through the years.

Fate, send your choicest dower,
Great joy and plenty shower
From blue and kindly skies;
Earth's music and its laughter,
And gladness ever after,
And love that never dies.

So, life goes on forever,
Hands join, no more to sever,
The roses crown the June!
And down the aisle a-swinging,
We hear the angels singing
A joyous hymnal tune.

"Deep Sorrow at Grimesland."

A black gloom fell over our little town Thursday morning when it was learned by telephone that little Adrian Galloway was dead. Nothing can be imagined that would have cast a deeper gloom over our community. All deaths are sad, but when a dutiful son is snatched from mother and father with only a few hours warning, indeed it is doubly sad. His little life was short, but the home was made happier by this short life. And, while the loving father and mother are made sad by the loss of their darling boy, he has gone to live in a better home with his Father in Heaven.

He was thirteen years, eight months twenty-two days old.

The funeral was conducted from the saddened home of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Galloway at 2:30 o'clock by Rev. J. R. Tingle, after which the remains were borne to the old family burial ground, followed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends, and gently laid to rest beneath a mound of fragrant flowers. We turn away from this gentle, dutiful son and await the hour of our union of souls in the fields of glory. May God bless the bereaved parents in their first sorrow, and may they say unto Him who "doeth all things well," "Thy will be done."

A LOVING AUNT.

of civilization that people have liberty in proportion to public enlightenment. Educate the masses and you will eliminate the classes in government; for education is the tyrant's greatest enemy and the people's truest friend. As a nation we are beginning to realize that in a civilization like the one in which we live, in a nation like ours where the government rests upon the heads of an intelligent citizenship, not only the government but the very civilization itself depends in no small measure upon public education. Our nation, state or our city will prosper in the same proportion that public education is fostered. We may believe this or not, but it is absolutely true, for it is a natural step in our evolution.

What then is the function of our public schools? Are they to be fostered simply to keep alive patriotism and teach government or are they to touch the heart and life of our people? Is education with us to continue to be what it has been in the past, for leadership alone, or is it to reach itself down to the very foundation of human society, lay hold of the masses of mankind and bring our entire people to a more vivid realization of their obligations and opportunities and thus raise the standard of living and advance our civilization? As I see it, the public schools must not only train for leadership, but they must touch in a vital way the everyday affairs of all of our people. We must have leaders in church and state, but we must also have an intelligent citizenship, and of the two we most need an intelligent citizenship; for from the rank and file we will develop leaders, provided that rank and file is intelligent. It is the substantial Yeomanry of England who have preserved that great nation in many a crisis, and the safety, to say nothing of the prosperity of our state, depends upon the intelligence of its citizens, our yeomanry.

As a nation we are beginning to realize that "The difficulties of our democracy are the opportunities of education," and that each generation is not only the inheritor of a glorious past, but the trustee for prosperity. We realize that "To preserve, protect, and transmit its inheritance unimpaired is its highest duty. To accomplish this is not the task of the few, but the duty of all." Again we realize that, "That democracy alone will be triumphant which has both intelligence and character. To develop them among the whole people is the task of education in democracy." Also that, "There is no smack of charity about the public educational system of America. It is for all. It is the universal and inalienable right of every man and woman, every son and daughter of the realm. It is the corner stone of our plan the essential factor of our governmental purpose. . . . The public schools are to train boys and girls—not to support the thriftless or the unfortunate." But through the instrumentality of the public school the thriftless are to be eliminated as a class by being converted into the socially efficient and the unfortunates are to become fortunate.

We realize that "Whatever adds to the real enlightenment of the multitude, adds to the happiness, the strength and the security of a republic which rests upon the common intelligence and equality of rights for all." This does not mean socialism if by socialism you mean a kind of paternalism. It does mean for all, equality of rights under the law, but not equality of results in spite of all moral and legal rights. We realize that the educational purpose of our state should make the work of the school aid the industries, that it should give as much honor to manual skill as to intellectual occupations and yet its intellectual purposes should reach forward to the very mountain tops of human learning. While we realize all these things, we must also realize that it all will come to naught unless there is a quickening of the conscience for civic righteousness. The school is constituted legal authority over the child and that community that sides with the children against the schools unconsciously, but never the less forcibly, instill into the children rebellion against legal authority. Continue such a state through one generation and you will reap as your harvest a crop of law breakers.

Many of the ideals of a life are the ideas instilled into that life while it is in the school. Unless the teachers' ideals are correct and high, yes, above reproach, the child will never aspire to noble or great things. In other words, as valuable as are the facts taught in the books, the greatest work of our schools is not in imparting book or bookish information. Give me a teacher who can inspire, a teacher who can instill into my child correct ideas of life, a teacher who can lift the soul and kindle ambition and set the life on fire to do noble deeds, in preference to the teacher who can impart only information. By noble deeds I do not mean aspirations for what the world calls great, but a correct idea of life's responsibilities. To be more specific let my child see that he owes something to human society, that it is wrong to fail to give in his taxes or that he should not vote the party ticket when to do so conflicts with justice or honor. Let him realize that it is as great a sin to cheat the government as to cheat a private citizen. Let him realize that the honor of the government is the honor of each citizen and that a corrupt government means a corrupt citizenship. While the mind is being taught the mysteries of learning let the life be devoted into its proper relationship to its environment.

Let us be proud of the institutions of our state and let it be that pride that will make those institutions so splendid that all citizens will be compelled to be proud of them. You, young ladies, stand here tonight as the finished product of the public school system of this great city. You are proud of your public school system and especially proud of the Eastern High School. Let your lives be such as to compel all right thinking people to be proud of your school. But may I say in conclusion, do not stop. Go on in your chosen field of activity until you reach that clear vision that comes from faithfully following life's purpose. Many allurements and dangers will call you from your purpose, toll on and climb until you reach the top and breathe the pure air that can be found only by toll. Let me paint a picture for you that illustrates my thought.

FOR GOOD HAY

Plant Soy Beans and Cow Peas Together.

We have tried different methods of seeding the crop and this year sowed our entire acreage in two-foot rows (where designed for hay), using 8 quarts of Mammoth soy beans and the same amount of Wonderful peas per acre, drilling them with our two-row corn planter (4 feet) and doubling the rows. We like this method of seeding on good soil, as the planter, being equipped with depth-regulating guards and levers, puts the seed at exactly the depth we wish it to be planted. This is important with the soy, as if the seed are planted too deep they will not come up evenly, if at all. We prepared a very fine seed-bed, planted the seed as stated above, then rolled the land with the big roller, giving no further cultivation. The soys growing upright hold the peas up off the land, making a clean job of cutting with the mower possible. By the middle of July the peas almost covered the spaces between the rows, so it was impossible for much crabgrass to grow, and what did grow was really a benefit to the hay, balancing the feed and making the curling of the peas and beans less troublesome. The soys sown broadcast with the peas in the corn fields make splendid pig feed, as they seed more heavily than the peas and are not so soon injured with the wet weather in the fall. No hay we have ever raised is so much relished by cattle, sheep and horses. Many a time have I seen our horses go to the hay racks for the soy bean hay before consuming their corn, and, by the way, I don't know a better or cheaper feed for work horses than this combination, corn and soy bean hay. We like to use the late-maturing peas, such as the Wonderful or Clay to go with the Mammoth Yellow beans, as they mature together. We cut the crop when the beans in the pods are about half grown. A. L. French in Raleigh Progressive Farmer.

Sundays. There is a law to that effect and it should be enforced. Failure to keep the Sabbath holy is undermining the strongest pillar of our government. May the time never come when we give this town over to the open Sunday. The person who buys on Sunday is equally guilty with the person who sells of violating the Sabbath.

Is he safe with a certain portion of the town laid off to practices of shame, ruin and debauchery? The mere mention of this should be sufficient to lead to a correction.

Is he safe as pleasure seeking? I love pleasure that is not harmful, and love athletic sports. It cannot be conducive to pleasure to bet on a base ball game, and I do not believe the local ball team approves of bets being made on their playing.

Let the boys and girls stay away from the dance hall. Seventy-five per cent. of the fallen women of the country came from such places. It is poor business to entice boys and girls, especially members of Sunday schools to dancing school. I do not say dancing and card playing are the worst things some church members do, but ask them if they think to engage in these destroys their Christian influence and you will always get an affirmative answer. It destroys their desire to do church work, and I have never seen a church member who makes a practice of doing these things that amounts to much for the church. It is an influence that weakens them in church work.

The real safety is the soul stayed on Christ. Life is more than a few passing moments in dissipation and pleasure and the gratifying of lust. We are soon to pass away and stand before God, hence this life should be for eternity.
