SEVENTEEN PEOPLE KILLED IN WRECK

Second Railroad Accident Within Few Hours

ONLY ONE ESCAPES INJURIES

As Was the Case in the Lackawanna Disaster Reported Yesterday, Rear End Collision Shows Figures of Fatalities on Wrecks

LA TROBE, Pa., July 5.—Seventeen persons were killed and 30 injured, a number fatally at 3:40 this afternoon when a passenger train on the Ligonier Valley railroad was smashed from behind by a double header freight train, only one passenger escaped without injury.

The accident occurred at the fair grounds at Wilpen, one and one half miles from Ligonier, a summer resort. The dead:

Mrs. Harry Dillon and baby of Wilpen, crushed to death.

William Campbell, of Wilpen.

Frank McConaughy, of Ligonier, engineer, scalded to death.

George Byers of Ligonier, fireman, crushed and scalded.

Louise E. Rhoddy, aged 8, of Accance, crushed.

Elizabeth Rhoddy, aged 13, a sister, John M. Ankey of Ligonier, fireman, died on way to hospital.

Mrs. M. Ess, of Wilpen.

Thomas Murr, of LaTrobe, head crushed.

George Tosh, of Wilpen, body mangled.

Mike Hudock of Wilpen, side crushed.

Frank Overton, aged 10, of Wilpen, mutilated.

Mrs. John Overton, mother of Frank, died on train bound for Pittsburgh. Unidentified by, aged 12.

Two unidentified foreigners, badly crushed.

The passenger train had started from Ligonier. It consisted of an engine and coach, the engine pushing the coach. The freight train was made up of many coal cars and was being pulled by two heavy locomotives.

The impact was terrific. The passenger coach was practically laid open and the passengers either crushed or thrown like shot through the air.

It was the first fatal accident, it is said, in this history of the Ligonier road for the past 40 years.

A majority of the injured, 20 in all, were residents along the Wilpen branch. They were brought to a hospital here or sent to hospitals at Pittsburgh when it was found they were in a critical condition. Among them were Dr. J. B. Johnson, of Ligonier, hurt internally; will probably die.

Dr. C. A. Hammill of Ligonier, crushed; may die.

Miss Esther M. Matthews, a nurse employed at the home of George Senft, of Ligonier, president of the Ligonier Valley railroad.

Walter Serena, of McKeesport, Pa., clerk in a bank at that place in a precarious condition.

The injuries of the other were all severe, consisting of broken legs and arms and contusions.

The train was well crowded, every seat in the lone coach being occupied with persons returning from a Fourth of July holiday.

The freight engine ploughed through the wooden coach, crushing it as if it was paper.

N. C. Lawyers Transact Some Business

MOREHEAD CITY, July 5.—This morning the North Carolina lawyers came to business from the program of pleasures which intervened yesterday afternoon with a trip to Cape Lookout and last night with a german led by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pace of Raleigh, and Judge and Mrs. Francis D. Winston of Windsor.

That section the report of the legislative committee recommending the creation of three circuits with eight judges each was approved as was the proposal to pay a salary to prosecuting attorneys and to turn the fees into the state treasury.

THE THAW TRIAL STILL GOING ON

Tangled State of Case Augurs Disagreement

ALLEGED SPIRITING OF WOMAN

Attention Will be Called to Attorney General Carmody of Changes Made by Harry Thaw in the Thaw Case Book at the Assylum

It was learned upon excellent authorities yesterday that the attention of Attorney General Carmody will be called to alternate namero to alterations made by Dr. James V. May and Harry K. Thaw in the Thaw case book of the state assylum for the criminal insane at Mattewan and that serious charges may result.

During the Thaw sanity hearing at White Plains last week Nella Louise Greening, official stenographer of the assylum, testified that following the mental examination of the slayer of Stanford White, now attempting to obtain his release, the stenographic report was edited by the respondent him self and by Dr. May, then the superintendent.

To this charge Dr. May, now head of the state commission in Lunacy, replied that by stipulation Thaw was permitted to read the report. No such stipulation appeared in the case book, as is required by the rules. A more important point is that stipulation or no stipulation, Thaw had no right to edit the report and then substitute it for the original, for thereby he destroyed any value it might have possessed. This was contrary to the laws of the state and some one will surely be held responsible.

Obviously an edited report is not worth the paper it is written upon, particularly in a case of paranoia, since it is from this report that the physicians are able to get some idea of the patient's mental condition. The remaining incidents, four in number, which the Attorney General will be asked to look into, have to do with:

The alleged attempt to keep Susan Merrill, an important witness for the state, out of the state and an alleged offer of $10,000 for her to leave the country.

The payment of $500 to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in June, 1909 with the understanding that she take her vacation during the hearing before Justice Mills in 1909 and change her attitude toward Thaw.

The fact that Supt. Russell made two returns to the habeas corpus writ, substituting a mild and innocuous document for one in which he declared Thaw's release would be a menace to the public.

The ambroiling of Justice Martin J. Keogh in the Clifford W. Hart-ridge affair so seriously that the Justice suspended court a day and a half until he could determine in his own mind whether he should declare the hearing a mistrial.

The Susan Merrill charge is backed up by a letter in the possession of William Travers Jeroms, attorney for the state and by testimony given by Mrs. Evelyn Thaw on the stand. This case will undoubtedly go to the Appellate Division and trouble is forecasted for the lawyer who wrote the letter.

Rich Farmer Vanishes From Steamer

BALTIMORE, July 5.—Leaving a letter behind him explaining that he had committed suicide and asking that a relative in New York be notified, Leonard Hewett a farmer, with a considerable estate in North Carolina, disappeared Tuesday night from on board the steamship City of Baltimore, en route from Norfolk to this point.

The wireless operator on the steamer said that 11 o'clock Tuesday night he heard a pistol shot. Shortly after he reported the occurrence it was discovered that Mr. Hewett's state-dom was unoccupied.

In the room was the following letter to the captain of the steamship: "I sailed on your ship today from Norfolk. Report my disappearance as soon as possible by telegraph to Austin C. Maury, 33 Morningside avenue, New York. I enclose $2 to cover expense of telegram and express on handbag to same address. Accept my regrets for any trouble my intentional suicide may put you to."

Devoted Mother and Sister Of Harry Thaw at Court

WHATEVER may be the attitude of individuals or the public toward Harry Thaw in his attempt to regain his liberty, there can be nothing but pity and admiration for his widowed mother, who has devoted her life and a great part of her fortune to the service of her son. Thaw's beautiful wife, on account of whom he committed the crime that has kept him in prison for six years, has deserted him, but the mother, whose heart he has broken, has never faltered in her efforts to secure his release from the asylum for criminal insane in which he has been so long immured. During the recent proceedings at White Plains, N. Y., looking to his release as no longer insane, his mother and his sister Alice (formerly the Countess of Yarmouth) were in attendance at court, and the accompanying photograph was taken as they made their way to the courtroom.

WOMAN HAD COLLECTED FUNDS

Legality of Action to Be Investigated

Duplin County Woman Had Represented Herself as Conducting an Orphan Asylum, for Which, However, No Charter Has Been Found.

MT. OLIVE, July 5.—Seven miles southeast of here, in Duplin county, resides Henrietta C. Kornegay, a woman who claims to be running an orphan asylum and rescue home for fallen women, which she supports with funds solicited from the public. She has been over a large portion of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida soliciting such funds and also securing inmates for her so-called orphan home. She has never secured a charter for such an institution and it is also rumored that she has used the greater part of what money she has thus collected in relieving her own financial embarrassment and for other purposes and that she has not taken care of those under her care as she should. As a result of such rumors a bench warrant was issued Wednesday of this week, demanding her appearance in superior court in Keanansville, Duplin county, today, where the matter will be thoroughly gone into. Several residents of Mt. Olive were summoned yesterday to appear at Keanansville today as witnesses in the case.

As soon as possible by telegraph to Austin C. Maury, 33 Morningside avenue, New York. I enclose $2 to cover expense of telegram and express on handbag to same address. Accept my regrets for any trouble my intentional suicide may put you to.

TAR HEELS SUPPORT T. R.

Followers of Roosevelt in N. C. Are Active

Friends of Roosevelt Declared They Will Be Able to Conquer Next State and County and Will Have Roosevelt

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 5. Supporters of Colonel Roosevelt in North Carolina, in touch with leaders in New York where the campaign has been formally launched and headquarters established, have already started a fight for the Colonel here. The position of the Roosevelt men is now clearly defined. It is declared there is no longer any doubt as to what the course of his supporters will be. There will be a meeting of Roosevelt leaders at the Guilford hotel, Greensboro, Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock and on. Richard Pearson, Col. V. S. Lusk and other of the colonel's ardent supporters in this section will attend.

Numerous letters and telegrams have been received from leading Republicans in which it is declared that the rank and file of the Republicans are as strong for Roosevelt as ever. Chairman Greene, of Mitchell county, writes that he is sure the people there will take the same action as that taken in Wilkes county recently.

The Roosevelt leaders desire it to be understood that first they will not vote for Taft. Second, that they will not relinquish party machinery and principles. They will not be lead or cajole out of the Republican party. They will hold to these principles and machinery as have the Roosevelt men in Massachusetts and other states as in South Dakota where electors have already been put up in a regular way.

MEXICAN FIGHT TAKES NEW TURN

Gen. Orozco's Troops Assume the Offensive

CAUSING GREAT DEVASTATION

Despite Recent Assurances That Orozco's Untrained Army Was on Last Legs, Its Activities is Causing U. S. to Mobilize Troops.

CASAS GRANDES, Mex., July 5.—Rebels under General Salazar, commanding the vanguard of the insurrection army, have begun to terrorize this region. Tension among Americans and foreigners were increased today with the imprisonment of C. E. Pollingsworth, manager of the general store of Kettlesen and Degetau here when he refused to give the rebels supplies. They looted the store.

EL PASO, Tex., July 5.—Organized revolution in Mexico insofar as it stimulated a military campaign of concentrated forces, was but today's movement of the rebel army shown to have ended and in its place there was substituted a guerilla warfare, threatening wide-spread devastation in the Northwestern portion of Mexico.

Five troop trains bore the retreating insurgents from the vicinity of Chihuahua City to Jaurez, opposite here and before the day was over it was expected that most of the rebels would be sent southeast from Jaurez a distance of 75 miles, to Casas Grandes, from which point it was intended to effect an entrance to the rich mining state of Sonora.

Having abandoned Chihuahua to the Federalists the rebels destroyed all bridges between Bachimba, where the last battle occurred and Saez, 30 miles north of Chihuahua, the small station at which the rebel outposts now are gathered. The evacuation means that the zone of rebel control will be greatly diminished. Jaurez being the only important point that remains.

General Pascual Orozco, the rebel chief, spent the night at Saez, but was expected in Jaurez today to direct the movements of various bands into which the rebel army is now disintegrating. Jaurez at present is the rebel capital, train loads of archives having been sent here within the last three days. Though the invasion of Sonora means a campaign in the mountains, the rebels, most of them mountaineers, believe themselves equal to it.

In that form, they are vexatious to the ordinary campaign of invasion of Sonora, and are moving quietly and Western thousand men are way to intercept

"BULL-MOOSE" CRY ON MONDAY

Roosevelt Scheduled to Speak His Mind Then

THIRD PARTY LEADERS ARE ASTIR

Wilson's Nomination is Not Likely to Quiet Activities of the Third Party Leaders According to the Chicago Bolter. Will Know It Monday

OYSTER BAY, July 4.—Col Roosevelt announced tonight that the call for the Bull Moose convention will be made public Monday. The call is now complete, but the Roosevelt managers believed it wise to let the first public demonstrations for Wilson have a chance to subside before calling attention of the Republicans to the coming fight.

The Colonel also said that Senator Dixon will continue to manage the third party campaign.

"We are not troubled about leaders," continued the Colonel, "as we have the people with us and this time the people will have their say without being cheated by the bosses. Nineteen out of every twenty letters I have received since the nomination of the Democratic candidate say that this is the time to fight. The one dissenting voice is generally from an organization man who believes that we should keep to the party."

"The nineteen are furious at the action of the Chicago convention and the action of the discredited bosses in defeating the will of the voters. I am amazed at the response that has come from the Republican voters since the nomination of the Democratic candidate. The Republicans wish a progressive fight."

It can be said that Col. Roosevelt does not believe that either of the platforms adopted by what he calls the stolen Chicago convention or the Democratic convention meet the present situation. The Bull Moose platform will probably deal largely with the question of the high cost of living and a universal pension law. It is also planned to have a more radical statement in the platform as regards the tariff than has been adopted by the Democratic or the stolen convention.

Senator Dixon visited Sagamore Hill in an automobile today and left after a brief conference with the Colonel regarding the time at which the call for the third party convention should be given out. Charles H. Thompson, the Roosevelt leader in Vermont, was another visitor. Mr. Thompson, after seeing Roosevelt, said:

"I can say without fear of contradiction that the Republican progressives are stronger today than ever before. In New England there is great hostility among the Republicans to Taft and they are all lining up under the Roosevelt banner."

"We are preparing the call for the Vermont Republicans, but are waiting until the general call has been issued by Senator Dixon. I think Roosevelt will carry the state by a good majority."

A tremendous stack of letters was shown to reporters by Col. Roosevelt and he started opening them at random. One contained a $10 bill from a man in Brooklyn, who simply signed himself "A Jewish Merchant". Another contained $5 from "A Girl Book-keeper" and was postmarked Cleveland. Former Assemblyman James J. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn wrote: "I'm with you". State Senator J. Salson of Big Gap, W. Va., said in another: "I have come over" and Senator Davisonport of Utica wrote that he would stand by the Colonel.

The Roosevelt stopped opening letters and said that he believed the people are with him and that there would not be any great change in state leaders. Gov. Glasscock and the entire West Virginia delegation will be with the new movement, in Kansas Gov. Stubbs and the entire delegation have sent word that they are for Roosevelt. In North Carolina there will be the same leaders as before. In Maryland C. J. Bonaparte, Mr. Baldwin and other Roosevelt leaders will continue the fight. Gov. Aldrich and the leaders in Nebraska will stick to the third party. In Ohio there will be no change in the leadership.

Only once before since the installation of the chair have three executions taken place in a single week. The three condemned to die next week are Santa Zana, who with five others killed Mrs. Mary Hall at Croton Lake in November, 1911; Giuseppe Cerelli, who stabbed Nicola Di Paulo in a card game at White Plains and George Williams, who killed Charles Konklin, station master at Croton Lake on April 8, 1911.

Russell Will Case Again

BOSTON, Mass., July 6.—The famous Russell will case is due for another airing in the courts at East Cambridge next week, but owing to the summer vacation season it is thought likely an adjournment of the trial until fall will be agreed upon when the case is called on Monday. In the former trial, which was one of the longest in the history of the Massachusetts courts, the claimant known as "Dakota Dan" was unsuccessful in his efforts to secure a share of the Daniel Russell estate. The new suit was instituted by the North Dakota claimant to establish his identity as the son of Daniel Russell, the claimant naturally would renew his efforts to secure a share of the Russell fortune.

Plattsburg Honors Champlain.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., July 6.—An imposing monument to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain was dedicated here today with an interesting program that included literary exercises and a military parade. The oration of the day was delivered by Francis Lynde Stetson of New York city.

The memorial consists of a huge granite pedestal surmounted by a statue of the famous discoverer, Samuel de Champlain. At the base of the monument is a canoe with the figure of an Indian peering anxiously out as if at the invasion of the white stranger. The memorial occupies a commanding position at the mouth of the Saranac river, on a rise of ground overlooking the harbor of Cumberland Bay, where was fought the famous battle of Plattsburg, September 11, 1814.

Our Special Washington Letter COMMENT ON CURRENT EVENTS

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Bulls have appeared frequently in history. Now the United States government is making a history of the Bulls.

Almost everybody is acquainted, either personally and by hearsay, with some of the prominent members of the bovine family. There was the cow's husband, conveyed by Noah aboard the Ark. There was the Bull of Basham and his little brother, the Golden Calf. There was Apis, the sacred Bull of Egypt. Also amble through history that mythological bovine with the soul of a man, which was bestridden by the fair Europa. Then there is John Bull, the whole family of Irish Bulls, and the diminutive Bully, used frequently by a presidential aspirant before the second day of the Chicago convention, to say nothing of the conversation Bullcon, which wearied audiences sometime requested to be tied outside.

But of the galaxy of bovine peers, the bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture has little or nothing to say in the modest brochure which its experts have prepared dealing with the ancestry of domesticated cattle. These government scientists are far more concerned with the nameless bull of the Pleistocene epoch or those of the Stone Age, when hairy men prized above all their possessions as Auroch Bull.

From these periods of the remote history of the world, the experts have endeavored to trace the development of cattle to the present dethroned variety, famed not for thews and sinew as for their usefulness in producing

THE COST OF PRODUCING COTTON

A somewhat pessimistic article in the Macon, (Ga.) Daily Telegraph draws attention to the evidence showing that cotton has in the immediate past cost 12 cents per pound to produce.

It states that the selling season of this staple is restricted to four months and with the whole crop thrown on the market—practically at once—the price becomes depreciated and therefore unremunerative. Its proposed remedy is that by means of concerted action that cotton should be held and sold over a twelve month period—at an advanced price.

At various times efforts have been made by farmers unions, individuals and proposed corporations, to make operative some plan of this kind. Recently the matter has been again revived and the effort is being made to develop a warehousing scheme that as others of its kind, lacks the one necessary qualification—honesty of purpose. Still, it is possible that something in line with the previously much discussed "Waco plan" can be put in to operation.

The Macon Telegraph credits "Mr. George Dole Wadley, president of the Southern States Cotton Corporation," with the statement that "the farmers are raising cotton at a cost to them of 12 cents a pound and last year were compelled to sell it at an average of less than 8 cents a pound".

If Mr. Wadley is correctly quoted, he evidently is not well informed or else purposely selected respectively the maximum and minimum figures for the year for reasons best known to himself. But is there any reason why it should cost 12 cents to raise cotton in any of the cotton growing states under existing conditions?

Immediately after the close of the civil war the general poverty of the cotton producing population produced a system by which fortunes were made by merchants. Everything was bought on credit—to be paid for when the cotton was sold. As a rule the merchant, for his own protection, was compelled to take the crop. He absolutely controlled the situation. If the crop was a failure or prices were unusually low, the planter began another year—in debt. He usually did this in any event.

The successive panics in the money world have largely altered this, by cutting down the lengthy credits. That reacted all along the line and now the custom only survives in that good natured, ill used, irresponsible curse of the Southern soil—the renter. He improves nothing, takes all he can from the soil, restores nothing and always leaves the land in worse shape than when he took it.

He lives from hand to mouth and draws everything he requires on credit of the land owner, or an order. Without the slightest imputation on the integrity of either the planter who issues the order on the merchant who supplies the goods, the system is not conducive to economy.

If plantations were divided into such tracts as could be worked under the superintendence of the owner, all long time crop credits abolished and other obvious and useless drains on rural prosperity stopped, such as maintaining fence as landmarks, neighborhood rather than individual systems of drainage, etc., the producing cost of cotton would be diminished; the land improved, homes would be better, school facilities would multiply and the land would be richer by the wiping out of a condition of normal indebtedness.

All the nominations are now in except for county officers and they are not a great way off.

It sounds like everybody wants Woodrow Wilson to be president.

Some fellow has been busy enough to figure out that it cost $5,000,000 to nominate Woodrow Wilson at the Baltimore convention. Lots of guess work about those figures.

This is My Birthday

Robert B. Macon

Robert B. Macon, who represents the First Arkansas district in the national house of representatives is conspicuous among the Democratic leaders of that body, was born in the town of Trenton, Ark., July 6, 1859. Mr. Macon is a typical self made man. Before he was ten years old his parents died and left him without resources. His youth was spent on a farm and the only education he received was eked out during a brief term each year at the country school. He supplemented this however, by diligent study. Before he was 25 years old he was elected to the Arkansas legislature. Later he studied law and became prosecuting attorney. He was elected to congress in 1903 and has four times been re-elected.

James E. Campbell

James E. Campbell, former governor of Ohio and for many years a conspicuous Democratic leader in that state was born in Middleton, O., July 7, 1843. He received an academic education and served in the Federal navy during the closing years of the civil war. After the war he studied law and engaged in the practice of his profession in Hamilton, O., which city has since been his home. After serving four years as prosecuting attorney of his home county Mr. Campbell was elected to Congress in 1883. He was elected governor of Ohio in 1890 and served a term of two years. He was twice an unsuccessful candidate for re-election to the governorship.

SOME PROBLEMS Part I

THE things that seem big to us are really small. And the things that seem small and which the so called biggest men ignore are the things that are big.

It has been so from the beginning. The people of Asia, for instance, have devoted centuries to killing tigers and huge snakes—and these destroyed at most a few lives each year. They never thought of destroying and they do not think even yet of destroying the really important thing, the bacillus of cholera, that comma-shaped organism too small to be seen by the naked eye—yet are able to destroy hundreds of thousands and millions.

The savage man in his physical fight and his struggle for political improvement battles against the big and the obvious things—and neglects that which seems small, but which is really the biggest of all.

For two weeks this country has listened to the talking and planning of the two great parties that pretend to provide national welfare.

In Chicago and in Baltimore those supposed to know what the country needs have met and fought and intrigued and dickered.

They have written their platforms and denounced what they considered the great evils.

One set denounced the high tariff because it makes living expensive. And the other set denounced the suggestion of free trade because it would destroy the workman's opportunity to get good wages.

Gigantic trusts, great organizations, monopolies, the modern dinosaurs and mammoths, received attention.

In these pictures you see one of the problems that have existed in this same shape for thousands of years and that will exist for centuries to come unless men deal with them scientifically, were not touched by those conventions.

In this picture you see one of the problems that all the wise politicians pass by.

This is the problem of the too much and the too little in our civilization. Each picture is a picture of childhood. And one is as far from the other as the dismal swamp in the Tropics is far from the healthy mountain tops.

In the picture of too much, you have the child made miserable by excess of wealth, excess of opportunity. The child crushed by more than it can stand in the way of luxury, indulgence and care. There a young mind that might have developed is drawn by the encouragement of egotism.

In the other picture you have the children that suffer under the rule of the too little. The food that the rich child pushes away wearily these poor children need.

The wonderful drive in the fresh air and the country that wears the over-indulged rich child would mean happiness for these poor children. Too much on one side, too little on the other.

Yet there is in the world plenty for all of them if it could only be distributed.

The children that sit in the gutter near the barrels of refuse lack warmth in winter—yet there is plenty of heat in this world. The power of Niagara alone could keep warm every child in the United States.

The poor children lack the fresh air and the green grass and the wholesome food of the country in summer. Yet there is plenty of fresh air, sunlight and comfort for all—if the wealth of nature were only distributed.

The poor children lack of affection and care—yet the world is full of affection. There are millions of hearts that shrivel up and dry up for lack of some object upon which their affection might be bestowed, just as there are hundreds of millions of fruits and vegetables that rot for lack of children to eat them.

"They have meat that cannot eat and they can eat that have no meat," is an old saying and true.

Too much fills with misery, satiety and unhappiness the lives of a few. And too little makes miserable and dreary the lives of many.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Rann

LIGHTNING

LIGHTNING is a form of sudden death which never finds it necessary to strike any body twice in the same place. It is a very treacherous article, as it is liable to pin a man to an oak tree when he is several miles from a plumber. No body has ever played with lightning with any degree of success except Benjamin Franklin, who had been postmaster general and was immune. Whenever Benjamin grew tired of distributing fourth-class postmasters where they do the most good, it was his wont to go out and pluck a little lightning out of the atmosphere with his bare hands at the end of a kite string, after which he would take it home in a pint cup and leave it lying around on the sidewalk. Mr. Franklin always said that lightning would never hurt anybody who did not run into it. We have much to thank lightning for. For one thing, it has given us that most affable and tenacious emblem of industry, the lightning rod agent, who goes along life's rugged path scattering puncture-proof barns and promissory notes. Then again lightning, when properly directed enables a great many people to collect infire insurance to twice the value of the insured. The milch cow is a shining mark for lightning, which corners her next to a barbed wire fence and renders her into porterhouse steak at a very fair rate of speed. Men who have studied the habits of lightning say that if any one wishes to find out what it feels like to be cauterized from the chin down he should stand in an open doorway and allow a few thunderbolts to bounce off his person. Lightning is generally preceded by a clap of thunder, which can be heard with the naked eye, after which there is a brief period of calm and then a sound as if somebody was repairing the roof with a plectrifier. Sheet lightning is a panoramic variety which causes timid people to sit up in bed and discuss external truths which do not annoy them in the daytime. A display of china lightning, which sticks its head in at the window and runs out a forked tongue, can induce a man to change his mode of life quicker than a protracted meeting.

Encourage the Boy's Good Traits

There are those who can see no good in the boy who has acquired some bad habit, however trivial it may be. It is fault overshadows all the good points that can possibly be mustered in his favor. He may be kind of generous to an exceptional degree, but now and then he uses a profane word. He may be good-hearted, but he has been known to smoke cigarettes. He may be perfectly dependable, but he has a passion for "playing keeps" in marble time. These things in the eyes of some people become serious sins which totally eclipse the good points in his character.

It is an open question how we may eliminate these objectionable traits most effectually. A thousand remedies have been proposed. O. E. Crooker in writing on this subject in Farm and Home, says one thing, however, is certain—punishment of an extreme sort frequently brings no other result than stubborn willfulness. In the same way, constantly nagging of the person at fault usually results in little more than a fit of bad temper on the part of the one we would help.

Oftentimes a better way is to emphasize the good qualities that we find in the one with whom we have to deal. Let the affording one know that we admire good trait in his character. He will then naturally desire that we find everything about him worthy of admiration and will strive toward that end. The most unmanageable individual in a group of a dozen mischievous boys was once transformed in a single week by giving him an important duty to perform, and making him and the rest of the group feel that he was the one boy in the lot who was most to be depended upon to do it. Emphasizing a good trait in his character was the means of gradually eliminating many objectionable ones.

Seldom is it that we may not succeed far beyond our expectations after this fashion. Judicious encouragement, if we begin early enough, will work more wonders than any alchemy of which we know.

Press Comment

Durham Herald: When they told Mr. Underwood that a reduction of duties would hurt certain industries in his own district he voted for it just the same, but then he is a tariff reformer.

Raleigh Evening Times: A statistician says that 23,736,190 cigarettes are smoked every day in this country. This does not include those rolled by the smokers. The number of cigars smoked a day is placed at 21,718,448.

Greensboro Daily News: The usefulness of the seismograph was clearly demonstrated Wednesday when one in New Orleans recorded a shock north of New Orleans—the shock felt at Wilmington, Columbia, Augusta and other cities along the seaboard.

Greensboro Record: At least the armon crowd has grit. Headquarters have been opened at Baltimore and his friends propose to keep at work. The idea is of course to pull hard for him in the event of a deadlock between Wilson and Clark, who are leading and should Roosevelt be nominated, a mighty effort will be made to run him in.

Charlotte Chronicle: According to the current number of the bulletin of the North Carolina Board of Health, this state is leading all other states in the fight for the eradication of the hookworm. North Carolina probably has a much smaller percentage of hookworm infection than most of the Southern states, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana particularly having a larger proportion in all probability. We have enough, however, and great work is being done in the campaign against it.

FRIENDSHIP AND BUSINESS

The man who is not a familiar face in the business places of his home town is not a man who attracts many business friendships. He creates very little good will. People buy of him if they have to, if they find that he has bargains that they simply can't resist, but when things are about even they never go out of their way to serve him. Such a man gets a reputation for cold isolation and if he wins it is by sheer hard work and friendships never help him.

A great many of the prizes of life go by favor. The fellow who feels interested in his townsmen, who takes every opportunity to throw a good business deal in the way of a neighbor, has created a host of friendly and willingly debtors. These favors are not forgotten. They may seem bread cast upon the waters of a shoreless sea. Then some day, when he least expects it, along comes some man to whom he has done a business favor, to whom it is a pleasure to make some return.

Here is explained the mysterious case with which some fellow gets along in life. They never seem to work as hard as others. But they have a genius for business friendship, they throw business favors to friends whenever possible, they buy everything possible of their townsmen. They create such a host of business allies that by and by they find what a lot of people there are in life who enjoy and believe in returning favors and remembering mutual obligations.—Haverhill Gazette.

Social and Personal

The House by the Side of the Road

There are hermit souls that live with drawn
In the peace of their self-content;
There are souls like stars, that dwell apart
In a fellowless firmament;
Their are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where the highways never ram
But let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
The man who press with the ardor of hope,
As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorners seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban
Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

I see from my house by the side of the road—
By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the ardor of hope,
The men who are faint with strife,
But I turn not away from their smiles nor their tears—
Both are parts of an infinite plan;
Let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

I know there are brookgladden meadows ahead,
And mountains of wearisome height
That the road passes through the long afternoon,
And stretches away to the night.
But still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice,
And weep with the strangers that moan,
Nor live in my house by the side of the road,
Like a man who dwells alone.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by—
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish—so am I,
Then why should I sit in the scorners seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban;
Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

This was won by Miss Francis Bagwell. The visitors were then asked to cut for the booby, a red satchet, which was won by Mrs. Young, of Blackstone. Is the connecting link between the merchant and customer—it is the merchant's salesman.

Goods snugly resting on a shelf are very need of circulating.

A Secret has better chance to travel than the goods of a merchant who will not talk about them all the time. The up-to-gold—all right, but in much like a miser's date merchant looks to advertising like the aphone. Advertising enlarges the circle of merchant's business, announcer to his megaphone strengthens the volume of the voice. Both multiply the chances of a hearing. In grand father's time advertising was not thought of. But in grandfather's time competition was slight. Today it is so keen that a merchant must look out else the edge of competition may separate him from his business.

Be sure to tell the people what you have, why you have it, and what they can have it for. This is vital to your business. Also when telling the people use a medium that will reach them with your message of intelligence.

Bethel and community have been celebrating the 4th by a big barbecue dinner and two ball games.

From Woman's View-Point

This is one way of getting around the discomfort of the modish long sleeve; and sometimes a close fitting cut of silk or other frock material is a semitransparent upper sleeve, which affords a little more coolness than the long sleeve entirely of the heavier material.

As midsummer approaches the short sleeve of course wins more favor, and the sleeve reaching to the elbow or a little below and left wide and open there with deep frills or wide trun-back cuff or wide, open undersleeve for finish are exceedingly cool and comfortable for hot weather wear; but the long sleeve does have a chic and knowing air in the street frock, possibly because it is seldom seen in any well cut and original phase upon the cheap ready made frock or blouses offered in the less discriminating shops.

Lingerie frocks worn under tunic of colored silk muslin or chiffon are being much worn in Paris and offer a practical suggestion for the doing over of last year lingerie frock whose sheer bodice has lost its freshness. Lettuce green, cerise, fuchsia, the brightest blue, all the gal colors of the season are effective in this connection, the white under their semi-transparent texture softening their tone becoming-ly. Some of the purples are particularly good under white.

White satin and white taffeta waists of the so-called shirt form have long sleeves with deep frills falling over the hand. The shoulders are cut very long, with the sleeves set in with a bound or piped edge at the armhole. The cut is the kimona form, for in spite of the fact that the sleeve sets in there is no shoulder seam. But-toning down the front the directoire collar is formed first by a little upright standing band which extends three-quarters of the way around. To this is set a second collar which rolls loosely, falling in the characteristic point at the front and turning away to form the open rolling effect. Deep frills of plated net are placed under the edge of the collar, making an attractive finish for the front of the waist.

The latest eccentricity of fashion is under ear decorated with a cross motive. The cross is made of lace or is embroidered by hand, and is placed on the front of the chemise or night-gown, exactly in the center. When lace insertion is used to make the cross one piece is laid over the other and the fabric is buttonholed over the lace all the way down the edge and then clipped away. The Maltese cross, with four equal sides, is used.

Most economical are yoke collars of embroiderer mull and tucked or plaited pointed sprit and net, frilled so that no other trimming is necessary over the shoulder places in the back with lace. They are wide enough to for the gown. Cuffs and sleeve frills are made to match.

Linen weavers appear quite heavy, almost resembling panama; in medium weight and again exquisitely sheer, calling for lace medallions and forty little Valenciennes ruffles on the edge.

Small bows of black velvet give a decidedly chic to the lingerie gown. They dot the fichu or appear at intervals around the flounces again they appear on sleeves instead of buttons, running from the wrist to the elbow in the under side of the sleeves.

Taffeta parasols of plain color floral and Persian borders, which for the most parts are wide ribbon. The greatest assortment of color schemes prevails, from light, delicate shades to subdued shadowy ones, and to rich oriental colorings.

Imicetional pretty is a parasol of white chiffon, printed in shades pink, roses, and linen with white mousseline de soie. One side of the parasol is decorated with large butterfly of black Chantilla lace. The edge in finished with a narrow band of black velvet ribbon.

Picturesque House In Which Charles Dickens Once Lived

BROADSTAIRS, one of the quieter English watering places, has been a favorite residence of popular British novelists. George Eliot, Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens spent much of their time there. A house which was occupied at different times by the last two has recently been sold. It is Bleak House, where "David Copperfield" and other Dickens novels were written. An English doctor bought it for £3,000. It stands on a commanding site overlooking the town and harbor and has charming gardens. The house is marked by a commemorative tablet and a bust of Dickens, which may be distinguished in the photograph.

Strawberry Shortcake

Sift together 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons sugar, then work in 1-4 cup butter and gradually add 3-4 cup milk. Toss on to a floured board, divide in two parts, roll out and bake about 12 minutes in a hot oven on a layer cake tins. When done split and spread with butter. Crush strawberries slightly, sweeten to taste and put between and on top of shortcakes. Cover top with sweetened whipped cream.

Berry Ices

To 1 1-2 cups sugar add 4 cups water and boil 20 minutes, or until it syrups, then add either 2 cups strawberry, raspberry or currant juice (a mixture of half raspberry and half currant is nice), and in the case of strawberry or raspberry alone, add to the former 1 tablespoon and to the latter 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Let the mixture get cold, and then freeze.

To obtain the pure fruit, mash, heat a little, but add no water and squeeze through a cheesecloth bag. Strain again if the liquid does not look clear enough.—Farm and Home.

NEW ORLEANS, July 6.—Cotton took a jump of $1 to $1.40 a bale above yesterday's closing prices when the government's condition and acreage report was received on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange today. The report was construed as decidedly unfavorable to the crop and prices immediately sought higher levels, the July option reaching a position 28 points above yesterday's close. The new crop months took a jump 23 points.

General Sajines left Agua Prieta to day for Frontera, Sonora, to take command of the main column and while the forces of General Sajines are engaging the rebels on the state line between Sonora and Chihuahua, the army of General Huerta is to move up from the city of Chihuahua along the Mexican Northwestern Railroad, toward Casas Grandes and attack the rebels from the rear.

Be a Thinker and a Gentleman
 Success
 Will Be Your Reward

By CHARLES F. THWING,
 President of Western Reserve University

© by J. E. Purdy.

TO become a successful man BE A THINKER. At the same time BE A GENTLEMAN, using your thinking qualities for the benefit of yourself and for the good of your fellow man.

The one great way of making yourself a thinker is to THINK. Thinking is a practical art. It cannot be taught. It is learned by doing. Yet there are some subjects in the course which seem to be better fitted than others to teach you this art.

CONCENTRATION IN THE THINKER, CLEARNESS, COMPREHENSIVENESS, COMPLEXEDNESS, CONSECUTIVENESS, CONTINUITY—THESE ARE THE SIX BIG C'S WHICH ARE MARKS OF THE SUBJECTS WHICH TEND TO CREATE THE THINKER.

Of course you are and of course you will be a gentleman. In the creation of the gentleman as well as of the thinker the PERSONAL EQUATION COUNTS. In fact, it counts more in the making of the gentleman, for in this making truth is less important than the PERSONALITY.

As a gentleman YOU WILL BE A FRIEND AND WILL HAVE FRIENDS. In this relation of friendship in its earlier stages there is no part of life in which it is more important for you to exercise the virtue and grace of reserve.
