DR. THOS. HUME DIED YESTERDAY

Professor of English at the State University

IN CHAPEL HILL SINCE 1885

Widely Known Educator's Death Due to Heart Failure. Had Been in Southern States Many Years, Chaplain During Civil War

CHAPEL HILL, July 15.—Every heart in Chapel Hill was saddened this morning by the announcement that at 8:30 a. m. Dr. Thomas Hume, professor emeritus of English in the University of North Carolina, had fallen asleep. Although Dr. Hume had been in feeble health for some time and for several years had seen only those friends who called on him in his rooms, the sense of loss is none the less sadder and keen. Though shut in on account of failing health Dr. Hume has been kept lovingly in mind by every member of the community and now that the light of his striking, lovable personality has gone out the whole community is touched with grief.

Dr. Hume's work for Chapel Hill and the state is known all over North Carolina. Coming to the university in 1885, he began the first serious teaching of English literature in the southern states. Possessed of wide scholarship, rare enthusiasm and a marked ability to interpret the best in literature, he threw his whole life into his work as a teacher. And with his scholarship and enthusiasm and ability to interpret went the ever rarer gift of interest in and sympathy for men.

Equipped with these powers, he undertook the high task of being a true teacher and a man interested in all that touched the life of his town and state. In the lecture room, on the campus, in his study, in his drawing room, in his church, in the pulpit or on the public platform, Dr. Hume gave his best. Today no alumnus of the university who sat in his lecture room and no member of the village to which he ministered in season and out will fail to acknowledge the contribution he made to their lives and share in the sadness of his passing.

Dr. Hume was born in Portsmouth, Va., on October 31, 1836. He was prepared for college at the Virginia Collegiate Institute at Portsmouth and graduated from Richmond with the degree of bachelor of arts in the class of 1855. He pursued graduate studies in the university of Virginia and began his work as a teacher in Chesapeake Female College. At the outbreak of the Civil War he joined the Third regiment of Virginia as its chaplain. Later he was transferred to the post chaplaincy at Petersburg where he remained as official pastor of the Confederate hospitals until the surrender at Appomattox.

Dr. Hume was a member of the Baptist church and as an ordained minister served pastorates, after the war in Norfolk and Danville.

Automobile Accident Almost Fatal

An accident occurred yesterday evening which might have caused the death of two men, but for the prompt action of the driver of the car which was about to cross the N. S. tracks on the sand clay road yesterday evening at about 6:30.

The automobile, a Michigan 5 passenger touring car belonged to Mr. J. B. Perkins, of Hamilton and driving it at the time of the accident was Mr. Brown, who conducts a garage in town. It is supposed that the two occupants had gone on the sand clay road for a spin and on their way back failed to see, or hear a Norfolk Southern freight train, as they were about to cross the tracks. Mr. Brown saw the train just a few feet from the crossing and immediately bent every effort to stop the car. This he succeeded in doing, but not before the immediate front of the automobile was across the rails.

The engine and front part of the car were torn to pieces by the passing train, but most fortunately the occupants escaped with a heavy scare.

WM. McCOMBS CAMPAIGN MANAGER

Leader of Wilson's Fight is Appointed

McADOO PROBABLE TREASURER

Gov. Wilson's Right Hand Man in Democratic Convention Will Again Lead the Forces to Elect the Staunton Man Next Nov.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—W. F. McCombs was unanimously elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee today.

Joseph E. Davies, of Madison, Wis., was elected secretary of the committee to succeed Urey Woodson, of Kentucky.

John I. Martin, of St. Louis, was re-elected sergeant at arms.

Immediately after Chairman Mack called the committee to order, the committee, in executive session, proceeded to formal organization. It was said that the selection of an executive committee would be the order of the business after the election of officers.

Mr. McCombs was at the hotel where the committee met, but he did not join the committeemen until after his election as chairman.

Robert S. Hudspeth, of New Jersey, who had a message from Governor Wilson expressing the wishes of the presidential nominee as to the campaign, notified M. McCombs of his election. Mr. Hudspeth said he had a personal message from Governor Wilson to deliver to the committee.

It was announced that Mr. McCombs as chairman, would have the naming of the executive committee, and the executive committee would select a treasurer.

It was reported that the selection of a vice-chairman was probable, but no definite announcement on this point would be made before the meeting of the executive committee.

In such a contingency it was said that the choice might fall to William G. McAdoo, of New York, who also was regarded as the probable choice for treasurer.

Oklahoma's Blind Senator And His Wife at Baltimore

ALTHOUGH it is not true, as some reports have it, that Senator Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma, is attended on all his journeys by his wife, it is a fact that his wide reading is accomplished through her. While he was practicing law she aided him by reading to him the authorities on his cases, and she still pursues with him his studies of political economy, history and biography, which form the bulk of their reading. Their first meeting took place at a combination political gathering and picnic such as are common in the southwest, and the young man then and there determined that Miss Kay should be his wife. When the blind lawyer decided to make the campaign for the senatorship his wife and his brother entered actively into the work of canvassing in his behalf and conducted his entire correspondence. So helpful has Mrs. Gore been to her husband that, it is said, he does not think of his blindness as a cause for complaint or unhappiness, his only worry being her rather delicate health. The photograph here reproduced was taken at the Baltimore convention.

DICTAPHONE TO PLAY PART DENVER SUFFERS EFFECTS OF CYCLONE

IN S. C. DIRECTED AGAINST GOVERNOR BLEASE GREAT CLOUDBURST SWAMPS CITY

South Carolina Chief Executive Has to Contend Against Evidence to be Introduced by the "Peerless" Detective of America

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 15.—Testimony charging Governor Cole L. Blease, of South Carolina, with corruption was introduced before the dispensary investigating committee of that state by A. S. Reed, a Buns detective, and T. B. Felder of Atlanta.

So unexpected was the character of the evidence that after the hearing adjourned, Chairman H. B. Carlisle, of the committee, asserted that the newly adduced evidence against the South Carolina governor would be thoroughly sifted.

Detective Reed's testimony included records taken with a telephone device relative to negotiations for a convict's pardon, from the South Carolina penitentiary. The records, Reed testified, were of conversations between the detective and Sam. J. Nicholls, a Spartanburg attorney, reputed to be a go-between for Governor Blease.

Accidental Electrocution of Two Men

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Two men were killed and three seriously injured by an electric shock here today while repairing a transformer disabled by last night's storm.

Norman Norton, one of a gang of five men at work on a transformer in the Eckington trolley power station came in contact with a live wire carrying a current of 6,000 volts: He transmitted the shock to James Ragan, Daniel Kelly, Franz Haller and Geo. Hickerling, who were working with him. Reagan and Kelly were almost instantly killed. Pickering and Haller were shocked and taken unconscious to the hospital. It was expected that they would recover. Norton was but slightly injured.

TWO SENATORS SUPPORT BRITAIN

Root, of New York and Burton, of Ohio

REFER TO THE HAGUE TRIBUNAL

The Former Secretary of State Takes Strong Stand in Panama Question and Believes the "Big Ditch" Will be Dear to Country

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Great Britain's protest that the United States has no right, under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, to ass its own coastwise vessels free through the Panama canal while it collects tolls from British and other foreign ships, found emphatic support in the senate today.

Opening the fight over the Panama canal bill sent to the senate by the house in which the free provision is an important feature, Senators Burton of Ohio and Root, of New York, outlined the ground upon which the enemies of free American ships will fight their battle.

Both senators declared Great Britain had surrendered important rights at Panama held under the former Clayton-Bulwore treaty for the pledge of equal treatment to all ships given by the United States in the existing Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The controversy hinges on the question of whether the United States, in its pledge to treat the ships of all nations equally, meant to include vessels owned by its own citizens.

Senator Root, former secretary of state, unreservedly declared that the Hague court would be called upon to settle the issue finally, if the United States passed the bill with the free provision, which he characterized as unjustifiable discrimination against other nations. A decision against the United States by the Hague court he said, would undoubtedly involve this country in the repayment of millions of dollars to the owners of foreign ships, which might have been taken in as tolls at the canal.

It was expected by state department officials today that the detailed British statement of protest to the canal legislation would arrive in New York within the next 48 hours. When it will reach Washington will depend upon whether Mr. Innes the British charge meets the mail steamer in New York and comes to Washington with his message or whether it will be necessary for it to come to Secretary Knox by the way of Kleno, Maine, the summer home of the British embassy.

The British argumentative statement probably will be submitted by President Taft to Congress perhaps accompanied by a special message.

ONE CONTESTANT DIES IN SWEDEN

Marathon Runner Succumbs to Sunstroke

ONLY PORTUGUESE IN OLYMPIAD

As Great Series of Contests Draws to a Close Gloom is Cast Over the International Campus by the Death of F. Lazaro

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, July 15.—Gloom was cast over the spectators and participants in the Olympic games when it became known that the only Portuguese runner in yesterday historic marathon race, F. Lazaro, had died in the hospital this morning. He succumbed to sunstroke and fell out at Sifferdal on the return journey after running nineteen miles.

The news caused great distress to the King, the Crown Prince and other members of the royal family.

Lazaro never recovered consciousness. He was delirious throughout the night and imagined he was still running the race.

The Bohemian runner, F. Slavik, also is in a hospital, but his condition is not considered serious.

The crown Prince of Sweden visited the hospital this morning. He is greatly distressed over the event.

Every one concerned now realizes that it was a great mistake to start the race almost at noon on one of the hottest days of the year, in weather such as the majority of the runners were entirely unused to. All the officials say that it might have been in the cool of the long northern twilight. Even the members of the United States team, who are more accustomed to the sun than most of the competitors, were distressed by yesterday's heat, while the English runners entirely wilted and were unable to approach their ordinary records.

The tragedy of this year's marathon going after that of the painful exhibit at Doando's finish in 1908, is likely to lead to a change of rules or the abandonment of the feature of future meetings.

The majority of the runners in yesterday's race are in good condition today.

Only a few scattered, hundreds of spectators occupied to benches of the stadium the last day of the stadium this morning, the last day of the Athletic section of the games.

Most of the people preferred to visit the neighboring athletic grounds, where mixed teams of American and Sweden athletes gave an exhibition of baseball for the benefit of those foreigners who had never seen a game.

An enormous crowd, however, gathered this afternoon when the prizes were presented to the winners.

400 meters swimming race for boys
400 meters swimming team race for teams of four women each, swimming 100 meters free style; England, first; Germany, second; Austria, third. Time 5 minutes and 52 seconds.

CHAPTER I.

What's in a Name?

To possess two distinctly alien red corpuscles in one's blood, metaphorically if not in fact, two characters or individualities under one epidermis, is, in most cases, a peculiar disadvantage. One hears of scoundrels and saints striving to consume one another in one body, angels and harpies; but oftentimes, quite the contrary to being a curse, these two warring temperaments become a man's ultimate blessing: as in the case of George P. A. Jones, of Mortimer & Jones, the great metropolitan Oriental rug and carpet company, all of which has a dignified, sonorous sound. George was divided within himself. This he would not have confessed even into the trusted if battered ear of the Egyptian Sphinx. There was, however, no demon-angel sparring for points in George's soul. The difficulty might be set forth in this manner: On one side stood inherent common sense; on the other, a boundless, rosyate imagination which was likewise inherent—a kind of quixote imagination of suitable modern pattern. This alter ego terrified him whenever it raised its strangely beautiful head and shouldered aside his guardian-angel (for that's what common sense is, argue to what end you will) and pleaded in that luminous rhetoric under the spell of which our old friend Sancho often fell asleep.

P. A., as they called him behind the counters, was but twenty-eight, and if he was vice-president in his late father's shoes he didn't wobble round in them to any great extent. In a crowd he was not noticeable; he didn't stand head and shoulders above his fellow-men, nor would he have been mistaken by near-sighted persons, the myopes, for the Vatican's Apollo in the flesh. He was of medium height, beardless, slender, but tough and wiry and enduring. You may see his prototype on the streets a dozen times a day, and you may also pass him without turning round for a second view. Young men like P. A. must be intimately known to be admired; you did not throw your arm across his neck, first-off. His hair was brown and closely clipped about a head that would have gained the attention of the phrenologist, if not that of the casual passer-by. His bumps, in the phraseology of that science, were good ones. For the rest, he observed the world through a pair of kindly, shy, blue eyes.

Young girls, myopic through ignorance or silliness, seeing nothing beyond what the eyes see, seldom gave him a second inspection; for he did not know how to make himself attractive, and was mortally afraid of the opposite, or opposing sex. He could bullyrag a sheik out of his camels' saddle-bags, but petticoats and lace parasols and small Oxfords had the same effect upon him that the prodding stick of a small boy has upon a retiring turtle. But many a worldly-wise woman, drawing out with tact and kindness the truly beautiful thoughts of this young man's soul, sadly demanded of fate why a sweet, clean boy like this one had not been sent to her in her youth. You see, the worldly-wise woman knows that it is invariably the lay-figure and not Prince Charming that a woman marries, and that matrimony is blind-man's buff in grown-ups.

Many of us lay the blame upon our parents. We shift the burden of wondering why we have this fault and lack that grace to the shoulders of our immediate forbears. We go to the office each morning denying that we have any responsibility; we let the boss do the worrying. But George never went prospecting in his soul for any such dross philosophy. He was grateful for having had so beautiful a mother; proud of having had so honest a sire; and if either of them had endowed him with false weights he did his best to even up the balance.

The mother had been as romantic as any heroine out of Mrs. Radcliff's novels, while the father had owned to as much romance as one generally finds in a thorough business man, which is practically none at all. The very name itself is a bulwark against the intrusions of romance. One can not lift the imagination to the prospect of picturing a Jones in ruffles and highboots, pinking a varlet in the midriff. It smells of sugar-barrels and cotton-bales, of steamships and railroads, of stolid routine in the office and of placid concerns over the daily news under the evening lamp.

Mrs. Jones, lovely, lettered yet not worldly, had dreamed of her boy, bayed and decorated, marrying the most distinguished woman in all Europe, whoever she might be. Mr. Jones had had no dreams at all, and had put the boy to work in the shipping department a little while after the college threshold had been crossed, outward bound. The mother, while sweet and gentle, had a will, iron under velvet, and when she held out for Percival Algernon and a decent knowledge of modern languages, the old man agreed if, on the other hand, the boy's first name should be George and that he should learn the business from the cellar up. There were several tilts over the matter, but at length a truce was declared. It was agreed that the boy himself ought to have a word to say upon a subject which concerned him more vitally than any one else. So, at the age of fifteen, when he was starting off for preparatory school, he was advised to choose for himself. He was an obedient son, adoring his mother and idolizing his father. He wrote himself down as George Percival Algernon Jones, promised to become a linguist and to learn the rug business from the cellar up. On the face of it, it looked like a big job; it all depended upon the boy.

The first day at school his misery began. He had signed himself as George P. A. Jones, no small diplomacy for a lad; but the two initials, standing up like dismantled pines in the midst of uninteresting landscape, roused the curiosity of his school-mates. Boys are boys the world over, and possess a finesse in cruelty that only Indians can match; and it did not take them long to unearth the fatal secret. For three years he was Percy Algy, and not only the boys laughed, but the pretty girls sniggered. Many a time he had returned to his dormitory decorated (not in accord with the fond hopes of his mother) with a swollen ear, or a ruddy proboscis, or a green-brown eye. There was a limit, and when they stepped over that, why, he proceeded to the best of his ability to solve the difficulty with his fists. George was no milkop; but Percival Algernon would have been the Old Man of the Sea on broader shoulders than his. He dimly realized that had he been named George Henry William Jones his sun would have been many diameters larger. There was a splendid quality of pluck under his apparent timidity, and he stuck doggedly to it. He never wrote home and complained. What was good enough for his mother was good enough for him.

It seemed just an ordinary matter of routine for him to pick up French and German verbs. He was far from being brilliant, but he was sensitive and his memory was sound. Since his mother's ambition was to see him an accomplished linguist, he applied himself to the task as if everything in the world depended upon it, just as he knew that when the time came he would apply himself as thoroughly to the question of rugs and carpets.

Under all this filial loyalty ran the pure strain of golden romance, side by side with the lesser metal of practicality. When he began to read the masters he preferred their romances to their novels. He even wrote poetry in secret, and when his mother discovered the fact she cried over the sentimental verses. The father had to be told. He laughed and declared that the boy would some day develop into a good writer of advertisements. This quiet laughter, unburdened as it was with ridicule, was enough to set George's muse a-winging, and she never came back.

After leaving college he was given a modest letter of credit and told to go where he pleased for a whole year. George started out at once in quest of the Holy Grail, and there are more roads to that than there are to Rome. One may be reasonably sure of getting into Rome, whereas the Holy Grail (diversified, variable, innumerable) is always the exact sum of a bunch of hay hanging before old Dobbin's nose. Nevertheless, George galloped his fancies with loose rein. He haunted romance, burrowed and plowed for it; and never his spade

For State Senate
Having been endorsed by the anti-rising element of the Democratic party, I announce myself a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:
1. No extension of the stock law except by a vote of the people in the territory effected.
2. The repeal of the stock law legislation of the last legislature.
3. The improvement of the public roads without bond issues.
4. Against any bond issue in Pitt county for next two years except in towns—and then only by vote of the people effected.
5. Improvement of the county home.
6. A legalized primary for North Carolina.
If you desire the above principles to be upheld, I most earnestly solicit votes

FOR THE FARMERS

From HOME AND FARM

A Money Mill For The Farmer
Wherever one travels, dairy sections give the most visible manifestations of thrift and prosperity. The monthly cream checks puts more money in circulation. The purchase of concentrated feed adds to the productivity of the farm. Large crops, big barns, comfortable houses, good roads, schools and other conditions indicate that the farmers are making good. The beef steer cannot hold his own with the dairy cow, says Farm and Home, because she can get more dollars for her owner out of a ton of hay or an acre of corn. She is a more profitable transformer of farm crops into money. The food that will make a dollar's worth of beef will make several dollars' worth of milk or butter.

That Juley Hothouse Lamb
Restaurant and hotel men have created a demand from December to May for young lambs weighing around 35 pounds when dressed. There is considerable demand for them in Boston, New York and Washington. When born late in the fall or early in winter, they are called hothouse lambs. In order to study the business of producing hothouse lambs, the flock at Cornell university since 1903, says Farm and Home, has been managed as a hothouse lamb flock with profitable results.

Thousands for Self-Education.
Farmers and business men of DeKalb county, Ill., recently pledged $30,000 to promote demonstration work for three years. This was made possible through the farmers clubs which sprang into existence during the last two years. There are 10 of these clubs with a total membership of 700 farmers, merchants and bankers. They were organized by the county farmers institute.

are already showing excellent results. Farmers are taking renewed interest in their work and more intelligent attention is given to farming operations; community life has been developed, and a better social spirit is evidenced. Social, moral and educational standards have been raised and cooperation has been given a distinct impetus.

COMMERCIAL PAPER

The chief business of a bank is facilitating the exchange of goods; a bank puts the producer in funds for goods months ahead of the time they are paid for by the ultimate consumers.

Bank credit bridges the long interval between the production and consumption of goods—bread, shoes, or Georgia pine—and enormously speeds up the machinery of wealth making.

That which obstructs the use of bank credit in production is a burden on the whole country; that which facilitates its use must promote general prosperity. A reform of our banking laws is now proposed which will enable the banks betted to perform their service to the country.

Banks extend their credit to business by the purchase of commercial paper. Two-thirds of the national bank loans outside New York are on commercial paper. This paper may be in the form of a borrower's promise to pay his bank, of a purchaser's promise to pay a seller, or of a seller's order on a purchaser to pay. The paper may or may not be accompanied by documents evidencing the exchanging of goods.

Despite the fact that New York is the biggest commercial town in the country, about two-thirds of the paper held by its bank is based, not on the exchange of goods, but on the exchange of stocks and bonds. These collateral loans are favored by the New York banks in preference to commercial loans—but they are bad loans in times of stress, because a general attempt to realize upon them results in a huge unloading of securities—a panic—and they cannot be liquidated without disastrous losses. But commercial loans, made against the movement of goods from producers to consumers, are in the mass, bound to be liquidated, because goods are always being consumed.

Why, then, is so large a proportion of our bank funds used in promoting stock speculation instead of promoting business? Because we have no national market for commercial paper. This is one of the worst defects in our banking system.

The bulk of the commercial paper bought by the banks is in the form of promissory notes. These are a dead asset until they mature. In a time of financial stress, a bank may call its loans in the stock market—the collateral may be sold at some price; but promissory notes have no market. A big loan on international securities may be shifted to London or Paris, but what European banker would invest in the promissory note of a Chicago or St. Louis merchant?

By the creation of a national market for commercial paper, we will not only insure ourselves against money panics, but we will divert hundreds of millions of bank funds from speculation to business, and we will make easier and cheaper the exchange of our products.

This is My Birthday

C. Ledyard Blair

C. Ledyard Blair, one of the foremost of American capitalists, was born in Belvidere, N. J., July 16, 1867, and was graduated from Princeton University, in 1890. After leaving college he became connected with the New York banking house of which his father, DeWitt Clinton Blair, was the head. Mr. Blair is a director of the National Bank of Commerce of New York, the Lackawanna Steel Company, the St. Louis and Hannibal Railway, the Kewaunee, Green Bay and Western Railroad and of many other large corporations.

Congratulations to:

- Rev. William D. Mackenzie, president of the Hartford Theological Seminary since 1903, 53 years old today.
Captain Roald Amundsen, the noted Norwegian aviator and explorer who was the first to reach the South Pole, 40 years old today.
Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company and who is known as "the father of the American telephone system," 67 years old today.

Press Comment

To Fight Pellagra

Representative Faison of the Second congressional district has already plunged into advocacy of getting the government to help in the fight against pellagra in the South, following the action of the North Carolina State Medical Association, which made it plain that the United States should help find a way for checking the increase of this dreadful malady. He has introduced a bill in behalf of this work, and his measure should encounter no impediment.—Wilmington Dispatch.

Up Against It

Charles D. Hiles may be a good politician, but he has the job of his life now. Electing Mr. Taft will not be as easy as nominating him was.—New Bern Sun.

Too Much of a Nuisance

We scarcely think Mr. Clark will renew the houn dawg's license next year.—Columbia State.

Last Chance Gone

Champ Clark's friends say he will sweep the Democratic primaries in 1916. Sorry, Champ, but there isn't going to be any 1916. An Arkansas prophet has just positively announced uncompromisingly that the world is coming to an end in 1914.—Columbia State.

He Believes It

Mr. Wilson is one man who believes in tariff reform and will not make use of the issue simply to catch votes.—Durham Herald.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS
Representative Weeks, McCall and Gardner are expected to become candidates for the seat of United States Senator Crane of Massachusetts.

Governor Stubbs of Kansas, in announcing his candidacy for United States Senator, declares himself in favor of presidential preference primaries and the election of federal district judges by direct vote of the people.

Judge John C. Karel of Milwaukee, who has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor of Wisconsin at the September primary election, was once a famous football player at the University of Wisconsin.

Judge E. B. Dillon, the Republican nominee for governor of Ohio, is 43 years old and a native of Ironton, Ohio. After his admission to the bar he began the practice of law in Columbus and is now serving his third term on the bench.

Judge Charles R. Crisp, a parliamentarian to Speaker Clark and adjutant to Ollie James at the Baltimore convention, is seeking the congressional nomination in the new third district of Georgia. Judge Crisp is the son of the late Speaker Crisp.

Former Governor Malcolm R. Patterson has made formal announcement of his candidacy for the democratic nomination for United States Senator. He seeks the seat made vacant by the death of Sen. Robert L. Taylor. Governor Hooper appointed Newell Saunders, a Republican, to fill Taylor's unexpired term.

James W. Wadsworth, Jr., former speaker of the general assembly, continues as the strongest possibility for the nomination of the regular Republican governor of New York this fall. Others mentioned for the head of the ticket are President Jacob G. Schurman of Cornell University; District Attorney Whitman of New York City and former congressman William S. Benoit.

Judge William A. Massey, who was appointed by Governor Oddie of Nevada to fill out the unexpired term of the late George S. Nixon, in the United States Senate, was born in Ohio, raised in Illinois, received his education in Indiana and practiced law in California, and finally settled in Nevada, where for some years he has served as chief justice of the supreme court in that state.

The nominees for State senators, assemblymen and representatives in congress selected in the direct primary elections to be held in California in September are to meet in Sacramento four weeks after the primaries to choose the presidential electors to represent California in the electoral college. They will also draft the platform of their state campaigns and elect members of the State Central Committees.

However California may go politically at the presidential election in one woman from that state will sit November, it is expected that at least in the Electoral College. Two Los Angeles women, Miss Mary F. Foy a Democrat; and Mrs. Clara S. Foltz, Republican, are active in their respective parties and each has announced her candidacy for the Electoral College. The men of both parties are being urged to vote and thus give the State the honor of being the first to send a woman elector to Washington.

The Book Cure.

If all the earth is tinged with blue And cheer-up verses hold no cheer, If there is naught that seems to you To hint of things that are not drear, When life seems minus every rest— Perchance your home is less a cook- In short, when clouds weigh heaviest, Forget your troubles in a book.

When hopalong runs passing bad Upon the muddy Juarez track, When things for your pet nine are sad, When hitters seem to lose their knack, When that pet candidate of yours Seems headed for a quiet nook Just try the surest of all cures— Forget your troubles in a book.

We hold no real prescription right, Nor sport the affix of M. D. But these few lines we still indite Because we think they ought to be; Perchance they'll meet the gloomy eye Of some chap with that lost-dog look; To such once more we raise the cry: Forget your troubles in a book. —Denver Republican.

Editorial of Human Interest

THERE SHOULD BE A MONUMENT TO TIME

Pat II
The man who lasts fifty years lives about four hundred and thirty-eight thousand hours, sleep takes at least one third or one hundred and forty six thousand hours. The processes of eating, washing, dressing, getting up and going to bed take up at least three hours per day, or fifty-four thousand seven hundred and fifty hours. In addition to all this time cut out of you lives there is the time devoted to amusement, the time devoted to idle dreaming—and yet millions of people are wondering how they can pass the time. In every great city and in every small town there should be a monument to time. Young children should be taken to see it, clergymen should preach at the foot of it on the sacred importance of the few hours of activity given to us here. As the sands run through an hourglass, so you run your short race on this earth. That passing sand means the passing of your chances for making life worth while. Instead of thinking how you will pass time, cross-examine yourself and ask yourself how you have passed the time thus far?

What did you do last year—what use did you make of the time as it went by? What did you do yesterday? What are you going to do today? Do you possess a mind organized for practically unlimited thinking and studying. How many of your hours do you live as a thinking, studying man? How many do you live on a par with an ox chewing his cud in the field.

The ox does not waste his time. It is his business to grow fat and produce beef. He uses every hour. It is your business to use your time in the development of your mind, in dealing with the duties and problems that are put before you.

Every young man can make a success if he will really look upon each hour as an opportunity and cease to look upon the hours as useless things, to be thrown away.

One hour will give you a knowledge of some good book, or wisely spent, with a purpose of improving your health, it will make your brain more efficient and add to the value of all future hours.

If you have a horse, a bicycle, a gun, you feel that because you have it you ought to use it.

How much more should you feel that you ought to use your time, in using which you use your brain! Surely your brain is more important and more worthy of conscientious use than a bicycle or gun.

Talk to children on this question of time. Teach them that respect for time means respect for their own lives and success in life.

Wilson for President

BOOST THE WILSON-MARSHALL FUND

It has been made perfectly clear that the campaign fund which will finance the race of Wilson and Marshall will bear no taint of high finance.

The will be no $1,900,000 raised in Wall street to elect Wilson and Marshall.

The Morgan agents will not solicit and contribute to this campaign.

The steel trust will not aid in the election of the democratic candidates.

The beef trust will not contribute. The Harvester trust will not contribute.

The will be no personal envoys from Sea Girt to the Wall street lambs for contributions.

If the funds necessary to defray the legitimate expenses of the campaign are raised they will come in small contributions from the masses who desire to see politics purged, the progressive of integrity, ability and sincerity to the interests of the masses put into office.

The New is starting a campaign fund. Other papers are doing the same thing. And there seems to be a general willingness on the part of the public to contribute.

All funds received will be turned over to headquarters.

Help us to elect the Wilson-Marshall ticket.—Charlotte News.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

ZACHARY TAYLOR

ZACHARY TAYLOR, twelfth president of the United States, died 62 years ago today after only one year in the White House. His death was mourned by everybody except Mexico, from which he had removed several square feet of territory some years previous. As a scrapper Zach Taylor has not been excelled by any of our presidents except T. Roosevelt, who has just taken the hide of some of our most prominent bosses. He was a very compact man, being constructed somewhat on the lines of a square piano and had a concise form of speech, biting off his consonants and throwing them at the enemy in a raw state. Soon after he entered the army General Taylor was ordered to the frontiers, which was then about four miles west of Coney Island, and sent word to the Indians to keep off the grass. Chief Blackhawk retorted in a long speech about squatter sovereignty, but finally had to detail so many squads of pall-bearers that he was short a squorum in his effective force o he surrendered with a pained look. Shortly after this the United States decided to separate the state of Texas from Mexico and see if Mexico would miss anything. History relates that Mexico missed Texas at once and that she kept on missing everything she shot at during the war. General Taylor was sent over to see that Texas did not move, and before returning, found it necessary to slaughter a large number of inoffensive and odoriferous Greasers. His chief debate took place at Buena Vista, where an old gentleman named Santa Ana fell on him heavily with 21,000 men. Taylor had only 5,000 troops, but nearly all of them could hit the pavement if they jumped off the roof and Santa Ana was dispersed to such an extent that no attempt was made to collect his fragments. After thus spiking Texas to the map, General Taylor returned home and was injected into the White House in spite of his struggles. He was called "Old Rough and Ready," a nickname which fitting-

TO EASE UP MARQUARD.

Manager McGraw Will Not Work Star More Than Once a Week.

Marquard has been responsible for something like .38 per cent of all the games the Giants have played this season.

If he is worked as often in the future as he has been in the past the Rube will have pitched between fifty-five and sixty games when the season closes.

Assuming that fifty-six games represent his entire season's work, he has forty odd to pitch. Assuming further that he wins thirty of them—to do which he will have to finish the season at a .750 clip—he will knock off next fall with a record of having won forty-six games in one year.

He probably won't do it, not because he hasn't the ability, but because it isn't likely he will be given the opportunity. He is breaking into two out of every six games the Giants play now—the proportion is slightly greater than that, but no matter—and seems not to mind the work that is being heaped upon him.

But there are any number of reasons for believing that he will not go through the entire season at this rate. From present indications it will not be necessary to start him that often much longer.

The players believe that by August the Giants will be so far in front that the second string fingers will be called upon oftener while Marquard and Matty take things easy, pitching only two games each, say, out of nine or ten.

NAPS BIG DISAPPOINTMENT.

Cleveland Team Under Davis Has Been Flat Failure This Season.

The great disappointment to date has been the Cleveland team. Having finished third in the last race under the guidance of George Stovall, an inexperienced manager, it was believed that with the reins in Harry Davis' hands the team would show to much better advantage. Then, too, a young pitching staff which had more than held its own last year could be figured to improve, and if ever conditions looked bright for Cleveland to have a team up and fighting for honors it was this spring.

But what has happened? Davis has proved himself anything but competent. His players seem not to put forth their best efforts for him, and he has shown neither spirit nor interest in his work. Not once since the campaign started has he appeared on the coaching lines, and while it is true, of course, that other managers have been successful without donning a uniform, yet conditions in Cleveland, where listlessness has always predominated on the ball team, were such that Davis would have made a better impression had he displayed some real energy.

clanged musically against the hidden treasure, never a forlorn beauty in distress, not so much as chapter one of the Golden Book offered its dazzling first page. George lost some confidence.

Two or three times a woman looked into the young man's mind, and in his guilelessness they effected sundry holes in his letter of credit, but left his soul singularly untouched. The red corpuscle, his father's gift, though it lay dormant, subconsciously erected barriers. He was innocent, but he was no fool. That one year taught him the lesson, rather cheaply, too. If there was any romance in life, it came uninvited, and if courted and sought was as quick on the wing as that erstwhile poetic must.

The year passed, and while he had not wholly given up the quest, the practical George agreed with the romantic Percival to shelve it indefinitely. He returned to New York with thirty-two pounds sterling out of the original thousand, a fact that rejuvenated his paternal parent by some ten years.

"Jane, that boy is all right. Percival Algernon could not kill a boy like that."

"Do you mean to infer that it ever could?" Sometimes a qualm wrinkled her conscience. Her mother's heart told her that her son ought not to be shy and bashful, that it was not in the nature of his blood to suspect ridicule where there was none. Perhaps she had handicapped him with those names; but it was too late now to admit of this, and useless, since it would not have remedied the evil.

Jones hemmed and hawed for a space. "No," he answered; "but I was afraid he might try to live up to it; and no Percival Algernon who lived up to it could put his nose down to a Shah Abbas and tell how many knots it had to the square inch. I'll start him in on the job tomorrow."

Whereupon the mother sat back dreamily. Now, where was the girl worthy of her boy? Monumental question, besetting every mother, from Eve down, Eve, whose trials in this direction must have been heartrending!

George left the cellar in due time, and after that he went up the ladder in bounds, on his own merit, mind you, for his father never stirred a hand to boost him. He took the interest in rugs that turns a buyer into a collector; it became a fascinating pleasure rather than a business. He became invaluable to the house, and acquired some fame as a judge and an appraiser. When the chief-buyer retired George was given the position, with a itinerary that carried him half way round the planet once a year, to Greece, Turkey, Persia, Arabia, and India, the lands of the genii and the bottles, of arabesques, of temples and tombs, of many-colored turbans and flowing robes and distracting tongues. He walked and always in a kind of mental enchantment.

The suave and elusive Oriental, with his sharp practices, found his match in this pleasant young man, who knew the history of the very wools and cottons and silks woven in a rug or carpet. So George prospered, became known in strange places, by strange peoples; and saw romance, light of foot and eager of eye, pass and repass; learned that romance did not essentially mean falling in love or rescuing maidens from burning houses and wrecks; that, on the contrary, true romance was kaleidoscopic, having more brilliant facets than a diamond; and that the man who begins with nothing and ends with something is more wonderful than any excursion recounted by Sinbad or any tale by Scheherazade. But he still hoped that the iridescent goddess would some day touch his shoulder and lead him into that maze of romance so peculiar to his own fancy.

And then into this little world of business and pleasure came death and death again, leaving him alone and with a twisted heart. Riches mattered little, and the sounding title of vice-president still less. It was with a distinct shock that he realized the mother and the father had been with him so long that he had forgotten to make other friends. From one thing to another he turned in hope to soothe the smart, to heal the wound; and after a time he drifted, as all shy, intelligent and imaginative men drift who are friendless, into the silent and intimate comradeship of inanimate things, such as jewels, ivories, old metals, rare woods and ancient embroideries, and perhaps more comforting than all these, good books.

The proper tale of how the aforesaid iridescent goddess jostled (for it scarce may be said that she led) him into a romance lacking neither comedy nor tragedy, now begins with a trifling bit of retrospection. One of those women who were not good and who looked into the clear pool of the boy's mind saw the harmless longing there, and made note, hoping to find profit by her knowledge when the pertinent day arrived. She was a woman so pleasing, so handsome, so adroit, that many a man, older and wiser than George, found her mesh too strong for him. Her plan matured, suddenly and brilliantly, as projects of men and women of her class and caliber without variation do.

Late one December afternoon (to be precise, 1909), George sat on the sea-terrace of the Hotel Semiramis in Cairo. A book lay idly upon his knees. It was one of those yarns in which something was happening every other minute. As adventures go, George had never had a real one in all his twenty-eight years, and he

Our Special Washington Letter COMMENT ON CURRENT EVENTS

Washington, July 15.—Representative Pujo, chairman of the House committee investigating the alleged "money trust," is experiencing a great deal of trouble in obtaining returns from national and private banks of questions asked by the committee concerning financial relations of banks in various sections with certain concerns in Wall street.

A poll of the banks in this city, which is fairly representative of other communities shows that out of 32 financial institutions only two have complied with the request made by the House committee for statements of their business. According to these bankers most of the financial institutions of the country are awaiting further developments before taking a stand in the matter.

Bankers generally have closely followed the controversy between Representative Pujo and Robert L. Fryer, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., who flatly refused to furnish the desired facts on the ground the committee had no right to demand them. Mr. Fryer has not been forced to furnish them information yet, and until he is, members of financial concerns here say, that bankers generally will take no steps.

The congressional committee has taken no action in the matter. According to Representative Pujo they are awaiting the action of Congress on an amendment to the National Banking Laws which was introduced to give the committee power to get all the information it desired from national and other banks. This amendment now is pending before the Senate Finance Committee. Whether it will be reported to the Senate favorably remains to be seen. Much antagonism, however, has developed against it, associations and financial concerns protests having been filed by banking from Maine to California.

The blanks sent out by the House committee call for complete information upon every phase of a bank's business. The information asked for included business up to the close of April 30, 1912. Included was a request for the names of all financial institutions affiliated with each bank and a statement of all mergers of institutions which may have been made to build up each bank.

Attorneys have been engaged to rein their opinion the committee has absolutely no power to force their while not openly opposing the desires of the Pujo committee, have declared that furnish the information unless they so desire and that they will send no information or statement until something further is done.

The Bankers Association of the District of Columbia, one of the institutions first served by the Pujo committee with blanks, has decided not to take any action on the matter, preferring to let individual banks treat with the committee as they see fit.

H. H. McKee, cashier of the First National Capital Bank and recently elected president of the District Bankers' Association, stated that the association will take no stand in the matter. Personally, Mr. McKee is of the opinion that the Pujo committee has absolutely no right under law to force any bank or trust company to disclose the details of its business.

At the Capitol, the same general situation is evident. The Pujo committee at present is absolutely without authority to compel bankers, trust companies or other financial institutions to fill out the blanks and send them to the committee. Its powers are so curtailed that a hearing such as was contemplated at the beginning when the House voted for $25,000 to conduct such an inquiry, is impossible. The committee, although well supplied with counsel has no means at its disposal of obtaining direct evidence. It can send out detectives, agents or any other kind of emissaries, but it is handicapped by not having authority to compel banks to disclose its general business books.

Without this information, it is utterly impossible to get at the "core" of the matter, is the opinion of a member of the House.

"What this committee needs," he declared, "is the backing of Congress, the moral support of both the Senate and House; otherwise this inquiry will be farcical and non-productive."

"If we summon J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, heads of various New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia banking concerns, do you think we could get much real information out of them if they were disposed not to give any. I don't think so. But if Congress empowers this committee to require banks and trust companies as well as others financial institutions to make returns then we should have such information as will form the ground work of real investigation."

If the Senate authorize and pass the House amendment, Congressman Pujo is authority for the statement that the "money trust" hearing will be an investigation that will show up the rottenness of Wall street. He is of the opinion that there is such a thing as a "money trust" and that certain banks in New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh and other cities are part of a vast system extending from coast to coast. Chairman Pujo has decided views on the subject and takes issue with Attorney General Wickersham of the Department of Justice who says that after investigation the Department of Justice has been unable to unearth any signs that a "Money Trust" exists.

Dr. John M. Gle, dean of the Medical School of Dartmouth College, is being boomed for the Republican nomination for Governor of New Hampshire.

Midsummer Weddings—Nature Offers Lavish Decorations—Taste Better Than Money

If I could have my choice, if I were a girl about to be married I would select any of the summer months for the event and the country for the place.

Nature gives so lavishly in the matter of floral accessories, that no winter bride with a big church wedding and staggering florists' bills, can with all the outlay even approach what can be done without money and without price if the woods and fields are near.

One of the loveliest weddings I ever attended was in a little ivy covered church situated high on a bluff overlooking the Hudson. The bride's girl to a wonderful white shrine of daisies—friends has converted the church into a garden.

As the bride's name was Margaret the daisies or Marguerites, as the French call them, were especially appropriate.

The bride and her four attendants, the latter in very delicate green gowns and white hats, carried immense bunches of Queen Anne's Lace and feathery ferns. Now do you all know what this Queen Anne's Lace is? I know many who read an account of the wedding were ignorant of the fact that this high sounding title was only another name for the wild carrot which farmers despise, but which in its exquisite lacey pattern has no rival for beauty in the floral world—if fragrance is eliminated.

Then again, look what the hostess can do in the way of luncheons and teas when the buttercups, the pond lilies, the wild asters and the golden rod in turn offer themselves as the motif in color scheme and arrangement.

One of the loveliest luncheon tables I ever saw was decorated only with ferns. With white linen, white china and clusters of white tulle in all loops set in the big mass of ferns that acted as the center piece, the impression was one of exquisite elegance, coolness and simplicity.

It is well to bear in mind that taste counts more than the ample pocket book, and if this commodity is coupled with a wealth of nature's treasures, no woman need grieve because she has not the Astor plate, the Belfast linen, or the Copeland china with which to set her table.

For any occasion, ranging from the gamut from weddings to church fairs, strawberry festivals, teas or lawn fetes, the country is the greatest help in securing those artistic effects for which the city dweller has to pay exorbitantly, and then only obtain an artificial beauty that merely apes the more wonderful realness of unfocused natural beauty.

Late Summer Millinery

The lingerie hat has appeared in our midst as fresh and dainty as fine embroidery and cobweb lace can make it—not the floppy infantile lingerie hat, so different for an adult to wear, but simply following the lines of the shepherdess. These are seldom transparent, the embroidery or lace being used over the straw or else on a chiffon or net foundation. One model is a straw hat having lace used for the brim edge and this supported only by wires. To be carried with these hats, the natural accompaniment, too—a lingerie gown, are being shown the daintiest lingerie parasols, not only very useful to protect one from the fiercest sun, but charming nevertheless and quite practical when lined with plain Dresden silk, which they frequently are.

Closely akin to the lingerie hat is the hat veiled or in part with daintily flowered chiffon or figured net. The writer saw a leghorn partially covered with pale pink chiffon, its motif being small pink buds. The trimming was extremely simple, being a band of pink picot ribbon tightly banding the base of the crown and bowed at the side and ruffles of narrow Valenciennes, two lying on the brim at the edge of the chiffon and two applied around the head-size, producing a cap effect which is very fetching. Another hat having the frilled under cap effect was the twine colored straw, faced with pink chiffon gathered into an inch wide ruffle around the head size. A wreath of ribbon flowers and green velvet foliage, each flower being one of the beautiful shades, was applied flat against the underbrim. The hat was large and round and had a four inch crown, slightly sunken, round the base of which was a band of primrose velvet ribbon in acant drapery and finished by a bow at the left edge one end of which was drawn over the edge.

In the present modes, despite the talk of scarcity of trimming, may be found much to encourage the milliner.—The Millinery Trade Review.

"What become of that train you used to take into the city in the morning?" asked the city man.

"Oh, it's been taken off," replied the suburbanite.

"You must miss it?"

"Not as often as I used to"—Yonkers Statesman.

Harry Thaw Enjoys Some Freedom

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jul 15.—Harry K. Thaw, who is confined in jail sanitary hearing, is being allowed on here, awaiting the outcome of his considerable freedom under the chaperonage of Sheriff Doyle and Warden Hill. He goes out daily for a cross country tramp or an automobile ride and every morning has a long visit with his mother who is staying at a local hotel.

Thaw is less communicative than during his former stay and on the daily automobile trip usually passes the time in smoking and viewing the scenery. He is an enthusiastic walker and frequently his exercise takes this form. With Warden Hill he went for a walk of about ten miles in the country nearby on Saturday. Yesterday he had a long automobile ride with Sheriff Doyle.

In the hospital ward in the jail his principal diversion is the solving of the various bridge problems which appear in the papers. He has been a student of bridge for several years.

Very few persons recognize Thaw on his walks or automobile rides.

The locomotive firemen are also asked for a wage increase amounting to more than $20,000,000 annually and the railroad interests say that there will be other demands by trainmen following the engineers' award.
