ADVISE WILSON NOT TO RESIGN

Party Leaders Urge Him to Retain Office TO ANNOUNCE DECISION SOON

Gov. Marshall's Visit to the Little White House Deferred Until Democrats in Congress Have Been Visited by Underwood

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 17.—Whether Woodrow Wilson will resign his office as Governor of New Jersey or retain his presidential campaign will be known definitely within a short time, perhaps within a few days.

The governor said today that he expected soon to set at rest speculation upon this point.

Edward E. Grosscup, Democratic state chairman and other New Jersey leaders, have been foremost in urging him not to resign. Their views have been strengthened by those of party leaders outside the state, and it is believed that the governor will decide to hold his office at least until the first of the year, if he is elected.

His decision, he says, will be known after he has consulted further with friends. The governor said today that he had been so pressed for time by his numerous callers he thought he would have to steal away to write his speech of acceptance. He has not begun it yet, and is anxious to start soon and have plenty of time to give nature thought to the platform and the issues he wishes to discuss. He hopes to have it completed ten days before his formal notification of nomination on August 7.

It developed today that Governor Wilson would defer his invitation to Governor Marshall to visit Sea Girt until after the Democrats in Congress come to see him here next Saturday. The nominee said today that he wanted to have a long talk with his running mate and that he would be unable to do this until the 200 or more Democratic representatives and senators had made their visit.

Governor Wilson's list of what he calls debatable states which formed the theme of his talk with Mr. Underwood at Trenton yesterday is by no means complete. The Governor said today that there were many states whose political status had not been taken up, among them being Massachusetts, which he regarded as extremely debatable and Wisconsin. The latter which was reported last night as having been removed from the list of uncertain states, he said, today had been placed aside for discussion later. At the same time he thought that his chances of carrying the state, based on reports of party leaders, were excellent.

So far as Massachusetts is concerned the Governor said that there was no reason to believe that the success of Governor Fosco could not be duplicated in a presidential campaign.

William F. McCombs, the new national chairman and the group of other leaders with whom he and the governor will discuss the proposed personnel of the committee to direct the campaign are expected here tomorrow afternoon.

Scout Boys Enjoying Camp Life

RUMLEY HAMMOCK, N. C., July 16.—"Three o'clock and all is well". That tells the story in a nutshell, for it was about that hour the boats arrived and camp pitched on Rumley Hammock. But a little more detail may be gratifying to the home folks who, judging from some before-sailing expressions, are a little anxious to hear from the boys.

It is a little fortunate that the hour of starting was changed to 6 p. m. instead of 4 a. m. as first intended, as the former put us here in broad day light, while the latter, the trip being rather long for a single day, would have made arrival after night and pitching tents, swinging hammocks and putting camp in shape by nothing but lantern light and lit-

WHITMAN THINKS "SYSTEM" DID IT

Rosenthal Murder Charged To Organization AUTO OWNERS ARE TOMBS

Sensational Charges Made Against Gotham Police in Connection With Shooting of Gambler Who Was to Give Evidence

NEW YORK, July 17.—Further arrests in the murder case of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler who was shot down and killed early yesterday, a few hours before he was to make additional charges that the police and gamblers were in collusion, are expected to disclose whether the police or gamblers directly instigated the plot to kill Rosenthal.

A score or more of plain clothes men are searching the city for several men whom District Attorney Whitman learned were connected with the shooting. After several hours of grilling, Louis Libby and William Shapiro, who owned the motor car that was used in the killing, broke down and told all they knew of the murder.

District Attorney Whitman believes that the police system as it is familiarly known, was largely, if not directly, responsible for the slaying of Rosenthal, who had professed his intention to make further charges that certain of the police were grafting on gamblers.

District Attorney Whitman said tonight that he would proceed with the grand jury investigation into the charges made by Rosenthal.

It was reported that Rosenthal gave the public prosecutor the names of three men who had to be seen by the gamblers before they could do business.

One of them is said to be a former city official, another a police department official and a third holding a clerical position in the police department.

A fourth arrest was made today when Louis Webber known in the underworld as Bridgey, was brought to police headquarters.

Webber, according to the police, used to run a gambling house in opposition to Rosenthal about three years ago, and had incurred the murdered gambler's enmity. While the feud between the two men was on Webber's home was dynamited, the police said, and his jaw broken by a man known as Tough Tony incidents, which they said were lead by Webber's friends at the door of Rosenthal.

Webber was put through a severe grilling at police headquarters, the result of which was not disclosed.

He was then taken to the coroner's office.

Police Commissioner Waldo sent a letter to District Attorney Whitman today, in which he urged that a complete investigation be made by him without any further delay of the allegations made in the press that members of the police force have been in partnership with gamblers and the statement that you are alleged to have made publicity that members of

IF the Democratic candidate is elected to the presidency the next mistress of the White House will be a woman keenly alive to the issues of the day and with a lively interest in all public questions. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson believes that—to use her own words—"the successful wife is one who meets her husband at every turn; she must be his intellectual complement as well as his companion." During Dr. Wilson's term as governor of New Jersey she has accompanied him on his visits to public institutions, showing a particular interest in the asylums for the feeble minded. Governor and Mrs. Wilson have three daughters, one of whom is specializing in the study of music, another in that of art, while the third, following her mother's bent, is engaged in social settlement work.

SWARTZ TOOK HIS FATHER'S ADVICE

Confessed Murderer of Little Julia Connors Commits Suicide by Drowning in River

NEW YORK, July 17.—The body of a man found floating Monday in the Hudson river and taken to a morgue in Hoboken was today identified as that of Nathan Swartz, indicted for the murder of the child, Julia Connors, in the Bronx on July 7.

The identification was made by Frank Alexander, Swartz's brother-in-law.

Swartz confessed to his father a few days ago that he killed Julia Connors and was told to commit suicide. Swartz was indicted yesterday when his father, Samuel Swartz, appeared before the grand jury and acknowledged that his son had confessed to him that he had killed the child.

The father stated that he had told his son that the only thing for him to do was to go out and commit suicide. Swartz said further that he believed his son had taken his advice. The police, however, today had secured a

What is a Christian?

The Reflector has been informed that the service in the Presbyterian church on Sunday night, July 23, will be given to a consideration of the question: "What is a Christian?"

Because the Reflector believes the question to be one of interest both to those who are and those who are not Christians, and therefore wide in its appeal, we invite our readers to send us written definitions.

Those answers which are considered best by the editors will be turned over to Mr. Lancaster, who has agreed to read them at the service.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS KILLED BY TRAIN

ACCIDENT HAPPENS NEAR PETERSBURG

Collision With Train Followed Instantly by Death of Elder of Two Girls Occupying Buggy

PETERSBURG, Va., July 17.—The Misses Everly, aged 14 and 11 years of Chesterfield county, Va., enroute today to Petersburg in a buggy were killed by the Norfolk and Western Railway's Richmond and Norfolk Cannon aBil train while attempting to cross the Atlantic Coast Line Railway tracks at a point about one mile north of Petersburg.

The older girl and the horse drawing the wagon were instantly killed. The younger girl died in the depot at Petersburg after having been removed from the train which struck her to be hastened to a hospital.

The accident occurred at a point where a large number of trees obscure the railway track until those using the urnpike are within fifty feet of the rails.

ductor Hawk was the train bound to Norfolk and in charge of Engineer Noble and Conductor Hawks was owing about thirty miles an hour when the accident occurred. The train crew was much distressed at the accident and were all badly broken up when the Cannon Ball came into the Norfolk Union station forty minutes late.

The girls were daughters of John Everly, a Chesterfield county farmer. Their names were Blanche and Ruth. The buggy was thrown fifty feet and totally destroyed.

WILLIAM H. TAFT WORTH $1,665,000

At Least His Election Costed That Much

HE REFUSED DUPONT'S HELP

Of the Sum of $1,655,518.27, $620,150 Were Collected and Disbursed by State Organizations, According to National Chairman

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock today told the Senate committee investigating campaign contributions of 1904 and 1908 that the records of the fund used in President Taft's election as filed in Albany, N. Y., were absolutely correct and that he could not supplement those reports by testimony.

Mr. Hitchcock said the total collected through the various agencies of the committee in 1908 was $1,655,518.27 Of that amount $620,150 was collected in various states and handled by the local state committees. The latter sum never was turned into the treasury of the Republican national committee, although that committee kept account of it.

Mr. Hitchcock promised to furnish the investigating committee with copies of the financial records of the campaign.

No contribution was received from a corporation, Mr. Hitchcock said, because Congress had just passed a law prohibiting it. He told of the only near contribution he could remember having rejected.

It was offered by General T. Coleman-du Pont, of Delaware, then a member of the Republican executive committee, actively assisting in the management of the campaign and amounting to $20,000.

He turned it over to the treasurer, Geo. R. Sheldon, began Mr. Hitchcock, when I learned of it, I sent for Mr. Dupont and told him that I did not think we would accept it because the government has a civil suit against a corporation in which he was to return it and he did so.

Senator Paynter asked if this contribution was then not given to some other fund.

Mr. Hitchcock replied General du Pont declared he felt he was doing his part and asked if he could not give the money in some way. Mr. Hitchcock said he had replied in the negative.

I am positive he did not contribute it to any other fund, he added, because I have talked to General duPont about it since the campaign. He said that when the fund was returned he considered he had given it to the cause and placed it on special deposit.

It came in handy, remarked Sen. Oliver on the side.

Is he a Roosevelt man?, inquired Sen. Paynter.

The question was unanswered. Mr. Hitchcock insisted that with the exception of about 25 all the contributions were below $5,000.

We figured that the more persons we could get to invest the more interest they would take in the success of the venture, explained the former chairman.

Before the system of collecting the money by finance committees organized in each state was put in operation Mr. Hitchcock said, "fortunately" friends of the party came forward with large contributions.

The first friends he mentioned in that connection were Chas. P. Taft, brother of Pres. Taft, who contributed $50,000; William Nelson, Cromwell, $25,000, Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, $25,000; Andrew Carnegie, $20,000, Frank Munsey, $10,000; Whitelaw Reid, $10,000 and General Corbin, for a number of persons, $10,000.

During the examination Mr. Hitchcock remembered that a number of banks contributed $5,000 each, and that they might have been interested in corporations, but he thought at any rate that was a small contribution of them.

DEMOCRATS WIN THEIR DEMAND

Force Republican Party in Tariff Bills

WILL HAVE READING OF BILL

Democrats Headed by Simons Promise to Use Every Device to Block all Business Unless Republicans Reconsider Decision

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Democratic forces in the Senate today practically won their demand for consideration of the remaining tariff bills and the excise tax bill.

This was the result of conferences on the floor at the opening of a Democratic filibuster.

Senator Simmons in charge of the tariff bills, told the Republican leaders the Democrats would resort to every parliamentary device to delay all business unless assured there could be a vote on the tariff measures. He told the Democratic side stood solid behind him.

Senator Smooth immediately called a number of other Republican leaders in conference in the Republican cloakroom. So far as they could the Republican senators present agreed to accede to the Democratic demand with the understanding that the Democrats abandon their filibuster and agree to allow the tariff bills to go to the ballot after comparatively brief consideration.

The threatened filibuster immediately brought on an informal conference with Senators Simmons, Bacon and other Democrats. Republican progressives were also drawn in. It was thought likely that some arrangement would be made for action upon at least one of the tariff bills.

Senator Simmons declared before the opening of today's session that the Senate would find it difficult to conclude its business at an early date, unless its business unless the tariff bills were permitted to come to a vote.

Defeated in his effort to bring up the wool bill, Senator Simmons objected to the request of Senator Warren that formal reading of the big appropriation bill be dispensed with. This was the first move to of the threatened filibuster.

Further evidence of a plan to delay proceedings was seen in the subsequent objections of Senator Reed, who discovered that the Senate reading clerk was following the time-honored custom of turning two or three pages at a time and insisted upon a full reading of the measure.

Bound Over to the Superior Court

To answer the charge of shooting a dog, preferred by Mrs. H. T. Bateman, ex-night policeman R. A. Forbes, appeared this morning before Mayor Wooten.

According to Mr. Forbes' story, his little boy came to him last night crying and told him that Mrs. Bateman's dog had bitten him. Mr. Forbes would not believe him but upon examination he found out that what the child told him was true. Thereupon Mr. Forbes walked up to Mrs. Bateman's house and coming across the dog on the sidewalk opposite the house shot him.

Mrs. Bateman testified that as far as she knew the dog had never done any harm and according to her counsel, Mr. N. W. Outlaw, while she was sorry the thing had happened she felt no bitterness towards Mr. Forbes.

However, Mr. Forbes was bound over to superior court, Mrs. Bateman and Mrs. Maggie Baker to appear as witnesses.

was even now on his way to his room. The urban gentleman nodded. Then, with a finger slim and well-trimmed, he trailed up and down the guest-list.

"Ha! I see that you have the Duke of What-d'ye-call from Germany here. I'll give you my card. Send it up to Mr. Ryanne. No hurry. I shall be in again after dinner."

He hustled off toward the door. He was purdy, well-fed, and decently dressed, the sort of a man who, when he moved in any direction, created the impression that he had an important engagement somewhere else or was paring minutes from time-tables. For a man in his business it was a clever expedient, deceiving all but those who knew him. He hesitated at the door, however, as if he had changed his mind in the twenty-odd paces it took to reach it. He stared for a long period at the elderly gentleman who was watching the feluccas on the river through the window. The white mustache and imperial stood out in crisp relief against the ruddy sunburn on his face. If he was aware of this scrutiny on the part of the purdy gentleman, he gave not the least sign. The revolving door spun round, sending a puff of outdoor air into the lounging-room. The elderly gentleman then smiled, and applied his thumb and forefinger to the waxen point of his imperial.

In the intervening time Mr. Ryanne entered his room, threw the bundle on the bed, sat down beside it, and read his letter. Shadows and lights moved across his face; frowns that hardened it, smiles that mellowed it. Women hold the trick of writing letters. Do they hate, their thoughts flash and burn from line to line. Do they love, 'tis lettered music. Do they conspire, the breadth of their imagination is without horizon. At best, man can indite only a polite business letter, his love-letters were adjudged long since a maudlin collection of loose sentences. In this letter Mr. Ryanne found the three parts of life.

"She's a good general; but hang these brimstone efforts of hers. She talks too much of heart. For my part, I prefer to regard it as a mere physical function, a pump, a motor, a power that gives action to the legs, either in coming or in going, more especially in going." He laughed. "Well, hers is the inspiration and hers is the law. And to think that she could plan all this on the spur of the moment, down to the minutest detail! It's a science." He put the letter away, slid out his legs and glared at the dusty tips of his shoes. "The United Romance and Adventure Company, Ltd., of New York, London, and Paris. She has the greatest gift of all, the sense of humor."

He rose and opened his kit-bag doubtfully. He rummaged about in the depths and at last straightened up with a mild oath.

"Not a pair of cuffs in the whole outfit, not a shirt, not a collar. Oh, well, when a man has to leave Bagdad the way I did, over the back fence, so to speak, linen doesn't count."

He drew down his cuffs, detached and reversed them, he turned his folding collar wrong-side out, and used the under side of the foot-rug as a shoe-polisher. It was the ingenious procedure of a man who was used to being out late nights, who made all things answer all purposes. This rapid and singularly careless toilet completed, he centered his concern upon the more vital matter of finances. He was close to the nadir: four sovereigns, a florin, and a collection of battered coppers that would have tickled the pulse of an amateur numismatist.

"No vintage to-night, my boy; no long, fat Havana, either. A bottle of stout and a few rags of plug-cut; that's the pace we'll travel this evening. The United Romance and Adventure Company is not listed at present. If it was, I'd sell a few shares on my own hook. The kind Lord knows that I've stock enough and to spare." He laughed again, but without the leaven of humor. "When the fool-killer snatches up the last fool, let rogues look to themselves; and fools are getting scarcer every day."

"Perceval Algernon! O age of poets! I wonder, does he wear high collars and spats, or has she plumbed him accurately? She is generally right. But a man changes some in seven years. I'm an authority when it comes to that. Look what's happened to me in seven years! First, Horace, we shall dine, then we'll smoke our pipe in the billiard-room, then we'll softly approach Percival Algernon and introduce him to Sinbad. This independent excursion to Bagdad was a stroke on my part; it will work into the general plan as smoothly as if it had been grooved for the part. Sinbad, I might just as well have assumed that name: Horace Sinbad, sounds well and looks well." He mused in silence, his hand gently rubbing his chin; for he did possess the trick of talking aloud, in a low monotone, a narrative acquired during periods of loneliness, when the sound of his own voice had succeeded in steadying his tottering mind.

What a woman, what a wife, she would have been to the right man! Odd thing, a man can do almost anything but direct his affections; they must be drawn. She was not for him; nay, not even on a desert isle. Doubtless he was a fool. In time she would have made him a rich man. Alack! It was always the one we pursued that we loved and never the one that pursued us.

"I'm afraid of her; and there you are. There isn't a man living who has gone back of that Mona Lisa smile of hers. If she was the last woman and I was the last man, I don't say." He hunted for a cigarette, but failed to find one. "Almost at the bottom, boy; the winter of our discontent, and no sun of York to make it glorious.

Twenty-four hundred at cards, and to lose it like a tyro! Wallace has taught me all he knows, but I'm a booby. Twenty-four hundred, firm's money. It's a falling of mine, the firm's money. But, damn it all, I can't cheat a man at cards; I'd rather cut his throat."

He found his pipe, and a careful search of the corners of his coat-pockets revealed a meager pipeful of tobacco. He picked out the little balls of wool, the ground-coffee, the cloves, and pushed the charge home into the crusted bowl of his briar.

"To the devil with economy! A pint of burgundy and a perfecter if they hale us to jail for it. I'm dead tired. I've seen three corners in hell in the past two months. I'm going as far as four sovereigns will take me. . . . Fortune Chedsoye." His blue eyes became less hard and his mouth less defiant. "I repeat, the heart should be nothing but a pump. Otherwise it gets in the way, becomes an obstruction, a bottomless pit. Will-power, that's the ticket. I can face a lion without an extra beat, I can face the various countenances of death without an additional flutter; and yet, here's a girl who, when I see her or think of her, sends the pulse soaring from seventy-seven up to eighty-four. Bad business; besides, it's so infernally unfashionable. It's hard work for a man to keep his balance 'twixt the devil and the deep, blue sea; Giocconda on one side and Fortune on the other. Giocconda throws open windows and doors at my approach; but Fortune locks and bars hers, nor knocks at mine. That's the way it always goes.

"If a man could only go back ten years and take a few start. 'Ass!' bailing his fist at the reflection in the mirror. "Snivel and whine over the bed of your own making. You had your opportunity, but you listened to the popping of champagne-corks, the mutter of cards, the inane drivel of chorus-ladies. You had a decent college record, too. Bah! What a gulleless fool you were! You ran on, didn't you, till you found your neck in the loop at the end of the rope? And perhaps that soft-footed, estimable brother of yours didn't yank it taut as a hangman's? You heard the codicil; into one ear and out the other. Even then you had your chance; patience for two short years, and a million. No, a thousand times no. You knew what you were about, empty-headed fool! And today, two pennies for a dead man's eyes."

He dropped his fist dejectedly. Where had the first step begun? And where would be the last? In some drab corner, possibly; drink, morphine, or starvation; he'd never have the courage to finish it with a bullet. He was terribly bitter. Everything worth while seemed to have slipped through his fingers, his pleasure-loving fingers.

"Come, come, Horace; buck up. Still the ruby kindles in the vine, No

THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1912

THE TENT CITY OF THE SOUTH.

Sometime ago San Francisco was shaken off the map and heaps of rubbish played the part of the ashes from which the modern Phoenix (Boss Abe Reuff) started in a career of graft that finally led him to a place where they cut their hair like "Duke" Dupree used to wear it at the beginning of the roast-the-poor-working-sucker season. Reuff is in St. Quentin undergoing a severe attack of justice; due to punishment for his greed. But that's another story.

Immediately after the quake and following fire, the city by the Golden Gate, looked like a village of prattling wops, such was the variety of shifty dwellings that sprung from the smoking ruins. Everything that was good enough to sleep under was snatched, rigged up and called home. From the glowing magazine accounts Frisco must have been a "Bird".

Several years later, through the kindness of the progressive "C. T." Munford it has been possible for Greenvillians to appreciate the predicament of the Frisco tent dwellers.

Any old time you have nothing to do (cussing the heat excepted) get around the lot where the Hotel De Luxe is going to be erected. Men are there hard at laor (or at hard labor, if ou prefer) peeling bricks from the demolished Proctor stores. Old King Sol has been raising blisters in the necks of the unfortunate workers as big as pigeons' eggs. In other words to avoid this little "concretepms" (which word is French for misfortune) the "cullod" gents have rigged up complexion protectors of a great variety. Umbrellas nailed to poles; blankets artistically draped aroundn overhanging boards; bed-sheets carefully hoisted above heads; in fact everything that can keep the sun from eating its way right through the epidermis has been gathered, carried there and hoisted.

Just get around and you'll appreciate it.

RED CROSS ACTIVITIES

Seventy-five million Red Cross Seals are now being printed for the holiday sale of these anti-tuberculosis stickers in 1912. The National Association for the study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which in co-operation with the American Red Cross will conduct the sale, makes this announcement today and states further that the outlook this year is bright for a larger sale than ever before.

The seal this year is to be the best of its kind that the Red Cross has ever issued. The design is in three colors, red, green and gray. A Santa Claus head in the three colors is shown in the center surrounded by a holly wreath. In each corner is a small red cross. The seal bears the greeting "Merry Christmas. Happy New Year, American Red Cross, 1912"

The campaign for selling Red Cross Seals will be carried on in practically every state and territory in the United States and even in Porto Ric, the Canal Zone, Hawaii and Philippine Island. No less than 100,000 volunteer agents, including department, drug and other kind of stores, motion picture theatres, individuals and others, will be engaged in the work. Before the sale is completed, it is expected that at least 100,000,000 seals will have been printed and distributed, besides several million posters, display cards and other forms of advertising literature.

Last year over 32,000,000 seals were sold; in 1910 over 31,000,000; in 1909 about 23,000,000; and in 1908, the first year of the sale only 13,500,000. In all, the sale in the four years has realized nearly $1,000,000 for the anti-tuberculosis campaign, since all of the money from the movement goes for the prevention of consumption.

New York state sold the most seals in 1911, disposing of 6,356,368; Ohio came next with 3,500,480; Wisconsin third with 2,913,144 and Illinois fourth with 2,101,632. Texas showed the greatest percentage of gain, having increased its sale from 100,000 in 1910 to over 1,250,000 in 1911. Indiana showed the second greatest gain, with an increase from 683,756 in 1910 to 1,245,545.

This is My Birthday

Rose Pastor Stokes

Rose Pastor Stokes, the famous settlement worker of New York, was born at Augustava, Suwalk, Russia, July 18, 1879. At the age of four she accompanied her parents to London, whence they fled to escape Russian oppression and it was in the Jewish Free School in t hgetaerawift hC Free School in the great English metropolis that she received her education. In 1890 the young woman came to the United States and for three years after her arrival she worked as a cigar maker in Cleveland. While thus employed she studied hard to improve her education. In 1901 she became a contributor to a Jewish daily newspaper in New York city and a few years later she was employed as an assistant editor. In this position she first attracted public attention by her able discussion of sociological problems. The young writer embraced Socialism and rapidly rose to a position of leadership. In 1905 she was married to J. G. Phelps, a wealthy young settlement worker and also a believer in Socialism.

Congratulations to:

NEW BERN SUN:—The board did right in appoint a meat and milk inspector, and it is now up to the board to give him there support. He will be of little service unless the board helps him out.

ROXBORO COURIER.—"Kitchen gains votes by Stateville speech" is the headlines in the Charlotte Chronicle. Yes and if the governor can be a workman, mistaking a heard by the heard by the people he will gain so many that the race for the Senatorship will only be a one-sided affair.

MT. OLIVE TRIBUNE: Go about your business—is the inscription which a workman, mistaking a judge's petulant reproof for an order for a motto, chiseled upon the face of the old temple clock in London. It was a fortunate mistake for it has for over two hundred years preached a sermon that many have received. That injunction is still in order for many people who might better go about their business instead of idling their time away meddling with the business of others. If that were done there would be far less friction in the world and a vast increase in harmony.

KINSTON FREE PRESS: The Ledger Dispatch states that the present fly killing contest inaugurated by the Norfolk health department has resulted in the death of 4,142,250 flies. At least the health department has counted that many dead flies brought in by contestants. These will measure about 78 gallons or a barrel and a half. And yet the Ledger Dispatch says it is hard to believe that Norfolk is relieved from the troublesome presence of a barrel and a half of flies. The instance cited indicates the real points of attack in any attempt to solve the fly problem. Fly killing no doubt has its value. In this way the nuisance is mitigated to some extent by no means about. The most effective way to kill flies is to take time by the forelock and kill the possibility of them being born. Children will help a lot in relieving the situation; but its a mans job to kill flies.

Wilson for President

Sagamore Hill must regard Woodrow Wilson as a hopelessly impractical politician.

Here is a candidate so innocent and unsophisticated, so much of a closet philosopher, that he carries his political principles into the management of his campaign.

In selecting his campaign managers he turns to the progressive Democrats who identified themselves with his candidacy and helped carry it on to victory. There are no machine politicians among them, no corporation lawyers who capitalize their political influence, no statesmen with powerful Wall street connections—simply Democrats like McCombs and McAdoo and O'Gorman and Gore and Burleson and Menry and their kind. There are no friends of the great interests, no steel trust financiers or Harvester trust promoters who have been consecrated by their support of his candidacy.

Such a man is too impossibly theoretical to be trusted with the powers of government. He would never think of secretly inviting a Harriman to the White House a week before election and getting a $260,000 campaign fund out of the visit. He would not even know how to conceal the contribution under roses of righteousness in case it found its way into his campaign coffers.

That kind of a candidate is not a Man of My Type. If that is the sort of campaign Wilson intends to make, the necessity of My Nomination grows more imperative than ever. We must not only save the country from the crooks and thieves and brigands and bandits and robbers and rural torles, but we must save it from the doctrinaires and the textbook theorists.

Getting Ready for the Campaign

NEW YORK, July 18.—The final steps necessary to the organization for the Republican national campaign will be taken here tomorrow at the adjourned meeting of the sub-committee of nine of the Republican national committee. The meeting will have several important questions to solve. An executive committee and an advisory committee of five members are to be selected, also a treasurer of the national committee. A half dozen or more names are understood to be under consideration for the appointment of a national treasurer.

THE CONQUEST OF THE AIR Part II

Up there the roads are always ready, no paving, no broken rails, no flat wheels, no head on collisions.

The nervous old lady in her flying machine will be able to turn out one mile or four miles if she chooses when another machine comes along. For she can dip two miles below it, or two miles above it.

Cars going at a rate exceeding two hundred and fifty miles an hour will probably be compelled to keep at a certain high altitude above the ground. And slow moving craft, those that will prefer the old fashioned one hundred miles an hour, or even less, will keep close to the ground, one or two thousand feet above the rooftops.

The very greatest ships of the air probably will stay permanently some six miles above the earth's surface where there are absolutely no winds, except a gentle constant wind going from west to east with the earth's motion. Smaller machines will take passengers up to the big machines.

Six miles up there are no storms. Six miles up everything is as quiet as one mile down in the ocean. No waves of water dash against each other one mile below the ocean's surface. No waves of wind tossing the airship when you get six miles above this earth.

The great and important air vessels crossing the ocean or going all around the earth will remain in the upper zone of quiet, traveling at a speed that will surely equal one thousand miles an hour eventually, permitting the young that love light and color to live day after day with the sun always straight above them is they choose and permitting the old that ride into the air to study the stars always to be in darkness.

One of the sister planets that travel around this sun with us is so fixed in her movements that one-half of her surface is exposed always to the sun and one-half is always dark and turned away from the sun. It is easy to imagine on that planet the young people living in the sunlight by choice, enjoying light and heat and color and excitement and the older and wiser being living on the side of darkness, enjoying the universe outside of that planet, thinking of the great future and the greater world beyond the reach of the rays of any little sun.

What the inhabitants of that queer planet can do now we shall be able to do if we choose when we have our flying machines going as fast as the sun appears to go in his course around the earth, able to keep the traveler forever in the noonday or the midnight of this earth.

the open and what money stuck to his fingers was his own. His services to the young republic were never better appreciated than now.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

ALEXANDER HAMILTON

ONE hundred and eight years ago today Alexander Hamilton, one of the greatest minds this country has ever produced fell in a duel at the hands of Aaron Burr. Burr who was running for governor of New York, wanted Hamilton to utter a few encomiums of his candidacy on the editorial page of the Federalist, a strong stand-pat publication, which stood for a high protective tariff and a central bank. Hamilton responded by informing his readers, in double headed long primer, that if Burr would refrain from telling lies about him he would refrain from telling the truth about Burr. When Burr read Hamilton's remarks in the Federalist, he became very indignant and promptly stopped his paper, thus starting a melancholy train of delinquent subscribers and making the newspaper profession more hazardous than crushing dynamite with a tack hammer. He challenged Hamilton and was taken up so quickly that it set his breath back several feet from the place of beginning. Hamilton did not want to kill anybody and refrained from shooting at Burr, which was a great mistake. Nobody would have missed Burr except his creditors, but the death of Hamilton made a hole in American statesmanship which has never been plugged up since. Hamilton never became very enthusiastic over the masses. He was the inventor of the pleasing axiom that this government of the people by a representative part of the people, which T. Roosevelt has been puncturing with so much enthusiasm of late. He also endeavored to reform the currency by locating all of it that was movable in one spot, where Wall street could check against it without being interrupted by the country bankers. Nobody liked to discuss the money question with Hamilton, as he usually left them in a condition where they couldn't tell a silver certificate from a laundry slip. Despite his high-brow proclivities, Hamilton was a splendid type of early American character and integrity. He fought with Washington, lived cleanly and in Hal Chase, who needs no introduction to the fans, has a rather peculiar way of selecting his bats. Most batters size the bludgeon by weight. Not so with Hal. The New Yorker had a splinter in his tongue recently, and that's how the secret leaked out.

"Well, I'll tell you," said Hal. "I was downtown this morning sampling some new sticks. I can tell a new bat by tasting the wood."

The Yanks' bat boy declares that Hal has all the Highlanders' bats imprinted with his teeth.

WRAY MAY ROW ARNST.

New Zealander Willing to Give Harvard Coach Chance at Title.

It is just possible that Richard Arnst, the world's sculling champion, will be seen in action in this country in the course of his journey home from England after his race with Barry. It is also possible that James Wray, the Harvard coach, will be able to get a race with the New Zealander in England.

Word has come from Arnst that under certain conditions he would give Wray the next chance in the event of his defeating Barry, and it looks much as if Barry were in for defeat. In a letter to Charley Stevenson, Harvard's assistant coach, the big New Zealander, writes:

"Regarding Jim Wray, I don't think I can offer any expenses to come here, as I don't know how the gate will be. Does he want a race for the championship or a private match?"

"Of course he understands that if the race is for the championship he will have to post $2,500 in stakes, but

In case he wants a private match I am ready to row him for $1,000 a side and will divide the steamboat money. I am returning by way of America and will try to get a few matches or give an exhibition or two on my way across. "I am in pretty good 'nick' (condition) now, and I think I shall land home a winner again with a little luck. I have been trying to fix things up with Eddie Durman and have promised him a race in August if he allows me $2,500 for expenses. In case he doesn't take me on I am ready to have a go with anybody."

Wray has only to post his money and send a challenge in regular order, thus getting the next crack at Arnst. There is a fund already on hand that would do as a starter. Of course Wray would have to row in England, but if Arnst sticks to his purpose he may be seen in exhibitions in American waters.

HERE'S SOME PITCHING FEAT

Minor Leaguer Won Twenty-five Out of Thirty-three Games Twirled.

Speaking about pitching feats, according to the records of 1904, they have a record in Dixie which, while it was not made in a major league, nevertheless was made under the rules and regulations of organized baseball. The record was for straight games pitched and won. In the year mentioned Baxter Sparks, who twirled for Yazoo City, in the Delta league, won twenty-one games in a row. Sparks won twenty-five games out of thirty-three games, and nine of the victories were shutouts. He is now twirling in the Cotton States league, being a member of the Vicksburg team.

Chaloner Takes Fight to Congress

RICHMOND, July 17.—John Armstrong Chaloner will appeal to the House of Representatives at Washington for justice in the fight he is making for possession of his property and will demand the impeachment of Judge Holt, of the Southern district of New York, charging him with malfeasance in office.

Judge Holt threw the Chaloner case out of his court and into the supreme court of New York.

Mr. Chaloner will not go to Washington in person but is sending a voluminous document to each member of the House.

He charges that a commission of members of his family have blocked his move to freedom. The object of the impeachment is to secure a new trial of the case without delay.

swearing back now. "Well go on in the way come bang! against the wall. There may be some good bouts between here and there. I wonder what Gioconda would say if she knew why I was so eager for this game?"

He went down to dinner, and they gave him a table in an obscure corner, as a subtle reminder that his style was passe. He didn't care; he was hungry and thirsty. He could see nearly every one, even if only a few could see him. This was somewhat to his advantage. He endeavored to pick out Percival Algermon; but there were too many high collars, too many monocles. So he contented himself with a mild philosophical observation of the scene. The murmur of voices, rising as the wall of the violins sank, sinking as the wall rose; the tinkle of glass and china, the silver and linen, the pretty women in their rustling gowns, the delicate perfumes, the flash of an arm, the glint of a polished shoulder; this was the essence of life he coveted. He smiled at the thought and the sure knowledge that he was not the only wolf in the fold. Ay, and who among these dainty Red Riding Hoods might be fooled by a vulpine grandmother? Truth, when a fellow winnowed it all down to a handful, there were only fools and rogues. If one was a fool, the rogues got you, and he in turn devoured himself.

He held his glass toward the table-lamp, moved it slowly to and fro under his nose, epicureanly; then he sipped the wine. Something like! It ran across his tongue and down his throat in tingling fire, nectarious; and he went half way to Olympus, to the feet of the gods. For weeks he had lived in the vilest haunts, in desperate straits, his life in his open hands; and now once more he had crawled from the depths to the outer crust of the world. It did not matter that he was destined to go down into the depths again; so long as the spark burned he was going to crawl back each time. Damnable luck! He could have lived like a prince. Twenty-four hundred, and all in two nights, a steady stream of gold into the pockets of men whom he could have cheated with consummate ease, and didn't. A fine wolf, whose predatory instincts were still riveted to that obsolete thing called conscience!

"Conscience? Rot! Let us for once be frank and write it down as caution, as fear of publicity, anything but the white guardian-angel of the immortality of the soul. Heap up the gold, Apollyon; heap it up, higher and higher, till not a squeak of that still small voice that once awoke the chap in the Old Testament can ever again be heard. Now, no more retrospection, Horace; no more analysis; the vital question simmers down to this: If Percival Algermon balks, how far will four sovereigns go?"

CHAPTER III.

The Holy Yhlordes.

George drank his burgundy perfumatorily. Had it been astringent as the native wine of Corsica, he would not have noticed it. The little nerves that ran from his tongue to his brain had temporarily lost the power of communication. And all because of the girl across the way. He couldn't keep his eyes from wandering in her direction. She faced him diagonally. She ate but little, and when the elderly gentleman poured out for her a glass of sauterne, she motioned it aside, rested her chin upon her folded hands, and stared not at but through her vis-a-vis.

It was a lovely head, topped with coils of lustrous, light brown hair; an oval face, of white and rose and ivory tones; scarlet lips, a small, regular nose, and a chin the soft roundness of which hid the resolute lift to it. To these attributes of loveliness was added a perfect form, the long, flowing curves of youth, not the abrupt contours of maturity. George couldn't recollect when he had been so impressed by a face. From the moment she had stepped down from the carriage, his interest had been drawn, and had grown to such dimensions that when he entered the dining-room his glance immediately searched for her table. What luck in finding her across the way! He questioned if he had ever seen her before. There was something familiar; the delicate profile stirred some sleeping memory but did not wake it.

How to meet her, and when he did meet her, how to interest her? If she would only drop her handkerchief, her purse, something to give him an excuse, an opening. Ah, he was certain that this time the hydra-headed one should not overcome him. To gain her attention and to hold it, he would have faced a lion, a tiger, a wild-elephant. To diagnose these symptoms might not be fair to George. "Love at first sight" reads well and sounds well, but we hoary-headed philosophers know that the phrase is only poetical license.

Once, and only once, she looked in his direction. It swept over him with the chill of a winter wind that he meant as much to her as a tree, a fence, a meadow, as seen from the window of a speeding railway train. But this observation, transient as it was, left with him the indelible impression that her eyes were the saddest he had ever seen. Why? Why should a young and beautiful girl have eyes like that? It could not mean physical weariness, else the face would in some way have expressed it. The elderly man appeared to do his best to animate her; he was kindly and courteous and by the gentle way he laughed at intervals was trying to bolster up the situation with a jest or two. The girl never so much as smiled, or shrugged her shoulders; she was as responsive to these overtures as marble would have been.

George's romance gathered itself for a flight. Perhaps it was love thwarted and the gentleman with the mustache and imperial, in spite of his amiability, might be the ogre. Perhaps it was love and duty. Perhaps her lover had gone down to sea. Perhaps (for lovers are known to do such things) he had run away with the other girl. If that was the case, George did not think highly of that tentative gentleman's taste. Perhaps and perhaps again; but George might have gone on perhapsing till the crack o' doom, with never a solitary glimmer of the true state of the girl's mind. Whenever he saw an unknown man or woman who attracted his attention, he never could resist the impulse to invent a romance that might apply.

Immediately after dessert the two rose; and George, finding that nothing more important than a pineapple ice detained him, got up and followed. Mr. Ryanne almost trod on his heels as they went through the doorway into the cosy lounging-room. George dropped into a vacant divan and waited for his cafe a la Turque. Mr. Ryanne walked over to the head-porter's bureau and asked if that gentleman would be so kind as to point out Mr. George P. A. Jones, if he were anywhere in sight. He thoughtfully, not to say regretfully, laid down a small bribe.

"Mr. Jones?" The porter knew Mr. Jones very well. He was generous, and treated the servants as though they were really human beings. Mr. Ryanne, either by his inquiry or as the result of his bribe, went up several degrees in the porter's estimation. "Mr. Jones is over there, on the divan by the door."

"Thanks." But Ryanne did not then seek the young man. He studied the quarry from a diplomatic distance. No; there

What Makes a Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and dired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart for making such a god medicine." Only

COLONEL CECIL A. LYON, PROMINENT TEXAS REPUBLICAN

COLONEL CECIL A. LYON, who as Roosevelt national committeeman from Texas figured so largely in the convention contests at Chicago, is one of the most prominent business men of Texas and like many other successful men of the southwest, is of northern origin. He earned his military title by service in the Fourth infantry regiment of the Texas national guard and is a member of the Loyal Legion. He has been a leader of his party in the Lone Star State for years, having been a member of the state executive committee, chairman of the state committee and of the national committee. A striking incident of the Texas convention contest was the defense of the colonel by a Taft delegate from the same state, who was called upon by Governor Hadley to give testimony in his favor.

HINTS OF FALL STYLES—SOME OLD FASHIONS RETURN—HIGH COLLARS ORDERED BY FASHION DECRE.E

At this season, though sweltering with the heat, it is customary to be given a hint of advance fall styles, not only in write ups, but by actual window displays in the leading shops.

These expositions serve to emphasize the main new features. But these of course must be taken with a grain of salt. It is rare to find at the height of any one season the modes that were shown as a forecast, save in modified forms.

Of one thing we can be quite sure, there is to be a revival of the high collar. Jumping from an almost too pronounced decolletage of the summer gowns, comes the high stock of black satin with Charlotte Corday turn over wings, of lawn or satin in colors.

On some of the late summer gown this effect is carried out in linen.

Evelyn Thaw, whose taste in dress has never been questioned, no flatter what our opinion of her personally is, wore this modish high collar during the Thaw investigation this summer. I really think it was largely due to the stiff satin and linen combination that she was described as holding her head high in arrogant defiance of the cross questioning.

She could not have dropped it if she wanted to. I believe likewise that much of her school girlish air, that was repeatedly used in describing her when her husband first went to trial for murder, was similarly occasioned by her style of collar. It was of the school boy turn over fashion, exposing the rounded young throat.

There is no use denying the influence that such small trifles can have on a woman's appearance, to such an extent that she appears as quite a new character according to the style of her apparel.

The present and apparently the near future mode of hair dressing will have a tendency to make all women look more youthful. The low coiffure, with soft parted waves held in place by a band, is generally becoming. All well bred modish women no longer wear rats and puffs that distorted the shape of their heads, and were frightfully unsanitary as well.

The same women with hair dressed in these two contrasting styles look like two different women. If youthfulness is a desideratum, then the low coiffure should be adopted.

In the advance styles there is a hint that trains will be revived. This is hardly compatible with the low styles of hair dressing.

Evidently it is not fashion's wish that women should turn time backwards too radically. For the short skirts and low coil form a harmonious combination of a decidedly girlish trend, which the trailing gowns failed to create.

While it is a good plan to wear generally what is becoming, we can't be too fixed in the adherence to style that makes a woman conspicuous.

Phoebe Crosby has been engaged for a leading role in—the Dove of Peace—the new opera by Walter Damrosch.

Kitchen Craft

Banana Fluff

Red bananas should be selected for this, as they have a richer flavor than those with yellow skins. Peel four and cut them into dice, squeezing over a little lemon juice and covering with a small cupful of ginger syrup that has been drained from a jar of preserved ginger; allow the fruit to remain covered for at least two hours and then mash to a paste with a wooden spoon, gradually folding in half a pint of cream beaten solid two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the stiffly whipped white of one egg; serve immediately heaped in wide rimmed glasses, that have been lined with macaroons.

Wine-Filled Potatoes

Bake until soft and mealy six good-sized potatoes, prick to let out steam and then cut directly in halves where they were pricked and with a sharp spoon remove the pulp from the skins, turning into a warmed mixing bowl; mash thoroughly, adding a small cupful of rich milk or cream, salt and paprika to taste, one tablespoonful of minced parsley, one tablespoonful of melted butter, a pinch of poultry seasoning and a small cupful of nut meats that have been passed through the meat chopper; beat with a fork until very light and creamy and return to the shells, which, after dusting with browned crumbs, are placed in a hot oven for ten minutes to crisp and brown; serve garnished with small bunches of parsley.

Harvard Salad

Dice sufficient crisp celery to fill 2 large cups, adding in the order mentioned a half dozen chopped radishes, six minced olives, one small cupful of chopped nut meats and two diced, hard-boiled eggs; blend the ingredients well, moistening with a mayonnaise dressing and arrange in tiny mounds in nests of heart lettuce leaves; pour over each portion a tablespoonful of the dressing, garnishing with grated egg yolk and triangles of pickled beet.

Asquith Arrives in Dublin

DUBLIN, July 18.—Premier Asquith was given a cordial welcome on his arrival in Dublin today. Thousands of spectators, including visitors from all parts of Ireland, lined the route from Kinkstown to the residence of Chief Secretary Birrell in Phoenix Park, where the premier is to be a guest during his stay in the capital. Tomorrow Mr. Asquith will pay visits to various public institutions and in the evening he will address a mass meeting in the Theatre Royal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.
Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

STATE AND COUNTY NEWS

Winterville Items.

WINTERVILLE, July 18.—Rev. J. W. Fulford will fill his regular appointment at St. Luke's Episcopal church next Sunday at 11 a. m. and 3:30 p. m. which we are sorry to say will be his last visit to us during his rectorship, as he goes to Dunwidly, Va., August 1st. We regret very much to lose Mr. Fulford so early as he has been with us but one year. We bid him God speed in his new field of labor.

After spending several days visiting friends here Miss Maud Holiday returned to her home at Jamesville Tuesday afternoon.

Harrington, Barber and Co., are selling good summer pants and some of the latest styles for greatly reduced prices.

Harrington, Barber and Company are headquarters for lap robes. Quite a number of our people attended the lecture given by Dr. Barnes at the Training school Monday evening.

Suppose somebody got it mixed up about the ball game last Saturday. The game was played here instead of Parmele, as published in Monday's paper. The score was 4 to 5 in favor of Parmele only because some of our boys could not be there to participate in the game.

Top dresser and guano on hand at A. W. Ange and Company.

A certain young lady of our social ranks was looking very pleasant Monday. We must think Mr. Adrian Brown, of Greenville spent Sunday evening in town. Guess?

Tobacco twine, thermometers and lanterns at A. W. Ange and Co.

Mr. C. T. Cox made his daily visit to Greenville yesterday.

Miss Ida Bullock of Bethel left Tuesday for her home after spending a short while visiting Miss Juanita Dixon.

Prof. Paul J. Kirker, principal of Mt. Pleasant high school spent last Sunday in town visiting at the home of Mr. R. G. Chapman.

Mrs. M. A. Adams and daughter, Miss Elizabeth, made a business trip to Greenville yesterday.

We sell summer goods at a great reduction and calico at 5c. A. W. Ange and Company.

Sheriff S. I. Dudley was in our city last evening.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America.

"I cured me of a most dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." Excellent for coughs, colds or any bronchial affection. Price 50c an $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

Scout Boys Enjoying Camp

tle of that, would not have been a very satisfactory job.

The start from Greenville was half an hour late due to two slight mishaps right at the wharf. Scout Master Rock's "Dixie", with his family on board, got cranky the first thing and the pump to the engine refused to work, so he tied along side of Capt. Salter's "Ziyra" on which the boys embarked, to be towed down as far as Washington. Then as Capt. Sawyer was starting his boat out it drifted too far inshore that caused him to think the blades had broken off.

And right there all thought for the time being "the jig was up", but it wasn't. Dr. Carr was on hand with his boat, threw a tow line to the combined fleet and pulled them out into the channel. Then one of the boys donned a bathing suit and went off to examine the propeller and found its blades all right. An investigation of the shaft disclosed that it had been forced a few inches out of place. This was quickly remedied, the engine took up its merry "chug-chug" and we were off. Two other boats accompanied the Scout party for three miles down the river, when they bid them bon voyage and turned back home.

The trip down the river was made somewhat slowly because of low water and crooked channel and there was no further mishap until within a few miles of Washington, when a shoal was struck and caused a delay of half an hour.

It was about 11 o'clock when Washington was passed and a few miles below that town, but in full view of the bridge lights, anchor was cast for a rest. Master Rock ordered the boys to quiet and a nap until 3 o'clock when the journey would continue and dropped his boat a few yards to the rear, leaving us in charge of the Scouts. But there was not any quiet nor any nap on board the "Ziyra". It was truly

A night on the deep, Yet a night without sleep. The boys were like a bed of kittens or a nest of mice. If one wiggled, all wiggled; if one giggled, all giggled. And they wiggled and they giggled and they talked and they sniggled—and nobody slept a wink. They are boys, you know, out for a good time and are going to have it. But they will be ready to sleep tonight.

the police department were guilty of instigating the murder of the pambler. Immediate action is necessary, continued the letter, in the interest of good order and that the good reputation of 10,400 men who are honestly doing their duty should not be fismirched by individuals who may be rascals. It would appear to be unjust that the reputation of the entire force should be attacked on account of the allegations of a self-confessed gambler that a subordinate police officer who had never been intrusted with any special power, had been his partner.

District Attorney Whitman made this statement this afternoon: I am not making war on the police department. I am not charging that the police department committed that crime; but I do charge that the police let the murder of Herman Rosenthal be committed and permitted the murderers to escape.
