INDEX POINTS TOWARD POLICE

Gambler's Clique Not Responsible For Death

"POLICE WERE FULLY AWARE"

Owner and Chauffeur of "Murder Car" Asserts He Was Told the Police Knew All About It. Name of "Gunner" is Surrendered

NEW YORK, July 19.—The murder plot that brought Herman Rosenthal to his death that the gambler might tell no tales is being hourly brought closer to the police system.

William Shapiro, part owner of the murder car, is giving the public prosecutor information bit by bit which strengthens the belief that the slayer of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of a gambler's clique.

Shapiro admits that when his motor car was engaged that he was told the policemen knew what was going to happen and that nobody was in any danger.

Bald Jack Rose, gambler and a friend of police Lieutenant Becker and who surrendered himself to the police, has given the name of a gambler and a gun fighter who was in the car in the night that Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole. His name is Schnapps and detectives are scouring the town for him.

What Rose told Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty makes the police official quite anxious to know more about Bridgie Webber, pool room keeper and friend of Rosenthal. Rose said when he left the car uptown he dropped in on Webber, but later it appears that Webber turned up at the Hotel Metropole just before Rosenthal was shot and there shook hands with the gambler. Webber also was seen at the hotel after the shooting.

Police Lieutenant Becker has been told to remain at police headquarters and no one was more surprised at the unexpected appearance at Rose at headquarters yesterday than Becker, the head of the so-called strong arm squad which has been engaged looking after gambling houses.

Shapiro is willing to tell more of the circumstances that led up to the shooting of Rosenthal, but he will not tell them to the police.

Shapiro through his counsel admits that he is in a bad situation and hopes that he will be dealt with leniently if he tells all he knows of the murderers and the killing. He is willing to take his chances with the district attorney, but he will not talk to the police.

For the first time the name of "Big Jack" Zelig, the East Side gang leader and gambler, who recently was shot by a Chick Triggs gangster, is brought into the case today. Detectives hear that Zelig, who is known as the right hand man of Sam Paul, another East side gang leader, was seen talking to Rose the night of the murder.

According to the story Rose was trying to get Zelig to do something for him and Zelig was promised as a reward immunity from the charge of carrying a concealed weapon, now pending against him. Zelig's lawyer says he is not in town and has not been since July 10.

Developments are expected from a three hours conference District Attorney Whitman had early today at his home with a mysterious man said to be a well known gambler and a friend of Rosenthal.

Mr. Wittman said after the meeting: I shall have nothing to say now concerning the man who called on me.

FELLS A BURGLAR WITH A BOOK

Toledo, O., July 19.—Awakened by a noise downstairs early this morning, Dr. G. B. Booth investigated and discovered a burglar. The physician hurled a heavy book at the man, hit him and rendered him unconscious. He searched the intruder and recovered a bracelet belonging to his wife. When Dr. Booth went to the telephone to call the police the burglar regained consciousness and fled.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE HAS SET BACK

English Women Attempt to Fire A Theatre

ATTACK ON PREMIER ASQUITH

Mrs. Mary Leigh Who Has Been Already Convicted of Several Offenses Hurls Chair From a Theatre Box to Premier

DUBLIN, July 19.—Eight English women have been taken into custody by the police in connection with the outrages perpetrated here last night on the arrival of Mr. Asquith by suffragists, who have been constantly dogging the heels of the British premier since he left England.

The women are charged with complicity in the attempt to burn down the Dublin Theatre, where Mr. Asquith is scheduled to speak.

A blazing chair was thrown into the orchestra from a box occupied by two women who then set fire to the box curtains. The ract caused a panic among the audience. One of the women was arrested last night. She gave the name of Gladys Evans and said she came from England.

The eight suffragettes also are charged with complicity in the attempt to injure Mr. Asquith by throwing a hatchet at the premier's carriage as the party was proceeding from the wharf to a hotel.

Mrs. Mary Leigh, one of the suffragettes under arrest, was identified this morning as the thrower of the hatchet. The woman, it is alleged, by the police, intended to brain Mr. Asquith. Mrs. Leigh has long been a leader in the violent tactics adopted by the militant suffragettes.

As far back as July, 1908, she was arrested for breaking windows in a suffragettes demonstration in London. At that time on being sentenced to two months imprisonment at hard labor, she told the court that the next time they came out they could expect bombs.

A year later Mrs. Leigh was again sentenced to two months at hard labor at Birmingham and on being released brought damages against the government for forcible feeding while in prison. The woman is described by the police as the most troublesome suffragettes they have had to deal with.

Mrs. Leigh was convicted for the eighth time in London last November for smashing windows and was sentenced to two months in jail without the option of a fine. The magistrate warned Mrs. Leigh that if she was again convicted she would be sent to jail for a term at hard labor.

The police found quantities of gunpowder, kerosene and other inflammable materials in the rooms occupied by the arrested suffragettes.

The officials claim to have evidence showing that the plans of the militant women contemplated serious outrages.

Overman Wants a Forestry Inquiry

WASHINGTON, July 19.—An investigation of expenditures in the forest service by a special Senate committee is asked in a resolution today by Senator Overman.

The committee would sit during the recess of Congress.

The Overman resolution was referred to the committee on contingent expenses. It was inspired by reports of abuses.

The North Carolina Senator said: I am informed that duplications of payment have occurred; that more officials are employed than are needed; and that timber lands are being denuded more rapidly than before the service was established.

Spirited Brush Between Two Polo Playing Society Women

SMART New York society is suffering from—no, one should say, enjoying—a sharp attack of poloitis. Probably the visit of the British polo team last year and the victory of the American players gave the game its present boom. At any rate, interest in it is particularly intense this season and most particularly so among the women. One of the strong holds of polo has always been the Meadowbrook club at Westbury, N. Y., the men of which have figured largely as champions at home and abroad. Now the wives and sisters of these men have formed a club of their own, the Meadow Lark—with their own field and are taking up the game in earnest. The men coach the women and play with them on mixed teams. Among the best known players are Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock and Mrs. J. Watson Webb, who are seen in the illustration in a spirited rush for the ball, Mrs. Hitchcock in the foreground. The Hitchcock family is well represented on the polo field, not only Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock, but their daughter Helen and their son Thomas being enthusiastic players.

MISSOURIAN GOT SEAT BY "POWER OF MONEY" $5,000 TO GO TO ME AND $5,000 TO THE GOVERNOR

HOUSE ASKS THAT CATLIN LEAVE SO AT LEAST SAID LITTLE DICTAGRAPH

Campaign Expenses of a Son of St. Louis Millionaire a Little Too Big According to His New Brothers in the House

WASHINGTON, July 19.—By strict party vote the House elections committee No. 2 today voted to unseat Representative Theron E. Catlin of St. Louis, Republican and to seat former Representative Patrick Gill, Democrat.

Mr. Catlin's campaign expenses were so great that the committee held that his election was corrupt. It also held that Gill would have been elected but for the use of money by Catlin's managers.

The vote was 6 to 2 to declare Catlin's election illegally effected. His majority in the 1910 returns were 1,200. The resolution will be reported to the House today for action.

According to the record, Representative Catlin's campaign expenditures aggregated more than $13,000. It was contended by his counsel that much of the money was used without the candidate's knowledge. The Missouri law permits the expenditure of $662.

Representative Catlin is the son of a millionaire tobaccoist of St. Louis. He is serving his first term in Congress. Simultaneously with the vote ousting him came the announcement of his engagement to marry a Washington woman.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Forbes and little son, Charles, and Miss Juanita Savage returned Friday evening from Virginia Beach.

Rev. E. M. Hoyle has returned to the city and will hold the usual services tomorrow.

Probe Into South Carolina Graft Cases Continue. Nichols and Attorney Positive He Was Drunk When Record Was Taken

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 19.—The committee of the South Carolina legislature which is investigating charges of political corruption and which recently at Augusta, Ga., heard startling testimony as to the governor's pardon record, met here with Samuel J. Nichols as the principal witness.

Nichols is the Spartanburg attorney who according to Detective E. S. Reed, was Governor Blease's agent in the purchase of a pardon for a prisoner.

Mr. Nichols corroborated certain testimony taken by a telephonic device in the Spartanburg hotel. He denied that he had said the governor had received anything for the signing of the Interurban bill, but had represented to the governor that if he did not sign it it would hurt the Piedmont section of the state.

According to Mr. Nichols the conversation recorded by the dictograph agreed to secure a pardon for the worst convict in the penitentiary for the sum of $15,000, $5,000 of which was to go to the governor.

This conversation or rather series of conversations is said to have taken place between Nichols and E. S. Reed, a Burns detective, who under the name of P. M. Porter, was in charge of the investigation in certain territory of the state.

As to the pardon record the dictograph recorded the following statement by Nichols to "Mr. Porter" after the detective had picked out one James Johnson, alias Ed Howard, alias Gus de Ford, alias G. W. De Ford and several other aliases, a professional safeblower and yeggman, as a man

ITALO-TURKISH WAR TAKES NEW TURN

Italian Torpedo Boats Attack Dardanelles Forts

PUT UP STUBBORN DEFENCE

Two Italian Crafts are Sunk at the Entrance to the Channel and Passage is Blocked—Cannonade Lasts Three-Quarters of an Hour.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 19.—Eight Italian Torpedo boats attacked the entrance of the Dardanelles at 1:30 o'clock this morning. The Turkish forts replied vigorously, sinking two of the Italian war vessels and damaging the other six.

The cannonade lasted 45 minutes. The cabinet ministers were hurriedly called to the palace this morning at a council of war. It was decided to close the Dardanelles.

Chicago, July 19.—Excited trading in wheat and corn resulted here from the news of the sinking of Italian war vessels in the Dardanelles and the closing of the passage.

Shutting off grain from the Black Sea ports of Russia and other countries meant the stoppage of one of the chief sources of European supply, and coming wholly without warning set speculators wild here.

Wheat prices jumped as much as 2 1/2 c., and corn 2c. After the rush to buy was ended, however, fully half the advance was lost.

Darrow Trial Going On In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 19.—After a few questions relative to a meeting between himself and Clarence S. Darrow at which they were joined by Bert H. Franklin, Lincoln Steffens was turned over to the prosecutor for cross-examination at the bribery trial today.

Franklin has testified that Darrow had handed him a jury list at the meeting with the remark: That looks better, as a pointed to the names of George N. Lockwood and A. J. Krueger, Steffens said he recalled the meeting and that there was no effort at concealment by Darrow and Franklin.

District Attorney Fredericks plunged into the negotiations for the ending of the McNamara trial. He asked the witness why no publicity was given the negotiations, Steffens replied that their object would be misunderstood. Subsequently, he said this had been proved by the manner in which the country had received the news. He was certain that publicity beforehand would have resulted in failure of the plan.

Said the District Attorney: Mr. Steffens, I believe you are an avowed anarchist.

Yes, and worst than an anarchist, was the reply.

I am a great deal more radical, I believe in Christianity.

Didn't you say during the campaign here that if there was an anarchist running against Job Harriman, the So-

Senators to Defend Taft's Nomination

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Republican leaders of the Senate and House are preparing to defend President Taft's nomination with speeches on the floor.

Senator Root has been suggested as the man to make the leading speech in the Senate. Whether he will do so has not been announced.

Representatives Bartholdt and Mondell are preparing speeches for delivery in the House. It has been proposed that the statement prepared with Mr. Taft's approval defending the seating of delegates by the Republican committee might be introduced in both the House and Senate by leaders.

JUDGE ARRAIGNED BEFORE SENATE

Archbald Faces Members of the House

TRIAL POSTPONED TO THE 29

Judge Archbald Personally Came Before That Body to Answer to the Charges for Which He Has Been Impeached

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The impeachment proceedings against Judge Court, were again taken up today.

Judge Archbald reached the capitol some time before the hour set for his appearance. He had determined to appear personally to answer the Senate's summons.

With him was his attorney, A. S. Worthington, of Washington and his son, Robert W. Archbald, Jr., of Philadelphia, also an attorney. Another son occupied a place in the gallery.

The impeachment court, after a brief session today, fixed August 3 as the limit for all formal answers in the case and then adjourned until Monday July 29, without deciding if the trial shall go on this summer or go over until fall.

When the House managers led by Representative Henry D. Clayton, appeared at the Senate door, they were announced by the assistant doorkeeper.

A moment after Judge Archbald, one of his sons and an attorney were ushered in. Two of the attorneys did not appear at the opening of the trial. The judge followed the announcements of the secretary with close attention as Sergeant at Arms Randsell made the formal proclamation:

"Robert W. Archbald, appear and answer the charges made against you." Judge Archbald leaned forward to listen. His attorney, Mr. Worthington, arose and said that the "respondent is present in person to answer."

Mr. Worthington then submitted a motion for a time in which to prepare and submit his answer. It named no date. Senator Clark of Wyoming, immediately offered an order to fix the date of the answer at July 24.

"That time seems very short," said Mr. Worthington, "because of the many articles that appear in the document."

He added that Attorneys Martin and Price, now ill, had aided Judge Archbald in the case and time should be allowed them to recover. He asked for twenty days.

Mr. Clayton objected to any delay beyond four or five days. Judge Archbald had thorough sifting before the House Committee on Judiciary, he said.

Attorney Worthington replied that many things in the charges had come as a surprise to Judge Archbald and himself and that the time he proposed in which Judge Archbald should answer was shorter than usually given.

Senator McComber proposed to extend the time to July 31, but Representative Clayton insisted for the managers, upon an answer July 24. Senator Lodge suggested Monday, July 29. Mr. Clayton also opposed that.

Mr. Clayton, after a conference with the other House managers, suddenly (Continued on page 8)

BIG FISH PULLS BOY OUT OF BOAT

Newark, N. J., July 19.—Cuthbert Everett, a 17 year old Richfield boy, had a narrow escape from drowning late yesterday while fishing in Greenwood Lake when a 17 pound catfish pulled him out of the boat into the water. Wishing to light a cigarette, Everett made a loop in his line and threw it over his head.

Scarcely had he done so when a tug at the line pulled him clear out of the boat. It was almost a minute before Everett's head appeared above the water over 200 feet away.

A friend who was fishing nearby reached him in time to lift him out of the water before he went down the third time.

Bagdad, the Jinn, Sinbad, the Thousand and One Nights, Alibaba and the Forty Thieves; George was transported mentally to that magic city, standing between the Tigris and the Euphrates, in all its white glory of a thousand years gone. Ryanne, the room and its furnishings, all had vanished, all save the exquisite fabric patterned out of wool and cotton and knotted with that mingling love and skill and patience the world knows no more. He let his hand stray over it. How many knees had pressed its thick yet pliant substance? How many strange scenes had it mutely witnessed, scenes of beauty, of terror? It shone under the light like the hide of a healthy hound.
The nerves of a smoker are generally made apparent by the rapidity of his exhalations. These two, in the several minutes, had filled the room with a thick, blue haze; and through this the elder man eyed the younger. The sign of the wolf gleamed in his eyes, but without animosity, modified as it was by the half-friendly, half-cynical smile.
"I'll risk it," said George finally, having stepped off the magical carpet, "it were. I can't give you a thousand pounds tonight. I can give you a hundred, and the balance tomorrow, between ten and eleven, at Cook's."
"That will be agreeable to me."
George passed over all the available cash he had, rolled up the treasure and tucked it under his arm. That somewhere in the world was a true believer, waiting and beating his breast and calling down from Allah curses upon the glaur, the dog of an infidel, who had done this thing, disturbed George not in the least.
"I say," as he opened the door, "you must tell me all about the adventure. It must have been a thriller."
"It was," replied Ryanne. "The story will keep. Later, if you care to hear it."
"Of course," added George, moved by a discretionary thought, "this transaction is just between you and me."
"You may lay odds on that," heartily. "Well, good night. See you at Cook's in the morning."
"Good night," George passed down the corridor to the adjoining room. And now, bang! goes Pandora's box.

CHAPTER IV.
An Old Acquaintance.
That faculty which decides on the lawfulness of our actions; so the noted etymologist described conscience. It fell to another distinguished intellect to add that conscience makes cowards of us all. Ay, she may be overcome at times, sidetracked for any special desire that demands a clear way; but she's after us, fast enough, with that battered red lantern of hers, which, brought down from all tongues crisply into our own, reads—"Don't do it!" She herself is not wholly without cunning. She rarely stands boldly upon the track to flag us as we come. She realizes that she might be permanently ditched. No, it is far safer to run after us and catch us. A digression, perhaps, but more pertinently an application.
Temptation then no longer at his shoulder, George began to have qualms, little chaps, who started buzzing into his moral ears with all that maddening, interminable drone which makes one marvel however do school-teachers survive their first terms. Among these qualms there was none that pleaded for the desolate Turk or his minions whose carelessness had made the theft possible. For all George cared, the Moslem might grind his forehead in the soulless sand and make the air palpitate with his plaints to Allah. No. The disturbance was due to the fact that never before had been wittingly the purchaser of stolen goods. He never tried to glose over the subtle distinction between knowing and suspecting; and if he had been variously suspicious in regard to certain past bargains, conscience had found no sizeable wedge for her demurrers. The Ylordes was confessedly stolen.

The Reflector wants your job work.
Mail Carriers Will Fly
This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "I cured me of a most dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." Excellent for coughs, colds or any bronchial affection. Price 50c an $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

He paused, with his hand upon the door-knob of his room. If he didn't keep the rug, it would fall into the hands of a collector less scrupulous. To return it to the Pasha at Bagdad would be pure folly, and thankless. It was one of the most beautiful weavings in existence. It was as priceless in its way as any Raphael in the Vatican. And he desired its possession intensely. Why not? Insidious phrase! Was it not better that the world should see and learn what a wonderful craft the making of a rare rug had been, than to allow it to return to the sordid chamber of a harem, to inevitable ruin? As Ryanne said, what the deuce was a fanatical Turk or Arab to him?
Against these specious arguments in favor of becoming the adventurer's abettor and accomplice, there was first the possible stain of blood. The man agreed that he had come away from Bagdad in doubt. George did not like the thought of blood. Still, he had collected a hundred emeralds, not one of which was without its red record. Again, if he carried the rug home with his other purchases, he could pull it through the customs only by lying, which was as distasteful to his mind as being a receiver of stolen goods.
He had already paid a goodly sum against the purchase; and it was not likely that a man who was down to reversing his collars and cuffs would take back the rug and refund the money. The Ylordes was his, happen what might. So conscience snuffed out her red lantern and retired.
Some light steps, a rustle, and he wheeled in time to see a woman open a door, stand for a minute in the full light, and disappear. It was she. George opened the door of his own room, threw the rug inside, and tiptoed along the corridor, stopping for the briefest time to ascertain the number of that room. He felt vastly more guilty in performing this harmless act than in smothering his mentor.
There was no one in the head-porter's bureau; thus, unobserved and unembarrassed, he was free to inspect the guest-list. Fortune Chedsoye. He had never seen a name quite like that. Its quaintness did not suggest to him, as it had done to Ryanne, the pastoral, the bucolic. Rather it reminded him of the old French courts, of rapiers and buckles, of powdered wigs and furbelows, masks, astrologers, love-intrigues, of all those colorful, mutable scenes so charmingly described by the genial narrator of the exploits of D'Artagnan. And abruptly out of this age of Lebrun, Watteau, Mollere, reached an ice-cold hand. If that elderly codger wasn't her father, who was he and what?
The Major—for George had looked him up also—was in excellent trim for his age, something of a military daddy besides; but as the husband of so young and exquisite a creature! Out upon the thought! He might be her guardian, or, at most, her uncle, but never her husband. Yet (O poisonous doubt!), at the table she had ignored the Major, both his jests and his attentions. He had seen many wives, joyfully from a safe distance, act toward their husbands in this fashion. Oh, rot! If his name was Callahan and hers Chedsoye, they could not possibly be tied in any legal bonds. He dismissed the ice-cold hand and turned again to the comforting warmth of his ardor.
He had never spoken to young women without presentation, and on these rare occasions he had broached the weather, suggested the possibilities of the weather, and concluded with an apostrophe on the weather at large. It was usually a valedictory. For he was always positive that he had acted like a fool, and was afraid to speak to the girl again. Never it failed, ten minutes after the girl was out of sight, the brightest and cleverest things crowded upon his tongue, to be but wasted on the desert air. He was not particularly afraid of women older than himself, more's the pity. And yet, had he been as shy toward them as toward the girls, there would have been no stolen Ylordes, no sad-eyed maiden, no such thing as The United Romance and Adventure Company, Ltd.; and he would have stepped the even tenor of his way, unknown of grand passions, swift adventure, life.
George was determined to meet Fortune Chedsoye, and this determination, the first of its kind to take definite form in his mind, gave him a novel sensation. He would find, some way, and he vowed to best his old enemy, diffidence, if it was the last fight he ever put up. He would maneuver to get in the way of the Major. He never found much trouble in talking to men. Once he exhaled a word or two

Forecast For Coming Week

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—National politics, both Republican and Democratic, give indication of easing off during the week, pending the notification meetings soon to be held and at which the presidential candidate will deliver their important speeches of the campaign. In the third-party movement promises to keep in the glare of the spotlight. During the week the Roosevelt followers are expected to hold conventions in Iowa, Alabama and a number of other States for the election of delegates to the National progressive conventions at Chicago.
A general Democratic primary will be held in Texas Saturday for the selection of candidates for governor and other state officers, members of the legislature, judiciary, United States Senator and congressmen at large. The contest for the seat of Joseph W. Bailey in the United States senate has been a long and bitter one. The leading candidates are Congressman M. Sheppard, Congressman C. B. Randall and J. F. Wolters. Governor Colquitt is a candidate for renomination and is opposed by W. F. Ramsey, associate justice of the supreme court.
Democrats of Iowa will meet in State convention in Cedar Rapids on Thursday to adopt a platform and to name two candidates for judge in the State supreme court.
Hearings in the Governments suit in equity to dissolve the American sugar refining Company are to be resumed in San Francisco Tuesday. From San Francisco the hearings will shift back to New York.
The city of Detroit is to celebrate its 211th anniversary with a monster land and water carnival, beginning Monday and continuing through the greater part of the week. Ten thousand persons are to take part in the carnival, which is to be called Cadillac, in honor of Cadillac, the French explorer, who founded the city in 1701.

"He Did It"
Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in, with the trace of a grin
On his face—if he worried he hid it;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that;
At least no one has ever done it,"
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it;
With a lift of his chin, and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit;
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it can not be done,
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The danger that waits to assail you;
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "can not be done," and you'll do it!

"AS THE TWIG IS BENT"

As a rule the care of intricate machinery demands careful, well-equipped men whose close study of the special construction and objective energy of the machine enables them to take intelligent care of it. As a rule, those men are well paid.

But how about the states most valuable asset—the child?

The teacher has a much more valuable and intricate machine to deal with—self-adjusting, up to a certain point—but outside that point demanding the highest qualifications in every thing outside of book knowledge, that make for good citizenship. Book knowledge is required in a more restricted form.

No parent but will agree with the proposition that the training of a child is an extremely important and responsible part of the life task. It is uncertain in its outcome for the idiosyncrasies of children vary and their treatment must be individualized and this should be taken into consideration.

A parent has a few to train, the teacher has many.

The physician on whose skill a life depends only risks one, the teacher takes the lives of many in the formative stage and moulds them for the struggle of life. Of course, he is well paid (2) The proprietor of a large industrial plant stopped a moment just outside of his office one day to speak to a truck man who had been in the employ of his company for many years. "I see you are driving Old Joe again," he remarked, referring to an old horse; also an old employe. "I thought he was sick." The driver mentioned that the old horse was fit again, as an old horse was fit again, and then, as an after thought, said: "Old Joe and I were both sick last week; they got a doctor for Old Jo, but they docked me."

It is easy to shuffle off the boy or the girl into a school, but the ultimate responsibility for the men and women of the nation, of a few years hence, rests with those who entrust the young to the inadequately paid, and, as a rule, indifferently educated, tactless, inexperienced and wholly unsuitable persons of both sexes who drift into the scholastic profession as "teachers" who do not teach, but hear lessons.

The United States is high amongst the nations as a teacher of perfected machinery. It should rank equally high as the education of children.

IF FLOOD WATERS WERE CONSERVED

Irrigation, in its applied sense, means that water is derived from its normal flow and is made to water, otherwise arid land. Were the possibilities of irrigation in the United States worked to their utmost the added agriculture acreage would quadruple that already so so used and support an enormous increase of population.

More than 4,000,000 acre-feet of water is now being wasted annually into the Gulf of Mexico from the Trinity river, 2,000,000 acre-feet from the Brazos, 1,500,000 acre-feet from the Colorado and 5,000,000 acre-feet from the Rio Grande. One-half of this amount of water, if conserved, would serve as a supplementary supply for at least 3,000,000 acres of land. And the watersheds of these rivers are insignificant compared with the mighty basin which is drained by the Mississippi and its affluents.

With such reserve land brought into cultivation, the floods of today will be matters of unrepeatable history and that will be an industrial gain. Further with the waters of the northwest devoted to irrigation an enormous evaporation acreage would be added and the rains consequent would make a vast change in the climate of the middle west.

In the cactus country where the clouds from the Pacific, are depleted of their moisture by the Rocky Mountains, would become fertile under the influence of rains, at all event to the grass stage, and add to the grazing area of the land.

Wilson for President

For Democrats to Heed.

Governor Wilson is deeply interested in the cost of living, as becomes the Democratic candidate for President this year. At the same time he speaks the language of truth and soberness, not that of the cure-all dispenser or political quack. "America," he said in his address at the Y. M. C. A. cornerstone laying in Atlantic City, "is recognized as a spendthrift country because in America we think we have inexhaustible resources, but as our population thickens and our resources are more and more exploited, and the difficulties of our public problems increase, we are more and more aware that we are in need of a providence in the future."

No Democrat need feel any moral hesitancy about welcoming all the advantage which discontent over heightened living cost may bring in party's way; for until recently luck was entirely on the other side and had become due to a change. The Republican party has been fortunate not only in profiting by the kindness of Providence in the country and by the blunders of its opponent but even by the circumstance that its own worst blunders—in the panic-breeding currency legislation before 1893—fell upon its opponent's head. The Democratic party is more than due a little sheer luck, in turn. It is a right to profit both by the real culpability of the Republican party in this matter of higher cost and by the popular disposition to blame a party in power for many things which no party could possibly help. It profited thus two years ago, when it carried the present House. On the other hand, enough promises have perhaps been made already to embarrass Democrats after March 4 next. They can doubtless relieve the trouble in some respect and to some extent, but they cannot remedy it in any complete way. The cause lies two ways. Wit Democratic success now deep, as Governor Wilson frankly well-nigh assured, moderation in both accusations and promises will increasingly become Democrats, therefore, as time goes on.

This is My Birthday

Talcott Williams

Talcott Williams, director of the new school of Journalism at Columbia University endowed by the late Joseph Pulitzer, was born July 20, 1849 in Abieth, Turkey, where his father was stationed as a missionary. He prepared for college at Phillips-Andover and was graduated from Amherst College in 1873. He began his newspaper career soon after his graduation from college on the New York World and continued with that paper until 1877, when he became the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun. For two years he was an editorial writer on the Springfield Republican and in 1881 became one of the editors of the Philadelphia Press in which position he continued until his recent appointment as director of the school of Journalism.

Gen. John R. Brooke

Major General John R. Brooke, the former governor of Cuba, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, July 21, 1838. He enlisted in a Pennsylvania volunteer regiment at the beginning of the civil war and was elevated to the rank of brigadier general before the close of the conflict. When the army was reorganized Gen. Brooke was commissioned lieutenant colonel in the regular service. He was prominent in the war with Spain and after the war was head of the military commission and governor general of Porto Rico. Later he served as governor general of Cuba. Prior to his retirement for age in 1902 he was commander of the Department of the East. Since his retirement Gen. Brooke has made his home at Rosemont, Pa.

Press Comment

Holding Them Up

And it doesn't look like this time, under the senate leadership, the democratic tariff measures are even going to reach the president, which point they did reach last time and furnished some fine campaign material for the democratic party (see platform) when Taft vetoed them.—Wilmington Dispatch.

Something of the Weather

Of course it has been hot this summer, but not as hot as one imagines. Ninety-one has been the highest and this was on June 17 and 18th. So for this month the mercury has ascended only to 89, yet it has seemed much hotter. This was because of the humidity in the air. We shall hardly escape with a higher temperature than 91. It rarely goes to a hundred, but has a way of hovering around 98 for days at a time.—Greensboro Record.

You Want to Watch Him

Roosevelt wasn't expected to do much when he tossed his lid into the ring—but he did. Some are predicting he won't do much running as a offer—but e will. We wouldn't be surprised at all if he received far more votes than Taft. Men like T. R. don't die every time they are killed on paper. Bryan is an example of this truth. He is bigger today than e ever was, and they've killed him and buried him enough times to fill a large cemetery with graves.—Catawba County News.

Coming In Pairs.

They commense singly some days ago, but now they are coming in pairs. Woodrow Wilson has been notified by a party in Kentucky to this effect: "Born to the wife of Mr. John Payne, of Fredricktown, Wednesday, July 3, 1912, two fine boys—Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Marshall. This is the second time in the last two years that the stock has visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Payne, and each of his visits has been marked by a profusion of gifts, as the last visit he paid, which was in 1911, he left twins, a girl and a boy." Perhaps by 1916 it will be triplets; then what will the happy parents do about it?—Charlotte Observer.

Hard on the Spectators.

That was a god one recorder Smith put over on them at the end of the session of the recorder's court yesterday morning, when half a hundred spectators in the court were compelled to pass in review and tell if they had jobs to give the particulars. The police are investing the "particulars" of each one and it is not impossible that some of the number will eventually land in the roads. It is not to be expected that every man arrested on the charge of vagrancy will be convicted and sentenced. But every arrest of an idle helps some and a very few convictions among the number will make the rest of the tribe a little more ambitious for work.—Charlotte Chronicle.

WHAT A BIG DIFFERENCE A LITTLE TIME MAKES!

—Williams in Joe Chappie's News Letter.

Editorial of Human Interest

By Arthur Brisbane

A NATIONAL PLATFORM ON POVERTY.

For two weeks this country has listened to the talking and planning of the two great parties that tend to provide national welfare.

One set denounces the high tariff because it makes living expensive.

And the other set denounces the suggestion of free trade because it would destroy the workman's opportunity to get good wages.

Gigantic trusts, great organizations, monopolies, the modern dinosaurs and mammoths received attention.

One single state in this union could provide for the needs of all the people in the country—and for many more—if the state were cultivated properly and the products properly distributed.

The manufactured products of another great state in America have increased in a short period. FOURTEEN HUNDRED PER CENT; and the production of wealth of valuable needed manufactured articles of that state has increased ten times as rapidly as the population.

That is the state of New York. Yet, while the production of wealth has been ten times more rapid than the production of human beings, the happiness of the people has not increased.

Wealth multiplied by a percentage ten times greater than the increase in population should mean the multiplication by ten of wellbeing and general happiness. But that does not happen.

The added wealth goes to the accumulation of wealth, goes constantly to increase the store of those that have TOO MUCH and little, if any of it goes to make happier the lives of those that carry the burden of TOO LITTLE.

This is the real problem of the world, the distribution of wealth and the increase of happiness. And it is the problem about which, although they may talk of it and think that they plan to remedy it, the so-called big politicians and statesmen feel not at all.

Their plans are for those who have enough. They try to protect the man fairly well to do against the man very well to do. They are deeply interested in the mechanic who has five dollars a day, and in the manufacturer who needs five millions to increase his business.

But none of them think or plan sufficiently for the man who has a dollar or a dollar and a half a day, for the children whose playground is the gutter, whose only knowledge of government is the policeman with his club telling them that they must not play and must not be happy.

We have a nation in which men are kept down because women compete with them in their labor, glad to work for starvation wages. And each, competing with the other, the men are kept too poor to marry, and the women are kept too poor for happiness and health.

And nobody plans seriously to have that condition changed.

What shall the tariff be on steel and lumber?

What shall we do to the railroads that give better rates to one company than another?

These are the questions that our conventions and our statesmen deal somebody would curtail it soon after it passes the judge's stand. The other questions. What shall we do to prevent forty thousand children in one year, in one city, being infected with the taint of tuberculosis? What shall we do to protect the health of children and of mothers that see the children die unnecessarily? What shall we do to protect those distribution of the earth's products so that a fair day's work by those willing to work will give a decent living to a wife and her children? What shall we do to protect those that are herded in tenement houses, living without light or air—and dying unnecessarily? What shall we do to make life worth while to the vast number of human beings to whom it is only a worry, a curse, a sorrow and a discomfort? The few have TOO MUCH, and the many have TOO LITTLE—yet there is plenty for both, if it were only distributed.

But they do not deal with these trouble with most elocution is that it

What party, what convention, what gathering of wise men will work earnestly to solve that problem—THE INCREASED DISTRIBUTION OF THE WEALTH OF THE WORLD, now that the problem of PRODUCTION has been solved absolutely?

Slowly the problem will be solved, and the dreadful contrast become a thing of the past.

But the change will come very slowly. For it will come only as men are lifted up as a whole, not lifted in classes, as one might lift the roof of a building and leave the foundation low.

It's often a waste of time to tell a man anything for his own good.

What a girl likes in a big strong man is the way she can't make him behave.

It's all right to bury your past but some one is sure to come along and dig it up again.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Rann.

ELOCUTION

ELOCUTION is the art of disguising the English language so that the audience can't tell it from Esperanto without buying a libretto. After a person has studied elocution for a short time he will be able to say "neyther" and "eyether" with-has about as extensive a repertory as the kettle drum. After a man has heard "How Ruby Played" and "The Charge of the Light Brigade" several times in succession at a Chautauqua assembly, he is liable to lose interest in what is going on about him and fall into a pedal bass slumber. The highest form of elocution is assisted at critical periods by the hands and feet, with a little help from the eyebrows and shoulderblades. Some people are able to elocute with considerable talent without using anything but the alphabet, while others charge upon the audience with the abandon of a demented wildmill. Elocution with pebbles and deadly adjectives and later introduced it to the lyceum bureaus. When used as a filler between a bell-ringing act and a tenor solo it produces a very soothing and soporific effect and enables the listener to rest up. The better grades of elocution drift into Shakespearian drama and decorate the stage with primeval rhetoric and some that is not so prime.

WHAT TO DO AND HOW.

How Housework Preserves Youth—Easy to Save Your Complexion—Some Simple Remedies

A woman doesn't mean to be untruthful when she says, "I don't care if hair is getting gray, and I see some wrinkles and creases on my feet."

She declares that in the same spirit that controls the small boy who whistles in the dark to keep his courage up.

She does care. Every woman cares, for we are all desirous of making the most of the looks God has given us. Though we read of beauty at sixty and belles at seventy, we know that these are in the minority.

The great multitude in our own walk of life do not, like wine, improve with age. The gray hairs and the wrinkles are shadows pressing that period, when we will no longer care to look at our reflection in shop windows, under pretense of studying their contents.

An ounce of precaution is worth a pound of course, I want to give my women friends, especially those who can't afford a masseuse, a manicure and a hair dresser, just a few little "tips" that will help stave off that period so much dreaded.

Now as a complexion—this is really an easy matter to handle. The woman who does her own housework has no excuse for not having as fresh and dainty a skin as the pampered pet who spends half her time at the "Beauty Parlor".

Everytime the dishes are washed—if this is done properly—steaming hot water is used. As this arises when the water is drawn or poured into the dish pan, the housewife should hold her face so that the vapor will moisten it. Then with a clean linen cloth dipped in cold water the face should be rubbed, and glow and smoothness will follow that is the real essence of "well groomed".

If steaming appears to make the skin a little flabby, do it only once a day or perhaps only once in two days. But do it thoroughly. Its cleansing quality if nothing else, commends it.

When cucumbers are peeled, rub the face and hands with the rinds—nothing is so withering. Note the many cucumber creams on the market, none as good as the cucumber itself.

If the eyes begin to lose their lustre, don't throw away the tea leaves or the liquid left in the teapot. Keep these, and at night lay them in a cloth and place on the closed eyes when ready for sleep.

Now for the hair—I don't advocate dyes, but sage tea will help to keep the hair dark and glossy, and sometimes even coax the gray hairs back to their natural color.

Don't try pulling out these white visitors, for, as you know, ten will come to their funeral, and unfortunately they do not come soberly and appropriately arrayed in dark colors.

Though it seems prosaic, housework is really the best exercise to develop woman's beauty. Take sweeping for example—even doctors prescribe this as better than many gymnasium exercises for the development of grace and the hardness of flabby flesh.

Begin the throat begins to show age, and there is one more certain indicator of advancing years—keep away from high collars and practice the simple exercise of helping your head up and puffing at some imaginary bit of fluff. This done several times a day will restore the scrawniest neck, unless caused by disease.

The care of hands—use of gloves and cold cream, I wrote about some times ago. Therefore I need only admonish the housewife to be very careful in drying her hands, making certain that she does not go out in the cold when they are damp, and always wearing gloves when she works in the ashes or digs in her garden.

These are the two strongest points to remember in the care of hands—not had if you only think of them, and the results more than fully justify the few minutes extra expended.

Wash good lace by dipping it up and down in warm soap suds and rubbing it very gently in the hands, and then, after it has been rinsed in warm water, it may be dipped within the folds of a soft towel.

Remove grease from silk with a piece of magnesia rubbed wet over the spot. Let it dry, but off the powder and the grease spot will have disappeared. French chalk is also used, but it is used dry and brushed off after 24 hours.

Private citizens have promised funds detectives to clear up the mystery in which the police are involved. With the advent of private detectives five distinct investigations will be under way in connection with the Rosen-

The police and district attorney are conducting inquiries along separate lines, the grand jury is working on still another line, the mayor is having a quiet investigation in his own way, and the private detectives will make the fifth.

Americans Accused of Fostering Plot

SUEL, Korea, July 19.—During the public examination today of the 123 converted Koreans charged with plot-ting against the government and the life of Count Terauchi, the Japanese governor general, the examining judge named about a dozen American and Canadian missionaries whom the prisoners during the preliminary examination has asserted were indirectly interested in the conspiracy because they were connected with the schools to which the prisoners belonged or spoke to the prisoners concerning the independence of Korea.

There is not the slightest reason to believe the questions of the judge or from the attitude of the authorities that the government has any idea of formulating charges against the American missionaries. The prisoners undoubtedly at a previous hearing implicated the missionaries, but their publicity retracted their statements.
