WALDO MAKING INVESTIGATION

Serious Charges Involving a Number of Police Officials Are to be Made in the Statement to be Handed to the Grand Jury

NEW YORK, July 21.—Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, active head of the police hunt for the murderers of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was busy today and tonight making mysterious visits about the city in his efforts to solve the mystery and bring about the sensational developments which he had indicated to be impending. Developments were looked for late last night but in the early evening nothing could be learned as to what had resulted from the commissioner's activity.

High officials of the police department have ceased their defense of Lieutenant Becker, formerly head of the strong arm squad and accused by Rosenthal of having been in partnership with him in a gambling business. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty indicated this when in reply to a question as to whether Becker had been sent to Far Rockaway to bring in Bald Jack Rose Wednesday night, he said:

"I would no more send out Becker to arrest a man in connection with the Rosenthal murder than I would send out Jack Rose himself."

That Dougherty believes Rose is an important figure in the case is freely admitted by the commissioner. Mr. Dougherty has implied in a statement that he does not believe the assertion of Rose that he was not in control of the murder car at the time Rosenthal was shot down. Rose is a friend of Lieutenant Becker and is said to have been working for Becker the night before the murder.

Another witness of the assassination was found early today. He is a newspaper boy who sold Rosenthal a batch of morning papers just before the gambler was shot to death in front of the Metropole hotel. The newsboy tells a rather vague story of the murder and as yet is believed to have given little testimony of importance bearing upon it.

Five Sailors Are Scalded to Death

NEW YORK, July 20.—Details of the accident reported by wireless on the Italian steamer Principe di Piemonte, in which five of the crew were killed, were learned today when the vessel arrived here from Naples.

A branch steam pipe burst, filling the fire room and engine room on the port side with a great volume of steam. Five men were rescued from the scalding steam and carried to the ship's hospital. Although every attention was given them, they were so badly injured that they died within an hour.

Gov. Blease Viciously Attacks Enemies

COLUMBIA, July 20.—"As your Chief Executive it is my duty to defend my state and my people, therefore I lay bare before the people of South Carolina the damnable conspiracy to cause them to lose confidence in my honor and to tarnish the proud name of the greatest Commonwealth in the American Union," is the way Governor Blease begins his lengthy reply, issued today to the charges of graft and corruption brought against him by Thomas B. Fielder of Atlanta and William J. Burns the detective.

The written defense, which covers 47 typewritten pages, bristles with denunciation of Fielder, Burns and the dispensary investigation committee. Terms Fielder "a bribe-taker and

BACK IN WHITE HOUSE TODAY

Quiet Reigns in Governor's Home in Sea Girt After Surprise Party From Congressional Democrats Led by Champ Clark

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 21.—Governor Wilson eschewed politics today and remained in seclusion all day at the home of a friend not far away. He slept 12 hours and expected to retire early again tonight and duplicate the feat. He was thoroughly tired, he said, from the activities of the week and did not intend to return to Sea Girt until tomorrow, when he will see Senator Reed of Missouri, a member of the national campaign committee. It will be the first time Governor Wilson will have seen Senator Reed since the personnel of the committee was announced. Representative Henry of Texas, probably will accompany Senator Reed.

A telegram received here today from Col. Robert L. Ewing, national committeeman from Louisiana and a member of the campaign committee, announced that he had again started a public subscription list for the campaign fund, through the columns of his newspaper. Several other publishers, including Norman E. Mack, of Buffalo, have also sent word of the opening of similar subscription funds. One of the things the campaign committee has in mind is the opening of dollar subscription lists throughout the country.

Edward E. Grosscup, chairman of the Democratic state committee, of New Jersey announced today that he was planning a "rally day" at Sea Girt early in August for all the Democratic clubs in New Jersey. He expected to get in touch with all organizations in New Jersey, he said—he has already consulted the officers of several—and asked them to come to Sea Girt, with as many members as possible. Mr. Grosscup hopes to have a New Jersey democrat in every yard of the rifle range, which extends 1,200 yards in front of the governor's cottage to the ocean and is half a mile wide. The date for the rally has not been fixed but probably will be after the formal notification for nomination.

perjurer," and the Burns detectives "cattle and hirelings".

The governor is vitriolic in his characterization of the charges against him and hurled back in the teeth of the investigating committee charges of unlawful acts and a conspiracy to defeat him for re-election.

Senator Tillman Congratulates Dr. Wilson on His Nomination

THERE was one pathetic incident in the midst of the rejoicing at Sea Girt over the nomination of Dr. Woodrow Wilson. It occurred when Senator Tillman of South Carolina called at the governor's summer home to congratulate him. Broken by long illness, the veteran Democrat clasped the hand of the newly acclaimed leader of his party and assured him of his good wishes. He was most demonstrative, however, when addressing Mrs. Wilson, to whom he said several times, "I expect to see you the next lady of the White House." It is not long since Senator Tillman issued an address to the voters of South Carolina in which he asked for a renomination, expressing his desire to die in harness. He has been in the senate since 1885 and has been one of the most forceful of its members. Early in his political career he earned the name of "Pitchfork" Tillman from his violence in debate, but of late years he has expressed his views—always decided—with less vehemence. Though he has made many enemies, he is one of the most respected men in the senate.

WILLIAM J. BURNS TO ACT IN WILMINGTON

BLIND TIGERS THERE ARE SHAKY BULL MOOSE ATTRACTS, SO DOES W.W.

It Has Been Hinted That the Famous Detective May be Called in to Help Defeat "Social Clubs"

WILMINGTON, July 21.—One the eve of a two week's term of superior court for the trial of criminal cases, police officers headed by Chief of Police Fowler raided two so-called social clubs early this morning, arresting six in one and four in the other on charges of gambling. They gave bonds for appearance before the recorder tomorrow. This is believed to be only the beginning of a series of sensations that will be sprung by the police department of which Councilman B. C. Moore has charge during the present term of court. One restaurant was also raided this morning and a quantity of beer found in the place. It is said that at the Recorder's court tomorrow the identity of two detectives who have been engaged for the past several weeks in gathering evidence against blind tigers and gambling joints will be revealed.

It is not improbable by days of it is not improbable that judgment will be prayed by a number of the 60 odd defendants who entered nolo contendere for selling whiskey at a recent term of superior court and it is reported that the detectives have been gathering evidence to prove that the defendants have not lived up to their agreement to desist from the sale of whiskey until January 1, next. It was rumored today that William J. Burns the famous detective and several of his sleuths have been at work here, but this was said to be not true by those in a position to know.

Dr. J. C. Caldwell, an able divine and president of Atlantic Christian College at Wilson, N. C., delivered two forceful sermons in the Christian church here yesterday to large congregations.

MIKADO'S LIFE HANGS ON BALANCE

Japs Do Not Give Way to Sorrow They Feel

ALWAYS STOIC THEY REMAIN

Little Hope is Entertained For the Ruler of the Island Empire. Last Bulletin Given Out by Mikado's Physician is Gloomy

TOKIO, July 21.—This day of suspense closed with a bulletin from the imperial bedside that practically excluded hope for the recovery of Mutsunto, emperor of Japan. At 9:10 a. m. the four physicians in consultation at the palace announced that his majesty's symptoms were discouraging. The emperor had been unable to sleep and was delirious. His heart was weak, his pulse 82 and his respiration 34.

The emperor's subjects and foreigners who have lived under his rule are united tonight in their anxiety. All day members of the cabinet and high government officials gathered in the outer rooms of the palace awaiting word from the sick chamber, while a continual stream of callers registered their names with messages of sympathy of condolence.

Regulations prohibiting unnecessary noises and all forms of entertainment were unnecessary, for although the Japanese are undemonstrative people, enduring personal and private troubles with stoicism in the present situation the greatest depression and anxiety are everywhere apparent.

Information from the sick room of the crown prince, Yoshihito who is convalescing from chickenpox, is that the heir apparent is so recovered that he may be permitted to visit the emperor's bedside tomorrow. Significant of the general belief that the emperor cannot recover is the fact that most of the callers at the imperial palace afterward paid their respects at the residence of the crown prince.

CORE STATION, N. C., July 19.—Yesterday passed without special event in the Boy Scouts camp. In the morning two boat loads crossed over to Atlantic hunting for mall and cold drinks. Quite a number of cards and letters were sent home to let the folks know all are getting along well. The boys put in the day amusing themselves as they pleased, some hunting and some fishing, but with both of these luck was poor. Not having a plot they have not yet located good fishing grounds but are keeping up the search.

Core Life Saving Station, near which our camp is located, is on a narrow strip between the sound and ocean, the latter only a few hundred yards away, and all the breeze that comes from any direction is right off the water. The surf along the beach is treacherous and the boys were given instructions not to go in. Thursday evening, however, Master Rock arranged for them all to get a plunge in the surf under proper safe guard and they had the time of their life. A long rope provided a life line, one end being held secure on shore, one of the largest boys wearing a life preserver was tied to the other end and in this way four or five were let go out together, alternating until all had rode the billows. They had the time of their lives.

Another fine night with a breeze on which no mosquitoes could live and the boys were up by time this morning ready for anything that comes along. All are keeping remarkably well and in fine spirits. Capt. Godwin of the life saving station, came to camp to see the boys and said he had never seen a finer and more orderly bunch of its size. The boys appreciated the compliment.

CONGRESS WILL SOON ADJOURN

Intricacies of Tariff Over, Holiday in Sight

FINISH SESSION IN AUGUST

Adjournment Sure to Take Place if Impeachment of Judge Archbald is Deferred to Latter Part of November or December

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The removal of the tariff as an issue in Congress, before the end of the fourth coming week, will mark an important step in the progress toward an early adjournment of the present session. Agreements for votes on the leading tariff, coupled with understandings other important legislation either will be disposed of or hastened toward action, indicate that the week will embrace some of the most important work of the session.

Failure of congress to agree on the important appropriation bills which should have been passed before July 1 has seriously embarrassed many of the government departments. Pressure has been brought to bear on house and senate during the last week to dispose of the pending measures and it is expected that much progress will be made in the next three days. The agricultural and naval bills are still in conference. Failure to act on the postoffice appropriation bill has seriously retarded work in that department it is claimed.

In the senate, the first three days of the week will be devoted to the completion of the sundry civil appropriation bill and debate on the Panama canal administration bill. The Democratic wool tariff bill will be voted on Thursday, the excise tax bill Friday and the sugar tariff bill Saturday. On each measure the debate will be limited to the single day set for the vote.

It is expected that the house will take up the tariff again and pass the cotton bill, as the result of the senate's determination to submit the other Democratic measures to a vote. The program for the week in the house is well filled, however, and the measure may not be reached for some time.

The house will consider during the week measures regulating employment of seamen on American ships; the eight-hour law covering government work; the free ship bill, for the admission without tariff duty, of materials used in American ships and the wireless telegraph measure agreed upon by the two houses.

Predictions as to the probable date of adjournment still hinge on the senate's disposition of the impeachment of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the Commerce court. If the wishes of the majority of the senate prevail and the trial goes over until November it is expected that legislation can be hastened so that an adjournment may be reached August 10 or 15.

The need for immediate legislation regulating the operation of the Panama canal is fully appreciated in the senate, where the fight over free tolls for American ships threatens to hold up the bill already passed by the house. A plan has been broached in the senate to pass a temporary measure giving President Taft executive authority to operate the canal, and to fix a temporary toll rate, leaving the permanent question to be settled at the next session, if the differences among the members as to the pending bill are not soon solved.

The house will be called upon during the week to vote on the report of its elections to its electors committee recommending that Representative Theron E. Catlin of Missouri, be ousted because too much money was spent by his relatives in his election. Democrats of the house are expected to support the committee report.

Those who will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Dr. Sykes will be fully repaid as he is easily one of the best speakers in the state. We trust that Greenville will show its appreciation of this opportunity by giving their presence tonight.

"Where is it?"
"Sold."
"Who?"
"Percival."
"Horace, you're a wonder, if there ever was one. Sold it to Percival! You couldn't beat that in a thousand years. You're a great man."
"Praise from Sir Hubert."
"Who's he?"
"An authority on several matters."
"How much did he give you for it?"
"Tut, tut! It was all my own little jaunt, Wallace. I should hate to lie to you about it."
"What about the stake I gave you?"
Ryenne made a sign of dealing cards.
"Threw it away on a lot of dubs, after all I've taught you!"
"Cards aren't my forte."
"There's a yellow streak in your hide, somewhere, Horace."
"There is, but it is the tiger's stripe, my friend. What I did with my money is my own business."
"Will she allow for that?"
"Would it matter one way or the other?"
"No, I don't suppose it would. Sometimes I think you're with us as a huge joke. You don't take the game serious enough." Wallace emptied his glass and tipped the bottle carefully.
"You're out of your class, somehow."
"So?"
"Yes. You have always struck me as a man who was hunting trouble for one end."
"And that?" Ryenne seemed interested.
Wallace drew his finger across his throat. Ryenne looked him squarely in the eye and nodded affirmatively.
"I don't understand at all."
"You never will, Wallace, old chap. I am the prodigal son whose brother ate the fatted calf before I returned home. I had a letter today. She will be here tomorrow sometime. You may have to go to Port Said, if my plan doesn't mature."
"The Ludwig?"
"Yes."
"Say, what a Frau she would have made the right man!"
Ryenne did not answer, but glowered at his glass.
"The United Romance and Adventure Company." Wallace twirled his glass. "If you're a wonder, she's a marvel. A Napoleon in petticoats! It does make a fellow grin, when you look it all over. But this is going to be her Austerlitz or her Waterloo. And you really got the rug; and on top of that, you have sold it to George P. A. Jones! Here's—"

"Many happy returns," ironically. They finished the bottle without further talk. There was no conviviality here. Both were fond of wine, but the more they drank, the tighter grew their lips. Men who have been in the habit of guarding dangerous secrets become taciturn in their cups.
From time to time, siftingly, there appeared against one of the windows, just above the half-curtain, a lean, dark face, which, in profile, resembled the kite—the hooked beak, the watchful, preying eyes. There were two hangers written upon that Arab face, food and revenge.
"Allah is good," he murmured.
He had but one eye in use, the other was bandaged. In fact, the face exhibited general indications of rough warfare, the skin broken on the bridge of the nose, a freshly healed cut under the seeing eye, a long strip of plaster extending from the ear to the mouth. There was nothing of the beggar in his mien. His lean throat was erect, his chin protrusive, the set of his shoulders proud and defiant. Ordinarily, the few lingering guides would rudely have told him to be off about his business; but they were familiar with all turbans, and in the peculiar twist of this one, soiled and ragged though it was, they recognized some prince from the eastern deserts. Presently he strode away, but with a stiff-

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America.
"I cured me of a most dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." Excellent for coughs, colds or any bronchial affection. Price 50c an $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

ness which they knew came from long journeys upon racing-camels.

George dreamed that night of magic carpets, of sad-eyed maidens, of fierce Bedouins, of battles in the desert, of genti swelling terrifically out of squat bottles. And once he rose and turned on the lights to assure himself that the old Yhordes was not a part of these vivid dreams.

He was up shortly after dawn, in white riding-togs, for a final canter to Mena House and return. In two days more he would be leaving Egypt behind. Rather glad in one sense, rather sorry in another. Where to put the rug was a problem. He might carry it in his steamer-roll; it would be handier there than in the bottom of his trunk, stored away in the ship's hold. Besides, his experience had taught him that steamer-rolls were only indifferently inspected. You will observe that the luster of his high ideals was already dimming. He reasoned that inasmuch as he was bound to smuggle and lie, it might be well to plan something artistically. He wished now that he was going to spend Christmas in Cairo; but it was too late to change his booking without serious loss of time and money.

He had a light breakfast on the veranda of the Mena House, climbed up to the desert, bantered the donkey-boys, amused himself by watching the descent of some German tourists who had climbed the big Pyramid before dawn to witness the sun rise, and threw pennies to the horde of blind beggars who instantly swarmed about him and demanded, in the name of Allah, a competence for the rest of their days. He finally escaped them by footing it down the incline to the hotel gardens, where his horse stood waiting.

It was long after nine when he slid from the saddle at the side entrance of the Semiramis. He was on his way to the bureau for his key, when an exquisitely gloved hand lightly touched his arm.

"Don't you remember me, Mr. Jones?" said a voice of vocal honey.

George did. In his confusion he dropped his pith-helmet, and in stooping to pick it up, bumped into the porter who had rushed to his aid. Remember her! Would he ever forget her? He never thought of her without dubbing himself an outrageous ass. He straightened, his cheeks afe; blushing was another of those uncontrollable asininites of his. It was really she, come out of a past he had hoped to be eternally inresuscitant; the droll, the witty woman, to whom in one mad moment of liberality and Galahadism he had loaned without security one hundred and fifty pounds at the roulette tables in Monte Carlo; she, for whom he had always blushed when he recalled how easily she had mulcted him! And here she was, serene, lovely as ever, unchanged.

"My dear," said the stranger (George couldn't recall by what name he had known her); "my dear," to Fortune Chedsoye, who stood a little behind her, "this is the gentleman I've often told you about. You were at school at the time. I borrowed a hundred and fifty pounds of him at Monte Carlo. And what do you think? When I went to pay him back the next day, he was gone, without leaving the slightest clue to his whereabouts. Isn't that droll? And to think that I should meet him here!"

That her name had slipped his memory, if indeed he had ever known it, was true; but one thing lingered incandescently in his mind, and that was, he had written her, following minutely her own specific directions and inclosing his banker's address in Paris, Naples and Cairo; and for many passages of moons he had opened his foreign mail eagerly and hopefully. But hope must have something to feed upon, and after a struggle lasting two years, she rendered up the ghost. . . . It wasn't the loss of money that hurt; it was the finding of dross metal where he supposed there was naught but gold. Perhaps his later shyness was due as much to this disillusioning incident as to his middle names.

"Isn't it droll, my dear?" the enchantress repeated; and George grew redder and redder under the beautiful, grateful eyes. "I must give him a draft this very morning."

"But . . . Why, my dear Madame," stammered George. "You must not . . . I . . ."

Fortune laughed. Somehow the quality of that laughter pierced George's confused brain as sometimes a shaft of sunlight rips into a fog, suddenly, stiletto-like. It was full of malice.

STATE AND COUNTY NEWS

BETHEL, July 19.—The Woodmen of this place gave a picnic today for its members, friends and the families of the members. The committee on arrangements selected the beautiful campus grounds of Bethel Academy for its festival grounds. About one hundred and fifty or two hundred people were present. At twelve thirty o'clock there was a speech by the Rev. D. A. Feutrell, in which he eloquently defined fraternal love. At one o'clock the dinner was spread on the large rectangular table, the invocation given by Rev. Mr. Feutrell, and the eating done by the hungry crowd who were accustomed to dine at twelve. The gallant conversation of the men, the pleasant conversation of the ladies and the fascination of being together made the day enjoyable to all.
Mr. Willis Jones of Baltimore is at home spending a vacation with his parent Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Jones of this place.

Miss Alden Cuthrell of Rocky Mt. is visiting Misses Ruth and Selma Carson.

Roberson, Barnhill and company have started on a garage building which, when completed, will be of great service to the many who own automobiles around here.

Mr. M. O. Blount has started on a large store which will greatly add to the business interests as well as to the looks of Main street.

Miss Maud Barnhill, a popular young lady of this place, has been elected to teach the fifth and sixth grades of Bethel High School.

URGENT NEED FOR FUNDS

The superintendent of the North Carolina Children's Home Society has arrived in Greensboro from a three-week's business trip outside the state, and makes the astonishing statement that within the past four days 18 new children have been received, 9 of them in one bunch last evening. Two more are to arrive today and two tomorrow, making 22 in six days. During the same period he reports placement of seven children in homes and others will be placed rapidly.

These statements show the bright side of the work of the Society and illustrate the oft-repeated fact that, if supplied with money to pay the expenses of the work it has the ability otherwise to meet all demands. Money is necessary. The bona fide monthly expense budget at present is only $700, with which the Society can handle an average of one new child a day—the average that it has asked to provide for for a whole year; yet the income for June, 1912 was $480.55 and till last night the entire July income was only $94.00.

Now we know by several years of intimate acquaintance with the work of the Society that it is in every way worthy of the most generous support of our people. It is doing a distinct and separate work from that of any of the institutional orphanages; and but for its zeal and activity, a work that would not be done. But look at the foregoing financial showing—$574.55 contributed in six weeks! We also know that almost every dollar of that had to be called for in person by a salaried representative of the Society—requiring more than one-third of the fund collected to maintain these representatives.

Doubtless hundreds of readers would gladly contribute if called on; why not save the expense to the Society and send the money direct to the superintendent or to this paper, and we will turn it over—and send it now while the need is so great. Your personal contribution may save a life from a hopeless and useless existence and make of it a worthy man or woman whose achievements will bless others and make the world a better place to live in.

Wilson for President

AS THE BRITISH SEE WILSON

A "Practical" Scholar, Who Looks Like Joseph Chamberlain.

Mr. Woodrow Wilson, the candidate of the Democratic party for the Presidency of the United States, has made for himself a quicker and more brilliant name, and by quieter means than any American of our day and generation. He stands out today by far the strongest man that his party could have put forward.

Indeed, to read Mr. Wilson's speeches, to study his acts and to talk with the man himself is to be filled with the new hope for American politics. It is not often they attract the best type of men; they have never to my knowledge attracted a man of Mr. Wilson's type before. He is a phenomenon new to American experience. He belongs, in fact, much more to the class of public men we are accustomed to in England than to the class that has hitherto pretty well dominated American affairs. He is nearer to Lord Mortley, Mr. Balfour and Mr. Bryce, to Walter Bagehot and the late Professor Butcher than to such typically American politicians as Cleveland, McKinley or Bryan.

That is to say, he is primarily a scholar, a student, a writer, a political philosopher; a vigorous, illuminating and untrammelled critic and observer of government and institutions rather than what Americans, with unconscious irony, are pleased to call "a practical statesman." Of his 55 years 30 have been past in the lecture room. He has written the best "History of the American people" that has yet appeared.

The weakness of many American public men is that they have never been grounded in the fundamentals of political science. It is Mr. Wilson's strength that he has not only as a student got to the bottom of things, has not only as a writer and professor applied his knowledge to the discussion, criticism and illumination of current measures and events, but has also as president of Princeton University from 1902 to 1910 superadded and sustained an all-round experience in the daily work of administration. The head of such an institution need not be a scholar or a commanding intellectual figure, though Mr. Wilson's power, the capacity for compromise, is both. But he must have the organizing gift of diplomacy, the ability not merely to form decisions but to work them out in detail; he must have trained himself to the transaction of business and the exercise of executive authority, and he must have been braced by the continuous contact and often the wholesome conflict with a variety of men and issues. What better apprenticeship to public life could any man with the capacity of growth in him have served than this?

It was, I believe, Col. George Harvey, the keen-eyed editor of Harper's Weekly and the North American Review, who was the first to designate Mr. Wilson as a man pre-eminently qualified for party leadership and public office. Nothing came, or could have come, of the suggestion until about a year ago, when the New Jersey Democrats, anxious to appear respectable and not doubting that college professor, untutored in the ways of "practical politics," would be thoroughly amenable to professional guidance and control, offered Mr. Wilson the nomination for the Governorship. The "machine" was so tainted and disreputable that many Progressive Democrats could not be convinced that Mr. Wilson was not standing as the candidate of "the interests." It took only a little while to undeceive them; it took only a little longer to make the bosses realize that in this untired amateur they had met their match.

Mr. Wilson's campaign was of a character unique in American electioneering. There was none of the usual party claptrap and vituperation, no effort to keep alive meaningless party lines and traditions, not dealing in sonorous generalities. From first to last Mr. Wilson appealed to reason and to conscience. He discussed nothing but specific and ponderable issues, and on each of them he showed just where he stood. In language that the most ignorant could understand and the most fastidious could appreciate and be stirred by, with innumerable happy side flashes of humor and illustration, keeping always to a high elevation of thought and feeling and practicality, Mr. Wilson laid bare the abuse of New Jersey politics and industrial organizations, clearly outlined his program for their reform and asked from all who cared for the good name of their state the support that would enable him to carry it out. Republicans and Democrats flocked to the meetings of this university president, who saw and spoke so clearly and stated what he proposed to do so frankly and modestly; Republicans and Democrats joined on polling day in electing him by a triumphant majority.

When Mr. Woodrow Wilson became Governor, New Jersey was one of the most depraved and reactionary States in the Union. It was farcical even to speak of it as a government of the people, by the people, for the people. It was a government of the people, by the bosses, for the trusts.

Today things are very different. Pressing the prerogatives of his office to their fullest limits, but never overstepping those limits, Governor Wilson has contrived to pass through a Democratic Assembly and a Republican Senate a whole series of beneficent reforms.

One gets, in talking with Mr. Wilson, that sense which politicians in America are all too rarely able to impart—the sense of a solid, mellow background of reading, culture and philosophy. His politics are the politics of ideas and measures, not of personalities and committee rooms. For all his years in the lecture room there is nothing "donish" about him. His manner is utterly unpretentious, even in its geniality; his rich flow of talk is flecked with spontaneous humor; his whole bearing speaks of alertness, zert and confident energy.

In appearance he curiously resembles Mr. Joseph Chamberlain. One might describe his feature as a lengthened, Americanized edition of Mr. Chamberlain's. The mouth is a shade more sensitive and hostile, the eyes a trifle larger and more charged with mirth, the lower jaw appreciably longer, but the general contour and effect are virtually the same, with the advantage perhaps of a more business-like air of precision on Mr. Chamberlain's side and of a greater charm and reflectiveness on Mr. Wilson's. There are other and more important points that the two men have in common. Both see with a piercing distinctness and both are equally intolerant of shams, haziness and the specious forms and aspects of things that pass muster as realities.—"B" in The London Daily Mail.

This is My Birthday

William Sooy Smith

General William Sooy Smith, who was General Grant's chief of cavalry in the Vicksburg campaign, was born in Tarleton, Ohio, July 22, 1830 and graduated from the West Point academy in 1853. General Smith served with distinction through the greater part of the civil war—until disabled by illness near the close of the struggle—but his fame rests more upon his achievements as a civil engineer than his military record. For many years he was regarded as one of America's foremost civil engineers. He practiced the profession in Chicago in the '50s and again took it up after the close of the war. In the construction of the lighthouse at the western entrance to the Straits of Mackinac, General Smith was the first engineer in the world to use pneumatic caissons. He built the first all-steel railway bridge in the world at Glasgow, Mo., and numerous other bridges by the pneumatic process. But the same means he completely changed the methods of constructing the heavy buildings in Chicago and their large cities. Since his retirement from active work some years ago General Smith has made his home near Medford, Ore.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Rann.

CUBA

CUBA is a three cornered section of uninterrupted hell with which your Uncle Samuel was gold-bricked by Spain a few years ago. It was discovered by Columbus who never forgave himself. Columbus did not stay long after learning what brand of climate the Cubans were using and sailed away as soon as he could get rid of the insect life of which every Cuban is so justly proud. Soon afterward Spain, which was looking for a cheap form of slow death for some of her undesirable citizens, came over to Cuba and took down the small-pox signs which Columbus had hung on the brow of Morro Castle, after which she populated the island with bug-proof patriots and set them to counterfeiting the Havana filler. From that day to this Cuba hasn't grown anything but tobacco and nine different shades of pestiferous purgatory. Whenever Spain would send over her standing army to bring order out of chaos, the Cubans would collect a battalion of native tarantulas, milk-fed mosquitoes and unemployed typhus germs and turn them loose upon the Spanish soldiery as they were wrapped in slumber and the well-known Cuban jaundice. It cost Spain so much for quinine capsules and squirrel whiskey that she finally agreed to let us have Cuba in exchange for the price of a new navy. The imperial historian will have to admit that this was the cutest thing that Spain ever did, as it cost the American people more to subdue the Havana water mains and the proud Castilian soap spirit of the inhabitants than the whole Spanish navy would bring on a rising market. After remaining in Cuba long enough to introduce the Saturday night bath and fertilize the grape fruit industry with American certificates of stock, we took away our flag and plumbing tools and left the island to its fate. As soon as we left, Cuba set up the most torrid and pestilential form of government the inhabitants could think of and is now scattering internecine strife and busted stock companies from shore to shore. If congress should trade Cuba for a good family driving horse, nobody would protest loudly enough to disconcert the body politic.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor: Have been out on the "firing line" this week in the interest of The Reflector. The people seem to be satisfied that I have commended myself with this "sheet of music," but not all that I have seen have let on "to a full pocket, or shown the best of disposition to pass up for an advance payment on a subscription. Then there are others that your generosity have permitted to stay on the delinquent list so long, who manifestly are surprised at my presumption in approaching them for a settlement. However, I explain to them that such is my business and being a splendid Democrat of the Jefferson-Wilson-Kitchin type, this believing in "equal rights to all and special privileges to none." I cannot do otherwise than remind them that the paper is worth the money and that they are too good and honest to read it and not pay for it as others have to do. Some, of course, haven't considered it in that light and when they do, I have faith to believe that they will readily pay up and then go on the advance list, where all good people long to be.

Very truly yours, J. F. STOKES.

Grimesland Items

GRIMESLAND, July 19.—Miss Mary Proctor, after spending several days in Farmville with Mrs. W. A. Polard, returned home today. Miss Addie Johnson of Greenville spent Sunday with Mrs. J. O. Proctor. The brick work of Dr. J. H. Hudson's office is complete and the wood work will soon be done. Our little town at this time is a one-sided town and we hope that it will not be long before the other side will be coming from the ashes. The farmers are very busy now looking after their tobacco and they are all smiles over the good crops they have. Mr. W. E. Proctor, in company with his wife, and Mrs. L. Y. Holliday returned today from Snow Hill and Seven Springs. Reports a good time. Miss Susie and Earl Proctor returned from Bethel where they have been spending a few days with Miss Maud Barnhill. Miss Velma Venters of Shelmerdine returned home after spending a few days with us. We are always glad to welcome Miss Velma in our town. The Epworth ball team of Craven county, are in our town today playing ball. We are betting on our team to win. Mr. R. A. Fleming is spending the week at Bragaw, N. C., on business. Mr. W. H. Adams lost a barn and tobacco by fire a few days ago.

North Dakota State Fair

FARGO, N. D., July 22.—The prospect of bumper crops in North Dakota this year has served to increase public interest in the annual state fair nically and have a heavy body and be what we call "oily and waxy". Farmers have experienced cutting tobacco one week and have excellent success with it and then cut again a few days later off the same piece of ground and have altogether different luck. I will be pleased to correspond with any tobacco grower upon this subject if they will enclose sufficient postage for reply.

Yours truly, R. V. DAVIS, P. O. No. 3, Mocksville, N. C.

Pointed Paragraphs

The thing that a conceited person sure of is that he isn't. It takes a woman to wear high shoes in summer when she wears low ones in winter. It's so hard for most men to make a few dollars that some can make several millions. The children are a great happiness to the home when they are away from it for the summer. A man would rather spend $100 on telegrams to strangers that 2 cents on a postage stamp for a letter to his family.—New York Post. The rolling stone never gets to the top. When a woman sees a clock, she always sets it by guess. If a man is a model husband, that is the one thing he is fit for. A bottle of water—you can see through. Many a man's intellect is like a fit. The man who steals a grill's heart is liable to servitude for life. Surely he is a wise man who knows when he has enough before he gets it. A pleasure, like a pipe, may be a solace in one man and a nuisance in others.—Chicago News.

In Lighter Vein

Shall we call on our congressman in a body or individually? I figure it this way. If we call in a body he'll just make us a speech. Well? But if we call individually he'll have to take us each out to lunch.—Kansas City Journal. You are falliar, I presume, with Johnson's Rasselas? observed the Boston girl. You must have got him mixed with Frank Gotch, said the St. Louis young man. Johnson's a prizefighter. Then silence like a cataclasm, descended to ameliorate the impact of the atmospheric concussion.—Chicago Tribune. Nellie—They say mountaches are coming back. Mamie—Do you care? Nellie—Certainly. BOSTON SOX'S STAR OUTFIELD

Stahl's Suburban Trio Greatest In Game Today.

THEY HAVE ALL ESSENTIALS.

All Three Men Are Wonderful Throwers and Ground Covers—Speaker, Lewis and Hooper Are Also .300 Batters and Lively on Bases.

Few baseball men if any will deny that the crack infield of the Athletics—Baker, Barry, Collins and McInnis—is the greatest set of inner workers in the game today. Jake Stahl, pilot of the Boston Red Sox, is willing to concede the White Elephants all honors as far as infielders are concerned, but when it comes to outfielders Jake has a lot to say. The former banker is confident he possesses the best trio of suburbanites in either big league and, what is more, is ready to prove his claims. Jake can dig up averages and statistics by the bushel, and if you are not convinced then he will hand you a pass to Jim McAleer's ball yard and let you look over his outfield for yourself. If you are not convinced by that time Jake will give up and say there is no use arguing further.

However, leaving out Jake's views on the subject, as he would naturally be a little biased, it must be admitted that he commands some outfield. After looking over the other fifteen sets of outer gardeners in the big leagues there is nothing in sight that looks any better than Boston's star trio, even though Johnny McGraw will not take a rear seat when star outfielders are under discussion.

Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper and Duffy Lewis are the great Boston trio. At present Tris is the only one batting above .300, but he is making up for the slump of the others by hitting better than at any other time since he has been a big league star. Last year the entire trio hit above .300. Speaker hit .327, Hooper .311 and Lewis .307. Olaf Henriksen, the substitute outfielder, topped all three with .366.

All three men are sensational fielders, remarkable throwers, and Speaker and Hooper are speed boys on the paths. Lewis is not as fast on his pins as his celebrated compatriots, but makes up the difference by his ability to hammer out extra base hits and make them in the pinch. Lewis is the best pinch hitter on the Boston squad and bats fourth in the cleanup position. In the recent series with the Highlanders in New York he got three homers out of his system, as well as divers triples, doubles and singles.

Few teams dare to take any chances at stretching hits when these three talented outfielders are on the job. They can shoot the ball to the plate accurately from any angle and get it there like a streak of lightning. When Lewis first entered the American league many base runners died trying to take chances with his arm. After a time, however, the players came to the conclusion to use discretion when the ball was hit to his territory.

Hooper is one of the ideal lead off men in the country. He has been a little off his batting stride this season; but, though his average is considerably below his last year's figures, he gets on the bases just the same. He has an eye like Jimmy Sheckard and entices many passes from pitchers and also has the speed to beat out infield bouncers. He is the fastest man on the Boston team and steals many bases. As a sun fielder he has few equals.

Speaker, of course, is not only the star of the Boston outfield, but the star of the team as well. He has been a wonderful ball player ever since the Red Sox landed him and this year has been going better than ever. Always a hitter well above the .300 mark, Tris threatens this season to crack all his other high batting records. He has been batting near .400 all year and has led the American league from the start of the race. He is giving Ty Cobb a great battle for the leadership in batting, and unless the Georgia phenom gets a move on Tris may appropriate the mantle that Ty has been sporting since 1907.

The WORLD in SPORTS

ARNST TO DEFEND TITLE.

World's Sculling Champion Practices on Thames For Meet With Barry.

Great interest is being attached to the coming sculling contest between Ernest Barry, the challenger, and the present champion, Dick Arnst. Though this race is scheduled to take place on July 29, Arnst has been out on the Thames learning the deviating water course and hardening his muscles in preparation for the contest, in which the title and $2,500 a side are the stakes. Arnst is described as a veritable Hercules whose power has been expended not only in sculling, but has also made him champion cyclist and very nearly the champion shot of England.

As yet, despite the apparent interest, Barry is finding great difficulty in raising the $2,500 which he has guaranteed Arnst as expenses to cover the trip up from Australia, and this is so worrying him that training is next to impossible until the source of the amount is in clear view. This guarantee was made in view of the fact that Arnst waived his right to race on home waters, where the climate would naturally be strongly in his favor. Even English subjects, unless acclimated, have a fear of the Thames' depressing fogs.

HOW HORINE WAS SAVED.

Osteopaths Prevent Operation on Jumper's Knee and Preserve Sinews.

Those who admire the high jumping of the California wonder, George Horine, do not know how near the surgeon's knife came to ending the athletic career of the Stanford man.

Two or three years ago Horine twisted his knee, and in doing this a minute portion of the ligament was broken off. Occasionally this bothered the jumper, and about eight months ago he went to the doctors for advice. Nothing would satisfy them except an operation, and Horine went to Dad Moulton, his athletic mentor, to tell him that he was to undergo an operation on the knee.

Horine was liberated, but shortly afterward the knee worried him again, and he went to an osteopath for treatment. Then began a long siege, which resulted in the injured member being entirely cured after about $80 had been expended on it. While the professors of osteopathy were working on the jumper's leg they took great interest in the wonderful sinews that developed so much spring.

SAYS ATHLETICS ARE YELLOW

Gandil Thinks Barry Only Brave Member of Philadelphia Team.

The latest sensation in the American league, Chick Gandil of the Nationals, has come out with the statement that has caused all kinds of trouble throughout the circuit and especially between the Tigers and Athletics. He says the Athletics are yellow.

"There is but one man on the Athletics' infield who will not flinch when a baserunner is taking the bag," says Gandil. "That man is Barry. Collins, Baker and McInnis will all sidestep when you come in. Yet they are always squealing when they get hurt. In my opinion Barry is the greatest player in the Athletics' lineup."

MANAGER KLING MAY QUIT.

Leader of Boston Nationals is Said to Be Tired of Handling Braves.

The resignation of Catcher John Kling as manager of the Boston National league team is expected within a short time, according to statements made by close friends of the backstop.

These men claim that Johnny has repeatedly told them of his dissatisfaction with the way he is compelled to run the Braves and has frequently expressed his disgust with what he terms the old fashioned ideas of John Montgomery Ward, president of the club.

Schulte Breaks Fifty Bats a Season.

Outfielder Frank Schulte of the Chicago National league team, who last year was the best home run hitter of that organization, breaks an average of fifty bats a season. The Cub star uses bats with the smallest handle of any that are produced. The stick is of second growth ash and weighs forty ounces.

Durnan to Row Hackett.

Fort William (Ont.) rowing enthusiasts wired Eddie Durnan of Toronto and Jack Hackett of Minnesota, world famed scullers, guaranteeing expenses to row a race on the Kaministiquia river July 25 for $1,000 a side. Durnan beat Hackett last year.

If We But Wait
(By Frances Thornton Hornbeak)

There is no anguish of the soul,
No stern decree of man or fate,
But passes like the Summer cloud,
If we but wait, if we but wait,

Though grim disease hold us enthralled,
Though idles perch at our hide,
A voice within us deftly hints
At patience, time experience wide.

As if a part we'd find in joys
When this has passed, when lost's our own!

Life's onward march, how colorless,
Groping in darkness, maimed, alone!

Hug fast the sorrow then, bruised heart,
Till time has softened it—though late.

Earth has no care can withstand,
Heaven's soothing touch, if we but wait.

The bursting bud, the lilt of song
May woo us from our spectre mate;
But light eternal scatters gloom,
Come life, come death, if we but wait!

Doing Their Duty

Scores of Reflector Readers Are Learning to Duty of the Kidneys

To filter the blood is the kidney's duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are weak. Backache and other kidney ills may follow.

Help ehy kidneys to do their work. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—the tested kidney remedy.

Proof of their worth in the following:

W. A. Respese, 221 E. Fourth street, Washington, N. C., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills, and I know that they can be relied upon to cure lame and aching back and correct trouble with the kidney secretions. For some time my kidneys did not do their work as they should. I was subject to backache and pain when passing the kidney secretions. I used a box of Doan's Kidney Pills as directed and they gave my relief. That was nearly a year ago and I have had no need of a kidney medicine since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember—the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Mail Carriers Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "I cured me of a most dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." Excellent for coughs, colds or any bronchial affection. Price 50c an $31.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD

This was not a sign of weakness, but of a sense of justice too well leavened with mercy. Humanity errs in the one as much as in the other, doubtless with some benign purpose in perspective. Now, it might be that this charming woman had really never received his letter; such things have been known to go astray. In any case he could not say that he had written. That would have cast a doubt upon her word, an unpardonable rudeness. So, for her very beauty alone, he gave her the full benefit of the doubt.

"You mustn't let the matter trouble you in the least," he said, his helmet now nicely adjusted under his arm. "It was so long ago I had really forgotten all about it." Which was very well said for George.

"But I haven't. I have often won-

"This is the Gentleman I've Often Told You About."

dered what you must have thought of me. Monte Carlo is such a place! But I must present my daughter. I am Mrs. Chedsoye."

"I am glad to meet you, Mr. Jones; and in the sad eyes there was a glimmer of real friendliness. More, she extended her hand.

It was well worth while, that hundred and fifty pounds. It was well worth the pinch here and the pinch there which had succeeded that loan. For he had determined to return to America with a pound or two on his letter of credit, and the success of this determination was based upon many a sacrifice in comfort, sacrifices he had never confided to his parents. It was not in the nature of things to confess that the first woman he had met in his wanderings should have been the last. As he took the girl's hand, with the ulterior intent of holding it till death do us part, he wondered why she had laughed like that. The echo of it still rang in his ears. And while he could not have described it, he knew instinctively that it had been born of bitter thought.

They chatted for a quarter of an hour or more, and managed famously. It seemed to him that Fortune Chedsoye was the first young woman he had ever met who could pull away sudden barriers and open up pathways for speech, who, when he was about to flounder into some cul-de-sac, guided him adroitly into an alley round it. Not once was it necessary to dredge in the weather, that perennial threadbare topic. He was truly astonished at the ease with which he sustained his part in the conversation, and began to think pretty well of himself. It did not occur to him that when two clever and attractive women set forth to make a man talk (always excepting he is dumb), they never fail to succeed. To do this they contrive to bring the conversation within the small circle of his work, his travels, his preferences, his ambitions. To be sure, all this is not fully extracted in fifteen minutes, but a woman obtains in that time a good idea of the ground plan.

Two distinct purposes controlled the women in this instance. One desired to interest him, while the other sought to learn whether he was stupid or only shy.

At last, when he left them to change his clothes and hurry down to Cook's, to complete the bargain for the Yborides, he had advanced so amazingly well that they had accepted his invitation to the polo-match that afternoon. He felt that invisible Mercurial wings had sprouted from his heels, for in running up the stairs, he was aware of no gravitative resistance. That this anomaly (an acquaintance with two women about whom he knew nothing) might be looked upon askance by those who conformed to the laws and by-laws of social usages, worried him not in the least. On the contrary, he was thinking that he would be the envy of every other man out at the club that afternoon.

"Well?" said Mrs. Chedsoye, a quizzical smile slanting her lips.

"You wish my opinion?" countered

What Makes a Woman? One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart for making such a god medicine." Only the daughter. "He is shy, but he is neither stupid nor silly; and when he smiles he is really good-looking." "My child," replied the woman, drawing off her gloves and examining her shapely hands, "I have looked into the very heart of that young man. A thousand years ago, a red-cross on his shirtout, he would have been beating his fists against the walls of Jerusalem; five hundred years later, he would have been singing chant-royales under lattice-windows; a pasha and a poet."

"How do you know that? Did he make love to you?" "No; but I made love to him without his knowing it; and that was more to my purpose than having him make love to me," enigmatically. "Three days, and he was so guileless that he never asked my name. But in Monte Carlo, as you know, one asks only your banker's name."

"And your purpose?" "It is still mine, dear. Do you realize that we haven't seen each other in four months, and that you haven't offered to kiss me?"

"Did he go away without writing to you about that money?" Mrs. Chedsoye calmly plucked out the returned fingers of her gloves. "I believe I did receive a note inclosing his banker's address, but, unfortunately, in the confusion of returning to Paris, I lost it. My memory has always been a trial to me," sadly.

"Since when?" coldly. "There is not a woman living with a keener memory than yours."

"You flatter me. In affairs that interest me, perhaps."

"You never meant to pay him. It is horrible."

"My dear Fortune, how you jump at conclusions! Did I not offer him a draft the very first thing?"

"Knowing that at such a moment he could not possibly accept it?" derisively. "Sometimes I hate you!"

"In these days filial devotion is a lost art."

"No, no; it is a flower parents have ceased to cultivate."

And there was in the tone a strained note which described an intense longing to be loved. For if George Percival Algernon Jones was a lonely young man, it was the result of his own blindness; whereas Fortune Chedsoye turned hither and thither in search of that which she never could find. The wide Lybian desert held upon its face a loneliness, a desolation, less mournful than that which reigned within her heart.

"Hush! We are growing sentimental," warned the mother. "Besides, I believe we are attracting attention." Her glance swept a half-circle complacently.

"Pardon me! I should be sorry to draw attention to you, knowing how you abhor it."

Wives of Opposing Political Leaders at Baltimore Convention

AMONG the most keenly interested spectators of the proceedings of the Democratic national convention were the wives and daughters of men prominent in the political life of the nation. Miss Genevieve Clark, the seventeen-year-old daughter of the speaker, had the time of her young life in watching the varying fortunes of her father's candidacy. Mrs. Taft came up from Washington and sat in the box reserved for Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee. Chairman Ollie James' remark, "Theodore Roosevelt says Mr. Taft is a friend of the trusts, and Mr. Taft says Theodore Roosevelt is a friend of the trusts, and I believe both told the truth," seemed particularly to amuse her, and she led the applause of her little party at the close of the permanent chairman's speech. Mrs. Mack, wife of the national chairman, in the same box, was also an attentive observer of the lively doings among the excited delegates. Mrs. Taft is seen at the right in the photograph, Mrs. Mack at the left.

Notes of New Fashions

Paris calling costumes now have small trains. The wraps worn for visiting have assumed a great importance and are extremely expensive. The newest fad in footgear is the "Pekine" boot made of rare leather cut in thin strips. Ermine, skunk and opossum are in favor with women of ultra taste. Servicable gowns of pompadour silk, black satin and crepe meteor are indispensable for the summer wardrobe. This season they vary in style from severe tailor-made to elaborate costumes.

A Favored Mortal

How sweet this life
Must be to one
Who sees each day
His duty done
And doth retire
To well earned rest,
Without a care
To vex his breast.

He may not hear
Ambition's call,
He may not be
Honoured at all,
But peace is his,
With hope imbued,
And tranquil thoughts
And quietude.

Nuts As Low Cost Food

Mrs. Charlotte E. Bangs of Boston, who among other thinking housekeepers in making an exhaustive study of the cost of living, says nuts may be substituted to great advantage. She gives receipt for nit hash and croquettes which go far toward solving the problem, as follows:

Meatless hash—Equal quantities of chopped nuts and bread crumbs, with pinch of sage and salt. Add for each half pound of the foregoing mixture 2 tablespoonfuls of strained or chopped tomatoes; heat with a little water, or bake brown.

Meatless croquettes—Twenty four almonds, 1-2 pound pecans; chop together fine and mix with equal quantity of cold boiled rice or hominy; add seasoning and chopped parsley, mould into cakes and dip in beaten egg and bread crumbs and then fry.

Meatless "a la Virginia"—Soak, overnight, quart of dried green peas; boil till tender, but not broken; drain, and save liquor for soup; mix the drained peas with 1-2 pound of chopped suet and three cold boiled potatoes; season and add chopped parsley and a dash of Worcestershire sauce; press into cakes, dip in flour and fry brown; serve hot.

Lemon Honey

(A filling for any empty tart case)
Two and two-thirds cupfuls of granulated sugar, the juice of three lemons and the rind of two grated lemons, one-half cupful of fresh butter and six eggs. Boil all gently in a saucepan, stirring all the while until it is as thick as honey. Put it in jars and tie it down when it is cold, but do not put wax on the top. This will keep for months in a dry place.

Chocolate Ramsgate Tartlets

Three quarters of a cupful of graded sweet chocolate, one tablespoonful of powdered sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of butter. Cream the butter and the sugar and then add the cornstarch and chocolate; beat up the egg, mix well and bake in pastry cases.

Welch's Cheesecakes

One egg, one-half of a cupful of rice flour, four tablespoonfuls of butter, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder. Cream the butter and thoroughly, breaking off into tiny pieces of marble size; again allow them to raise and fry in deep fat until crisp and brown; either chopped nuts or raisins may be added if a rich breakfast bread is desired; serve very hot in a folded napkin.

Farming for Women.

It has of late become much the fashion to suggest to the wornout teacher, clerk, seamstress, stenographer—in fact, to all classes of women who are tired or discouraged—that farming is the ideal occupation, and every year there are more or fewer deluded women who try the experiment. These are truly deluded that take up farming with no previous of what framing means. The common idea of men and women who know nothing of farming seems to be that buying or hiring (preferably buying) a farm is as buying a loaf of bread. Visions of cows, pigs and fowls, who are prolific beyond belief, of acres of fine corn crops, of orchards that fairly break beneath the load of rosy apples, enchane those seized with the madness of farming, and they sink their little capital in a broken-down set of buildings and acres worn out by lack of proper tillage.

Still, Mary Bronson Hartt (in the Housekeeper) is of the opinion that the capable woman, though not bred to farming, can make it a success, and she offers the experience of a woman farmer, Mrs. Charlotte Barrell Ware, pure milk expert and head of a famous plant,—the Wareland dairy. In four short years has turned the stony aridity of abandoned ancestral acres into a highly productive dairy farm, but her experience was bought in so dear a market that she hates to see any other woman follow in her steps. She does not regard farming in any of its branches as a thing to be meddled with by the utterly untrained person. And as for hiring farmers to manage your acres, she says that to the countryman the man from the city (and even more so the woman from the city) is fair prey. No, for all it has taught her. Mrs. Ware does not think of first-hand experiment. "It would have saved me thousands of dollars," says she with feelings, "if I could have had a little practical knowledge of farming before I went into it."

Miss Hartt reminds would-be women farmers that they must be prepared to do anything and everything in connection with farm work, in an emergency. The hired man who must ordinarily take the brunt of the hard work, may become ill—he may go on a spree—then the woman must stand ready to do his work until matters are righted. Can she do it? She will have to make the experiment.

Hints

Do not throw away colored pictures if you have no children in your home. Keep a big envelope in the drawer of the library table and slip into it any pretty picture that comes to the house. Often an advertisement is worth saving after the type matter has been cut off. When an envelope is filled, address it to some child you know or to a children's hospital. Squares in demand chessecloth kept in the kitchen or pantry drawer will be found useful to put over bowls or pitchers containing soup, milk, etc., or to throw over the cold roast before putting it away. Of course the cloths should be fastened snugly over the dishes, and a box of rubber bands kept with the pile of cloth will be found more convenient that strings for this purpose.

Should you be annoyed by the great amount of steam which usually accompanies the cooking of cabbage, onions, etc., take a deep lid, or turn the lid of your cooking pot upside down and put cold water in it. As the water becomes heated, empty it out and put in fresh water. This will not only keep the steam from your kitchen, but will lessen the odor of cooking throughout the house.

Mend your boy's trousers by machine to save both time and labor. These tears never pull out if properly done, and the patch shows very slightly. Take a piece of material as much like the trousers as possible and baste well under the torn or worn places. Put the work under the machine needle and, beginning at one end, stitch backward and forward across the tear, being careful not to turn back until well over the worn place. Stitch as close as you find practical. When finished, cut out from underneath any unnecessary material and press well.

Doping The Baby.

When a baby cries it is in pain or ill. Of course, the proper treatment is to remove the cause of discomfort or cur the illness. But mothers who do not understand the dangers of drugs are too prone to administer some of the numerous soothing syrups that may be had at any drug store. Nothing more impressive than the long listing in the baby saving shows was of medicines to quiet babies, under all sorts of beguiling names, with the content of each noted opposite the name. Opium, morphine and alcohol are prominent in almost all, and chloroform is an ingredient of one. No mother who understands what it means to administer opiates to her babies will ever again still their cries by drugging them. Where other words might be understood, "dope" we take it, will be intelligible enough, and there is hardly any parent who would not shrink from the idea of "doping" her baby.

Swedish Singers at Duluth

DULUTH, Minn., July 22.—The streets of Duluth are gaily decorated with the national colors of the United States and Sweden in honor of the throngs of visitors here for the big saengerfest of the Western American Union of Swedish Singers.
