ROSE UNDERGOES THIRD DEGREE

Gunmen Begin to Realize That "Police System" is Not Able to Cope With Situation. Well Known Gangsters Make Getaway

NEW YORK, July 22.—A country-wide search for slayers of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, is on today.

The names of the gunmen who shot and killed the gambler have become known to the police officials through grilling third degree given several prisoners now in custody in connection with the case.

The band of gunmen that were engaged in the killing after it had been carefully rehearsed in an uptown gambling house are believed to have fled within a day or two, having become convinced that the "police system" will not be able to protect them.

Some of the East Side characters whom the detectives are searching for are Lefty Louis, a gunman; Whitey Lewis, Harry Walton, gambler; Sam Schepps, a gangster and Itsky, another gangster.

Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, head of the strong arm squad, whom Rosenthal directly accused in sharing profits from gambling, was transferred today to an uptown precinct, where he will do desk duty. The proceedings of the grand jury had to be postponed on account of the illness of Mrs. Rosenthal, widow of the dead gambler.

Sweated and grilled by a severe third degree, Sullivan, a former newspaper boy, held as material witness and Sam Paul, the East Side gang leader sullenly made statements early today from which the police commissioner gleaned together important and heretofore missing evidence.

These two men, Sullivan and Paul, were taken into custody last night along with Bridgie Webber, the gambler.

Detectives have learned enough of the case to admit that the gunmen were gathered together on Monday night and taken to Webber's poker rooms, where the final arrangements for the killing of Rosenthal were perfected.

Webber denies all knowledge of the shooting. Plans to kill Rosenthal were laid on the excursion trip of the Sam Paul Association. Rosenthal had been talking too much. Some well known gunmen and backjackets were along on that excursion trip and the detectives now know that Jack Rose and Bridgie Webber were also on board the steamer.

It was that day that Rosenthal threatened to tell more about how the police grafted on gambling houses that the word was passed around that Rosenthal must be made away with.

Latest News From Greenville Boys Camp

CORE STATION July 20.—Every body is full of interest for the Boy Scout campers and they are gathering experience that ought to be valuable to them in after life. Scout Master Rock is certainly giving himself to the boys, taking no thought of his own pleasure but looking well to their pleasure, comfort, health and safety. The boys are devoted to him.

Friday two squads of the boys (all cannot get out at the same time) had fine outings. The evening before Capt. Willis, who is in charge of a Northern hunter's lodge six miles from here, came up to camp. He took to the boys so that he invited five of them—David Whichard, Sherwood Ragsdale, Bascom Wilson, Luther Evans and Louis Arthur, to take a trip with him to Morehead Friday. The boys were up early and walked the six miles to the club house in an hour and half to start from there to Morehead. They had a fine day of it and were back before supper, walking the six miles return in an

Famous Atlanta Shooting Case For Trial

A HELPLESS PARALYTIC NOW

One of the Most Sensational Trials to be Heard in the South Opens in Atlanta. Grace Wheeled to Court to Prosecute Wife

ATLANTA, July 22.—What promises to be one of the most sensational trials in the history of Georgia began this morning when Mrs. Daisey Ulrich Opie Grace was arraigned charged with shooting her husband, Eugene H. Grace, with intent to kill. Mrs. Grace has passionately affirmed her innocence several times prior to the trial.

The chief feature of the trial was the presence of the accusing husband in the court room in an invalid's chair with the lower part of his body paralyzed, aiding in the prosecution of his wife, who, he says, shot him to obtain $27,000 insurance he had taken out on his life for her benefit. The circumstances surrounding this case necessarily give it a romantic air of mystery.

It will be recalled that shortly after 12 o'clock on Tuesday, March 5, the police headquarters of Atlanta received a feeble call for help over the telephone. A number of policemen were dispatched to the home of Eugene H. Grace where the call came and they found every outside door of the house securely locked. Forcing an entrance they made their way to the bedroom. There they found Grace lying unconscious with a gaping bullet wound in his side. On further search they discovered a revolver with one empty chamber lying on the floor in the room immediately below the one in which Grace was lying. After Grace was revived he said that he had been shot while he was asleep sometime during the early part of the morning and that he had every reason to believe that his wife had done it.

Then it was learned that Mrs. Grace had left the house sometime during the day and had gone to Newman, Ga., to visit her mother-in-law.

That evening Mrs. Grace was arrested at Newman and brought back to Atlanta. On facing her husband the latter directly accused her of shooting him and leaving him to die alone. Then Mrs. Grace told him unless he withdrew the accusation she would take the power of attorney which he exercised away from him. This threat seemed to have the desired effect for Grace at once declared that he must be mistaken.

The power of attorney, the threatened removal of which caused Grace to withdraw the accusation for the time being, was in regard to the mortgaging of Philadelphia property that Mrs. Grace had received from her former husband. Grace was to have gone to Philadelphia on the day he was shot to arrange for the mortgage.

Mrs. Grace admits that she did not leave her husband until after 11 o'clock on the day of the 5th. She says that her husband had complained of not feeling well but she supposed that he would soon recover from the indisposition and go to Philadelphia in the afternoon as planned. She says she went to Newman to see her husband's mother and to join the former on a later train and go on to Philadelphia with him.

On the other hand, Grace says that he awoke about 6 o'clock in the morning of the 5th with a burning sensation in his side. He didn't know what was the matter with him and requested his wife to call a doctor. He says Mrs. Grace made a pretense of going to the telephone and calling up a physician, but that in reality she never took the receiver from the hook. But on the contrary stuffed cotton in the instrument to prevent it from ringing.

THE last piece of steel was recently riveted in place on the woolworth building, in City Hall square, New York city, the tallest habitable building in the world. The photograph here reproduced shows the workmen at the top of the structure celebrating the event. It also shows a number of downtown New York office buildings, dwarfed by the gigantic proportions of the Woolworth. This building is fifty-five stories in height, and its tower light, 160 feet in the air, will be visible ninety-six miles at sea. Its total cost will be about $18,000,000. This includes the cost of the land on which it stands—$4,500,000. The floor space will be about twenty-three acres, with room for 2,000 offices, which will accommodate about 10,000 people. The rent roll is expected to be somewhere in the neighborhood of $2,500,000 a year. Cass Gilbert is the architect. The new building will be fifty feet higher than the Metropolitan tower, 138 feet higher than the Singer building and 245 feet higher than the Washington monument. The Eiffel tower, in Paris, is 985 feet high, but that is not a building.

UNDER SUSPICION, JUDGE GIVES UP SEATTLE MAN QUILTS THE BENCH

His Conduct had Been Under Investigation for Some Time. Action Taken on Archbald Matter Decided Him.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 22.—United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, whose conduct on the bench has been under investigation for nearly a month by a sub committee of the House judiciary committee, telegraphed his resignation today to President Taft.

Judge Hanford gives ill health as the reason for his resignation.

Expressing the hope that their work would be concluded shortly the members of the sub committee of the House judiciary committee resumed their inquiry into the record of United States District Judge Hanford.

While the rage of subjects was not known it was thought probable the trial of Chas. F. Munday and those of the other Alaska coal land operators would be investigated.

In addition it was said the defendant desired to place before the committee further evidence calculated to disprove the accusations of drunkenness brought against Judge Hanford.

Washington, July 22.—Word of the resignation of Judge Hanford was received here with surprise.

Representative Berger, the Socialist member from Wisconsin, who introduced the resolution that began the impeachment inquiry of Judge Hanford's conduct, announced that he would drop the matter.

Judge Hanford's resignation was received at the White House today by President Taft as he was starting for the golf links.

WILSON WILL KEEP OFFICE OF GOVERNOR

Governor Reappears Long Enough to Announce That He Does Not Intend to Give up Governorship.

SEA GIRT, July 22.—Governor Woodrow Wilson returned to Sea Girt today from his retreat at the home of a friend nearby with a record of sleeping twenty-four hours out of 36 and announced that he would forget his usual weekly trip to Trenton tomorrow and again go into seclusion to write his speech of acceptance.

The governor hopes to write the speech within two or three days. His whereabouts during this period will be a close secret.

Friends of the governor announced today but on condition that their names not be used, that Mr. Wilson had decided definitely not to resign the governorship of New Jersey during the presidential campaign.

Elizabeth City Naval Reserves Go Off

ELIZABETH CITY, July 22.—The Elizabeth City Naval Reserves left Saturday night on the Elfrida for their annual outing of ten days. They reached Norfolk yesterday and will start tomorrow on their cruise through Hampton Roads and Chesapeake Bay. Lieutenant W. A. Worth is in command.

Illinois Governor to Support Taft

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 22.—The committee of five progressive Republicans who were appointed by Medill McCormick to wait on Governor Deenen and ascertain whether he would support Taft or Roosevelt for president, were informed by the Governor this morning that he considered Taft the regular nominee of the Republican party for president and that as such he felt obliged to support his candidacy.

GOV. WILSON TAKES REST

Only Intimates Know Where He is

LEAVES FOR SHORT PERIOD

During Absence Woodrow Wilson Will Write Speech Accepting Nomination. Speaker Clark Will Take Stump for Nominee

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 22.—Governor Wilson discarded his old gray working coat today for a natty one of serge, drew the shutters of his office pulled down the shades, locked the door and walked leisurely down the steps of the Little White House porch with a bundle of papers under his arm. A moment later he entered a waiting automobile and was off for seclusion and the writing of his speech of acceptance of the Democratic presidential nomination.

There are, perhaps, a score of persons who know where he went, but how long he will be away is a problem as yet unsolved by even the governor himself. That depends, he said, on how fast he can set his brain going and keep it going at the task which lies before him. The speech of acceptance is to reflect his attitude on the leading questions of the hour and on the platform adopted at Baltimore. He wants plenty of leisure to concentrate his mind and to squander on the choosing of his words. He may be gone two days or three, or possibly four. Sea Girt will not see him again until his acceptance speech is finished.

Before he left he conferred with Senators Reed and Stone of Missouri, and Representative Henry of Texas.

Of course Champ Clark will take the stump for Wilson, Senator Reed said afterwards when asked his opinion on one of those fellows who takes off his coat and starts to work for the ticket as soon as the convention is over. Champ Clark is a Missouri Democrat. Senator Stone said he had talked with Governor Wilson about plans for the campaign. They had also discussed debatable states, he added. He was reasonably sure that Wilson would have 230 votes in the electoral college before they reached the list of debatable states.

Representative Henry talked with the governor, he said, about legislation pending in Congress. He also discussed the political situation.

This fight, said Mr. Henry, is among three president—the past president, the present president and the future president. I cannot see it any other way. And as for Texas, she'll give Wilson 300,000 majority.

Japans, Emperor Fights on Bravely

TOKIO, July 22.—The bulletins issued from the palace by the court physicians reporting the improved condition of Mutsuhito, the Emperor of Japan, have been received with satisfaction throughout the capital today. The stock market improved generally as a result of the satisfactory news.

The Nichi Nichi, one of the leading newspapers, publishes a report that entertainments are to be resumed tomorrow.

A note of warning, however, is sounded by one specialist, who is quoted as saying that it is only the first stage in the Emperor's malady and advising against overhopefulness because the second and third stages of the disease must be passed through before full confidence in His Majesty's recovery can be restored.

NO TRUSTS CONTRIBUTED TO FUND

Henry Havemeyer Had Naught to Do With it

SENATOR WHO "GAVE" EXPLAINS

Former Senator Scott of West Virginia, Tells Members of Senate that He Gave $15,000 Himself. Perkins Contributed

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Former Senator Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia, today told the Senate committee investigating campaign funds of 1904 and 1908 that no contributions were made to Colonel Roosevelt's campaign by corporations, by Henry Havemeyer, the sugar king, or any representatives of the International Harvester Company so far as he could recall.

Mr. Scott testified that the largest contribution of which he had knowledge, made to the national committee in that campaign was his own, amounting to $30,000 or $40,000. Geo. W. Perkins, he said, had given $15,000 but not to the national committee. Both contributions were used in the Virginia state campaign.

In October, 1904, Mr. Scott said, Mr. Perkins asked me the situation in West Virginia and I told him we had a very hard fight on for governor and that it was doubtful whether we could elect Wm. O. Dawson. Mr. Perkins said, as a friend of President Roosevelt he would be very sorry to see the state go Democratic and made the contribution.

Mr. Scott said none of the Harvester people had contributed to the 1904 campaign.

How about the Perkins contribution asked Senator Clapp.

Well, I understand that Mr. Perkins' contribution was a personal matter of his own, said Mr. Scott, because of the personal relations that existed between him and President Roosevelt.

Was Mr. Perkins at that time a member of the J. P. Morgan and Co.? asked Senator Jones.

Mr. Scott did not know. Do you know whether Mr. Perkins interceded with the president as to the taking over the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company? asked Senator Paynter.

I don't know anything about that matter, said the witness.

Mr. Scott said he knew of no one connected with the steel, oil or beef trusts who had given anything to the campaign. It had been the settled policy of Geo. B. Cortelyou and Cornelius N. Bliss as the heads of the committee, to make it known that no such contributions would be received he said.

My own corporation never gave a dollar to the campaign, he added. Mr. Scott was then a glass manufacturer.

Allen Waxes Hot at Rebuke From Court

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 22.—The bloody and bullet-pierced garments worn by Prosecutor Foster and Sheriff Webb when the Allen clan shot up the Hillsville court were exhibited to the jury at today's session of the Claude Allen trial.

After having been first identified by D. R. Blankenship, the gawsome exhibits were handed to the jurors each of whom spent some time counting the exact number of bullet holes. They found in Foster's coat and trousers ten bullet holes and seven in Webb's coat and trousers. The commonwealth closed its case in chief after producing one other witness, C. C. Webb, who testified that he had heard Floyd Allen muttering complaints over the manner in which he had been reprimanded by Judge Masie on the evening before the tragedy.

"My name, learn from me; temper is the arch-enemy of smooth complexions. Jones—it makes you laugh."

"It is a homely, honest name."
"I grant that. But a Percival Algeron Jones!" Mrs. Chedsoye laughed softly. It was one of those pleasant sounds that caused persons within hearing to wait for it to occur again. "Come; let us go up to the room. It is a dull, dusty journey in from Port Said."

Alone, Fortune was certain that for her mother her heart knew nothing but hate. Neglect, indifference, injustice, misunderstanding, the chill repulsion that always met the least outreaching of the child's affections, the unaccountable disappearances, the terror of the unknown, the blank wall of ignorance behind which she was always kept, upon these hate had bulled her dark and brooding retreat. Yet, never did the mother come within the radius of her sight that she did not fall under the spell of strange fascination, enchaining, fight against it how she might. A kindly touch of the hand, a single mother-smile, and she would have flung her arms about the other woman's neck.

But the touch and the mother-smile never came. She knew, she understood; she wasn't wanted, she hadn't been wanted in the beginning; to her mother she was as the young of animals, interesting only up to that time when they could stand alone. That the mother never made and held feminine friendships was in nowise astonishing. Beauty and charm, such as she possessed, served immediately to stimulate envy in other women's hearts. And that men of all stations in life flocked about her, why, it is the eternal tribute demanded of beauty. Here and there the men were not all the daughter might have wished. Often they burnt sweet flattery at her shrine, tentatively; but as she coolly stamped out these incipient fires, they at length came to regard her as one regards the beauty of a frosted window, as a thing to admire and praise in passing. One ache always abided; the bitter knowledge that had she met in kind smile for smile and jest for jest, she might have been her mother's boon companion. But deep back in some hidden chamber of her heart lay a secret dread of such a step, a dread which, whenever she strove to analyze it, ran from under her investigating touch, as little balls of quicksilver run from under the pressure of a thumb.

She was never without the comforts of life, well-fed, well-dressed, well-housed, and often her mother flung her some jeweled trinket which (again that sense of menace) she put away, but never wore. The bright periods were when they left her in the little villa near Mentone, with no one but her old and faithful nurse. There, with her horse, her books and her flowers, she was at peace. Week into week and month into month she was let be. Never a letter came, save from some former schoolmate who was coming over and wanted letters of introduction to dukes and duchesses. If she smiled over these letters it was with melancholy; for the dukes and duchesses, who fell within her singular orbit, were not the sort to whom one gave letters of introduction.

Where her mother went she never had the least idea. She might be in any of the great ports of the world, anywhere between New York and Port Said. The major generally disappeared at the same time. Then, perhaps, she'd come back from a pleasant tram-ride over to Nice and find them both at the villa, maid and luggage. Mayhap a night or two, and off they'd go again; never a word about their former journey, uncommunicative, rather quiet. These absences, together with the undemonstrative reappearances, used to hurt Fortune dreadfully. It gave her a clear proof of where she stood, exactly nowhere. The hurt had lessened with the years, and now she didn't care much. Like as not, they would drag her out of Eden for a month or two, for what true reason she never could quite fathom, unless it was that at times her mother liked to have the daughter near her as a foil.

At rare intervals she saw steel-eyed, grim-mouthed men wandering up and down before the gates of the Villa Fanny, but they never rang the bell, nor spoke to her when she passed them on the street. If she talked of these men, her mother and the major would exchange amused glances, nothing more.

If, rightly or wrongly, she hated her mother, she despised her uncle, who was ever bringing to the villa men of money, but of coarse fiber, ostensibly with the view of marrying her off. But Fortune had her dreams, and she was quite content to wait.

There was one man more persistent than the others. Her mother called him Horace, which the major mellowed into Hodge. He was tall, blond, good-looking, a devil-may-care, eccentred, witty, amusing; and in evening dress he appeared to be what it was quite evident he had once been, a gentleman. At first she thought it strange that he should make her, instead of her mother, his confidante. As to what vocation he pursued, she did not know, for he kept sedulous guard over his tongue; but his past, up to that fork in the road where manhood says good-by to youth, was hers. And in this direction, clever and artful as the mother was, she sought in vain to wrest this past from her daughter's lips. To the mother, it was really necessary for her to know who this man really was, had been, knowing thoroughly as she did what he was now.

Persistent he undeniably was, but never coarse nor rude. Since that time he had come back from the casino at Monte Carlo, much the worse for wine, she feared him; yet, in spite of this fear, she had for him a vague liking, a hazy admiration. Whatever his faults might be, she stood witness to his great physical strength and courage. He was the only man, among all those who appeared at the Villa Fanny and immediately vanished, who returned again. And he, too, soon grew to be a part of this unreal drama, arriving mysteriously one day and departing the next.

That a drama was being enacted under her eyes she no longer doubted; but it was as though she had taken her seat among the audience in the middle of the second act. She could make neither head nor tail to it.

Whenever she accompanied her mother upon these impromptu journeys, her character, or rather her attitude, underwent a change. She swept aside her dreams; she accepted the world as it was, saw things as they were; laughed, but without merriment; jested, but with the venomous point. It was the reverse of her real character to give hurt to any living thing, but during these forced marches, as the major humorously termed them, and such they were in truth, she could no more stand against giving the cruel stab than, when alone in her garden, she could resist the tender pleasure of succoring a fallen butterfly. She was especially happy in finding weak spots in her mother's armor, and she never denied herself the thrust. Mrs. Chedsoye enjoyed these sharp encounters, for it must be added that she gave as good as she took, and more often than not her thrusts bit deeper and did not always heal.

Fortune never asked questions relative to the family finances. If she harbored any doubts as to their origin, to the source of their comparative luxury, she never put these into speech.

She had never seen her father, but she had often heard him referred to as "that brute" or "that fool" or "that drunken imbecile." If a portrait of him existed, Fortune had not yet seen it. She visited his lonely grave once a year, in the Protestant cemetery, and dreamily tried to conjure up what manner of man he had been. One day she plied her old Italian nurse with questions.

"Handsome? Yes, but it was all so long ago, cara mia, that I can not describe him to you."

"Did he drink?" Behind this question there was no sense of moral obloquy as applying to the dead.

"Sainted Mary! didn't all men drink their very souls into purgatory those unreligious days?"

"Had he any relatives?"
"I never heard of any."

"Was he rich?"
"No; but when the signora, your mother, married him she thought he was."

It was not till later years that Fortune grasped the true significance of this statement. It illumined many pages. She dropped all investigations, concluding wisely that her mother, if she were minded to speak at all, could supply only the incidents, the details.

It was warm, balmy, like May in the northern latitudes. Women wore white dresses and carried sunshades over their shoulders. A good band played airs from the new light-operas, and at one side of the grand-stand were tea-tables under dazzling linen. Fashion was out. Not all her votaries enjoyed polo, but it was absolutely necessary to pretend that they did. When they talked they discussed the Spanish dancer who paraded back and forth across the tea-lawns. They discussed her jewels, her clothes, her escort, and quite frankly her morals, which of the four was by all odds the most popular theme. All agreed that she was handsome in a bold way. This modification invariably distinguishes the right sort of women from the wrong sort, from which there is no appeal to a higher court. They could well afford to admit of her beauty, since the dancer was outside what is called the social pale, for all that her newest escort was a prince incognito. They also discussed the play at bridge.

Having been endorsed by the anti-ring element of the Democratic party, I announce myself a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:

After being graduate from Princeton and Harvard Law School, Mr. McCombs became a New York lawyer. He put aside his law practise in order to work for Governor Wilson. He is said to be the youngest man to manage a national campaign. Eugene W. SUMMER BATHING

Why is a bath? Primarily for cleanliness. Why is cleanliness? Every day the myriads of tiny sweat glands and oil glands pour out on to the surface of the skin great quantities of sweat and oily waste matter.

A clean person, clean clothing, a clean house, clean premises, clean streets, a clean town are just so many forms of that habit of cleanliness which marks the highest type of civilization.

Filth and dirt are effective carriers of disease and consequently bathing and the use of clean clothing diminish the chances of infection.

In summer there is still another reason for bathing. Then it is that we bathe for comfort as well as for health and cleanliness.

A bath tub is of course preferable, but by no means necessary for excellent results. If a tub is not accessible, try a rub down with a sponge or a cloth in a bowl of water.

Wilson for President

Woodrow Wilson.

When Government Has a right To Interfere with Business (By Woodrow Wilson)

Government cannot take its hands off of business. Government must regulate business, because that is the foundation of every other relationship, particularly of the political relationship.

I think one of the few grounds of discouragement in our days—for I do not think there are many—is that business and lawyers who guide business men are jealously withholding their counsel from those who try to guide affairs, withholding it as those who withdraw in suspicion, as if they should say, "We cannot parley with those men, their ears are not candidly open to us," and so there has grown up on one side and another an attitude of distrust which does not augur well for a settlement of delicate questions.

The whole problem of our life is to understand one another; to whole problem of politics is to get together. Politics is not a machinical problem, politics is not a problem of setting interest off against each other upon such a plan that one cannot harm the other.

I have been interested in one piece of speculative explanation, which perhaps I might turn aside for a moment to call to your attention.

One of the chief benefits I used to derive from being president of a university was that I had the pleasure to entertain thoroughly men from all over the world. I cannot tell you how much dropped into my granary by their presence.

No government, of course, is a mechanism; no mechanism theory will fit any government in the world, because governments are made up of human beings, and all the calculations of mechanical theory are thrown out of adjustment by the intervention of the human will. Society is an organism and every government must develop according to its organic forces and instructions.

The place where the strongest will is present will be the seat of sovereignty. If the strongest will is present in congress, then congress will dominate congress; if the strongest guiding will is in the presidency, the president will dominate the government; if a leading conceiving mind like Marshall's presides over the Supreme Court of the United States, he will frame the government, as he did.

One of the things that I have always felt that Webster and Clay did not see was that would diminish their prestige and power is they left the Senate of the United States and

THE BEE

THE bee is a small, nervous insect with four brittle legs and a self-stopping stinger which produces a very uncomfortable feeling when sat upon. There are two kinds of bees—masculine and feminine. The masculine bee is a henpecked individual who has about as much to say about the house as the husband of a suffragette.

hour and twenty minutes. This shows we have some good sprinters.

Master Rock took out the writer, Alfred Schultz, Louis Evans, Jack Hunter, Richard King and Walter Linden Whichard on the sail boat, intending to first cross over to Atlantic to send off mail and then fish on the way back. The start was pretty fair, but what wind there was, and the tide as well were against us, and it took three hours to make a trip going over that was covered in half an hour on the return. The boat just could not be made to tack was the cause of the long going out trip, but Mr. Rock said he was determined to sail it if it took all day and he carried his point. Once the boat came near capsizing on a shoal, but nobody cared a bit as they knew just what to do in such emergency.

Atlantic has about 600 people and they are easy going, contented and exceedingly congenial people. They were always glad to see the camp boys go over, especially the clerks in Mr. Mason's store where the cold drinks were kept. Several stores are there and they do a good business. It is too far from market to ship any fish except such as are salted, hence when the seiners come in the natives only have to wade to the boats with their pans and get what fish they wanted. We went to a boat and told the man we wanted to buy some for the camp. He looked up with an expression that it might be wrong to sell them but finally said, "Take all you want for a quarter." A boy with a skull was called and about a bushel of speckled beauties sent aboard our sail boat. Just before leaving another man came along and insisted that we take some of his fish for the camp so we added about half bushel more. Having so many fish then we sailed right back to camp and started the cooks and the boys to cleaning and that evening meal was the most enjoyed the camp had struck. Some of the boys not wanting to wait for the cook to get busy with the fire, asked permission to use the oil stove for a fish fry in the yard and four boys put away twenty fish in quick order. Yet when the drum tapped for supper these same boys handed their plates up for more.

Just after the meal Sarah Moyer, the woman cook (Peter Forbes is the man cook we have along) called The Reflector man to tell the folks at home that Jack Foley had eaten twelve fish, eleven biscuits and drank eight cups of coffee for supper. Jack wanted to deny it, but Sarah proved it on him by holding him and feeling his place where the food had gone, and exclaiming "Jess see how tight he is 'round thar".

The camp is taking in a pony penning today.

CORE BANKS, N. C., July 22.—The Scout campers took in the pony penning Saturday and it was an occasion of much interest to them. On and ocean are hundreds of horses belonging to the people over on the main land. The horses find plenty to eat and get fresh water by digging holes in the sand with their feet. It is seldom the owners have to give them any attention and once a year, in July, they meet by appointment to drive the animals to the pen where the colts are caught from the herd and branded in the mark of the owner. A colt found with its mother is considered the property of the owner of the mare. Early in the day runners begin several miles from the pen and drive the horses in, and there were a hundred or two in the drove the boys saw come in. There were 2 such droves one from each direction, before the Core Banks penning was over.

When the branding is finished the horses are turned out again to wander where they please, except where now and then an owner wants to pick one to take home for use, or some are sold. Though several were picked out we saw none sold at this penning. Really there is no special inducement to buy, as the owners wanted $50 for what they called yearlings, that is colts one year old, especially if it was a likely looking one. The pennings are big days for the natives and there were possibly fifty boat loads of them here, some coming several miles away. For diversion while waiting for the rounders to come up, they watch boys play baseball or stand around and gossip. Capt. Robinson and Capt. Lewis both of whom frequently carry oysters to Greenville in season, live near here and attended the penning. They were glad to see our boys, most of whom they knew.

We mingled in several squads of the natives and talked with them. One said there is no telling how many head of horses are in the beach, and there is hardly a man who knows the number he owns. He thought that not more than a fourth of them are ever listed for taxation and even when listed the valuation is very low. The owners are losers by holding them for such high prices and take the risk of many drowning in storms.

After seeing as much as they desired of the penning, the campers were taken to the Carteret Club house, about six miles away, this proving an other interesting trip for them. Returning to camp for dinner, all put out again a little past four o'clock for Atlantic where they remained until nearly sunset. You can imagine the cold drinks and milk kiss merchant was glad to see such a push, as well as the one who got the order to replenish the pantry for next week. Sunday the boys put in the day laying "around the house," reading, resting and taking things easy. It can be said of some of them that they kept the Sabbath here far better than they do at home. Some of us visited the life saving station, but we will speak of that later.

Scout Master Rock had an hour's job Saturday night fixing up badly sunburnt and water poisoned legs for Ferall Burch and Jack Bryan. They can walk today. John Flanagan had a touch of "home sickness," but he could not stand for the second dose of turpentine and oil, and his plate has not failed to come up at meal time any more. All the rest are as well as could be and are a happy set.

Today, the whole camp will be given a trip to Beaufort and Morehead City which will consume the day. So the homefolks can see that the boys besides getting a fine ten days outing, are also having several delightful trips to points of interest. And when it is considered that they are getting all this, including fare from home and back, board and all actual expenses of the side trip at a cost to each boy of only six dollars, the remarkable cheapness of it is seen. Mr. Rock has proved himself the right man to manage such an outing. The Reflector man leaves the camp Monday to take in the Press Convention at Morehead City this week.

The Sabbath was closed with a twilight service conducted by Mr. Rock in which he made the boys an interesting and helpful talk.

Mail Carriers Will Fly. This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "I cured me of a most dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Etckney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." Thine and Mine I closely held within my arms My jewel rich and rare, For never had one so bright, so pure, Been given to my care; It was my own, my precious gem, God gave it unto me; 'Twas mine, who else could care for it So fond and tenderly?

But ah! the Father sent one day My jewel, oh! so rare; I cannot let it go, I cried, My very heart would break; But the dead Master called for it To bear realms above, To deck His princely diadem He claims it, in His love.

But, Father, it is mine, my treasure, My jewel, oh! so rare; I'll guard it safely, and so sure And always sweet and fair; If you will keep thy gem, he said, It may by thee be lost; Across the threshold of my home No care has ever crossed.

And where our heart's dear treasure is Your own sad heart must be; Your jewel will be safe above, Though taken hence from thee. The messenger thus whispered low And gazed with pitying look, While in the solemn hush of eve My precious gem He took.

Close to my heart in early morn, I held, while tears fell fast, The empty casket, for my gem Was safe with Him at last. Yes, Father, Thou may'st keep my own Forever, it is thine; Safe in Thy house not made with hands, 'Tis Thine and mine.

STOPS SCALP ITCH Dandruff and Every Form of Scalp Disease Cured Quick by Zemo

It is simply wonderful how Zemo goes after dandruff. You rub a little of it in with tips of the fingers. It gets right down into the glands, stimulates the head glands, makes the head feel fine. No, it isn't sticky! Zemo is a fine, clear, vanishing liquid. You don't have to even wash your hands after using Zemo. And what a wonder it is for eczema, rash, pimples and all skin afflictions. A 25 cent trial bottle at Moyer's Pharmacy is guaranteed to stop any skin irritation.

Zemo is prepared by E. W. Rose Medicine Co., St. Louis, Mo., and is regularly sold by druggists at $1 a bottle. But to prove what it will do at trifling expense, Zemo is not put up in 25 cent trial bottles.

For The Legislature

Having been endorsed by the anti-rig element of the Deocratic party I announce myself a candidate for the House of Representatives, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:

- 1. No extension of the stock law except by a vote of the people in the territory effected. 2. The repeal of the stock law legislation of the last legislature. 3. The improvement of the public roads without bond issues. 4. Against any bond issue in Pitt county for the next two years except in towns and then only by vote of the people effected. 5. Improvement of the county home. 6. A legalized primary for North Carolina. If you desire the above principles to be upheld I most earnestly solicit your votes. d&w N. R. COREY.

the whimsy of this particular season, the possibility of war between England and Germany. And some one asked others who were the two well-gowned women down in front, sitting on either side of the young chap in pearl-grey. No one knew. Mother and daughter, probably. Anyhow, they knew something about good clothes. Certainly they weren't ordinary tourists. They had seen What's-his-name tip his hat; and this simple act would pass any one into the inner shrine, for the general was not promiscuous. There, the first-half was over. All down for tea! Thank goodness!

George was happy. He was proud, too. He saw the glances, the nods of approval. He basked in a kind of sunshine that was new. What an ass he had been all his life! To have been afraid of women just because he was Percival Algernon! What he should have done was to have gone forth boldly, taken what pleasures he found, and laughed with the rest of them.

There weren't two other women in all Cairo to compare with these two. The mother, shapely, elegant, with the dark beauty of a high-class Spaniard, possessing humor, trenchant comment, keen deduction and application; worldly, cynical, high-bred. The student of nations might have tried in vain to place her. She spoke the French of the Parisians, the Italian of the Florentines, the German of the Hanoverians, and her English was the envy of Americans and the wonder of the Londoners. The daughter fell behind her but little, but she was more reserved. The worldly critic called this good form; no daughter should try to outshine her widowed mother.

As Fortune sat beside the young collector that afternoon, she marveled why they had given him Percival Algernon. Jones was all right, solid and substantial, but the other two turned it into ridicule. Still, what was the matter with Percival Algernon? History had given men of these names mighty, fine things to accomplish. Then why ridicule? Was it due to the perverted angle of vision created by wits and humorists in the comic weeklies, who were eternally pillorying these unhappy prefixes to ordinary cognomens? And why this pillorying? She hadn't studied the subject sufficiently to realize that the business of the humorist is not so much to amuse as to warn persons against becoming ridiculous. And Percival Algernon Jones was all of that. It resolved itself into a matter of values, then. Had his surname been Montmorency, Percival Algernon would have fitted as a key to its lock. She smiled. No one but a fond mother would be guilty of such a crime. And if she ever grew to know him well enough, she was going to ask him all about this mother.

What interest had her own mother in this harmless young man? Oh, some day she would burst through this web, this jungle; some day she would see beyond the second act! What then? she never troubled to ask herself; time enough when the moment arrived.

"I had an interesting adventure last night, a most interesting one," began George, who was no longer the shy, bumbling recluse. They were on the way back to town.

"Tell it me," said Mrs. Chedsoye. He leaned over from his seat beside the chauffeur of the hired automobile. (Hang the expense on a day like bought the rug, however. Some one else would have snatched it up if I hadn't. I wanted him to recount the adventure, but he smiled and refused. I tell you what it is, these eastern ports are great places."

"How interesting!" Mrs. Chedsoye's color was not up to the mark. "He was not seriously wounded?"

"Oh, no. He looks like a tough individual. I mean, a chap strong and hardy enough to pull himself out of pretty bad holes. He needed the money."

"Did he give his name?" asked Fortune.

"Yes; but no doubt it was assumed. Ryanne, and he spelt it with an 'ne,' and humorously explained why he did so."

"Is he young, old, good-looking, or what?"

Mrs. Chedsoye eyed her offspring through narrowed lids.

"I should say that he was about thirty-five, tall, something of an athlete; and there remains some indications that in the flush of youth he was handsome. Odd. He reminded me of a young man who was on the varsity eleven—foot-baller—when I entered my freshman year. I didn't know him, but I was a great admirer of his from the grand-stand. Horace Wadsworth was his name."

Horace Wadsworth. Fortune had the sensation of being astonished at something she had expected to happen.

Just before going down to dinner that night, Fortune turned to her mother; her chin combative in its angle.

"I gave Mr. Jones a hundred and fifty pounds out of that money you left in my care. Knowing how forgetful you are, I took the liberty of attending to the affair myself."

She expected a storm, but instead her mother viewed her with appraising eyes. Suddenly she laughed merrily. Her sense of humor was too excitable to resist so delectable a situation.

"You told him, of course, that the money came from me?" demanded Mrs. Chedsoye, when she could control her voice.

"Surely, since it did come from you."

"My dear, my dear, you are to me like the song in the Mikado;" and she hummed lightly—

"To make the prisoner pent unwillingly represent A source of innocent merriment, Of innocent merriment!"

"Am I a prisoner, then?"

"Whatever you like; it can not be said that I ever held you on the leash," taking a final look into the mirror.

"What is the meaning of this rug? You and I know who stole it."

"I have explicitly warned you..."

Governor Wilson and Family At Sea Girt Summer Home

IN the event of Governor Wilson's election as president there will be no lack of "ladies of the White House." His three daughters are attractive and accomplished girls, who have been encouraged by their mother, herself a woman of talent, to develop their own individualities. Thus Margaret, the eldest, who has a fine voice, has devoted herself to the study of music; Jessie, the second daughter, who had leanings toward a missionary career, is engaged in philanthropic and educational work, and Eleanor, the youngest, inheriting her mother's taste for painting, is following art as her chief interest. The young women are all fond of outdoor sports, and with the Wilsons in the White House, though there might be no "tennis cabinet," the claims of the open air life would receive ample recognition. The governor and his family have been making their summer home at Sea Girt, living in the "Little White House," the official hot weather residence of the governor of New Jersey. It was there that the accompanying photograph was taken, in which the governor and his wife are seen in the foreground, with their daughters in the background—Jessie, Eleanor and Margaret standing in the order

Household Hints

Soft Hair Brushes—When the bristles of hair brushes become soft, they may be improved by dipping them in a strong solution of alum and hot water. One pennyworth of alum is sufficient for several hair brushes.

For Patent Leather—To revive patent leather rub well with a soft rag soaked in olive oil and milk; then polish with a soft, dry duster. Cream and linseed oil mixed in equal proportions make an excellent polish for patent leather, and a little lasts for quite a long time.

Clean Flatirons—Clean your flatirons in the following way, and ironing will be a pleasure to you. Place a piece of beeswax between the piece of flannel and when the irons are hot rub them briskly on the flannel. This keeps them in splendid condition.

Stained Board—Sometimes stained boards become quite light colored with constant use. This can be remedied by thoroughly rubbing them with paraffin oil and afterwards polishing in the usual way with beeswax and turpentine. This treatment will make the boards quite dark again.

To Clean Matting—Bran is much to use for cleaning matting than soap and water. Tie the bran in a bag, dip the bag into clean warm water and rub the matting briskly with this; then wash it off with a cloth running out of warm salt water. This method freshens it up wonderfully.

Engraven Brass—an excellent way of cleaning brass flowerpots or trays is to rub them with a piece of lemon; then pour boiling water over them, and finally polish them with a soft dry cloth. You will find that the lemon will remove all the stains from the crevices in the brass.

When Stamps Stick Together—Postage stamps carried in a purse or handbag will often be found stuck together. Never attempt to separate them by pulling them, but simply lay them flat and press with a hot iron. They will then separate quite easily.

Coffee Stains—To remove coffee stains from silk, satin, or any other material, soak in glycerine; then rub gently with a soft cloth, and iron the wet portion until dry.

When washing silk handkerchiefs a little care is required to prevent them turning yellow, and to avoid this they should never be boiled or have any rubbed on them. Make a lather of finely shredded white soap and lukewarm, wash and squeeze the handkerchiefs in it, press out all the moisture possible, and dry them quickly. Iron while they are still damp, though not wet.—Boston Gobe.

Colored crochet buttons are used on many of the lingerie waist. A new model shows a thin blouse with the front like the bosom of a man's shirt, made in lace and tucks, with a turnover collar of the same. Both collar and vest button directly up the front with bright red crochet buttons.

Net is a favorite fabric this year for blouses. One of net supplemented by all-over batiste embroidery, the color of both net and batiste in a soft cream, has plaits which run half way down over the bust, and form the top bodice. This treatment is repeated in the sleeves. The cuff of this blouse has the quaint little up-and-down frill that is the smartest new touch for this purpose. Dividing this at the center is a triple cording of the net. This treatment also appears down the front, and a tiny bow of bright green and white striped taffeta finishes the neck.

Many blouses trimmed or made with transparent sleeves and yoke, use two thicknesses of pale pink chiffon under the outside. Exposed parts of lingerie, such as bits of pink or blue ribbon under the work or fabric of a blouse are no longer approved of by fashion. The inside of a silk, net or chiffon blouse has a lining of flesh-colored chiffon.

Chiffon cloth blouses are entirely lined with flesh color with a thinner chiffon. White net is also lined with white chiffon, and open lace yokes lined with flesh chiffon give a beautiful tinge to a blouse. The black fastening remains and is likely to continue.

The lingerie waist with round, square V-neck collar, elbow, three-quarter and long sleeve is in style. The normal blouse has a few gathers over the shoulders, buttons at the back, and trimming applied as a yoke, large round Pierrot collar or knife-plaited lawn, net batiste, all-over lace, etc. The ruffle is still worn down one side of the center front, but is not as long or as full as it was made. The blouse with the basque or coat shirt is popular.

Never were pearls more in favor than now and genuine as well as imitation pearls are used extensively this season for ornamentation or trimming.

Serges are prime favorites for the modish materials for a number of his best creations.

Small and rather flat pleated jackets, which are only sufficiently large to fill in the neck opening of the coat are being worn, and there is a fancy or flat lace bowe with fan-shaped falls of lace.

Useful Successions.

A woman who has tried it declares the best way to mend china is to apply a little carriage varnish carefully with a camel's hair brush, to the edge of the broken china, the parts being neatly joined together. The fracture will, when thoroughly dry, be hardly perceptible, and the china will stand fire and water.

Old kid gloves are excellent for putting in iron and kettle holders as padding when making them. With such padding the hot handles will not scorch the hands.

Simeon S. Pennewill, governor of the state of Delaware, was born in Greenwood, Del., July 23, 1867. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. J. C. HENNEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

workmen's compensation and matters of supervision will be considered and thoroughly discussed at the national convention of the insurance commissioners of the United States which opened here today for a session extending over four days.
