GAYNOR'S ACTION SEVERELY CENSURED

Metropolitan Papers Directly Accuse Mayor

"ARE TRYING TO EMBARRAS ME"

New York Police Seem to be Unwilling to Unravel Rosenthal Murder. District Attorney Whitman Making Single Fight

NEW YORK, July 27.—Unless Mayor Gaynor calls a special meeting of the board of aldermen to vote upon ordering an investigation of the police department and the Rosenthal murder, a writ of mandamus compelling him to do so will be served upon him. Such is the announcement made today by Alderman Henry Curran, chairman of the finance committee of the board, who with 16 other aldermen yesterday petitioned the mayor to call a meeting August 1.

When the mayor was approached last night on the subject he declared with considerable asperity that the petitioning aldermen were trying to embarrass him in trying to clear up the case. He put the matter over until Monday. As three days notice is necessary the meeting cannot be before August 2 in any event.

Jack Sullivan, who rode about town with Police Lieutenant Becker on the night that Rosenthal was shot, was arraigned before Coroner Feinberg today on a charge of homicide and held without bail for further examination Monday.

Sullivan who was originally held as a material witness was identified in coroner's court yesterday by Louis Krese, a waiter who was an eye witness of Rosenthal's assassination, as one of those whom he saw at the scene immediately after the shooting. Sullivan this afternoon declared to reporters that the identification was a frame up by District Attorney Whitman.

Police Commissioner Waldo today reiterated that there has always been petty gratifying in the police department despite efforts to stamp it out but doubted the truth of protection being brought.

However, said the commissioner, if Becker has been taking graft from the gamblers as has been plainly intimated in the published reports in the newspapers, he has been fooling the gamblers, for he has nothing to sell them. There could be no collusion between the gamblers and the police even if Becker told the gamblers so.

News From Gardner's Cross Roads

Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock Mr. D. M. Clark candidate for the legislature, addressed a gathering here on the candidacy of Chief Justice Walter Clark for the United States senate.

Mr. Clark stated at the outset that he would make no attack on the other candidates for the United States senate. That the great record of Judge Clark, his stand for the working people and his qualifications for the office commended him to the people and that if the people knew these things about Judge Clark it would be sufficient.

He then briefly reviewed the record of Judge Clark and discussed the principles of his platform upon which he is asking the support of the people for the United States senate.

At the close of his speech on Judge Clark, Mr. Clark announced his own candidacy for the House of Representatives, stating that he belonged to no ring or anti-ring, but favored legislation that would benefit the farmers, as the farmers bore the burdens and constituted eighty per cent of North Carolina's population.

In conclusion Mr. Clark made it clear that the legislative race and the United States senatorial contest had no connection whatever. And that the United States senatorial fight would be settled for all time on the 5th of November, separate and apart from the legislature. He further stated that those seeking to confuse the two, did so to further their own interest and in the hopes of getting the support of a few of the friends of certain United States senatorial candidates.

ANOTHER OUTLAW IS FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returns Verdict of First Degree Murder

SUSPENDED SENTENCE C. ALLEN

Younger Member of Outlaw Band Convicted for the Killing of Attorney William L. Foster. Will Testify in the Other Cases

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 27.—Claude Allen, one of the Hillville outlaws, was today convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Commonwealth's Attorney William M. Foster. At a former trial he was found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Judge Massie.

He is the second one of the Allen clan to be convicted of first degree murder, his father, Floyd Allen, being the other.

The closing arguments of counsel consumed the morning session of court today and the case was given to the jury when court reconvened at 2:30 this afternoon. After deliberating for an hour and a half the jurors slowly filed into the jury box and the foreman announced their verdict.

When he learned that he must pay the penalty for his crime in the electric chair, the prisoner broke down and wept bitterly, as did also his fiancée who was with him in the court room. It was the first time he had displayed the least sign of emotion since his trial began.

While the jury was considering its verdict, Sidna Edwards and Victor and Friel Allen were brought into the court room in order that a motion might be made for a change of venue. On motion of the Commonwealth a venire of seventy five will be summoned from Bedford county of the next trial. The Commonwealth also wished to have the three remaining cases consolidated, but the defense would not agree and it was decided to try Friel Allen next. The trial will begin August 14 and will be on the indictment charging the murder of William M. Foster—the same indictment upon which Claude and Floyd Allen have been found guilty of first degree murder. Sentence was not passed on Claude Allen in order that he might testify in the other cases.

Other Hotel Contracts Are Awarded

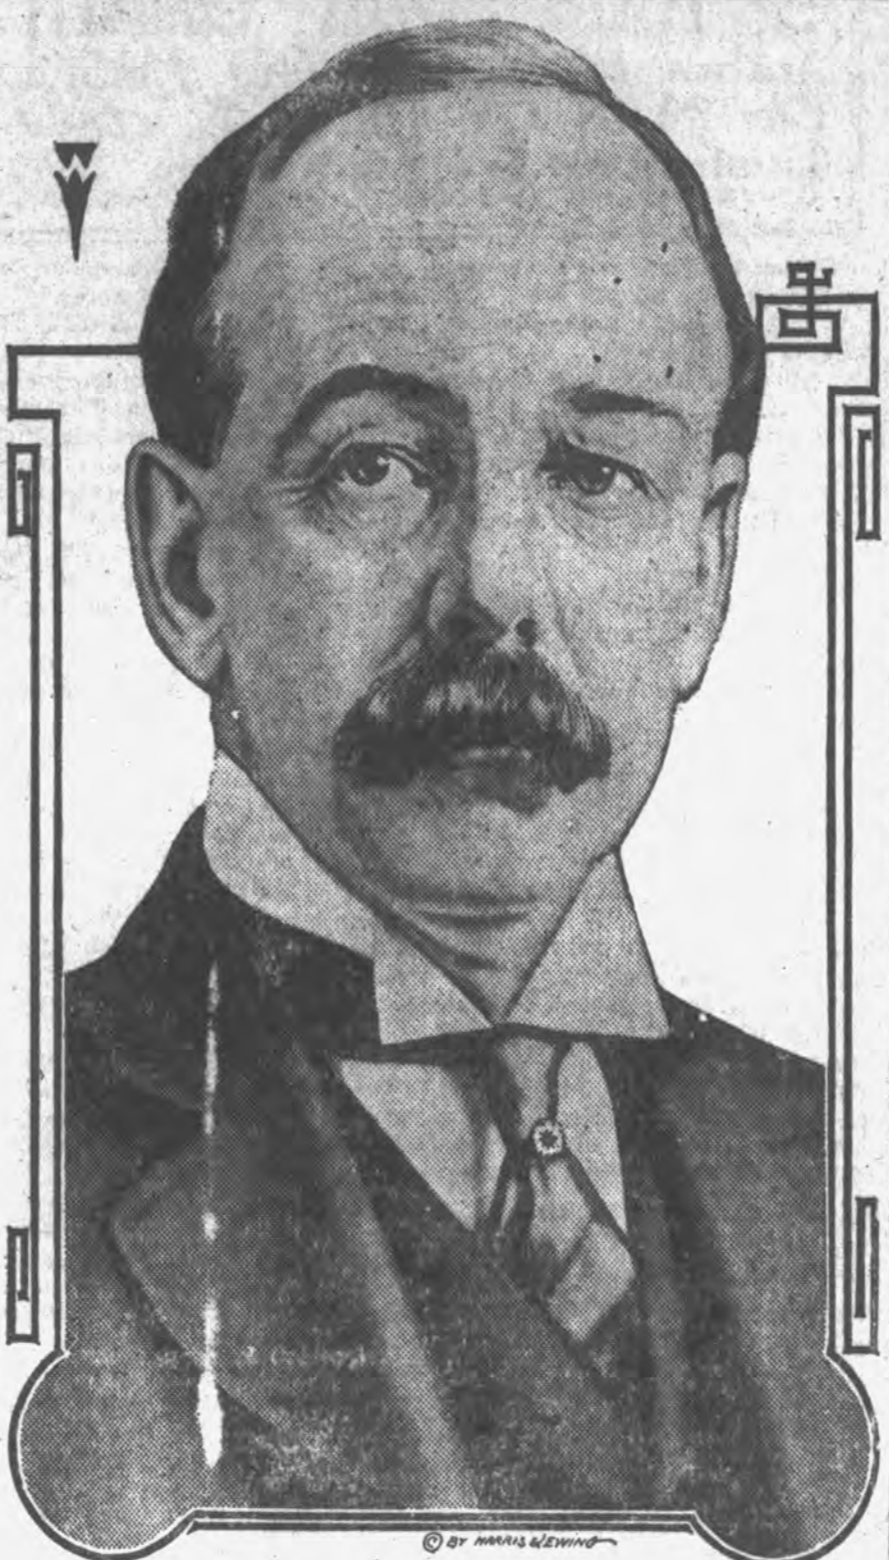

Just because there has not been much said about the Proctor Hotel, lately things have been started well.

The following contracts were awarded lately: Plumbing, to Hunt Bros., Greensboro, $5250.00; Heating to B. M. McKenzie, Greensboro, $3941.25; Elevator, to Otis Elevator Co., Richmond, $2610.00.

Big Catch at Beaufort

One of the most curious fish ever caught near Beaufort was captured this morning by Capt. John B. Moore, a boatman from the Inlet Inn. This fish is known as a cow fish and is of the (cant tell) variety, something similar to a whale, measured some twenty feet in length and weighed about 2500 pounds. It was captured right in front of the Inlet Inn and was quite a curiosity to the visitors in Beaufort. The Editorial Association from Morehead City, Atlantic Hotel, was brought over in boats to see this curiosity. Capt. Moore says this is quite a curiosity and is a very rare fish. The way it was captured came up in shoaly water and as the tide fell, it could not get off the shoal, and beat itself to death and while in its fury it would throw water forty or fifty feet high, making a beautiful rainbow effect, to be seen from the Inlet Inn porch, about 7:30 o'clock. Large crowds are visiting this curiosity.

SERVING FIRST TERM IN CONGRESS

Walter L. McCoy, who is serving his first term in congress as representative from the Eighth district of New Jersey, has been prominent in the Democratic party of his state for some years. He was born in Troy, N. Y., in 1859, and is a graduate of Harvard and a practicing lawyer with his office in New York city.

WOODROW WILSON STILL TAKING REST

NOT "AT HOME" TO MANY CALLERS

Notables Call at Sea Girt But are Told that "Woody" is Still Busy Writing Speech of Acceptance.

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 27.—Governor Wilson in still in seclusion and it is believed tonight that he may be now at the home of a friend outside of New Jersey.

There is only one man, with the exception of the governor's host, who knows where the Democratic presidential nominee has gone. He is Joseph J. Tumulty, the governor's private secretary and he has been pledged to secrecy.

William G. McAadoo, the New York tunnel builder who financed in a large measure the governor's campaign for the nomination and leaders of the party in New Jersey came here this afternoon expecting to see the governor. They were told simply that he had not returned from his speech of acceptance. Joseph E. Davies, secretary of the national committee, was expected here tonight and the same answer awaited him. Mr. Tumulty has acted on orders and taken nobody into his confidence.

Yesterday afternoon the announcement was made here that the governor would return at noon today with his speech written to meet 100 members of the Brooklyn Democratic club with whom he had an appointment. Shortly before noon today an assistant secretary who supposed there had been no change in the situation said the governor had motored to Sea Girt.

POSTPONED REVIVAL NOW IN PROGRESS

Rev. C. L. Organ, an evangelist of Des Moines, Iowa, mention of whom was made last week arrived in Ayden on Saturday and began a series of services in the Christian church yesterday. The church was filled to its seating capacity at both the morning and evening services Sunday and much enthusiasm has been manifested by the members. Indications already point a great revival of religion as Rev. Organ is an able divine of renown. Every body is invited to participate in the services.

MYSTERIOUS POISONING CASE IN ASHEVILLE

PRETTY WIFE ACCUSED OF CRIME

Man Had Been Buried When Suspicion Centered on Wife—Body Was Exhumed and Stomach Examined.

ASHEVILLE, July 27.—Held in the common jail of Madison county at Marshall, Maud Hamlin, a captivating widow of twenty-two years, spends her days awaiting the outcome of the coroner's jury, who are hearing the evidence in a most sensational case in which she is charged with murdering her husband, John Mamlin.

The state alleges that she administered poison to her husband, which resulted in his immediate death. Yesterday at Marshall the remains were taken from their resting place in a little grave yard near Marshall and examined by the coroner, Dr. John Baird, Sr., and Drs. Weaver and Sprinkle who were appointed by the coroner to assist him in the examination. Several witnesses were examined and it developed that the defendant had several times made threats against the deceased, that poison had been purchased by her at the drug store of Redmon and Roberts in Marshall and several statements made by her at different times were somewhat conflicting.

The stomach of the deceased was removed from the body and expressed to Winston-Slaem for analysis. In the meantime the coroner's jury has adjourned till the results of the analysis can be ascertained.

The day following the burial of her husband the defendant disappeared from Marshall and her whereabouts could not be learned until Solicitor Reynolds notified the Madison officials of his intention to inquire into the matter. Monday she was located in Asheville and conveyed to Marshall where she is now held on a charge of first degree murder.

Third Party in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 29.—Arkansas leaders in the Roosevelt movement have completed arrangements for a state convention to be held in this city tomorrow to name delegates to the national Progressive convention in Chicago next week.

TAFT'S SECRETARY FLAYS ROOSEVELT

Charles D. Hillis Breaks Long Silence

TO DEFEND TAFT'S NOMINATION

Directly Accuses Bull Moose Chief of Bad Faith in the Contests. Says Teddy Knew These Contests Were Devold of Merit

NEW YORK, July 27.—Charles D. Hillis, formerly secretary to President Taft and now chairman of the Republican national committee, gave out a statement at the headquarters of the Republican national committee in this city tonight as follows:

"The only possible justification of the avowed efforts of the third party leaders to induce the Republican electors in at least six states to betray their trust and cast their votes in the electoral college for ex-President Roosevelt would be the truth of the charge that President Taft was nominated by the fraudulent seating of a sufficient number of delegates to affect the choice of the national convention.

"There is no truth whatever in that charge. Mr. Roosevelt and his associates know that there is no truth in it, but they have been attempted by cociferation and reiteration, to hecloud the fact that they must have no proof to offer. They would drown out all attempts to establish the truth by persistent cries of thief and fraud.

"The third term party is the self-confessed sponsor for 160 take contests by which it attempted to secure fraudulent control of the national convention and now it has the temerity to ask the remaining 78 contests the right was all on its side.

"Of the 238 contests which Mr. Roosevelt ordered to be brought before the national committee, his political managers voluntarily abandoned 160 and one of his press agents announced that these contests were instituted solely for psychological effect and in order that a table of delegates elected might not reveal the large ajority of legitimately elected delegates instructed for President Taft.

This gross misrepresentation of the Republican party has attained proportions far greater than a factional quarrel. Were the charges true it would be a national scandal. For that reason the proper authorities have caused to be prepared a complete review of all the converted cases, a review which it is the duty of every loyal American to read. A resume of this will be published more or less fully in the newspapers of Monday morning and copies of the complete statement will be available to all who write for them to the Republican national committee at its headquarters in the Times Building. The document furnishes all the facts in every contest.

Why, take the state of Alabama. Mr. Roosevelt through his political managers, asked the national committee to unseat 22 Taft delegates. 20 of the contestants were thrown out by the practically unanimous vote of the committee, and one avowed Roosevelt committeeman remarked: I am convinced the country will be astounded by the flimsy character of the (Continued on page 5)

Board of Examiners Are in Greenville

From now on, stenographers who wish to compete for the civil service "plums" need no longer think that they are "out of it" simply because they are so far from Washington, D. C.

Mr. H. L. Fisher, secretary of the 4th district of the Civil Service Department, has been in Greenville for the purpose of instituting a board of examiners before which stenographers can qualify for civil service positions, when such offices are vacated. Clerks of the local postoffice constitute the board. Mr. D. C. Dudley being the secretary of this board. Through this board announcement will be made whenever there are any vacancies and dates will be given for annual output of motor cars valued at $20,000,000.

EUGENE GRACE TO FACE WIFE

Will Be Taken to Court On Stretcher

INSISTS WIFE TRIED TO KILL HIM

Important Developments Looked For in Very First Day of Trial. Mrs. Grace's Mother Hurried to Atlanta to Comfort Her

ATLANT, Ga., July 28.—Confronted by her husband lying on a stretcher suffering from the wound which he accuses her of inflicting, Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace will be placed on trial in the superior court here tomorrow on the charge of assault with intent to kill Eugene S. Grace, at their home in the fashionable resident section of this city on March 5.

The trial comes after weeks of waiting on the part of the public for the denouncement of one of the most unique criminal cases in the history of the courts of this state, Grace will be brought here on a cot from the home of his mother, Mrs. S. L. Hill, at Newnam, Ga. The mother of Mrs. Grace, Mrs. Martha Ulrich of Philadelphia, also will be at her daughter's side during the trial.

Attorneys on both sides have completed arrangements for the conduct of the case, and it is believed that not more than three days will be required to establish the guilt or the innocence of the accused. One hundred and eight veniremen from whom the jury will be selected have been summoned to appear at the opening of court tomorrow. Little difficulty in filling the box is anticipated. Owing to the belief in the minds of many that sensational revelations will be developed during the progress of the trial it is expected that the courtroom will hold only a small part of those who will attempt to gain admittance. On this account it was reported several days ago that the public would be excluded. However, Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside, states that as many will be admitted as the courtroom will accommodate.

Eugene H. Grace was mysteriously shot in his bedroom in the home of the Graces on the morning of March 5. The shooting occurred a little more than a year after his marriage. He told the police who found him that afternoon that his wife had shot him while he was in bed asleep and she then had gone off on a visit previously arranged to his mother in law, Mrs. Grace, an attractive woman, several years her husband's senior, was located in Newnam and returned to Atlanta of her own accord when she was notified that her husband had been shot. She was arrested here as she stepped from the train. At her request the police took her to the hospital to see her husband and he accused her to her face. Mrs. Grace protested her innocence then and has continued to do so ever since.

"P. M." Flanagan is For Re-appointment

We note with pleasure that President Taft has sent in Roy C. Flanagan's name for re-appointment. This is indeed good news to his friends and when we says his friends, it means every one in Greenville, for the postmaster's efficiency in the discharge of his duties has made him a most popular official in this community. The excellency of the service under his guidance has no doubt to do with his name being presented for re-appointment.

May Start Big Auto Factory

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 29.—The Atlas Engine Works, one of the oldest and best known manufacturing of its kind in the middle west, was put up at public sale by the receiver today. It is rumored that the plant will be taken over by a group of Detroit capitalists and converted into one of the largest automobile factories in the world. According to the plans the concern will employ nearly 10,000 men and will have an annual output of motor cars valued at about $20,000,000.

"Salaam, madame," said the jeweler, reaching for the pendant.
"If you will send it to the Hotel Semiramis this afternoon . . ." But she faltered at the sight of the merchant's incredulous smile.
"I'll give you ten for it; not a piastre more. I can get one like it in the Sharia Kamel for that amount."
Both Fortune and the merchant turned.
"You, Horace?"
"Yes, my child. And what are you doing here alone, without a dragon?"
"Oh, I have been through here alone many times. I'm not afraid. Isn't it beautiful? He wants twenty pounds for it, and I cannot afford that."
She had not seen him in many weeks, yet she accepted his sudden appearance without question or surprise. She was used to his turning up at unexpected moments. Of course, she had known that he was in Cairo; where her mother and uncle were this secretive man was generally within calling. There had been a time when she had eagerly plied him with questions, but he had always erected barriers of evasion, and finally she ceased her importunities, for she concluded that her questions were such. No matpossible. The only concession I'll make is to borrow the money."

"Well, then, let it go at that." He was too wise to press her.
"And can you afford to throw away ten pounds?" with assumed lightness.
"My one permanent impression of you is the young man who was always forced to borrow car-fare whenever he returned from Monte Carlo."
"A fool and his money. But I'm a rich man now," he volunteered. And briefly he sketched the exploit of the Yliordes rug.
"It was very brave of you. But has it ever occurred to you that it wasn't honest?"
"Honest?" frankly astonished that she should question the ethics. "Oh, I say, Fortune; you don't call it dishonest to get the best of a pagan! Aren't they always getting the best of us?"
"If you had bargained with him and beaten him down, it would have been different. But, Horace, you stole it; you admit that you did."
"I took my life in my hands. I think that evened up things."
"No. And you sold it to Mr. Jones?"
"Yes, and Mr. Jones was only too glad to buy it. I told him the facts. He wasn't particularly eager to bring up the ethics of the case. Why, child, what the deuce is a Turk? I shouldn't cry out if some one stole my Bible."
"Good gracious! do you carry one?"
"Well, there's always one on the room-stand in the hotels I patronize."
"I suppose it all depends upon how we look at things."
"That's it. A different pair of spectacles for every pair of eyes."
If only he weren't in love with her! thought the girl. He would then be an amusing comrade. But whenever he met her he quietly pressed his suit. He had never spoken openly of love, for which she was grateful, but his attentions, his little kindnesses, his unobtrusive protection when those other men were at the villa, made the reading between the lines no difficult matter.
"What shall you do if this Mahomed you speak of comes?"
"Turn him loose upon our friend Jones," with a laugh.
"And what will he do to him?"
"Carry him off to Bagdad and chop off his head," Ryanne jested.
"Tell me, is there any possibility of Mr. Jones coming to harm?"
"Can't say." Her concern for Percival annoyed him.
"Is it fair, when he paid you generously?"
He did not look into the grave eyes. They were the only pair that ever disconcerted him. "My dear Fortune, it's a question which is the more valuable to me, my skin or Percival's."
"It isn't fair."
"From my point of view it's fair enough. I warned him; I told him the necessary facts, the eventual dangers. He accepted them all with the Yliordes. I see nothing unfair in the deal, since I risked my life in the first place."
"And why must you do these desperate things?"
"Oh, I love excitement. My one idea in life is to avoid the humdrum."
"Is it necessary to risk your life for these excitements? Is your life nothing more to you than something to experiment with?"
"Truth, sometimes I don't know, Fortune. Sometimes I don't care. When one has gambled for big stakes, it is hard to play for penny points."
"A strong, healthy man like you ought not to court death."
"I do not seek it. My only temptation is to see how near I can get to the Man in the Shroud, as some poet calls it, without being touched. I'll make you my confessor. You see, it is like this. A number of wearied men recently formed a company whereby monotony became an obsolete word in our vocabulary. You must not think I'm jesting; I'm serious enough. This company ferrets out adventures, and romances and sells them to men of spirit. I became a member, and the trip to Bagdad is the result. One never has to share with the company. The rewards are all yours. All one has to do is to pay a lump sum down for the adventure furnished. You work out the end yourself, unhindered and unassisted."
"Are you really serious?"
"Never more so. Now, Percival Agernon has always been wanting an adventure, but the practical side of him has made him hold aloof. I told him about this concern, and he refuses to believe in it. So I am going to undertake to prove it to him. This is confidential. You will say nothing, I know."
"He will come to no harm physically."
"Lord, no! It will be mild and innocuous. Of course, if any one told him that an adventure was toward for his especial benefit, it would spoil all. I can rely upon your silence!"
She was silent. He witnessed her indecision with distrust. Perhaps he ter to whom she turned, there was no one to answer her questions, questions born of doubt and fear.

"Ten Pounds," Repeated Ryanne, a Hand in His Pocket.

"Ten pounds," repeated Ryanne, a hand in his pocket.
The merchant laughed. Here were a young man and his sweetheart. His experience had taught him, and not unwisely, that love is an easy victim, too proud to haggle, too generous to bargain sharply. "Twenty," he reiterated.

"Salaam!" said Ryanne. "Good day!" He drew the somewhat resisting hand of Fortune under his arm and made for the door. "Sh!" he whispered. "Leave it to me." They gained the street.
The merchant was dazed. He had misjudged what he now recognized as an old hand. The two were turning up another street when he ran out, shouting to them and waving the pendant. Ryanne laughed.
"Ten pounds. I am a poor man, defendi, and I need the money. Ten pounds. I am giving it away." The merchant's eyes filled with tears, a trick left to him from out of the ruins of his youth, that ready service to forestall the merited rod.
Ryanne counted out ten sovereigns and put the pendant in Fortune's hand. And the pleasure in his heart was such as he had not known in many days. The merchant wisely hurried back to his shop.
"But . . ." she began protesting.
"Tut, tut! I have known you since you wore short dresses and tam-o-shanters."
"I really cannot accept it as a gift. Let me borrow the ten pounds."
"And why can't you accept a little gift from me?"
She had no ready answer. She gazed steadily at the dull pearls and the flaky emeralds. She could not ask him where he had got those sovereigns. She could not possibly be so cruel. She could not dissemble in words like her mother. That gold she knew to be a part of a dishonest bargain whose forestep had been a theft—more, a sacrilege. Her honesty was like pure gold, unalloyed, unmixed with sophistic subtleties. That the young man who had purchased the rug might be mildly peccable had not yet occurred to her.

"Why not, Fortune?" Ryanne was very earnest, and there was a pinch at his heart.
"Because . . ."
"Don't you like me just a little?"
"Why, I do like you, Horace. But I do not like any man well enough to accept expensive gifts from him. I do not wish to hurt you, but it is impossible. The only concession I'll make is to borrow the money."

"Well, then, let it go at that." He was too wise to press her.
"And can you afford to throw away ten pounds?" with assumed lightness.

For State Senate
Having been endorsed by the anti-ruling element of the Democratic party, I announce myself a candidate for the State Senate, subject to the action of a voting primary of the Democratic party under the plan of organization. Upon the questions confronting the people I stand upon the following platform of principles:
1. No extension of the stock law except by a vote of the people in the territory effected.
2. The repeal of the stock law legislation of the last legislature.
3. The improvement of the public roads without bond issues.
4. Against any bond issue in Pitt county for next two years except in towns—and then only by vote of the people effected.
5. Improvement of the county home.
6. A legalized primary for North Carolina.

Campaign Limericks.
Presidential nominee Wilson is fond of limericks.—Daily paper.

A statesman and scholar named Woodrow
To the White House decided he would go;
He will do it this fall,
For progressive men all
Have made up their minds that he should go.

To a sound, stalwart Hoosier named Marshall
Old destiny says that his star shall Continue to rise
In political skies
For the people to Marshall are partial

A battle-scarred leader named Bryan
Let out a roar like a lion
And when he was through
There was nothing to do
But to carry out Belmont and Ryan.

There was a rambunctious Bull Moose
Who got his head into a noose;
When he said "Let me run
If you want to see fun,"
All the people replied, "What's the use?"

There was a big fellow named Taft
Who was running a Salt river craft;
With political junk,
It was loaded and sunk.
Whereat everybody just laft.

SOME THINGS THE EDITORS ENJOYED

The meeting of the North Carolina Press Association at Morehead City last week was well attended and of much interest. The proceedings of the convention proper pertained mainly to the editors and their business, with now and then some address to enlist their interest in certain enterprises or measures. Prof. John E. Ray, of the state school for the blind, gave some statistics of the institution and the work it is doing; and Dr. I. M. Hardy spoke in reference to the school for Feeble Minded which has been located at Kinston and Congressman Faison of the second district, talked about waterways, roadways, railways and the comparative difference of freight. Ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis spoke with much interest to the editors. After outlining briefly the development that had come to the state, especially western North Carolina, through the construction of railways and forecasting what would come to the east through the construction of the inland waterway and harbor of refuge at Cape Lookout, he said that the most important step by far to the state was the education of our children. Do this, he added, and all other things needed will come.

The newspaper people found many things to see and enjoy. It was pleasant to all to be located in the Atlantic Hotel, among the best known and most popular of seaside resorts. Then it was gratifying to note the progress Morehead City is making. The town with the cooperation of the government, has built a seawall along the entire water front, a ten foot depth of water made in the harbor by dredging out the sand and dumping it behind the wall. In this way much valuable ground on the water front has been redeemed.

One afternoon the editorial party and hundreds of the hotel guests were taken on the revenue cutter Seminole on a trip down by Cape Lookout and about 10 miles out to sea. This gave an opportunity to see the hook of the cape where the government is taking steps to establish a harbor of refuge, a large appropriation having already been authorized for it. A coaling station is also in contemplation and this with such an harbor would be the stopping place for most of the large steamers and ships engaged in commerce on the Atlantic. This would mean much for the development of Eastern North Carolina and would make Morehead City the most important harbor on the coast.

Another fine trip they had was on another cutter, Pamlico, through the portion of the inland waterways and new canal between Beaufort and New Bern. This was a revelation to those who had not passed through before and showed the great advantage of the inland waterway.

In connection with this trip Solicitor C. L. Abernethy, of Beaufort, pulled off a most clever stunt for the edification of the newspaper men. He induced a big sea monster, called a cow fish to get grounded on a shoal right out in front of the Inlet Inn where it was captured and pulled out on the sand. Then the clever Solicitor hiked out with boats for the editors to go and see the big fish which measured 20 feet in length and weighed fully a ton. It was a great curiosity. At New Bern the editors were met at the wharf and given automobile rides over the city and entertained by the Elks club while waiting to take trains to their respective homes or back to Morehead City.

Altogether it was a delightful meeting of the association and all were glad they went.

Salisbury and Asheville were both bidders for the next convention and it was decided to hold two sessions in the coming year, a business session in Salisbury some time in the winter and a meeting at Asheville with more pleasure and less business sometime during the summer.

BIGGEST ISSUE OF ALL

How is the cost of living to be reduced? This is the most important question before the American people. Its solution is more vital far than the identity of the next president.

Under the present system of excessive protection, those who toil are each year finding it more difficult to make a living while the comparative handful of millionaires who chiefly reap the benefit of this toil spend their time in idleness and dissipation, their fortunes meanwhile in almost exact proportion to the increase in cost of living.

The result is that many Americans especially the hardworking poor, are becoming plainly disgusted with the way things are going; disgusted even with this form of government and are turning to socialism.

This feeling on the part of the wageearner is simply history repeating itself. Extravagance and poverty, the history of the world, shows, never made good bed-fellows in republics designed as cradles of liberty. It is obvious that the high cost of living problem should be solved before the unrest grows greater. The earlier it is settled, the better for the republic. Which party will solve it, the Republican party or the Democratic party? The Republican theory has always been that the heavier the tariff tax on the things eaten, worn or used by the people, the better for that people. The Democratic theory is that to reduce taxation is to reduce prices. The people must choose between two policies, the policy of protection or the policy of merely enough tariff to raise sufficient revenue to meet the actual expenses of the government.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

If the Republicans are swept from power on November 5 because of their failure to keep tariff promises, it will not be the first time the tariff operated to the same and against end against the party protection.

During the war the tariff had been elevated to the skies but afterwards the Democrats tried to have it reduced. By 1880 the Republicans had to notice the demand. They promised downward revision but in 1882 a bill passed making only slight reductions. The public got mad just like it is now over the Payne-Aldrich bill and in 1884 elected Cleveland.

When the Republicans got into power again they boosted the tariff which had been lowered by the Democrats. Prices went up, the rank and file became indignant and in 1892 again made Grover Cleveland president.

WHY NOT GOOD ROADS

The United States spends annually $95,000,000 for the maintenance of a standing army, $125,000,000 for its naval establishment and $4,000,000 annually for diplomatic representation abroad. But the United States government spends nothing for good roads. The Democratic House, however, has appropriated $18,000,000 annually for improvement of public highways and if the Republican Senate does not chloroform the bill Congress will have inaugurated a policy that will permit the farmers of the nation to receive a just share of the benefits of the vast government expenditures.

Bishop Byrne

Rt. Rev. Thomas Sebastian Byrne, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Nashville, Tenn., was born in Hamilton, Oo., July 29, 1841. When eleven years of age circumstances compelled him to quit school and go to work. Before he had attained his majority he became an expert machinist. At 20 he abandoned his trade and decided to prepare for the priesthood. He attended the Seminary at St. Thomas at Bards town, Ky., and later St. Mary's of the West, graduating in 1865. Three years were spent in the American College in Rome and then he returned to Cincinnati and was ordained in 1869. For nine years Father Byrne was a professor at St. Mary's Seminary in Cincinnati, which position he quit to become rector of St. Marys Cathedral in the same city. He was named as head of the Nashville diocese in 1894 and was consecrated bishop on July 25 of that year.

THIS COUNTRY BUILT THE CANAL, PAID FOR IT, OWNS IT AND WILL MANAGE IT

Suggestions From England and Elsewhere Will be Politely Received. And This Country Will Do as it Thinks Best With Its Own Property

We have published the text of an interview given by W. R. Hearst to The London Evening Standard.

This interview gave the English people, in one of their own newspapers, some needed insight into American views and intentions concerning the Panama canal and the somewhat amusing effort of England to tell the people of this country what they are to do with their own property.

The fact, is as Mr. Hearst tells the English newspaper that the Panama canal is not, as our English friends would have it, a public highway, but a domestic possession of the United States, created by the United States, paid for by the United States and owned by the United States.

The money of this country raised by taxes upon all or the people built the canal. Hundreds of millions of dollars are going into construction—every dollar an American dollar.

Many other millions will be spent for fortifying and for maintaining the canal.

The United States owns the Panama canal, just as England owns Fleet street—or the Manchester Ship canal.

The people of the world will profit by the construction of the canal. Millions will be saved to all of the nations in shorter trips around the world and shorter journeys from ocean to ocean.

The hundreds of millions that this country has spent will and must do good to every nation that sends ships to sea.

Uncle Sam did not go among the nations with his hat in his hand asking for money to build that canal. He did not say as he might have said, "You will be made richer by the canal, every one of your ships will be made more valuable because it will be able to do more work, so pay your share."

Uncle Sam built the canal and paid for it. And now comes England suggesting that this government has no right to permit its own ships to go through the canal free of toll.

That was all that the United States contemplated of an advantage—the right to allow American ships, our own boats, to use our own canal without paying for the privilege.

If a man builds and owns a carriage or a road it is natural that he should permit his own children to use the rod or the carriage without charge, that he should, if he chose, ask others to pay for the privilege.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howara L. Rann.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT

HEREDITY is something which attacks a boy when his father is getting ready to swear off. It is a dangerous article to carry around in the corpuses, as it is liable to break out at any moment and try to set a new high-ball record. Some fathers try to bend the twig into a close imitation of a sixty sixty and when they fail the neighbors point back about four generations and dig up some member of the family who developed a tobacco heart at the age of 96. The average twig would grow straighter if it had fewer homilies at the breakfast table and less rope after supper. You can bring up a boy in a straight jacket and blinders but force never made anything but a fathead or a frump. The man who substitutes beet sugar for granulated needn't be surprised if his son reads the pink sheet at morning prayers.

There is nothing better than the old fashioned religion which makes 2,000 pounds out of a ton of coal.

A boy can be hammered over the head with mortal precepts until his knees buckle together, but a decent square life on the part of the old man will outweigh them all.

A red cedar shingle, applied at frequent intervals in an enthusiastic tone of voice is a better antidote for hereditary cussedness than the brand of piety which never explodes except on Sunday.

The twig which is bent over a pool table three fourths of the time is always too busy to hook up with $2.50 a day.

Self-respect will keep a boy's clutch from slipping quicker than a profession on demountable rims.

If more people would open a reform school in the woodshed, both the curfew and the juvenile court would have to go out of business.

Gethsemane.

In golden youth when seems the earth A summer land for singing mirth, When souls are glad and hearts are light

And not a shadow lurks in sight, We do not know it, but there lies Somewhere, veiled under evening skies,

A garden each must sometime see— Gethsemane, Gethsemane— Somewhere his own Gethsemane.

With joyous steps we go our ways, Love lends a halo to the days, Light sorrows sail like clouds, afar, We laugh and say how strong we are, We hurry on and, hurrying, go Close to the border land of woe That waits for you; waits for me, Gethsemane, Gethsemane— Forever waits Gethsemane.

Down shadowy lanes, across strange streams, Bridged over by our broken dreams Behind the misty crepe of years, Close to the great salt font of tears The garden lies; strive as you may You cannot miss it in your way. All paths that have been or shall be Pass somewhere through Gethsemane.

All those who journey, soon or late Must pass within the garden's gate; Must kneel alone in darkness there And battle with some fierce despair. God pity those who cannot say— "Not mine, but thine;" who only pray "Let this cup pass," and cannot see The purpose in Gethsemane. Gethsemane, Gethsemane— God help us through Gethsemane! —Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Opening Speech in Greensboro

GREENSBORO, July 26.—Chief Justice Walter Clark announced tonight that he would make his opening speech in the campaign for the United States senate in Greensboro next Tuesday night, the 30th. This will be the beginning of a campaign of speech making to include the entire state, Justice Clark stating that he would be actively engaged in the field until the convening of the supreme court the latter part of August.

He will speak at Wentworth, Rockingham county, at noon Wednesday. On Thursday he will speak to the Confederate veterans at Cornelius in Mecklenburg county, and on Friday will be at Lakewood Park in Charlotte.

He stated that as a representative of progressive Democracy his intention is to place clearly before the people the principles for which he has stood thirty years. He recalled that one year ago he stated frankly and squarely the principles for which he intends waging the campaign and said he intends now in person to present them to the people.

He will make an aggressive campaign and will make several other speeches than those named.

Purely Ornamental

A small applicant for assistance was being interviewed by the charity worker.

What is your father? asked the 'E's my father.

Yes, but what is he?

Oh, e's my stepfather.

Yes, but what does he do? Does he sweep chimneys or drive 'buses or what?

O-o-w! No, 'e ain't done nothin' since we've 'ad 'im, exclaimed the small applicant.—London Tit Bits.

But What is a Democrat?

There can't be any doubt that Governor Marshall is the real thing as a Democrat of the old Jeffersonian school. He chews tobacco.—Cleveland Leader.

Senatorial Courtesy

Lorimer voted for Stephenson and Stephenson voted for Lorimer. Thus was the principle of senatorial courtesy vindicated.—Chicago Tribune.

To the Voters of Pitt County:

I understand there is a report being circulated to the effect that if I should be nominated and elected as one of Pitt county's commissioners that I would favor and use my influence towards building a bridge across Tar river at Yankee Hall or Pactus landing and by reason of that report I take this method of denying it, and wish to say further that with the present indebtedness of Pitt county, I would be strictly opposed to any further bonding of the county to build a bridge anywhere across Tar river. THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD had said too much.

"Won't you promise? Haven't I always been kind to you, Fortune, times when you most needed kindness?"

"I promise to say nothing. But if any harm comes to that young man, either in jest or in earnest, I will never speak to you again."

"I see that, after getting Percival Algeron into an adventure, I've got to cloister him safely out of it. Well,

"He Will Come to No Harm Physically."

I accept the responsibility." Some days later he was going to recall this assurance.

"Sometimes I wonder . . ." pensively.

"Wonder about what?"

"What manner of man you are."

"I should have been a great deal better man had I met you ten years ago."

"What? When I was eleven?" with a levity intended to steer him away from this channel.

"You know what I mean," he answered, moody and dejected.

She opened her purse and dropped the pendant into it, but did not speak.

"Ten years ago," abstractedly.

"What a lot of things may happen in ten years! Deaths, births, marriages," he went on; "the snuffing out of kingdoms and republics; wars, janics, famine; honor to some and dishonor to others. It kind of makes a fellow grind his teeth, little girl; it kind of makes him shut his fists and long to run amuck."

"Why should a strong, intelligent man, such as you are, think like that? You are resourceful and unafraid. Why should you talk like that? You are young, too. Why?"

He stopped and looked full into her eyes. "Do you really wish to know?"

"Had I better?" with a wisdom beyond her years.

"No, you had better not. I'm not a good man, Fortune, as criterions go. I've sipped here and there; I've gambled and drunk and squandered my time. Why, in my youth I was as model a boy as ever was Percival. Where the divarication took place I can't say. There's always two forks in the road, Fortune, and many of us take the wrong one. It's easier going. Fine excuse; eh? Some persons would call me a scoundrel, a black-leg; in some ways, yes. But in the days to come I want you always to remember the two untarnished spots upon my shield of honor: I have never cheated a man at cards nor run away with his wife. The devil must give me these merits, however painful it may be to him. Ten years ago, only a decade; good Lord! it's like a hundred years ago, sometimes."

Fortune breathed with difficulty. Never before had he taken her into his confidence to such extent. She essayed to speak; the old terror seemed fairly to smother her. It was not what he had told her, but what she wished to but dared not ask. She was like Bluebeard's wife, only she had not the moral courage to open the door of the grisly closet. . . . Her mother, her uncle; what of them, ah, what of them? The crooked street vanished; the roar dwindled away; she was alone, all, all alone.

"I suppose I ought not to have told you," he said troubled at the misery he saw gathered in her eyes and vaguely conscious of what had written it there. "Your mother and uncle have been very kind to me. They know less of me than you do. I have been to them a kind of errand-boy; a happy-go-lucky fellow, who cheered them when they had the doldrums." With forced cheerfulness he again took her hand and snuggled it under his arm, giving it a friendly reassuring pat. "I'll not speak to you of love, child, but a hair of your head is more precious to me than all Midas' gold. Whenever I've thought of you, I've tried to be good. Honestly."

"And can't you go back to the beginning and start anew?" tremulously.

"Can any one go back? The moving finger writes. An hour is a terrible thing when you look to see what can happen in it. But, come; sermons! I'd far rather see you smile. Won't you?"

She tried to, but to him it was sadder than her tears would have been. For an hour they walked through the dim and musty streets. He exerted himself to amuse her and fairly succeeded. But never did the unaccountable fear, that presage of misfortune, sleep in her heart. And at last, when he took her to her carriage and bade her good-by till dinner, a half-formed idea began to grow in her brain; to save Mr. Jones without betraying R...

The latter's carriage was at the other end of the bazaars; so he strode suddenly through the press, rudely elbowing those who got in his way. An occasional curse was flung after him; but his height, his breadth of shoulder, his lowering face, precluded anything more active. The Moslems had a deal of faith in the efficacy of curses; so the jostled ones rested upon the promise of these, satisfied that directly, or in the near future, Allah would blast the unbelieving dog in his tracks.

What cleverness the mother and scallawag of an uncle had shown to have kept the child in ignorance all these years! That she saw darkly, as through a fog, he was perfectly sure. Sooner or later the storm would burst upon her innocent head, and then God alone knew what would become of her. Oh, damn the selfish, sordid world! At that instant a great longing rolled over him to cut loose from all these evil webs, to begin anew somewhere, even if that somewhere were but a wilderness, a clearing in a forest.

This moment flashed and was gone. Next, he reviewed with chagrin and irritation the folly of his ultimatum of the preceding night. He had had not the slightest semblance of a plan in his head. Sifted down, he saw his savage and senseless humor and the desire to stir up discord. Gioconda was right. Fortune was above them (To Be Continued).

Then and Now. (Asheville Daily Gazette-News)

The Greensboro News states that as a fact of first hand knowledge at the Democratic Executive Committee meeting last March Mr. Travis, manager for Governor Kitchin, took the view that if a man wished to scratch a name or two on the ticket it should not count against his right to participate in the senatorial primary. Over against that was the view of A. D. Watts, manager for Senator Simmons, that to vote in the primary an elector should first qualify by voting the entire Democratic ticket. And yet the Kitchin newspapers are busily engaged in spreading the idea that Simmons is expecting his election to come through the votes of Republicans and near-Democrats.

WHAT TO DO AND HOW.

A Hard Proposition for the Hostess—How She Entertained an Illsorted Company—Simple Fun Did It.

It is easy enough to entertain a large evening company. There is always the chance for an elaborate specially prepared "something" in the way of ingenious games, charades, a concert, or amateur vaudeville. a chance to display her originality.

The supper, too, gives the hostess But when there are merely four or five guests, young people previously and of whose tastes and inclinations even the hostess herself is ignorant, then the task of crating a pleasant evening is no easy one I assure you.

Such a problem came my way this week. As its solution proved so eminently satisfactory, I will give the details of the evening hoping to help hostess.

To begin with I was entertaining in my country home a young citygirl, of nineteen, with most pronounced city ways and dress. She was not musical, nor did she play cards. She adroded dancing, but my parlor was much too small to consider this form of amusement.

The four young people asked to meet her, being the only desirable ones in the small hamlet, were a young man just about to enter college whose taste ran to books and music, his younger sister entering on her second year at he high school and she as shy as a violet, speaking only when spoken to and then flushing such a beautiful rosy red that the speaker felt sorry and glad at once. Sorry to have caused the emotion producing the blush, and plased with the wonderful beauty it imparted to the little face.

The other pair were likewise brother and sister, he a young fruit farmer who could glibly talk of the yield per acre for strawberries or currants, but whose parlor tricks were limited to a recital of how many autos had passed his farm the day before.

His sister, just home from a Quaker Seminary, was disposed mainly to study the city guest's gown, and in this absorption appeared perfectly satisfied to sit in a corner.

Now you will admit that with this heterogeneous human material, it is no easy matter to produce a pleasing amalgamation.

It was done, however, in this way: After the first awkward period of introduction was over, I asked the musical young man to play. After giving his show piece, I handed around some jingles that could be sung to well known airs, and with the youth at the piano, I collected the others into a friendly group and soon they were singing with great gusto the jingles prepared. Then I offered a prize for an original jingle that could be sung to the air of Yankee Doodle, and to my amazement the young farmer came up smiling with the following:

"Old John Brown he had a cow,
 A cow the best that's born, sir
 She wandered off with an old sow
 And ate up all his corn, sir.

Old John Brown he got mad
 And tied her to a stake, sir,
 The next time if she got away,
 He said she'd take the cake, sir."

It was surprising how he rose in the estimation of the college youth, who was wrestling with a semi-literary effusion that was nowhere near completion in the time limit.

Then, the ice nicely broken, we played the old time game of 'Consequences', followed by a modification of the 'Donkey' game, showing on a sheet a large moon face with a single eye. The young people were blindfolded and the one who struck the eye with a cane won another prize.

It was all very simple, but by the end of the evening it proved that you can assimilate even such incongruous tastes if you bring them all down to the level of simple fun that produces a congeniality of tastes. It must along lines that do not require deep thought or the standard or social entertaining on an elaborate scale.

THE HOSTESS.

The Child's View of It

The child was put in the bathtub, but she continued to shriek. She was given the flating soap and the bathbrush and a rubber elephant to play with and then left to herself. Yet she hollered.

Then her mother, called up to her: Keep your mouth shut while you are in the tub.

Why? insisted the voice. You'll know why when you swallow a lot of soapy water.

Why can't I swallow soapy wated? Ain't there plenty more?

White voile with blue and white checked silk and braiding in self color is here shown.

The panel effect on waist and the skirt is very charming and lends itself readily to various trimming or decoration ideas. The waist pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 34, 36, 38 40, and 42 inches bust measure. The skirt is cut in 5 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure. It requires 8 yards of 27 inch material for the medium size of the entire dress, with 1 3-8 yards for the tucker. This illustration calls for two seprate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10c for each pattern.

ADIRONDACK CAKE

the professor repeated, smiling encouragingly. Then in the back of the room a thoughtful looking student with a solemn face arose. Said he, 'If I may ask, who is the printer?'

ECONOMY CAKE.

One-half cup of molasses, four even tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of milk, one cup of flour, three teaspoonfuls (even full) of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoonful of cloves, one saltspoonful of nutmeg.

EGGLESS SPICE CAKE.

One cupful of sugar, onehalf cupful of butter, one cup of sour milk, thick, but not seperated, one cup of seeded and chopped raisins, one scant teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg, two cups of flour.

GINGERBREAD

One cupful of syrup (sorghum or corn) two thirds cupful of sugar, two thirds cup of lard or other shortening, two-thirds cup of boiling water, one teaspoonful of soda, one scant teaspoonful of salt, flour enogh to make stiff dough. Serve hot or cold.

But the Professor Did Not Answer.

(From the University Item.) Elmer E. Brown, the new chancellor of New York University, tells the following anecdote. "Near the approach of the final examinations a professor was cautioning his class against neglecting a thorough review of the somesters work and was pointing out in a general way what the examination would cover. 'I'll pause, now to answer any question,' the professor added, 'and then I must go and prepare the examination papers and hurry them to the printer.' "There was a moment of silence. 'I'm ready to answer any question,'

BILL DINEEN'S BIG VICTORY

WHEN baseball fans see the stalwart figure of Umpire Bill Dineen stroll to the plate, mask and protector in hand, well may they look and admire. When they see him raise that powerful right arm signaling a "strike," well may they be thrilled with the memory of other days. It was that same right arm that brought the name of Dineen imperishable fame and won a world's pennant for Boston.

This great pitcher played the role of star in several hurling feats, but his greatest renown as a slab artist was gained in the first world's series under the national agreement in 1903. In this series Dineen dethroned a popular hero, pitched his teammates to victory in an uphill battle and figured as the victor of three games of the series.

Dineen never faltered in the great task cut out for him. He pitched as though his very life depended upon the outcome. His teammates, encouraged by his matchless hurling, played like a machine. Ferris and Parent had batted the home club in the lead 3 to 0 when the ninth inning rolled around. Only four hits had been made off Dineen.

As Clarke came to bat in the ninth the Pirate fans roared frantically for a hit. That inning held their last hope in the last ditch. Dineen sent up an outdrop curve that baffled the Pirate leader, whose best effort was only a skler to Dougherty. Tommy Leach lifted a fly to Freeman in right.

With two down in the last half of the ninth the greys Hans Wagner alone lay between the Pirates and defeat. The Pirate partisans hoped against hope. They rooted in vain. Outguessed, outgeneraled, outwitted in this crucial moment, the greatest batsman of the Pirates threw down his bat and walked toward the bench in token of defeat, the great crowd arose and cheered itself hoarse and then dispersed for the season. The great Wagner had struck out and Bill Dineen had completed one of the great pitching feats of all time. He had won a world's flag for Boston.

KANE GOING AT GREAT CLIP

Former Utility Player of Chicago Cubs

ter on that circuit. He will probably be purchased by one of the major league ball clubs again this fall. Maybe the Cubs or Sox can secure him.

McGraw Makes Prophecy.

New York first, Pittsburgh second, and Cincinnati third—is J. McGraw's ultimate guess as to the ultimate finish. The Giant leader believes that when Adams, O'Toole, Camnitz and Hendrix hit their stride the Pirates will forge forward as runners up in the N. L. debate. He conceded Mr. O'Day a place in the first division, but the highly repugnant idea of being beaten out by an ex-umpire is no longer troubling his mid-day dreams.

Victor Emmanuel's Anniversary

ROME, July 29.—The twelfth anniversary of the accession of Victor Emmanuel II, to the throne of Italy, was celebrated today with popular festivities throughout the kingdom.

What Makes a Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and dred, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla. "and I thank you with all my heart for making such a god medicine." Only
