ROSENTHAL'S LIFE WORTH $5,000

PRIVATE DETECTIVES AT WORK

New York Police Not Only Not Helping Whitman, But Hinder Him in His Investigations for Guilty Parties. Becker Still on

NEW YORK, District Attorney Whitman is said to be receiving reports from the investigations of private detectives that make him feel that he capture of the slayers of the gambler is now on sure ground and that the Herman Rosenthal will soon be an accomplished fact.

The public prosecutor has heard that the five assassins, after shooting down Rosenthal fled to Rockaway and there in a gambling house lost the proceeds of their crime on gambling tables.

Once broke the slayers came back to this city and went into hiding. The gambling house in which they played is said to be owned by Black Jack Rose, one of the men now under arrest in connection with the shooting of Rosenthal.

Rose, it is said, saw to it that the slayers with the proceeds of their crime, were taken to the Rockaway gambling house.

Five thousand dollars is said to have been the price paid for the killing of Rosenthal and the private detectives have confirmed the information that no less than 20 persons were involved in the plot to kill the gambler.

No hint has come from the public prosecutor or the private detectives as to who paid the assassins.

MR. ROY C. FLANAGAN IS CONGRATULATED

NO HOLD UP FOR "OUR" UNCLE SAM

Some surprise was occasioned here by a Washington special published in Sunday's Greensboro News which stated that the name of Mr. Roy C. Flanagan had been sent to the Senate for renomination as postmaster at Greenville, but that telegrams from Greenville to Senators Simmons and Overman had asked that confirmation be held up. This caused the friends of Postmaster Flanagan, which means everybody here regardless of party, to get busy and Monday both senators were wired that there was no opposition here to him and urged that his renomination be confirmed as early as possible. It developed that the report of previous telegrams in opposition were without foundation and before night the good news had come from Senator Overman in messages addressed to Mayor F. M. Wooten, Col. Harry Skinner, D. J. Whichard and others, reading as follows:

Washington, D. C., July 29.
D. J. Whichard and Others,
Greenville, N. C.

Flanagan has just been confirmed upon, my motion.

LEE S. OVERMAN.
All of the messages read the same and in a few minutes after their receipt our "Uncle Sam" was the happiest man in Greenville and was being congratulated by all who heard the good news. Responses of thanks were promptly wired Senator Overman for his action.

This is Mr. Flanagan's third appointment as postmaster and the unanimous endorsement of the people gives approval of his efficiency. Greenville has never had a better one than he.

County Fair Meeting

The governing board and township committees of Pitt County Fair Association will meet in the court house at 10:30 o'clock on Friday morning, August 2nd. This is an important meeting to consider details for the next county fair and there should be a large attendance. The success of the next fair will be measured largely by what is one in this meeting.

JUDGE ARCHBALD DENIES ALL CHARGES

Impeached Jurist Enters A General Denial

HE NEVER TOOK ADVANTAGE

In Lengthy Document He Answers in Detail to the Number of Charges Made Against Him in the Articles of Impeachment

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Sitting as a court of impeachment the Senate today adjourned after hearing Judge Robert W. Archbald's formal answer to the charges against him without deciding if the trial shall go on this summer or be postponed until this fall.

Washington, July 29.—Judge Robert W. Archbald of the Commerce court in answer to the impeachment articles brought against him by the House of Representatives, today formally denied to the Senate sitting as a court of impeachment that he had ever used his office or influence as a judge for profit, that he never undertook for a consideration to compromise litigation before the Interstate Commerce Commission, that he ever wrongfully used his position to obtain credit from litigants before him, or that he had undertaken to carry on a general business for profit or speculation in coal properties as charged in the House indictment.

To each of the thirteen articles of impeachment Judge Archbald replied that none, even of true, constituted an impeachable offense, a high crime or a misdemeanor as defined by the Constitution.

Manystatements contained in the allegations were not disputed while others were totally denied and annulment of others was asked on the ground that they were too vague to admit of proper defense.

Judge Archbald admitted his participation in the now noted Katydid Clum Bank Deal with Edward J. Williams of Scranton and the Hillside Coal and Iron Company, a subsidiary of the Erie Railroad, which had cases pending in his court, but he denied that he wilfully or unlawfully or corruptly took any advantage of his position to induce the railroad officials to deal with him and his partner.

The accused jurist denied that he at any time for a consideration agreed to assist George M. Watson, a Scranton lawyer, to settle a case in which the Marian Coal Company was complainant against the Lackawanna Railroad before the Interstate Commerce Commission. William P. Roland and his brothers, Christopher and James, are principal stockholders in the coal company and William P. Roland was the author of some of the charges on which the House Judiciary Committee reported articles of impeachment.

The Judge's answer today set out that his participation in the negotiations with officials of the Lackawanna Railroad for settlement for Watson and Christopher G. Roland and that all his acts were without promise or expectation of compensation of any kind.

Judge Archbald adm his attorneys took their places at the counsel table a few minutes after the Senate convened as a court of impeachment. Senators Penrose, Poindexter, Kern, Watson, Foster and Bankhead, who were absent when the case was first taken up, were sworn in as members of the court.

It took the clerk of the Senate ten minutes to read the journal of the last day of the court's sitting. Then Senator Gallinger in the chair asked if the defendant's attorneys were prepared to make answer to the charges.

"We are ready with our answer and would like to have it read from the clerk's desk," said Mr. Worthington, Judge Archbald's lawyer.

This permission was granted by the Senate and the reading of the lengthy answer began.

English Aviator and Bride, Who Had "Aeroplane Wedding"

THE recent wedding in London of Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, and Miss Dorothy Taylor of New York was pretty much of an aeroplane affair. The bridegroom aeroplaned to Wildford, near Chelmsford, where the ceremony was performed, and several of his aviator friends, including Tom Sopwith, Gustave Hamel, Robert Loraine and others, flew from Hendon. Pierre Verrier carried a woman passenger, Miss Christich. The happy couple had planned a honeymoon trip by aeroplane, but the bride had a premonition of danger, so they cruised the south coast of England in a steam yacht and wound up in France, whence they flew home over the channel. The bride is a niece of the late Governor Flower of New York.

GRACES COME FACE TO FACE AT TRIAL

ACCUSED WOMAN GROWS EXCITED

Work of Securing a Jury Goes Thro' Without a Hitch—Mrs. Grace Constantly Stares at her Husband.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 29.—Daisie Ulrich Opie Grace was placed on trial today on a charge of having attempted to kill her husband last March.

Accompanied by her mother and a nurse Mrs. Grace appeared in the court room early and after the charge against her had been read she pleaded not guilty. Her voice carried to all parts of the chamber and she appeared cool under the gaze of spectators.

Contending counsel got to work weeding out undesirable talem and in the first hour and a half five jurors had been chosen.

Grace, paralyzed from his waist down, was brought her from his mother's home in Newnan this morning.

The work of selecting jurors proceeded rapidly and when court adjourned at noon the entire panel had been named. This was taken as an indication that there would be little delay in the trial.

After the jury had been chosen the invalid husband was carried into the court room. Mrs. Grace looked frequently at her husband but finally switched her chair about so that one of her attorneys obscured her view.

After quiet was restored the prosecutor called the first witness for the state, Policeman R. A. Wood, who went to the Grace home on the morning of the shooting.

TAR HEELS TO BULL MOOSE CONVENTION

REGULAR DELEGATES TO BE CHOSEN

Greensboro Friends of Colonel Roosevelt will hold a conference and then appoint real live Delegates.

ASHEVILLE, July 29.—It has been assumed that North Carolina would not be represented at the national progressive convention at Chicago unless some friend or friends of Colonel T. Roosevelt should attend as individuals, not having any delegated or official authority. It was stated, tonight, however, that another conference of the friends of Colonel Roosevelt will be held at Greensboro the latter part of the week and it is likely that at this meeting a number of representative men will be chosen to attend the convention in a formal or official capacity.

Telegram received here tonight from Senator Dixon gave the information that every state in the union had made arrangements to send accredited delegations to Chicago save the two Carolinas and the senator expressed the hope that at least a dozen men would attend from this state. Senator Dixon says he is individually of the opinion that it will be wise to effect a national Progressive organization in this state immediately following the Chicago convention, an organization that will be fully in accord with the new party's articles of faith.

It is understood here that Mr. Williamson, who attended the regular Republican convention at Chicago as a delegate will designate the exact time for holding the Greensboro conference, which will be Friday or Saturday.

Bunch grapes are coming along all right.

INSURANCE CO. TO GREENSBORO

Jefferson Standard Moves August 1st

LAST MEETING HELD IN RALEIGH

Present Head Will Resign When Company Moves and it is Rumored That Other Official Changes Will Take Place Then

RALEIGH, July 29.—The directors of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance company this afternoon reaffirmed their decision to remove the home offices from Raleigh to Greensboro and set August 1 as the time to move the offices. It had been rumored that the company might stay here, there being a project afoot, it was said, whereby the Raleigh company might acquire the interest of another company and move it to Raleigh. The action of the directors this afternoon effectually disposed of such a rumor.

The meeting of the directors was held in the company's office at noon, with a large attendance. What transpired was not made public, the officers saying that a resolution was adopted authorizing the removal.

That there will be changes in the personnel of the offices of the company there is no doubt. The directors meet Tuesday, August 6, to elect officers and that at this time at least one resolution it is believed, will be filed. It is known—though he has said nothing about the matter—that President Joseph G. Brown will not care to continue his connection with the company in the capacity of president and a successor will likely be elected in his place. Mr. Brown as many duties and he could not, it is said, spare the time from these. He could not give the company his best services and remain in Raleigh.

The supposition is that the Jefferson Standard and Greensboro Life, between whom a merger was proposed in the spring, will renew their efforts for a merger on some plan satisfactory to the majority of the policyholders of both companies.

FOR TEDDY

Bull City Republicans Leaning For Him

DURHAM, July 29.—The Durham Republicans have called a meeting of the executive committee for tomorrow evening at which time Chairman J. E. Carpenter will offer his resignation in that he is not in sympathy with the action of the Republican party at Chicago. He is and always has been the strongest kind of a Roosevelt man and as surely as the ex-President forms a third party the county chairman will follow him into it.

It is expected that the members of the executive committee will refuse to accept Mr. Carpenter's resignation, since the great majority of them feel about the political status of the regular Republicans just as does the county chairman. Postmaster J. A. Giles and possibly two other men in the county are Taft supporters, but these will be left out in the cold.

Pier collapses in German Port

BINZ, Germany, July 29.—A shocking catastrophe, causing the death of a large number of German excursionists occurred last evening at this Baltic bathing resort.

The landing stage, which was crowded to its utmost capacity, during a concert given by the local band, collapsed and threw over a hundred people into the sea.

There was a terrible scene of excitement as the people on shore and on the ruins of the landing stage endeavored to rescue the men, women and children struggling in the water among the wreckage.

Twenty one bodies have been recovered, but it is believed that many more persons lost their lives.

The excursionists had come from all parts of Northwestern Prussia to spend the day on the seashore.

N. S. R. R. HEAD RESIGNS POSITION

Mr. E. T. Lemb Going to Work in Atlanta

MANY SORRY TO SEE HIM LEAVE

Under Clever Management of President Lamb Many Notable Improvements Have Been Made. No New Head Yet Named

NORFOLK, Va., July 29.—E. T. Lamb has resigned as president and general manager of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company to become operating head of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Company on August first, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Lamb will represent the receivers and will have a free hand in the general management of the road's affairs and has the entire support of all interests.

It is also expected that he will be made president of the re-organized company.

It is not yet known who will succeed Mr. Lamb as President and general manager of the Norfolk Southern railroad here. Mr. Tinsman of Chicago, assistant to the general manager of the Rock Island railroad, is mentioned but no negotiations to this end have been concluded as yet.

Mr. Lamb has been president and general manager of the N-S since its reorganization several years ago and managed the property with efficiency, leaving it largely reconstructed and in the best condition in the road's history. The N-S under Mr. Lamb's management has grown to be a highly valuable property to its owners, mostly in the north, and is now not only on a dividend paying basis but its large earning capacity under Mr. Lamb's management has been accomplished by a reduction in operating expenses at a ratio much in excess of other railway properties in contiguous southern territory.

Under Mr. Lamb's administration the N-S has improved its properties in many ways. It has added to its Virginia Beach holdings resort structures as fine as are to be found on the coast, an expenditure which is bound to accrue to the great financial interest of the Norfolk-Southern.

Will Disarm Americans in Mexico

EL PASO, Tex., July 29.—Ominous reports from the Mexican frontier declaring that rebels had determined to disarm Americans in the insurrection zone and that guarantees of protection were to be withdrawn, were confirmed in part today by Louis Lach, a Mormon, who fled from Colonia Dublin with his family last night.

El Paso, July 29.—The correspondent of the El Paso Herald wired a statement here today declaring that General Inez Salazar, second in command of the Mexican rebel army, had made several addresses Sunday in which he asserted that all Americans in the rebel zone were to be disarmed and all protection guarantees for American citizens withdrawn.

Salazar is reported as saying that inasmuch as the American government had treated the rebels as bandits they may as well act such parts.

all, in feeling, in instinct, in loyalty. What right had he, roisterer by night that he was, predaceous outlaw, what right had he to look upon Fortune as his own? Harm her! He would have lopped off his right hand first.

Well, he had but little time, and Percival Algernon called for prompt action. The young fool was smitten with Fortune. Any one could see that. As he shouldered his pathway to the carriage, his eyes seeing but not visualizing objects, three brown men glided in between him and the carriage-step.

CHAPTER X.

Mahomed Laughs.

The drawing back of Ryanne's powerful arm was produced by the stimulus of self-preservation; but almost instantly thought dominated impulse, and all indications of belligerency disappeared. The arm sank, relaxed. It was not possible nor politic that Mahomed-El-Gebel meant to take reprisal in this congested quarter. It would have gained him no advantage whatever. And Ryanne's perception of the exact situation enabled him to smile with the cool effrontery of a man inured to sudden dangers.

"Well, well! So you have found your way to Cairo, Mahomed?"

"Yes, effendi," returned Mahomed, with a smile that answered Ryanne's in thought and expression, the only perceptible difference being in the accentuated whiteness of his fine teeth. "Yes, I have found you."

"And you have been looking for me?"

"Surely."

Ryanne, with an airy gesture, signified that he wished to enter his carriage. Mahomed, with a movement equally light, implied his determination to stand his ground.

"In a moment, effendi," he said smoothly.

Mahomed spoke English more or less fluently. His career of forty-odd years had been most colorful. Once a young sheik of the desert, of ample following, a series of tribal wars left him unattached, a wanderer without tent, village or onion-patch. He had first appeared in Cairo. Here he had of necessity picked up a few words of English; and from a laborer in the cotton fields he was eventually graduated to the envied position of dragoman or guide. He tired of this, being nomadic by instinct and inclination. He tried his hand at rugs in Smyrna, failed, and found himself stranded in Constantinople. He drifted, became a stevedore, a hotel porter, burying his pride till that moment when he could, in dignity and security, resurrect it. Fortune, hanging fire, relented upon his appointment as cavass or messenger to the British Consulate. After a time, he became what he considered prosperous; and like all fanatic pagans of his faith, proposed to reconstruct his religious life by a pilgrimage to Holy Mecca. While there, he had performed a considerable service in behalf of the future Pasha of Bagdad, who thereafter gave him a place in his retinue.

Mahomed was not only proud but wise; and a series of events, sequences of his own shrewdness, pushed him forward till he became in deed, if not in fact, the Pasha's right-hand man in Bagdad. That quaint city, removed as it is from the ordinary highways of the Orient, is still to most of us an echo remote and mysterious; and the present Pasha enjoys great privileges, over property, over life and death; and it is not enlarging upon fact to say that when he deems it necessary to lop off a head, he does so, without consulting his master in Constantinople. It is all in the business of a day. Next to his celebrated pearls and rose-diamonds, the Pasha held as his most precious treasure, the Holy Yihordes. And for its loss Mahomed knew that his own head rested but insecurely upon his lean neck. That his ed's heart; this dog, whom he called effendi, might have sold it, since that must have been the ultimate purpose of the theft. And if he had sold it to one who had left Egypt . . . Mahomed's neck grew cold. "Who has it, effendi? Is the man still in Cairo?"

"Yes. If you and your two friends will come with me to the English-Bar, I'll explain many things to you," assured Ryanne, beginning, as he believed, to see his way forward. "Don't be afraid. I'm not setting any trap for you. I'll tell you truthfully that I didn't expect to see you so soon. If you'll come along I'll do the best I can to straighten out the matter. What do you say?"

Mahomed eyed him with keen distrust. This white man was as strong in cunning as he was in flesh. He had had practical demonstrations. Still, whatever road led to the recovery of the rug must needs be traveled. His arm, though it still reposed in a sling was not totally helpless. It stood three to one, then. He spoke briefly to his companions, over whom he seemed to have some authority. These two inventoried the smooth-faced Feringhi. One replied, Mahomed approved. Three to one, and in these streets many to call upon, in case of open hostilities. The English-Bar Mahomed knew tolerably well. He had known it in the lawless and revelling eighties. It would certainly be neutral ground, since the proprietor was a Greek. With a dignified sweep of his hand, he signed for Ryanne to get into the carriage. Ryanne did so, relieved. He was certain that he could bring Mahomed round to a reasonable view of the affair. He was even willing to give him a little money. The three Arabs climbed in beside him, and the journey to the hostelry was made without talk. Ryanne pretended to be vastly interested in the turmoil through which the carriage rolled, now swiftly, now hesitant, now at a standstill, and again tortuously. Once Mahomed felt beneath his burnouse for his money; and once Ryanne, in the pretense of seeking a cigar, felt for his. They were rather upon even terms in the adjudication of each other's character.

The English-Bar was not the most inviting place. Sober, Ryanne had never darkened its doors. The odor of garlic prevailed over the lesser smells of bad cooking. It was lighted only from the street, by two windows and a door that swung open all the days in the year. The windows were generally half obscured by bills announcing boxing-matches, wrestling-bouts and the lithographs of cheap theaters. The walls were decorated in a manner to please the inherent Anglo-Saxon taste for strong men, fast horses, and pink-tighted Venuses. A few iron-topped tables littered both room and sidewalk, and here were men of a dozen nationalities, sipping coffee, drinking beer, or solemnly watching the water-bubbles in their Sheeshas, or pipes.

A curious phase of this class of under-world is that no one is curious. Strangers are never questioned except when they invite attention, which they seldom do. So, when Ryanne and his quasi-companions entered, there wasn't the slightest agitation. A blowy barmaid stood behind the bar, polishing the copper spigots. Ryanne threw her a greeting, to which she responded with a smirk that once upon a time had been a smile. He, being master of ceremonies, selected a table in the corner. The four sat down, and Ryanne plunged intrepidly into the business under-hand. To make a tool of Mahomed, if not an ally, toward this he directed his effort. Half a dozen times, Mahomed dropped a word in Arabic to the other two, who understood little or no English.

"So, you see, Mahomed, that's the

THE NATIONAL TICKET

Wilson Marshall

REPUBLICANS NATURALLY PROGRESSIVE

The reason why the Progressive party must of necessity be developed principally out of the Republican party becomes apparent after a little thought. In the first place, the evolution has already been accomplished in a number of states. In the second place, the Democratic party is a wholly different kind of entity from its chief opponent. The Republican party has always been comparatively homogeneous. The present split in the party is temporary and transitional. Fundamentally, the Republican party has always been Progressive, but in order to keep alive it is compelled from time to time to accept new views of what progress means and to adapt itself to new conditions. It is now in the process of a healthful transformation from within. Precisely as it threw off machine domination in Pennsylvania a few weeks ago, so it has been struggling to emancipate itself in many other states. Whether it keeps the name Republican, or not, the Progressive movement will be made up of men who, like Roosevelt, have been the leaders in the more radical wing of the Republican party. The Democratic party has some elements of unity, but in the main it is a coalition of groups. Its largest factor is the solid South. Its second factor in permanence is Tammany Hall. Its third is the old line Democracy represented by men like Governor Harmon of Ohio, and its fourth is the radical Democracy represented by men like Bryan and Hearst. The Democratic party finds its opportunity not so much in its own shining virtues as in the faults and failures of the Republican party. The immense Democratic wave that struck the country in 1910 was due to the weakness and failure of the Taft administration and the action of a Republican Congress in passing the Payne-Aldrich tariff. The recent Progressive movement in the Republican party, as led by Roosevelt, was a confession of these mistakes.

WILSON AND THE PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT

The success of Taft through the "Old Guard" at Chicago gives the Democrats an even better opportunity ity than they had in 1910. The Democratic Congress has conducted itself in a praiseworthy manner under Clark as Speaker and Underwood as floor leader. A number of Democratic governors have given their states good administrations. The Democratic convention at Baltimore nominated a brilliant and commendable ticket, and adopted an excellent platform. Have the Democrats therefore earned the right to win the election in November and have the Republicans advertised their need of rebuke and defeat? There would seem only one answer to that question. The Democrats, led by the ticket of Wilson and Marshall, would seem to merit success and would also seem entitled to expect it with a good deal of confidence. If indeed, there had been such acquiescence in the nomination of Taft and Sherman that the Roosevelt movement have been only one outcome. Under those circumstances, as between Wilson and Taft, it is not easy to figure out where Taft would have expected to win a single electoral vote in the entire country. If it were merely a matter of Governor Wilson as a presidential candidate, the thing might just as well be made unanimous.

But a great deal more than that is involved. There is a Congress to be elected this year and another in 1914. The future of parties must be considered. The Democratic party machinery in a number of states, as in New York, remains in control of objectionable bosses and machines. The Progressive movement which in the main represents the energetic self-assertion of Republican voters who wish to rehabilitate their own party cannot be abandoned merely because the Democrats, through the force of circumstances, have been compelled to nominate a splendid ticket. With the Progressive party thoroughly launched and in the field, we are quite certain to have a progressive minded president, whether it be Woodrow Wilson or Theodore Roosevelt. Meanwhile we shall see the process of wholesome improvement going on within the Democratic party and a sweeping transformation of the Republican party into a modern, popular, valuable organization fit to serve as the political agency of self-respecting men. The whole situation, therefore, is one that invites good cheer and congratulation.

Some people find out sometimes that they are talking too much. Governor Wilson has his speech of acceptance ready to go on tap. An Ithaca, N. Y., boy swallowed a bee. That's a buzzer. None of us get what we want, some may come short of what they really need, but all perhaps, get more than they deserve. The army worm gives an indication that there is some fighting ahead. Add a little every day by a little Reflector ad, and keep business growing.

That big fish at Beaufort might have been a stranded Bull Moose.

A Pertinent Question.

How many Republican votes has Mr. Duncan promised to deliver to Mr. Simmons in the Democratic primaries?—Raleigh Caucasian.

Press Comment

A Democrat Defined.

What is a democrat? He is a voter who is not a republican controlled by ideas of centralization and committed to the injustice of making a few rich by taxing the many. Well, he isn't a populist who believes in a paternalistic government and is committed to the idea that the government, and not the individual, ought to do the business of the country. A democrat is a man who believes in equal rights for all and special privileges for none, and who would not under any circumstances, vote the Republican ticket, especially for the reason that republicanism is pledged to the unjust and unconstitutional policy of taxing freemen for the benefit of certain favored classes. Democrats who have gone wrong can get right by voting right and keeping right in the fight for popular rights.—Wilmington Star.

Young Warriors All Round.

It is pointed out that among the Democratic campaign committee only 3 members are over 50 years old. McCombs the chairman is 37. Another member, J. E. Davies, is 33. Senator Gore is 42. And so they go. There are active indications, too, that the Taft campaign will be in the hands of young men. Col. Roosevelt, who has always been young, and in some people's opinion will never be old, will rely mainly upon young men as a matter of course. It was young men who carried Wilson's candidacy on their shoulders to success and who even furnished most of the money that could be had. Boys not long out of school worked for the school teacher with might and main. The whole campaign has been and will continue to be a political contest in which the leadership requirements resemble those of war.—Charlotte Observer.

This is My Birthday

Julius Kruttschnitt

Julius Kruttschnitt, who was one of the chief lieutenants of the late Edward H. Harriman and who has been director of maintenance and operation of the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific system since Mr. Harriman's death, was born in New Orleans, July 30, 1854.—He taught school in Baltimore five years before engaging in railway work in 1878 as civil engineer. For seven years he was connected in various capacities with the Louisiana and Texas railroad. In 1885 he became assistant general manager of the eastern lines of the Southern Pacific system and ten years later found him general manager of the entire system, with headquarters in San Francisco. Subsequently he was promoted to the office of fourth vice president of the Southern Pacific and in 1901 Mr. Harriman made him one of his principal assistants in the direction of the great system of transportation lines, embracing the Oregon railroad and Navigation Company and numerous other lines in addition to the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines.

Stoketown Items

AYDEN, N. C., Route 2, July 29.—Our farmers are busy curing tobacco, but the majority will finish this week. All crops are good considering the excessive rains we had. Melons and fruits seem to be plentiful, especially peaches. We are glad to note that Mrs. David Stokes, who had been sick for some time is able to be out again. We had our first experience with the army worm this week. We hear they are numerous in other sections also. Mr. David Stokes has a hill of corn fourteen and one half feet high. Mrs. Augusta Stokes has returned from an extended visit at Fairmont. Messrs. Heber and Stokes went to Ayden Saturday afternoon. Quite a number of our people are attending the revival meeting at Riverside.

THIS COUNTRY BUILT THE CANAL, PAID FOR IT, OWNS IT AND WILL MANAGE IT

Suggestions From England and Elsewhere Will be Politely Received. And This Country Will Do as It Thinks Best With Its Own Property

Part II

That is what the United States government does. It will allow American ships to go through the canal free, or at a nominal rate—and all other ships of all other nations will pay a fair price for the use of the canal—as they pay the price now in the Suez canal and other canals. The English in their efforts to manage the great enterprise which this country created appeal to a treaty ablished long ago and replaced by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which was drawn—thanks to the efforts of the Hearst newspapers. In regard to the interpretation of the treaty Mr. Hearst, in his interview, says: "An article in the London Times says a great deal depends upon the correct interpretation of the spirit in which the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was drawn; that is to say, as to how far it perpetuated the sense of the Clayton-Bulwer convention. In view of the above facts, it ought to be clear that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty only perpetuates the sense of the Clayton-Bulwer convention where it repeats the words of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. When it does not repeat the words, it is, as I have said, because of a definite determination to reject the principle. Moreover, since that time the United States has acquired the territory across which the canal is built, which seems to me to have considerable bearing upon the situation and further to strengthen the claims of the United States in regard to the canal." The American people will not listen to any suggestion of control of the American canal by outside powers, English or others. And the American senate will not give up this nation's right to control completely the two national doors which we have opened, east and west, and the lane of water which we have built across this continent from one ocean to the other. England and the other nations will be treated fairly. But fair treatment does not imply unfair treatment of this country's citizens. Inasmuch as the citizens paid for the canal, took all the risks, and did all the work, they can if they choose use the canal that they created on terms suitable to themselves. It will not be forgotten, by the way, what part Theodore Roosevelt played in the construction of this canal and the acquisition of the territory to its construction. Whatever the individual opinion of Theodore Roosevelt's policies and actions may be, none can deny him the virtues of energy, determination and courage. Roosevelt is the man whose energetic action and power to decide quickly gave us that strip across the continent and gave to the world the great canal in a hurry.

Pointed Paragraphs

A town is like a plant—it may grow anyway; but it will grow faster if it is cultivated. We would be quick to defend this community in time of war. It is equally urgent that we be prompt to promote its welfare in time of peace. The easiest money man acquires comes from the increasing value of his home. Therefore, the most important work he does is helping the community to grow. The value of each man's property is enhanced by the value of the property around it. It is not enough to build a good house; we must help to make a good town. The seed from which springs this community's prosperity is the money that is invested here at home. It will never bear fruit for us if planted somewhere else. This town that is our residence today is our children's recollection for a life-time. What shall they remember?—Good stores, clean streets and comfortable homes? or something else not so good? The development of this community is not a matter of sentiment; it is a matter of common sense. It returns not only a reward in contentment but a profit in property valuation. Human happiness depends on the things that are nearest to us—the home first of all, and then the town in which we live. Whatever we do to make the home pleasanter or the town better; makes life more worth the living.

Negro Girl to be Executed.

RICHMOND, Va., July 30.—There seems to be no prospect that Governor Mann will interfere with the electrocution on Friday morning of this week of Virginia Christian, the negro girl, who will be the first woman to die in the electric chair in this state. The negro, who is only 18 years old, in March last, at Hampton, cruelly murdered Mrs. Belote, an aged white woman. The girl went to the woman's house for laundry and becoming incensed because of inquiries of the woman concerning certain missing pieces of linen in the previous weeks' washing, struck Mrs. Belote, a frail little woman, 70 years old, with a cuspidor, felling her to the ground. When Mrs. Belote recovered consciousness and began to scream, the girl seized a poker and beat her over the head, finally ramming a towel down her throat and choking her to death. The murderess then coolly walked out of the house and was not arrested until some time afterward.

Youth's Prank Results in Death

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 29.—Mitchell Cabanis, 18, and Clarence Shaw, 10, were presented in court today charged with a murder, to which they smilingly confessed when arrested yesterday. They explained that they thought to give Robert M. Ellis only a scare and occasion for a quick plunge into the pool in Forest Park when they poured a mixture of whiskey and gasoline over his clothing while he slept on a park bench Friday night and then applied a match. The whiskey, Cabanis, just out of an asylum to which he had been committed for insanity, took from the victim's pocket and the other boy found the gasoline where a park employe had concealed it under bushes. The mixture flamed all right, but instead of seeing Ellis run for the lagoon they saw policemen make frantic effort to tear Ellis' clothing from him. He was dead, however, before the blaze went out. The boys lured the police until today.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howara L. Rann.

THE BRASS BAND

THE brass band is a collection of able-bodied citizens who are passionately fond of music in its raw state. It consists of a leader surrounded by instruments of torture which are never in tune with anything except the bass drum. Some day somebody will invent a brass band in which the alto and tenor horns will keep in the same key with what is going on about them, and then band music will be better thought of by people whose sense of intonation has not been stunted in early youth. The mission of the brass band is to supply enthusiasm for political speakers who forgot to bring any with them. A stout band, which is able to explode at any time in several different styles of international pitch has a very soothing effect when performing in conjunction with a candidate who is explaining Schedule K so that nobody can tell it from a Bach figure. The leader of a brass band is always a thorough musician who is at home on any instrument, from a B flat cornet to a riding cultivator. His business is to keep the band in the same block with the original tempo without destroying the toot ensemble. All band music is played at a rate of speed which would take it around a mile track in 32 seconds and leaves the performers in a disheveled and wind-blown condition. The most versatile band instrument is the bass tuba, which has a range of two notes and leaps from one to the other on the slightest provocation. When a brass band graduates from "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and begins to mingle with Rossini, Meyerber and other deceased musical acrobats, it is called an orchestra and is allowed to spray a cultivated audience with all of the most popular diminished sevenths. After a person has been sprayed with the labored utterances of several defunct composers who were not thought much of while they were in the flesh, he will look upon the silver cornet band and its ragtime remarks with new respect.

Wilson for President

When Wilson Soars.

That weighty multipane, the Taft. Must meet the very swiftest craft That ever soared With hope aboard Across the airy scene. It has among its other things A pair of never bending wings, And safely canned, The Wilson brand Of get there gasoline! The Taft propeller (made of brass) Is of the finest Wall street class; Its whirling blade, By Morgan made, Gleams with a golden sheen. But all in vain that shaky ship Will rise and veer and turn and dip; See Wilson soar At Baltimore To beat the Taft machine! Behold the Taft craft arise Until it tickles Luna's eyes

All other ships Seem in eclipse— All rivalry has shrunk. But lo! the Wilson craft whirls by; The Taft gets tangled in the sky; Its motor skips, Its canvas rips, And see it fall kerplunk! That weighty Taft aeroplane Will ne'er champion again; You may expect It will be wrecked — A natural mishap. The Wilson wings arise to wipe The Taft's Trust and Ticker type Of air machine From view terrene And blot it from the map! John O'Keefe.

The state good roads convention to be held in Charlotte this week is an occasion of much importance. The question of better public roads is one that greatly concerns the entire state for mud roads are laying a heavy tax upon the people that they should be relieved of.

A City Street. They took a few old bricks, An they took a little tar, With various ingredients Imported from afar. They hammered it and rolled it, And then they went away— They said they had a pavement That would last for many a day.

But they came with picks and smote To lay a water main, And then they called the workmen To put it back again. To run a railway cable They took it up some more, And then they put it back again. Just where it was before.

They took it up for conduits To run the telephone, And then they put it back again As hard as any stone. They took it up for wires To feed the electric light, And then they put it back again, Which was no more than right.

Oh, the pavement is full of furrows, There are patches everywhere; You would like to ride upon it, But it is seldom that you would dare. It is a very handsome pavement, A credit to the town, But they are always diggin' of it up Or putting of it down.

Mr. Tyson Not in the Race Editor Reflector: I want to thank many voters for their nomination of me in The Reflector on the 24th inst., for the high and honorable office of member of the house in the legislature of North Carolina. I assure my friends that I feel that its an honor as well as a sacred trust to serve in the legislature of North Carolina, especially from the great county of Pitt, where one has character an ability to honor the grand old state.

It pains me to say I can't get in the race. I love by native state, but feel that others could serve best. Like Cincinnati I prefer to remain on the farm. I will follow the flag of White Supremacy as I have in all the hard fought battle for thirty seven years. Williams—Many people seek out politicians just because they have axes to grind. Billiams—And in doing so they take an awful chance on losing their axes. The refiners can make that quarter million back in a little while and the people will pay the bill in their sweetening.

STATE AND COUNTY NEWS

GRIMESLAND, July 27.—The house party given jointly by Misses Earle and Susie Proctor at their homes, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Proctor and Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Proctor, is all that could possibly be conceived for pleasure and comfort to their guests. The following invited guests are Misses Maude Barnhill, Bethel, N. C.; Lottie Davis, Lucama, N. C.; Ethel Smith, Greenville, N. C.; Fannie Spain, Greenville; Lula Bryan, Norfolk, Va.; Thelma Bryan, Goldsboro, N. C.; Jesse Hodges, Washington; Velma Harrington, Kinston; Mattie Davenport, Lynchburg, Va.; Messrs. Frank Taylor, Greenville, N. C.; Lynn Randolph, House; Tom Anderson, Tarboro; Sprull Spain, Greenville; Marion Bradshaw, Washington; Lawrence Dunlap, Wilson.

The willing and generous assistance rendered by the young people of the town shows in what high estimation the two young ladies are held. They with their parents are tireless in their efforts to give their guests every pleasure possible, autos, carriage and buggies at their command for a good time. On Thursday evening Mr. W. E. Proctor, after attending to business all day, kindly piloted his boat, the Myrtle, for a moonlight sail to Washington.

With the thirty-six in the party we left the landing at 7:30 p. m. joyously sped down stream to Washington arriving at 9. The fourteen couples of young people hid themselves to the different places of amusement and refreshments.

After an hour and a half, all returned to the boat and homeward bound was the word and with peals of laughter and songs of pleasure we arrived at our landing at 11:30.

During our sail it had rained very hard but hearts were too light and happy for mud and water and white slippers to interfere with a midnight walk of a mile from the river to their respective homes.

The older members of the party enjoyed the sail as much as any of the young ones.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Proctor, Dr. and Mrs. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Galloway, Mr. and Mrs. Holliday, Mrs. Dunlap, Misses Mamie Stanley, Letha Phelps, Messrs. Hooks, Bruce Holiday, Jordan Johnston, Knott Proctor, and Fred Jones of Grimesland were in the party.

About Debt Paying

The laxity which many people exhibit in the matter of paying a debt is appalling. And we are not, especially referring to those who are in arrears for their papers; we are speaking generally now. There are many people whose honesty you would never for a moment question, who buy whatever they want on time and then disregard any request for settlement. And many of these people who stifle their conscience thus are members of high standing in their churches and if they were pointedly accused with deliberate "beating" a fellow out of his good by contracting a debt which they are slow to pay, why they would raise a howl and start a slander suit at once. This delinquency in paying a debt really appears to be growing worse and unless the practice is checked, it will force the adoption of a pay-as-you-go system everywhere. Many of those "respectable" debt contractors get furiously angry if sent a bill or are "dunned" for the amount. They consider it an insult; but just how they expect business to run without money or why others should support them we are unable to understand.—Siler City Grit.

Island Empires Mourns King's Death

TOKYO, July 30.—Mutsuhito, Emperor of Japan, died today at 12:43 a. m. Acute nephritis was given as the cause of death. Mutsuhito, Emperor of Japan, possessed a personality of which but little is generally known. Of a quiet, unassuming nature, yet possessed of a will of iron, he accomplished great reforms. As a statesman he commanded the respect of the nations of the world. As a leader of his people in peace and in war he was both loved and feared. To his virtues they attributed the victories over their enemies by land and sea. To his wisdom they credited the advance of ancient Japan to a place in the front rank of nations. His reign began in 1867 and outlasted all but two or three living monarchs. Under the rule of Mutsuhito Japan enjoyed an unprecedented era of prosperity. Civilization has made rapid strides. The arts and ideas of the Western world have been adopted and Japan has emerged from darkness into the light. Mutsuhito was born in Kyoto, November 3, 1852. He was the second son of Emperor Komei, and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father in 1867, becoming the 21st Emperor of Japan.

THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD

way the matter stands. I'm not so much to blame as you think. Here this man Jones has me in a vise. If I do not get this bit of carpet, off I go, into the dark, into nothing. I handed you roughly, I know. But could I help it? It was my throat or yours. You're no chicken. You and that other chap made things exciting."

Mahomed accepted this compliment to his prowess in silence. Indeed, he gazed dreamily over Ryanne's head. The other fellow wouldn't trouble any one again. To Mahomed it had not been the battle, man to man; it had been the guile and trickery leading up to it. He had been bested at his own game, duplicity, and that irked him. Death, he, as his kind, looked upon with Oriental passivity. Ah, well! The game was to have a second inning, and he proposed to play it in strictly Oriental ways.

"How much did he give you for it?" The expression upon Ryanne's face would have deceived any one but Mahomed. "Give for it!" indignantly. "Why, that's the whole trouble. All my trouble, all the hard work, and not a plaster, not a plaster! Can't you understand, I had to do it?"

"Is he going to sell it?" "Sell it? Not he! He's a collector, and crazy over the thing."

Mahomed nodded. He knew something of the habits of collectors. "Is he still in Cairo, and where may he be found?"

Ryanne began to believe that the game was going along famously; Mahomed was sure of it.

"He is George P. A. Jones, of Mortimer & Jones, rich rug dealers of New York. Money no object."

Though his face did not show it, Mahomed was singularly depressed by this news. If this man Jones had money, of what use was his little packet of notes?

"I must have that rug, effendi. There are two reasons; it is holy, and the loss of it means my head."

"Good riddance!" thought Ryanne, a sympathetic look upon his face.

"What have you to suggest in the way of a plan?" asked Mahomed.

Ryanne felt a tingle of jubilation. He saw nothing but plain-sailing into port. But Mahomed had arranged to guide his craft into the whirlpool. Unto himself he kept up a ceaseless reiteration of—"Patience, patience, patience!"

Said Ryanne: "You do not care how you get the rug, so long as you do get it?"

"No, effendi," Mahomed smiled.

"A little rough work wouldn't disturb you?"

"No, it would not."

"Well, then, listen to me. Suppose you arrange to take my friend Jones into the desert for a little trip. Be his dragoman for a while. In fact, kidnap him, abduct him, steal him. You can hold him in ransom for the rug and a nice little sum of money besides."

"Can they do such things these days in Cairo?"

"Why not?"

"Truly, why not?" Mahomed sat thoughtfully studying the outrageous prints on the cracked walls. Had he dared he would have laughed. And he had thought this dog cunning beyond all his kind! "I agree. But the arrangements I must leave to you. Bring him here at nine o'clock to-night," he continued, leaning across the table impressively, "and I will give you one hundred pounds English."

Ryanne quickly assumed the expression needed to meet such splendid news. "I say, Mahomed, that is pretty square, after what has passed between us."

"It is nothing," gallantly.

If Ryanne laughed in his sleeve, Mahomed certainly found ample room in his for such silent and figurative cachinnations. He knew very well that Ryanne had received a goodly sum for his adventure. No man took his life in his hand to cancel an obligation which was not based upon disinterested friendship; and already the man had disavowed any such quality. Also, he had not been a seller of rugs himself, or guardian of the Yhordes all these years, without having had some contact with collectors. Why, if there was one person dear at this moment to Mahomed El-Gebel's heart, it was this man sitting opposite. And he wanted him far more eagerly than the rug; only, the rug must be regained, for its loss was a passport into paradise; and he wasn't quite prepared to be received by the hours.

"Mr. Jones, then, shall be here promptly at nine," declared Ryanne, beckoning the barmaid. "What will you have?"

Mahomed shook his head. His two companions, gathering the significance of the gesture, likewise declined.

"A smoke, then?"

A smiling negative.

"Beware of the Greek bearing gifts," laughed Ryanne. "All right. You won't mind if I have a beer to the success of the venture?"

"No, effendi."

Ryanne drank the lukewarm beverage, while Mahomed toyed with his turquoise ring, that sacred badge of an honorable pilgrimage to Holy Mecca.

"The young lady, effendi; she was very pretty. Your sister?" casually inquired Mahomed.

"Oh, no. She is a young lady I met at the hotel the other day."

The liar! thought the Moslem, as he recalled the light in Ryanne's eyes and the tenderness of his smiles. Apparently, however, Mahomed lost interest directly. "At nine o'clock to-night, then, this collector will arrive so become my guest?"

"BY WORD OF GRIEF," WAS THE ANSWER. "I'll have him here. Cash upon delivery, as they say."
"Cash upon delivery," Mahomed repeated, the phrase being familiar to his tongue.

"Frankly, I want this man out of the way for a while."

"Ah!"

"Yes, I want a little revenge for the way he has treated me."

"So it is revenge?" softly. Traitorous to both sides.

"And when I get him here?"

"Leave the rest to me."

"Good. I'm off, then. Take him to Bagdad. It will be an experience for him. But when you get him there, keep an eye out for the Shah Abbas in the Pasha's work-room."

The affair had gone so smoothly that Ryanne's usual keenness fell below the mark; fatuity was the word. There had been so many twists to the morning that his abiding distrust of every one became, for the time being, edgeless. The trick of purloining the cable had keyed him high; the subsequent meeting of Fortune had depressed him. And besides, he was too anxious to be rid of Jones to consider the possibilities of Mahomed's state of mind.

He got up, paid his score, turned a jest for the amusement of the barmaid, and went out to his carriage.

CHILDREN'S PLAY CLOTHES.

Dutch play clothes are the privilege of small children, but the pretty garments which are shown in a number of the big shops can be reproduced at home for half the store cost. That is, as far as the important articles are concerned, for there are some domestic imitations which are quite cheap. The novelties include ks, aprons, bonnets and coarse stockings, with which are worn the usual leather sandals. Everything is very Dutch in effect, substantial and amusing, and the sizes of the various articles are two to six years of age.

Little frocks of striped drill, tan linen or white drill trimmed with a border showing designs of Dutch children can be had as low as 65 cts. If the dress is banded with embroidery it will cost from $1.25 to $1.95. In style the frocks are much like the square necked aprons or else they are in form of the high, long sleeved smicks, with front pockets made of trimming. The aprons are square or round necked, with the armholes cut very deep and the gay bordering used only about the neck, armholes and pockets or else all around. The same drills, linens and crashes are used for them as for the frocks, but of course they are used only to protect the usual nice little gown, as over a Dutch dress they would be superfluous. A number of the bonnets which are short at the back and show turiback flaps, are of the same texture as the frocks and aprons. Others are of the coarse white linen.

These frocks and aprons can be made of ordinary demin, prettily forked at the edges with a herring bone in colored thread, or dish towel linen could be used, this ornamented with a banding of the Dutch figured calico whose bright colors would be very effective against the brown of the garment. Again a brightly colored calico, with figures or without, might form the banding, for all that is needed are gaiety of color and durability. Home knited stockings would fill the place of the coarse stockings offered for play, altho' the ribbed stockings young boys generally wear are quite good enough.

THE RESTLESS CHILD.

The principal cause of restlessness and sleeplessness in children is indigestion, usually brought on by unsuitable food, overfeeding or irregular meal hours.

If a child cries a great deal, is restless and loses sleep, look to the food and the time at which it is given.

Another cause of sleeplessness that is frequently overlooked is too much light in the room. It is natural to sleep in the dark, and it is particularly desirable that children should do so, for they are very sensitive to all impressions.

The tender eyes and rain need the complete rest and relaxation that the darkness permits. In spring and summer when the sun rises at five or earlier, children will awake unless the room is kept darkened.

A green blind is best for this purpose, and it is advisable to use it in the child's bedroom if nowhere else.

What Makes a Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for overcoming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, backache and tired, listless, worn out feeling. "Electric Bitters have done me a world of good," writes Eliza Pool, Depew, Okla., "and I thank you with all my heart for making such a god medicine." Only

Faded Letters.

Some letters brown and faded were in my desk today,

Some letters that I've guarded, lest time purloin away;
For once these gave me pleasure to con their pages over,
And still in dreams and silence I'm reading them once more.

Of style antique's the paper, the ink, of purplish hue,

But yet the thoughts they're holding are fresh as morning dew.

The name thereto appened is sweetly sounding quite,

A name that bears repeating—it is Estelle McKnight.

I know not of the writer, if in the flesh or out,

For since I had these letters, 'tis thirty years about;

But from that land Canadian, from distant Stromness town,

These letters brown and faded, still hand her name adown.

'Twas never mine to study that face I dream was fair,

But oft upon her pages I saw a visage these:

The head was crowned with aureole, the face was handsome, quite—
But lost save in sweet memory is now Estelle McKnight.

His Only Chance.

Now ladies and gentlemen, said the conjurer, pointing to his magic cabinet, I beg to call your attention to the great illusion of the evening. I will ask any lady in the audience to enter the cabinet, I will then close the door; when I open it the lady will be gone, leaving no trace.

In the second row of the audience a puny, undersized man, with a haunted, harassed expression, turned with a strange gleam of hope in his dull mild eyes, to an enormous female, who sat next to him. She had a stern and strong face, with black beetling brows and a chin like the ram of a first-class battleship.

Maria, dear, he said eagerly, won't you oblige the gentleman.—Ideas.

Save One for Her.

Edith was lighthearted and merry over everything. Nothing appealed to her seriously. So one day her mother decided to invite a very serious young parson to dinner and was placed next to the lighthearted girl. Everything went well until she asked him:

You speak of everybody having a mission. What is yours?
My mission, said the parson, is to save young men.

Good, replied the girl, I'm glad to meet you. I wish you would save one for me.—Milwaukee News.

CHICAGO PITCHER TO SUCCEED CY YOUNG

Ed Walsh, Premier Twirler for the White Sox.

Jimmy Callahan, manager of the Chicago White Sox, expects Ed Walsh to break Cy Young's record as a pitcher. Callahan insists Walsh will be as great a pitcher in ten years as he is today, and that in point of games won will go above the mark set by the veteran who is with the Boston Nationals, but who is reported to be on the verge of retiring.

"Walsh has a perfect pitching motion; he doesn't try to work the batter by throwing waste balls; his disposition is of the best; his habits couldn't be improved upon—there isn't anything too good for me to say about Walsh," declares Callahan.

"He is the best pitcher in baseball. There isn't any question in my mind as to that. He has the ability. He has the temperament. What more could a manager ask?"
