HALF A HUNDRED TODAY

Pitt County

vs.

D. J. Whichard, Scribe

(Address to the jury by J. A. L., attorney for the Defendant)

Your Honor and Gentlemen of the Jury:

A high sense of justice made me appear before this honorable court to plead the cause of this defendant and before I enter into a summary of this case throughout which I mean to point out the flaws which my learned friend, the Solicitor, has cleverly avoided, I want to emphatically state that I am not getting a cent from this defendant, the main reason for this philanthropy being that said defendant has not got a cent. Justice is latent within me. Lucre has no room in my make up. Excuse me, gentlemen of the jury, for this digression.

This defendant stands accused of a crime without precedent in the annals of this court. Although an editor for the last 35 years the prisoner is still alive and hitting it at a speed of three meals per, it is said. Even if appearing for the defendant, I grant that given his occupation, printer, this is a grave crime. Editors are only allowed one meal once in a while by their communities. In extreme cases two are granted them, and in one exception a Tar Heel editor has been known to get three square ones right along. This is the case with Josephus Daniels, his excuse being that he is running "Woodrow" campaign and he needs the extra nourishment.

But to come to our case. Gentlemen of the jury, take a slant at the defendant. Does he look as if he had lived on the fat of the land since the memorable day of February of 1878, when barely half and fifteen years old, he was made a full fledged editor? I have it on good authority that the defendant only weighs 108 pounds, 3 ounces. Could you believe that after wrapping himself around three meals a day for nearly 35 years his weight would not be more in evidence? No, I say. His present leanness is convincing proof that steak does not figure prominently in his daily program of consumption. Can you see any double chin in that defendant? Again I say no. The accusation is absurd. The only scintilla of guilt is the fact that after editing a paper 35 years the defendant is alive. And pray, gentlemen of the jury, does that constitute a crime? Let us examine the life of this defendant a little closer. Has he not been a faithful worker for the benefit of this great community and county, ever since he assumed the reins of the Pitt county press? Has he not been ever ready to speak and stand for a progress without which the future of this county would have been endangered? I know it is so, and so do you.

The other hungry scribes of the Old North State have willingly come forward and testified as to his good character. In their last meeting, did they not elevate him to the highest pinnacle of fame by pinning in his coat the mendacity medal, that coveted ornament offered to imagination and nerve? You know all this is true

Time and again he has been invited without the confines of the great county of Pitt, but he always refused the glory and gain to be gotten beyond the borders, in order to remain forever enlisted in the cause of his native heath. Thus after his long years of service, crossing the threshold of his fiftieth year, the defendant finds himself practically where he started, sore but apparently satisfied. Had the defendant, gentlemen of the jury, engaged in some other business, such as dry goods, groceries, or a five and ten cent store, he might now, at the end of 35 years of incessant toil, be able to retire and live on his income. Instead he chose the arduous career of the scribe and all that lays before him as he passes today the fiftieth mile post in life, is a snowy white paper and a devilish black ink, and the courage of his conviction to mix the two for the benefit of his community and county.

Gentlemen of the jury, in the name of justice, I ask you to turn him loose and let him have another half century on his native heath, if he wants to linger so long, the spot he has never deserted and says he will cling to as long as there is anything left to hang on.

Who of us does not remember that fountain which used to play at Round Knob and could be seen from seven points on the railroad as it wound around it climbing up the mountain? The Greensboro Record brings the pleasant news that a company of Greensboro gentlemen have recently purchased the Round Knob property with a view of building a fine hotel and restoring the place to its former beauty.

The best looking thing about the Bull Moose party is that it is going to make it easier for Wilson to be elected.

The editor would liked to have gotten off and enjoyed his semi-centennial day fishing but other things kept him at the rack.

The new party just born will likely follow the wake of many predecessors—flourish a little while and then disappear.

Down in Atlanta they are calling the policemen "dirty crooks". Must be kin to the New York crowd.

You need not calculate just about laying in a supply of winter clothing as there is more warm weather ahead.

The seaside and mountains do not call very hard when blankets and fires are comfortable at home.

T. R. may call it a "confession of faith," but it sounds much like a declaration of gall.

The Democrat who votes in the county primary on the 17th should be very careful who he votes for.

Some men complain of lack of business when they do nothing to get more of it.

GOV. WOODROW WILSON

"The Most Available Democrat."

(By Josephus Daniels)

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The most significant thing about the national campaign in its early stages is the fact that hundreds of thousands of Republicans, who never before voted the Democratic ticket, have voluntarily written Governor Wilson and Governor Marshall that they intend this year to vote the Democratic ticket.

Some days ago, when in Indianapolis, Governor Marshall told me that since the convention he had been deluged with letters of congratulation and voluntary pledges of support and that more than twenty five per cent of his correspondence stated that they were Republicans, but they thought the time had come for a change in the national administration and that they intended to support the ticket nominated at Baltimore.

The special newspaper articles published, containing a few extracts from letters written to Governor Wilson at Sea Girt, show that the views of the correspondents of the candidate for president duplicate those of the candidate for vice president and that a very large proportion of letters offering support are from Republicans.

The correspondence that comes to Chairman McCombs and the Democratic headquarters in New York is of the same tenor and it comes from all parts of the country, showing that the Democratic candidates appeal to both the popular imagination and to the popular confidence; and that, while the Democrats are united in the support of the Democratic ticket as never before in the life of the younger men of the party and the independent vote is almost solid for Wilson there is a break in the Republican vote, heretofore unknown in the history of that party. In 1896 there was a bolt in the Republican party of the Silver Republicans, but that bolt did not appreciably affect any state east of the Mississippi river and as the result showed was not large enough to change the result in any state west of the Mississippi with few exceptions.

This year the Republican party is split and Republicans will divide between Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, that is, those who intend to vote for Wilson and Marshall; and there are many, who, while not preferring not openly to join the Democratic organization, will furnish a vote which, added to the Democratic of 1908, will put the Democratic candidate in the White House.

As one of the many evidences of the Republican trend to Wilson and Marshall, the following editorial from the New York Press, giving the result of a poll among Republicans, is illuminating:

Republicans for Wilson

Last week the editor of the New York Press sent private letters to Republican voters, selected at random from readers on its mail subscription lists and not living in New York or other large cities. The main part was:

For which of the following do you intend to vote: Taft, Wilson, Roosevelt?

Are you in favor of the plan proposed by the former president of breaking up the present Republican party and forming a new one? For whom did you vote in 1908?

Of the 1,000 first replying virtually all voted for Mr. Taft four years ago. Of the 1,000 replying 442 said they would vote for Mr. Taft this year, 335 for Mr. Roosevelt, 132 for Mr. Wilson and 91 said they would not vote at all or were undecided.

"Most of those declaring they would vote for Mr. Wilson gave as their reason their disgust with Republican fractionalism. Some were voting for him as the surest way, in their judgment, to defeat the Colonel and prevent him from breaking up the Republican party. Some of those in the not voting class said they might vote for Mr. Taft or Mr. Wilson if it became necessary, in their judgment, to do this to prevent the Colonel from breaking up their party. Some of those recording themselves for Mr. Taft lamented his nomination but would vote for him to prevent the Colonel from breaking up their party.

We arrange those 1,000 voters in table:

Table with 2 columns: Name, Count. Taft 442, Roosevelt 335, Wilson 132, Not voting 91, Total 1,000.

Further comment on the figures and the percentages which they make seems unnecessary.

Editorial of Human Interest

By Arthur Brisbane

THE VALUE OF SOLITUDE.

PART I

We inflict a piece of advice upon our readers. It is intended especially for the young, who have still to get their growth, whose characters and possibilities are forming.

GET AWAY FROM THE CROWD WHEN YOU CAN. KEEP YOURSELF TO YOURSELF, IF ONLY FOR FEW HOURS DAILY.

Full individual growth, special development, rounded mental operations—all these demand room, separation from others, solitude, self examination and the self reliance which solitude gives.

The finest tree stands off by itself in the open plain. Its branches do spread wide. It is a complete tree, better than the cramped tree in the crowded forest.

The animal to be admired is not the one which runs in herds, the gentle browsing deer or foolish sheep thinking only as a fraction of the flock, incapable of personal independent direction. It's the lonely prowling lion or the big black leopard which the whole world for his private field that is worth looking at. The man who grows up in a herd, deer-like, thinking with the herd, acting with the herd, rarely amounts to anything.

Do you want to succeed? Grow in solitude, develop solitude, with books and thoughts and nature for friends. Then, if you want the crowd to see how fine you are, come back to it and boss it if it will let you.

Constant craving for indiscriminate company is a sure sign of mental weakness.

Schopenhauer—a sour genius, BUT a genius—speaks contemptuously of the negroes herded in small rooms, unable to get enough of one another's snub-nose company.

If you enter a village or small town and want to find the man or youth of ability, do you look for him leaning over the village pool table, sitting on the grocery store boxes, lounging in the smelly tavern with other vacant minds?

Certainly not. You find him at work and you find him by himself.

Think how many public institutions dwarf the brains and souls of unhappy children condemned to live in them. No chance there for individual, separate development. Millions of children have grown up in such places, millions of sad nonentities.

Here is what Goethe says: "Es bidet ein Talent sich in der Stille, doch ein Charakter in dem Strome der Welt." (Talent is developed in solitude, character in the rush of the world.)

You wonder why so much ability comes from the country—why a Lincoln comes from the backwoods while you, flourishing in a great city, can barely keep your place as a typewriter.

The countryman has GOT to be by himself much of the time whether he wishes to be or not. If he has anything in him it comes out.

Astronomy, man's grandest study, grew up among the shepherds. You of the cities never even see the stars, much less study them.

Compulsory Education

During the past few years the sentiment toward compulsory education has grown in North Carolina and there is a hope that the next Legislature will consider seriously this important question. The enactment of a law which compels the common school education of every child and at the same time makes provision for proper enforcement of the law will mean more to the next generation than any other one step. The Progressive farmer has this suggestive editorial remark:

"Do we believe in compulsory school laws?" We certainly do. The old argument that the child belongs to the parents and that they have the sole right to say what shall be done with it, is based on a false idea. The State has a right in the child as surely as have the parents, and one of these rights is to see that the child is given an opportunity to grow up into the best and most useful citizen. The child has a right, too, as well as the parents and one of the rights is the chance to develop to the extent of his natural capacities. This he cannot do if he is denied an education. The child is the man of the future and it is the duty of the State to see that he has a chance to secure at least the rudiment of an education.

North Carolina has made large progress educationally during the past decade but the growing population of the State demands still more—the coming to the State of a mixed class, many without the ambition which makes the native Tar Heel and in addition the lack of enterprise in some sections in the matter of providing the educational advantages for the boy and girl—there should be State action on the question and a common school training provided and compelled.—Charlotte Chronicle.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Rann.

THE TRAGEDIAN.

The tragedian is a low browed Thespian who is hired for the purpose of stabbing somebody in the fourth act to lift the mortgage off the old homestead.

His equipment consists of a very gloomy mien, a four-foot stride, a detachable beard and a Prince Albert coat, and he usually enters just as the villain is about to kidnap the only daughter of an unmarried widow.

Tragedians usually start from the bottom and work up. The harder they work the more painful it is to be present. It is a very difficult thing to find a facile, non-perspiring tragedian who can run 100 yards in the English language without losing two or three suspender buttons.

E. H. Sothern is one of the most seductive tragedians and earns quite a little money during the winter months Mr. Sothern got his start playing the bass tuba in the parade, and now see where he is! He is at the very pinnacle of fame, and can make love to Julia Marlowe all he wants to without being interrupted by her husband. This should teach us that all honest toil is ennobling.

Mr. Sothern does most of his tragedy in Shakespeare's plays at $8 a throw. His favorite piece is Romeo and Juliet, in which he displays some of the most velvety styles of unhindered lovmaking known to any of the stages. Mr. Sothern's work in this direction has been an inspiration to many a bachelor.

The tragedian is not allowed to use any of his own language, but has to memorize long, loose-fitting words borrowed from some ancient playwright whose expressions are too polite for the mails. Whenever the tragedian forgets his lines, he has to substitute a part of his own vocabulary and cry "S'death" several times in succession, until he can locate the plate.

J. Alfred Spender

J. Alfred Spender, editor of the Westminster Gazette, who is mentioned as a possible successor to James Bryce as British ambassador at Washington, was born in Bath, England, August 8, 1862, and received his education at Oxford. He was editor of a paper at Hull from 1886 to 1890. He joined the staff of the Pall Mall Gazette in 1892, but left the same year to join the editorial staff of the new Westminster Gazette, which now ranks as one of the chief government organs. The appointment of Mr. Spender to the Washington post would mark an innovation in British diplomacy, since he has had no training in the diplomatic service. He is, however, considered a clear sighted politician and thinker from a liberal point of view and he has a strong personal influence with many members of the British cabinet.

From the State Capital

(special Correspondence)
RALEIGH, August 6.—It is a rare week nowadays that does not develop something of interest in the senatorial primary contest, and it must be a matter of regret to all good party men that despicable "insinuations" should be made by one candidate against another in such a friendly intra-party contest as this ought to be. Especially is it to be deplored that Governor Kitchin in his speech delivered on August first should have employed language for which there does not appear to have been any justification whatever. Certainly the following sweeping denial from Senator Simmons proves how baseless this latest attack of Governor Kitchin is. After quoting the language attributed to the speaker in a report printed in a Charlotte paper, Senator Simmons says:
"This is in substance a charge by Governor Kitchin that I am getting the money to run my campaign through the lumbermen's association or the lumber interests. This intimation or charge is utterly without foundation in fact and without a single circumstance to justify it, and is a pure invention of the imagination. As a matter of fact, I have never at any time received a dollar from any lumberman or the representative of any such as a campaign contribution or otherwise, directly or indirectly. My manager, Mr. Rogers, has probably received some small contribution from friends in the State. If any contribution has been received by him from any lumberman I don't know it, and I don't believe any has been received. My campaign has necessarily been run economically because of my limited means. The stories by Mr. Kitchin's friends are absolutely without foundation. Outside of the farm from my father who died after I was elected to the Senate, I am not worth as much to-day as when I came to the Senate."
The positive statement of the senator that he is to-day "not worth as much as when he came to the senate" only serves to accentuate what his close personal friends well know and there is not an unprejudiced voter in the Democratic party that can be made to believe that Senator Simmons' official conduct has not been as clean as that of any man in Congress. The common expression here is that such "campaign" as this will not injure Senator Simmons, but will soon destroy any chance the authors of it ever had to electing Governor Kitchin to the position.
The Governor also seems to still have a prejudice against our State newspapers though not much has been said by him until now since the experience he had at Rocky Mount. When any man intimates that the press of North Carolina (and above all our weekly State Papers, noted for their honest and fair dealing) are "subsidized" because they show a friendly feeling to one of his opponents, he is treading on the most dangerous kind of ground. Abusing newspapers will never elect any person to any high office, and it is really a strange thing that the Governor should reveal an antipathy to the class of workers who have done more for the Democratic party, and are constantly doing much valuable work for the candidates for office (because they are the choice of our party) than any other class of people who figure in the elections.
The Governor has friends in the newspaper fraternity, and so has Judge Clark. If more papers have appeared to be friendly to Senator Simmons, surely that is their privilege. Many newspapers print political advertisements on the same basis they advertise anything, even if the candidate about whom the advertising appears is not the choice of the paper. Governor Kitchin seems to understand that, and in a statement made in Raleigh since the speech referred to, he started that he did not criticize the papers for that. "I may have to buy some space myself," Governor Kitchin added.

NITA'S NEW YORK FASHION

August's Flag, Tag End—A Period of Bedraggled Clothing What the Die-Pot can do.

There is no other time in the whole year when one's wardrobe is so absolutely discouraging in its bedraggled "seen better days" condition than the flag, tag of August.

If your frocks were fresh, they certainly do not look it now.

Buying the Fall Wardrobe, no matter how early to think of really how briskly we "shop" on carfare and luncheon in the Demonstration food shows, holding forth in the Department Stores.

Something must be done, and done quickly, to rescue our appearance from the quick sand of unattractiveness. I tell you frankly there is nothing harder than this problem at this season of the year.

Take for example the pongee suit, which we bought for traveling, with a coat to round out the three piece symphony.

What does it look like now? The skirt has grease reminders or rides in wagons, and other smudges, reminders of automobile dashes. The coat shows rani spots that like the proverbial smile "won't come off".

The bit of lace that forms the yoke is soiled in fact the erstwhile really smart frock is a "fright".

But even so—be not without hope, for this forlorn, apparently hopeless figment of fashion can be resurrected to do Yeoman service in the fashion field, all through the Autumn if you die it.

A good blue that the natural pongee even to the lace, will take admirably, is a color to stick to. The blue suit of Autumn will never be recognized as the tan one of Spring and Summer.

Also, joyful to relate, this blue pongee can be again utilized the following Spring, before decision has centered on the really new Summer frock.

Feathers, ribbons, and even shoes can be rejuvenated for a brief pre-autumnal season.

I know from actual personal experience that a pair of tan shoes of pranced into view black ones, through the wand of the shoe polish bottle.

If you try this—take a "trip" from ones even when treated liberally and me and black shoe laces. The tan apparently successful with the blacking will, just when you are least prepared, proclaim that they were once a golden brown. While the black and tan combination in dogs may be all right, it is not to be hankered after in footwear, unless especially ordained in tan suede and black patent leather.

Housecleaning On A Large Scale

Fame as a "municipal housecleaner" has come to Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, whose reputation for efficiency in cleaning cities in county-wide. She is probably the first and only woman to qualify in just this way as a municipal expert, and after to clean for her diagnosis and her Kalamazoo, Mich., other cities began what she did for her home town, doctoring. She is said to have a remarkable faculty for finding out all about the city in a month's residence from the water supply and the sewers to the exact amount that goes into the various city officials' hands as graft. From the cities in her own state she was called to study conditions and make recommendations for cities in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Kentucky, New Hampshire and New York. Mrs. Crane began her career as a Unitarian minister. While pastor of the People's church at Kalamazoo, she began the work for which she has now become famous of Kalamazoo backyards. The city quietly she had photographs taken was shocked. A civic betterment league was organized and not only the backyards and streets, but the dairies, meat market and slaughter houses were immediately renovated throughout. Mrs. Crane then inspected the workhouses, asylums and other public institutions. She did it with great thoughtness and kept quiet until she had all the facts. Again she horrified the city and state which her portrayal, both by word and picture, of the evil conditions. Next she turned her attention to the schools. Before she had finished she had made over Kalamazoo.

To Children at The Hearth

It is you, my dear, and the gladness You bring to the tasks to do, Who can lessen this old world's sadness

By as much as the joy of you, It is you, my dear, and your glory, Of sunshine and word and song Who can make life a sweet story Wherever you smile along.

It is you, my dear, with your beauty And frankness of mind and heart, Who must offer your share of duty And play yet a noble part.

For the world it has need of beauty And youth that is fine and new, And the call you may hear to duty Is for you, my dear,—just you.

It is you, my dear, that the sages Have written their counsel to, It is you, my dear, that the ages Leave legacies to—just you, And remember that every letter That wisdom has given through The years, so the world be better, It is you, my dears—just you.

It is you who must be the bravest To fight if the cause be true; It is you who must be the bravest In word and in deed—just you. It is you who must be the strongest To stand till the battle's through And you who must smile the longest And never dispare—just you.

It is you my dears, and your glory Who shall help to say if the story Of life and the world's worth while. For the years of all times have shaped us.

And the lore of the Ages, too, And to say if the Truth's escaped us Is for you, my dears—just you. —J. W. Foley in New York Times.

Sykes Misses a Game.

The game at Mobile between the Crackers and Gulls on May 7 was the first regularly scheduled game Earl Sykes has missed in three years where his own club was playing. In 1910 he went through the entire season with the Dayton Central League club without missing even one inning, and last year he went through every inning of each game played by the Crackers without missing and played 17 games this season before a split finger forced him from the line-up. In all, Sykes participated in 300 successive games without missing an inning.

The Green Grass Who planteth the green grass Planteth a sweet place to rest, A cool spot, a still spot On the dear mother's breast: He maketh the miles glad, The lanes glad, the street, The world of the green acres a bit more sweet.

Who planteth the green grass Taketh the desert away, And the dust and the hot road And the long, hard day; He maketh the birds sing, And the flowers bloom anew And says a wide carpet for the feet of the dew

Who planteth the green grass Bids in waters to rise A well and cool stream For the joy of men's eyes; He maketh the lips smile Of the thirsty and worn, A new path to walk on for the sweet of morn.

Who planteth the green grass Plants grace in the soul, And the seed of a new world From Pole unto Pole; He maketh the birds glad And the creatures of God, And the heart of life grateful for the green of the sod. —The Baltimore Sun

Henderson Jail Birds Take French Leave

HENDERSON, Aug. 8.—A bold jail delivery was effected here at noon today when the Vance county jailer entered the prison to carry dinner to prisoners, who was overpowered and one white man held for murder and five negroes walked out. The prisoners sawed their way through small cells and were massed in the corridor, surprising the jailer and easily putting him out of commission. One white man and a negro refused to leave, though every avenue to freedom was open. The single white man who made a get a way was Frank Singleton, held for the murder

The Politicians and the Press

When the Charlotte papers decided, during a recent mayoralty contest, to charge regular advertising rates for political communication, in the interest of certain candidates, this advanced step was widely commended.

Time was when the editor was visited just prior to the campaign by all the hungry candidates of his section. He did not know that he had so many friends before. They came in droves and shook his hand, as if their love as deep and abiding. Incidentally they had a picture of themselves they would like for the editor to print in consideration of their long friendship—and perhaps a mile or so of reading matter.

And the belabored editor, overwhelmed with flattery, turned over his paper to the gang; threw away real news matter of interest to his readers, and filled his paper each week with political dope destined primarily to put some hungry politician into office.

But that old system has changed. Too many editors went broke at it. The majority today have learned the sad lesson that flattery and handshakes do not pay the bills piling up in the print shop.

And the majority of publishers have finally arrived at the conclusion that there is no more reason to set forth the merits of a candidate free than there is to set forth the merits of a drug, a drink or a blot of cloth free. Therefore the candidate who wants to tell the world how famous he is, in order to get a fat job, is required to pay for the advertisement of his wares.

The following paragraph from the Progressive Farmer is worth not alone the repetition, but should be passed on until read by every man, woman and child in the state: That is an excellent saying of Dr. W. T. Grenfell's in his new book "On Immortality": To lie down at night and feel that the money I have used and lived on during the day some one else had worked for would be me simply intolerable. Dr. Grenfell's sentiment is one that all right-minded and thoughtful men must share. The distance of a grown man living on another's earnings whether they came by inheritance, marriage, or spending on others is a thing that society ought to bring home to all the guilty. Such a man is only a baby except that he is without a baby's excuse for his dependence. In fact it would be well if all such fellows—we use the term "fellow" appropriately since word makes the man and want of it the fellow—it would be well if all such fellows, being babies indeed, so far economic worth is concerned, were required to wear bibs and long dresses and carry rattles. And if such law were only passed, what beautiful parades we would have down the streets of some of our Southern cities and towns.—Charlotte Chronicle.
