OTHER ITEMS OF INTERESTS

Card From Mr. Blow

To the Democratic Voters of Pitt County:
Having announced myself a candidate for Senator for the County of Pitt, subject to the action of the Democratic primary and recognizing the right of the voters, whose support I am seeking, to know my position on questions in which they are vitally interested. I deem it proper to make public my views touching these questions.

The Fence Question

If I should be chosen Senator I pledge myself not to support any bill in that body changing the boundaries of any stock law territory in the County of Pitt without submitting such change to the voters to be effected thereby. As an earnest of my good faith in this matter, I refer to my record when a member of the Senate. I received a petition to change the location of the stock law fence on the southern side of the county which I and the members of the House from Pitt declined to pass until we put into the bill a provision submitting it to a vote of the people in that territory. This bill according to my recollections embraced substantially the same territory as that embraced in the act passed by the last legislature. Had I been a member of the last Senate I would not have voted for a bill to change the stock law fence, without submitting such proposed change to the voters to be effected thereby; and in keeping with my former record I again pledge myself that the people shall have full opportunity to vote upon any change in the stock law territory before the law making such change become effective.

County and Township Bonds

If I am elected to the Senate I will see to it that no act passes that body authorizing the county of Pitt or any township therein, to issue any bonds without its containing a provision submitting such bond issue to the voters of the county, if it be county bonds, or to the voters of the township, if it be township bonds.

Senatorial Question

While I may have a personal preference as to who shall be the next United States Senator from North Carolina, and while I may exercise that choice in the primary election, yet, as I propose in good faith to abide by the Democratic primary, I do not deem it proper to become an advocate of either one of the three distinguished gentlemen who are seeking that exalted position. It having been determined by them and the state convention that a Democratic primary shall be held for making such selection, it will be my pleasure, if elected to the Senate, to vote for the person who shall be designated in such primary.

While I have been an earnest consistent Democrat all my life, I have at the same time respected the views and opinions of those who have differed with me. In every public position I have been called upon to fill I have tried to heartily and faithfully discharge its duties in the interest of the people. If I should be honored again with the confidence of the people as their Senator, it will be my duty and my pleasure to show myself worthy of such confidence by supporting such measures as shall tend to their welfare and to the peace and prosperity of the whole people.

ALEX. L. BLOW.

This article was published in the Reflector about one month ago, but we are again publishing it so that all can see.—(Ed. note.)
To the Editor: Being a candidate for the House of Representatives I have been interrogated several times regarding my position on some of the public questions that are of much concern to the people of Pitt county.

Some months ago when I announced my candidacy I outlined policies for which I stood and which I would advocate if sent to the Legislature. However, believing that the people have a right to know just where those who seek to serve them would stand, if so honored by them, I gladly give my position on the following questions:

First and foremost I am heartily in favor of the Initiative, the Referendum and the Legalized Voting Primary.

I favor these measures because I believe through them we have the most available method of placing the government directly in the hands of the people. The people themselves are the sovereigns of this country and their voice should govern.

As previously stated I am advocating a Road Commission for Pitt county. I outlined this commission in an article in 1910, and will gladly explain the system again to any one upon request. We are spending too much money every year on our roads not to get better results. I believe a road commission of three men would give much better results and without an increase in the rate of taxation.

I also favor the Torrens Land Title System as recommended by the State Bar Association.

It will take some years to get this system into operation in North Carolina, but that is also true regarding all great reforms, and we cannot be in on any of them too early. However, as a pilot or forerunner I would suggest "A course and distance for all conveyances of real estate". This will eliminate law suits and hasten the perfection of the Torrens System.

I am in favor of any legislation that will benefit the farmer, for the farmers constitute 80 per cent of our population and consequently they have the greater burdens of government.

Not as a candidate but as an individual citizen I am advocating the candidacy of Chief Justice Walter Clark for the United States Senate, and believe in the progressive principles laid down in his platform.

However, should I be sent to the Legislature and Judge Clark fail to get the nomination for the Senate, it will then become my duty and will be my pleasure to cast my vote in the Legislature for the nominee of the Democratic party no matter who that might be.

Respectfully,
D. M. CLARK.

Keep the Old Commissioners

Ayden, N. C., Aug. 9, 1912.
Mr. Editor: I read in your paper some days ago what somebody who styled himself "Democrat" had to say about the commissioners. He went on to say that while a great many men in our county would serve us as commissioners, yet he was in favor of sending back the members of the old board because they were already acquainted with the workings of the commissioner's office and were therefore in a position to serve the people better than any new man. That's the way I feel about it (and a whole lot of folks in my section feel the same way.)

Our commissioners are very good men and know how to spend the county's money wisely. I say let's don't turn them loose.

TAXPAYER.

Favor the Old Board

Farmville, Aug. 8, 1912.
Editor Reflector: In reading over the list of names of those who have registered as candidates for the various county offices and the legislative ticket, I notice that all five members of the old county board of commissioners are registered and that we will have an opportunity to vote for these good men again. Why not everybody vote for a set of men that have made good. During their terms of office they have been called upon to spend unusually large sums of money, but in no case have I ever

John F. Tells All About That Ring

(By J. F. Stokes)

Editor Reflector: The people have heard right much lately about a ring in the Democratic party here in Pitt county, the sole purpose of which is to dictate not only the party program, but who should hold the offices as well. Several years ago I remember that there was a certain party organized in county, state and nation whose sole excuse for being was that an imaginary "ring" had got control of the party and that said "ring" had to be busted. So, those who did not have an office—though office hungry—decided to burst that ring to the end, of course, that the dear people might have another opportunity to rule themselves and especially have some say in the nomination of candidates for office. It was a huge cry of distress those eager office seekers used. They made the Welkin ring so loud that many a timid, spineless voter deserted the Democratic ship and joined the howling ranks of mad insurgency. Honorable men were cursed and denounced. Those Populist spellbinders orated from one end of the country to the other, denounced rings, bosses and machines. And they got followers, but not enough to elect one of their fanatical tribe. So they hooked up with the Republican party, then in eastern Carolina as in most of the South, composed of negroes. The result was victory for the Fusionists. And what did this combination do? Put a thousand negroes in office in North Carolina, played the mischief in general and elected Marion Butler to the United States senate. Such in brief is the record of the Populist party and it died.

This year the Democratic party in Pitt county is confronted by another brand of the anti-ring extraction. The leader is W. F. Evans, who has almost talked himself to death lambasting the ring, its candidates and their doings. He does not refer to the insurgent of Marlon Butler, C. C. Kirkman and Harry Skinner in 1892-4 as a precedent for his present conduct, but to that kind that broke out in Wake county two years ago when Joe Daniels, Will Bailey, and Dr. Sykes put the bosses to rout, thus gaining a magnificent victory for the cause of Democracy. Now, if you could have heard Bill Evans, as I did, lambast the leaders of this movement in Wake and Josephus Daniels in particular during the time the campaign was hottest his action in now referring to it as a precedent for what he is trying to do for the bosses and ring would be nothing less than amusing to you. He then wanted the bosses to win and so expressed himself. Now he is trying to beat the boss. And who is the boss? I dare Billy to name him. Who are the ringsters he is trying to unring? I dare him to name one or a half dozen of them. The fact is William has indulged in John Doe proceedings long enough. He has charged and preferred charges and is now time for him to name his man—or the people will conclude his assaults are directed at a mere dummy. The fact is, a political ring is something that does not and cannot exist in a county that elected its candidates for the last four years in a voting primary and nobody knows this better than Bill Evans. But he is hungry for office, is distressed, the weapon of the demagogue—that is the fellow who is not but is crazy to be boss—is seized upon. Boss rule, may rule, thrashing of the people's rights, are the best slogans with which to arouse the ire of the "dear people". With these slogans others have won, and with these Billy is going to ignominious defeat and the world—with no standing glance of pity—will move right along as though poor Willy had never been. New Brick Warehouse Ready Now to Undertake Tobacco Sales

Gorman And Gentry Have Fine Structure

COULD START SELLING TODAY

Cool, Well Ventilated and Profusely Lighted Tobacco Warehouse Valuable Addition to the Greenville Market

The new brick warehouse, owned and operated by Gorman and Gentry, could undertake to sell tobacco right now. We make this statement after a detailed inspection of this, the most up to date building for the sale of tobacco in Eastern North Carolina.

Lots of light, a coolness such as is most welcome at this time of the year and in immense floor space are the very first things that make themselves noticeable as you enter this new warehouse. And the reason is quite apparent. 225 skylights allow a profusion of light to reflect upon the 25,000 feet of floor space, all selling space, 33 windows and 8 doors allow a ventilation that is in every way ideal and a special roofing of asbestos covering fights a battle royal against the rays of the sun and beats them back. As you keep moving around the warehouse improvements devised to make it an A-No. 1 warehouse come to your notice.

To the left of the main entrance two bright and well ventilated offices augur well for the force that is to work within them. Directly over these two camp rooms are located. Folding iron beds to be placed there and every other convenience will make a stay in town economical and pleasant to the tobacco farmer. Congestions in the hotels won't bother Messrs. Gorman and Gentry's guests in their camp room.

To the rear of the warehouse and directly beneath the well constructed floor, a damp proof storage room, 2500 feet has been provided for the safe keeping of tobacco to be sold at later dates than those in which it was brought to town. Back of the warehouse the box stall, 150 in number make a perfect enclosure with 2 gates which when locked in the evening will make a perfect and safe shelter for the animals.

One of the features to be found in this warehouse is an automatic scale. The latest word in weighing machines. It stands in the centre of the floor and all the farmer needs to do to ascertain the weight of the tobacco he has is to roll the truck to it and watch the hand in the dial point out the correct weight. No clerk is needed

PRESIDENT TAFT AGAIN VEToes BILL

WOOL TARIFF REVISION BILL REACHES EXECUTIVE TO BE TURNED DOWN

LOW RATES WILL BRING DISASTER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—For the second time within a year President Taft vetoed a bill to revise the wool tariff—Schedule K of the Payne Aldrich law.

With a message of disapproval he returned to congress the bill involved as a compromise between the House and Senate on the grounds that its low rates would bring disaster to home industries.

But the president appealed to Congress not to adjourn until it had enacted a measure to "substantially reduce unnecessary existing duties" without destroying protection for the wool industry in the United States. The president's disapproval of the wool bill is to be followed with similar vetoes of the steel bill and the cotton bill. The sugar bill is likely to be vetoed, as is the excise tax bill, the latter probably on the ground that the president believes it unconstitutional.

Mr. Taft wrote: I stand by my pledges to maintain a degree of protection necessary to offset the differences in cost of production here and abroad, and will heartily approve of any bill reducing duties to this level. While the bill vetoed today and the one disapproved last year were identical in terms, the president's reasons differed. He vetoed the former bill because it had been framed before the Tariff Board's report—the latter because he said it had been framed with disregard for the board's findings.

Most of the rates in the submitted bill, wrote the president, are so low in themselves that if enacted into law the inevitable result would be irretrievable injury to the wool growing industry, the enforced idleness of spinning machinery and of thousands of much of our will combing and spinning and the consequent throwing out of employment thousands of workmen.

TWENTY DETROIT ALDERMEN PINCHED

Graft "Rampant" in a Michigan City

ARRESTS FOLLOW DISCLOSURE

Some of the Accusations Are of Several Years Standing But Only Recently Unearthed by the Prosecutor

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 9.—Sensational developments in the local Aldermanic graft scandal occurred today when Prosecuting Attorney Sheppard announced that before night about twenty aldermen would be placed under arrest on charges of conspiracy to defraud the city in connection with their official positions.

The nine aldermen recently arrested on a similar charge are also included among the twenty new arrests.

It is said that the arrests today are based on entirely different evidence than that procured by William J. Burns and his operatives a few weeks ago, which led to the arrest of nine aldermen and the secretary of common council committees, who are now at liberty on bail, facing charges of receiving and conspiring to receive bribe money for giving the Wabash railroad certain city property for building purposes.

The latest arrests are alleged to be based on evidence, obtained by the prosecutor covering the city administration for years back.

The prosecutor stated today that he has struck many new instances of graft, but he refused to say whether the evidence was obtained as it has been rumored, from confessions made by aldermen previously arrested. He declared that several of the aldermen would be arrested on more than two charges.

The superintendent of police early in the forenoon had sent out nearly every detective on the force to arrest the aldermen and the prisoners were immediately locked in cells at police headquarters.

Keeper Believes Becker will Confess

NEW YORK, August 9.—The Tombs prison keeper seemed to think today that Police Lieutenant Becker was on the verge of breaking down, and there was reports that the public prosecutor's office had information that Becker, who is under indictment for the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, might turn State's evidence.

District Attorney Whitman conferred with John F. McIntyre, counsel for the accused lieutenant, but he said that no terms for a confession were discussed.

Mr. Whitman said: I hope that Becker, who is a shrewd man, may decide that his best interests will require him to tell the whole truth. If he should do that I would have to think over pretty carefully what my attitude should be. While murder is a graver crime than blackmail, it might be that I would decide in the event of a confession to ask some clemency for Becker. One of the greatest accomplishments for the good of the community would be to find out who are the big blackmailers in the police department and to abolish forever that treacherous and wicked system.

Mr. McIntyre expects to be out of town until next Wednesday when he said he would return and talk over the matters with his client.

The grand jury is said to have learned many things to show that Lieutenant Becker had made money very rapidly within the last few months. In one savings bank Becker was found to have $3,000 on deposit while the prosecutor had been told of other savings bank accounts which will be investigated.

Bald Jack Rose in his confession says that Becker told him that he had cleaned up $30,000 in four months. Within a few days the grand jury will hand down about six additional indictments. The indictments will be drawn at night. The public is cordially invited to hear him.

A VISION SEEN THROUGH THE CURTAIN OF A BED

Part I

Almost four hundred years ago the Benedictine monks of Saint Sixtus gave Raphael an order to paint.

The Infant Jesus in His mother's arms excels in this wonderful painting in majesty and beauty all the efforts of all the painters of the world.

The monks who gave the order demanded of the painter that he should present the Virgin and the Infant in the company of St. Sixtus and St. Barbara. The composition of this painting is marvelous in simplicity and beauty.

Reproductions of this wonderful painting, inspiring and beautiful above all works of art in this world, perhaps, should be in every home, before the eyes of all mothers and fathers and children.

Everything important in our lives you see most beautifully presented here.

The goodness and purity of woman, the dignity and power of man, the celestial beauty of childhood and the infinite grandeur of simplicity—are in this most wonderful work.

Greatest and most impressive of all is the face of the infant Jesus, looking out in majesty from His mother's arms.

That is the most perfect and marvelous face of a child that has ever been painted. It is a face that should have its place in the room of every woman looking forward to the blessing of maternity.

Romulus and Remus were brought up by a she wolf and never got out of the Sixth grade. News Forcast For the Coming Week

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10.—In the interval between the Progressive convention and the Wilson ratification of last week and the notification of the two leading vice presidential candidates fixed for a week hence, the national campaign promises to experience a mid-summer lull during the ensuing seven days.

The most important of the fixed events on the political calendar of the week will be the Politist National Convention, which has been called to meet in St. Louis next Monday to name a presidential ticket and adopt a platform.

Col. Cecilia A. Lyon, chairman of the Republican State committee of Texas and an active Roosevelt supporter, has issued a call for a State convention of the party to meet in Dallas Monday to put a full ticket in the field.

A monument in honor of the memory of Sir Isaac Brock, who commanded the British force in Canada in the early part of the War of 1812 and who was killed at the battle of Queenstown Heights, is to be unveiled Thursday at Brockville, Ont.

Among the conventions of the week will be the annual meeting of the International Typographical Union, in Cleveland, the National Society of the Army of the Philippines, in Lincoln, Neb., and the Canadian Medical Association, in Edmonton, Alta.

heard them criticised for spending one cent of the people's money foolishly. They are men well versed in business and know the needs of the county and are therefore competent. No community can expect to prosper when they are continually changing their officers. Hardly does a good set of commissioners reach that point where they are worth something to the citizens of the county before some one else is ready to fill their shoes. Who suffers by inexperienced men in office? The people. Who are responsible for this condition of affairs? The unthinking mass of voters who do not take as much interest in public affairs as they should. If you think the tax payers have been served well by the board as it is now constituted to go to the polls on the day of the primary and vote solidly for every member of the old board.

CITIZEN.

Just a Thought

I see in The Reflector Many Voters wants all the candidates to announce their platform as same. I thought this would be right too, but I do not think so now as they stand on the Democratic platform. I do not think a la wabiding citizen should be asked to announce himself against a non law abiding citizen. We have a plenty of good candidates to select from so you candidates leave it up to us and we will fix it.

TRUE DEMOCRAT.

John Z. Brooks Endorses D. M. Clark For the House of Representatives

I take this method of expressing to the voters of Pitt county my feelings in regard to D. M. Clark's candidacy for the House of Representatives. I have known Mr. Clark intimately since his very successful work in installing the county bridges at Greenville and Grifton, being a member of the board of county commissioners and being thrown with Mr. Clark I learned his worth and ability. Mr. Clark being a nephew of Judge Walter Clark would undoubtedly have his influence in the house which would mean a lot to Pitt county. I am sure no mistake could be made in sending Mr. Clark to the house for his record among us has always been clean and he stands for all the people all the time and not for a few after securing his office. His ability has been shown us not only by the efficient service he has rendered the county, but by the fact that he is a self made man, having studied law in his office at odd times until he was able with a summer course at college to be admitted to the bar with high honors.

It would be very gratifying to me to see Pitt county represented in the house by such a capable man as I know Mr. Clark to be.

attribute was destined never to be awakened in Mahomed's heart.

The kisweh, the kisweh, always the Holy Yhiorides; that he must have, even if he had to forego the pleasure of breaking Ryanne. He was too old to start life anew; at least, too old to stir ambition. He had wielded authority too many years to surrender it lightly; he had known too long his golden-flaked tobacco, his sherbet, his syrupy coffee, the pleasant loafing in the bazaars with his merchant friends. To return to the palace, to confess to the Pasha that his carelessness had lost him the rug, would result either in death or banishment; and so far as he was concerned he had no choice, the one was as bad as the other. So, if the young fool who had bought the rug of Ryanne told the truth when he declared that it had been stolen again, then Ryanne knew where it was; and he could be made to tell; he, Mahomed, would attend to that. And when Ryanne confessed, the girl and the other would be conveyed to the nearest telegraph post. That they might at once report the abduction to the English authorities did not worry Mahomed. Not the fleetest racing camel could find him, and behind the walls of the palace of Bagdad, only Allah could touch him. He had figured it all out closely, and he was an admirable strategist in his way. Revenge upon Ryanne for the dishonor and humiliation, and the return of the rug; there was nothing more beyond that.

Before George had the opportunity of speaking to Fortune, he was raised from the sand and bodily lifted upon his camel; and by way of passing pleasantries, his hat was jammed down over his eyes. He swore as he pulled up the brim. Swearing was another accomplishment added to the list of transformations. He had a deal to learn yet, but in his present mood he was likely to proceed famously. He readjusted the hat in time to see Ryanne unceremoniously dumped into one of the yawning pack-baskets, his arms and legs hanging out, his head lolling against his shoulder, exactly like a marionette, cast aside for the time being. A man of ordinary stamina would have died under such treatment. But Ryanne possessed an extraordinary constitution, against which years of periodical disipation had as yet made no permanent inroads. Moreover, he never forgot to keep his chin up and his waist-line down. They put him into the pack-basket because there was no alternative, being as he was incapable of sitting upon a camel's back.

Next, George saw Fortune, unresisting, placed upon the camel, under canopy. At least, she would know a little comfort against the day's long ride. His heart ached to see her. He called out bravely to her to be of good cheer. She turned and smiled; and he saw only the smile, not the swift, decisive battle against the onset of tears: she smiled, and he was too far away to see the swimming eyes.

A bawling of voices, a snapping of the kurbash upon the flanks of the camels, and the caravan was once more under way. George looked at his watch, which fortunately had been overlooked by the thieving natives, and found it still ticking away briskly. It was after nine. It was a comfort to learn that the watch had not been injured. Most men are methodical in the matter of time, no matter how desultory they may be in other things. There is a peculiar restfulness in knowing what the hour is, whether it passes quickly or whether it drags.

Further investigation revealed that his letter of credit was undisturbed and that he was the proud possessor of six damaged cigars and a box of cigarettes. Instantly the thought of being days without tobacco smote him almost poignantly. He was an inveterate smoker, and the fact that the supply was so pitifully small gave unusual zest to his craving. He now longed for the tang of the weed upon his lips, but he held out manfully. He would not touch a cigar or cigarette till nightfall, and then he made up his mind to smoke half of either. The touch, selfish and calculating, of the miser, stole over him. If Ryanne was without the soother, so much the worse for him. The six cigars he would not share with the archangel Michael, supposing that gentleman came down for a smoke.

Forward, always forward, winding in and out of the valleys, trailing over the hills, never faster, never slower. Noon came, and the brilliance of afternoon dimmed and faded into the short twilight. Were they never going to stop? One hill more, and George, to his infinite delight, saw a cluster of date-palms ahead, a mile or so; and he knew that this was to be the haven for the ship of the desert. The caravan came to it under the dim light of the few stars that had not yet attained their refulgence. Under the palms were a few deserted mud-houses, huddled dejectedly together, like outcasts seeking the nearness rather than the companionship of the co-unfortunates. Men had dwelt here once upon a time, but the plague had doubtless counted them out, one by one. They made camp near the well, which still contained water.

Prayers. A wailing chanted forth toward Mecca. "God is great. There is no God but God."

George had witnessed prayers so often that he no longer gave attention to the muezzin, calling at eventide from the minaret. But out here, in the blank wilderness, it caught him again, caught him as it had never done before. A shiver stirred the hair at the base of his neck. The lean bodies, one not distinguishable from the other now, kneeling, standing, sweeping the arms, touching the forehead upon the rug, for even the lowest camel-boy had his prayer-rug, ceaselessly intoning the set phrases—George felt shame grow in his heart. Was he as loyal to his God as these were to theirs?

A good fire was started, and the funereal aspect of the oasis became quick and cheerful. A little distance from the blaze, George saw Fortune bending over the inanimate Ryanne. She was bathing his face with a wet handkerchief. After a time Ryanne turned over and flung his arms limply across his face. It was the first sign of life he had exhibited since the start. Fortune gently pulled aside his arms and continued her tender mercies.

"Can I help?" asked George. "You might rub his wrists," she answered.

It seemed odd to him that they should begin in such a matter-of-fact way. It would be only when they had fully adjusted themselves to the situation that questions would put forth for answers. He knelt down at the other side of Ryanne and massaged his wrists and arms. Once he paused, catching his breath.

"What is it?" she asked. "A rib seems to bother me. It'll be all right tomorrow." He went on with his manipulations.

"Is he badly hurt?" "I can't say."

His knowledge of anatomy was not wide; still, Ryanne's arms and legs worked satisfactorily. The trouble was either in his head or back of his ribs. He put his arm under Ryanne's shoulder and raised him. Ryanne mumbled some words. George bent down to catch them. "Hit 'em up in this half, boys; we've got them going. Hell! Get off my head, you farmer! . . . Two cards, please."

His face puckered into what was intended for a smile. George laid him back gently. Foot-ball and poker: what had this man not known or seen in life? Some one came between the two men and the fire, casting a long shadow athwart them. George looked up and saw Mahomed standing close by. His arms were folded and his face grimly inscrutable.

"Have you any blankets?" asked George coolly.

Mahomed gave an order. A blanket and two saddle-bags were thrown down beside the unconscious man. George made a pillow of the bags and laid the blanket over Ryanne.

"Why do you waste your time over him?" asked Mahomed curiously. "I would not let a dog die this way," he retorted.

"He would have let you die," replied Mahomed, turning upon his heel. George stared thoughtfully at his whitom accomplice. What did the old villain insinuate?

"Can I do anything to make you more comfortable?" speaking to Fortune.

"I'm all right. I was chilled a little while ago, but the fire has done away with that. Thank you."

"You must eat when they bring you food."

"I'll try to," smiling bravely. To take her in his arms, then and there, to appease their hunger and his heart's!

Self-consciously, her hand stole to her hair. A color came into her cheeks. How frightful she must look! Neither hair-pin nor comb was left. She threw the strands across her shoulder and plucked the snarls and tangles apart, then braided the whole. He watched her, fascinated. He had never seen a woman do this before. It was almost a sacrilege for him to be so near her at such a moment. Afterward she drew her blanket over her shoulders.

"You've got lots of pluck."

"Have I?"

"Yes. You haven't asked a question yet."

"Would it help any?"

"No, I don't suppose it would. I've an idea that we're all on the way to the home of Haroun-al-Rashid."

"Bagdad," musingly. "It's the rug. But I do not understand you in the picture."

"No more do I."

With a consideration that spoke well of his understanding, he did not speak to her again till food was passed. Later, when the full terror of the affair took hold of her, she would be dreadfully lonely and would need to see him near, to hear his voice. He forced some of the hot soup down Ryanne's throat, and was glad to note that he responded a little. After that he limped about the strange camp, but was careful to get in no one's way. Slyly he took note of this face and that, and his satisfaction grew as he counted the aftermath of the war. And it had taken five of them, and even then the result had been in doubt up to the moment when his head had gone bang against the stucco. He took a melancholy pride in his swollen ear and half-shut eye. He had always been doubtful regarding his courage; and now he knew that George Percival Algernon Jones was as good a name as Bayard.

The camel-boys (they are called boys all the way from ten years up to forty), having hobbled the beasts, were portioning each a small bundle of tiffin or chopped straw in addition to what they might find by grazing. Funny brutes, thought George, as he walked among the kneeling animals: to go five days without food or water, to travel continuously from twenty-five to eighty miles the day! Others were busy with the pack-baskets. A tent, presumably Mahomed's, was being erected upon a clayey piece of ground in between the palms. No one entered the huts, even out of curiosity; so George was certain that the desertion had been brought about by one plague or another. A smaller tent was put up later, and he was

Bad Fire in Washington, Yesterday

WASHINGTON, N. C., August 9.—Washington was visited by another costly and disastrous fire here today when the large dry kiln and lumber shed of the Pamlico Cooperage company were totally destroyed. How the fire originated is not known, probably from a spark falling in the dry kiln. When discovered the fire had gained considerable headway. Altho this plant is situated on the suburbs of the city at the front of Main street, yet the local fire department were not long arriving on the scene and rendered valiant service, thereby saving the mill plant proper and several adjoining buildings. The estimated loss is approximately $15,000, and amount of insurance is not known.
