THE COST OF LIFE

Some years ago a pessimist sent out the question: Is life worth living This was at once answered by a witty doctor, who replied: That depends on the liver.

The rhythmic line of health is liable to distortion by various causes, such as errors in diet and excesses, mental as well as physical.

The adjustment of the complex phases of congenate life as exemplified in our cities imposes new duties and obligations, for such life whilst it grants to the favored few such luxuries as sound like fables, it reaches on the other extreme the very lowest depths of human suffering and degradation.

Poverty is not degrading. Neither is hunger or physical suffering, but they form convenient stepping stones to a condition where the animal instinct of survival cancels the teachings of society. Give us bread, was the cry of the starving workers of Paris. They got none, and that fair neck (whose owner had innocently remarked, How funny that they should want bread; why don't they eat cake? dis severed from her delicate ly nurtured body. spurted jets of blood over the Place de La Bastille.

She had no obligation to provide bread for any one. The rains came -to make flowers grow for her decorations. The rude working class existed for her to rule and for her husband (strong man) to trample on. She was an aristocrat and so was he. They were the head of their class. The class were contaminated by the touch of common people. They lived only for themselves and had no obligations except to their class.

Somewhere about that time the German poet Goethe was dying and his last request was for more light.

It has come, the aristocracy of the days of Louis Philippe and Marie Antoinette are gone. No one can now live to themselves. All have places in society, with the exception of a very few, such as hermits, who put themselves outside it.

What then, is the cost of a life, and is it worth what it costs. A human life has been compared to a bank, where you can only get out what you have previously put in with accrued interest.

The wealth of others the work are now generally charging one dol of others, the pleasures of others, the follies, crimes and diseases of others all are mutually reacting.

The obligation is on all to help the needy, not by direct gifts, but by assisting them to become self-supporting.

The Houston Chronicle in a recent editorial touches on a civic question and urges it as the duty of each municipality to get jobs for the unemployed. Some of it is apropos and is herewith quoted:

The old method of feeding and clothing and then kicking your humiliated suppliant back to where you found him is not only uncharitable but barbarous. The new way of assisting these economic victims to help themselves is not only logical, but humane.

No social organization of today can hope to be an effective agency for lightening humanity's burdens unless it has a department thoroughly conversant with local industrial conditions and as familiar with opportunities under the head of supply as they are with opportunities under the head of demand.

One point should be emphasized in this connection: Men who seek employment are not seeking charity. The department is one that is distinctly in the province of social service rather than charity and unless the charitable suspicion is removed the bureau will defeat its own ends by only reaching the drifts of life instead of that substantial strata of clerical professional and semi-professional men which form the finer machinery of industrial life.

Men seeking employment will not go to a charitable bureau to be put on the right track, however well meaning that institution may be. It is a peculiar fact that a charitable institution of the character referred to, conducted in the same building with a commercial employment agency, would in a large number of cases fail to attract indoor men and skilled labor.

The first analysis of handling the out of works would be the classification of the unemployed and the gaining of facts of high value in the after treatment of the question. The first division would be men and women. Under those heads by little, save elimination, the dead beats, semi-criminals and other non-productives are revealed.

The reformation of the criminal is being successfully handled now in various ways, but it is not his life that is now interesting. It is the self respecting man or woman who has either mistaken their vocation, a common prudence that so few have, of investing in property have suffered financial shipwreck. How they did it is immaterial, except to themselves Society demands that they should become producers.

It is a real problem and its solution may require an organized effort to aid the down and outs. The most difficult task is to aid those, who, defeated, will not admit it. Like the Old Guard, they can die but not surrender. They do die, through inanition (gradual starvation), on a tea and toast basis. Neat but thread bare they despair. And one can not help them. The honest worker is a much easier problem. He may be rough and even brutally frank as to his needs, his earnestness is never in doubt. And society needs him. It is only another case of the square peg in the round hole. There has been a misfit somewhere.

The bum who has selected as a life task the position of treasurer to a hard working woman, who feeds her children and pay rents, whilst he loafs, is a much easier one for the city to deal with. The police are his natural enemies -at least he says so-it is to the good of the body politic that they should make him move on. Society will be the gainer when help rather than punishment will be the controlling factor in civic government.

Right at this time of year farmers are following the old custom of wasting time and money in having fodder pulled. There is no work about the farm that hands hate to do worse than pull fodder. We hear that they alone makes it unprofitable to the farmer, for there are very few hands that can pull and save a dollar's worth of fodder in a day. But a greater loss than this comes through a depreciation of corn from which the fodder is pulled. Every test has proven that where the blades are left on the stalk, the difference in the value of the corn is greater than the worth of fodder.

The farmers of Pitt county who fail to attend the meeting here tomorrow will miss an opportunity of bettering their own condition. Congressman Small has arranged for this meeting purely in the interest of the farmers and has secured some of the leading men in the government agricultural and good roads departments to come and make addresses.

The things that they are going to do in unraveling the Rosenthal murder in New York, seem to be the things that they don't do. With the police on the side of the murderer, it is not likely that anything will be done to ward clearing it up.

The poll holders of the Democratic primary to be held next Saturday, should allow no known Republican to vote in that primary. It is their duty to guard the ballot boxes well in this particular.

Mr. M. G. Sarratt has taken charge of The Independent as editor and manager and that paper is again making its appearance under his guidance. We wish him success.

Of course building material has to be put on the streets for convenience when work is in progress, but it ought to be placed so as to cause as little obstruction as possible.

It is certainly true that "actions speak louder than words," for one paying of a debt is louder and more eloquent than a hundred promises to do so.

Wilmington is not stopping with pulling blind tigers, but is after female vagrants as well. Forty two of the latter were arrested in one day.

There are some things besides politics that should occupy attention, but some people do not think that way about it.

As was predicted, the price of cotton is tumbling now as the time for the new crop approaches.

Reproach of Our Diplomatic Service

Interesting figures are those in the report of Representative Flood, for the committee affairs, on the Sulzer bill, showing how inadequately our diplomats are paid and housed as compared with those of other countries.

For instance, we pay ambassador in Paris $17,500 a year while Great Britain pays hers $45,000. In Petersburg, Rome and Berlin the British ambassadors receive from $35,000 to $45,000, the French from $24,000 to $40,000. Austria-Hungary pays her ambassadors from $31,000 to $40,000.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Rann.

BUTTONS.

Buttons are a vicious, boneheaded article which are continually releasing their old without any warning whatever, and rolling under the very darkest corner of the bed.

This disgusting habit is common to the bone collar button, which will catch a man in a full dress shirt and a nervous hur and make him crawl under a low hung chifonier with murder in his heart.

Buttons were unheard of until somebody with criminal instincts came along and draped man in his first pair of pants. History relates that the buttonless age was the happiest epoch harassed man has ever known. From that time to this he has had to gear up his trousers with safety pins, wire nails, lag screws and patent rivets, while his wife attends the Shakespeare club and holds forth on mural art.

Russia from $22,000 to $40,000, and Italy from $22,000 to $23,000.

Thus our representatives to the great capitals, where much is expected in the way of entertainment, are forced to scrape along on salaries insufficient to maintain the dignity of their country.

It follows that only men of means can be appointed to these posts, and the list of ambassadors to the powers is therefore a list of millionaires.

In his report, Mr. Flood says that one of our most distinguished ambassadors confessed that he was obliged to spend more than his first year's salary in refitting and furnishing a house which was inferior in every respect that that of his colleagues. After two years the house was sold and he was obliged to repeat the same experience.

In the plea for fit quarters for our ambassadors the report declares that the usefulness of an ambassador as a consul depends upon the respect in which he is held in the country where he resides. In the great capitals of Europe the public knows the British, French, German, Austrian, and Italian legations, but those of the United States are unknown.

Mr. Sulzer hopes his bill appropriating half a million for suitable residences in the City of Mexico, Tokio, Berne and Hankow will pass. Certainly it is time that the United States placed its diplomatic service on a par with other countries.

Then David Livingstone went to darkest Africa with a diary and collection of buttons and spoiled the peace and happiness of the male members of the community by introducing them to the American pants button. At first the natives wore these buttons in their ears and noses giving them the weird effect of a walking clam bake, but now you can travel from one end of Africa to the other and see nothing but pegtop pants strung in a half hearted manner with the round open faced buttons of an effete civilization.

Some men are able to dispense with suspender buttons by surrounding themselves with a leather belt, which allows the trousers to drag gracefully on the ground and sag with every passing breeze. Thin men wear both belt and suspenders, in order to be on the safe side. Women wear buttons for the sole purpose of embittering their husbands who are obliged to chase up and down the back of a shirt waist several times a day. This is one of the penalties of marriage which is causing many a thoughtful bachelor to falter on the brink.

There are exceedingly few citizens in the State who are not benefited by the action of the state far beyond the cost of them in taxes. The tax rate in the State is low, especially when it is remembered that property is assessed at from one third to one half its real value. No patriotic man will protest against paying his taxes. No honest man will shirk them. What we get in return for the taxes we pay is about the best value we get for any money we spend.—Charlotte Chronicle.

At The Primaries.

It had been a hard day at the polls. The addition of nearly a thousand women's votes to the poll made the counting a prolonged proposition. "Well James," said Mrs. Wallicky, as her husband returned from his arduous labor as a teller, how did the vote go? "Nine hundred and two votes for Billard; seven hundred and fifty-three for Slathers, eight receipts for tomato ketchup, four wash lists and a milliner's bill," said Wallicky. It was a mighty interesting vote.—Judge.

State Road Building.

It is alright for a State administration to favor the good roads movement but we do not know as we are prepared to have one that be lieves in the State building them. The State government have about all they can carry.—Durham Herald.

The Pepple and Blease.

But if the people of South Carolina had believed one-tenth of the charges made against Mr. Blease they would never have made him Governor.

In half a dozen counties where a new court building was the issue, those members of the board of commissioners who favored such a move were defeated for re-nomination. This is usually the case in counties where there is no progress. Some old codgers go around and talk about increased taxes until they scare those who know no better.—Greensboro News.

Down By The Sea

(By Sloane Gordon)

We're living down by the sounding sea— The sad, the ceaseless, sobbing sea— Where the water's wet and the air is free

By the soulful, singful, sighful sea, And there's plenty of fog and sand and sky— And the sand flea rages and fish are shy,

The grocer, of course, is on the job, And that's why the sea and the victims sob; But the water's sweet and the air is free, And it cost you nothing to see the sea.

The songful sketcher of Jersey fame Gets happily into the summer game. He nips an ankle or nips a nose, And loves the open-work style of hose.

He sings his way through a peek-a boo, And all men envy him—wouldn't you? As soon as the chigger's day is done The sketcher's shift is at one begun. But still, we're down by the sounding sea; And the water's wet and the air is free!

The crafty crab and the cooling clam (For which no fisherman gives a continental) Can be produced for the price of meat;

If one must sordidly stop to eat; Or one may fatten on beans and pork That are tinned and labeled in old New York—

But the water's wet and the air is free, And it cost us nothing to see the sea!

This is My Birthday
Bion J. Arnold
Bion J. Arnold, widely noted as an electrical engineer and inventor, was born near Grand Rapids, Mich., August 14, 1861 and received his education at the university of Nebraska and Cornell University. He began his professional career as a mechanical engineer for a Western railway, but within a few years he resigned the position to become an independent consulting engineer. Mr. Arnold first attained prominence by design ing and building the intramural railway at the Chicago world's fair in 1893. Since that time he has been identified in a professional capacity with many great engineering achievements. Of late years his attention has been given particularly to the construction and improvement of street railways and subways. He devised the plan for electrically operated street cars of the New York Central road in and out of New York city and later was appointed chief engineer to rebuild the Chicago traction system at a cost of $60,000,000.

ANNOUNCEMENT.
To the Democrats of Pitt County:
Being a candidate for the State Senate I wish to announce my views or position on certain matters and things affecting the people.
As a general rule I do not think a candidate for either branch of the legislature need to write a platform as we have a platform written and adopted by the state convention. But there are some exceptions to the rule and there seems to be an exception in Pitt County this year in regard to certain local matters and for that reason I am making this statement.
I am opposed to and would oppose any act extending the stock law or adopting the stock law in any part of Pitt county, without first submitting the same to the vote of the people affected thereby.
I am opposed to and would oppose any act authorizing the issue of bonds for any purpose, unless the act provided for the submitting of the same to the vote of the people affected thereby, whether it be for county, town or township.
I am for Governor Kitchin for the United States senate and I have never hesitated to say so. But if I am nominated and elected to the senate, I shall unhesitatingly vote for the candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast in the senatorial primary.
The people supreme and should rule. I believe in equal rights to all and special privileges to none, and I believe ample and sufficient laws should be enacted to enforce said doctrine.
Respectfully,
JULIUS BROWN.

The white serge Norfolk suit is to be applied according to one taste. very smart for informal gathering wear but is made more often in the roughest serges and loose woven white woollens than in fine serge. Such a white costume, with or without a silk lined hood and worn with a mannish skirt of soft, heavy white wash silk, is a very knowing costume for the yacht or for any seashore outing wear, and a one piece frock of white serge with a long overall coat of the same serge loose, ample, yet without loose ends and folds to lap in the wind, is a good iron for the yachting outfit.

The belt of black patent leather trimmed in pates of plain color or figured material and in little buttons is worn with the white serge suit or frock, as with almost any day time frock from silk to sheer muslin, and ingenuity is displayed in the trimming of these belts, that is in the introduction of the trimming color and material.

One may find in the shops such belt with almost any of the plain gay relieving colors and one may too find the belts of black or black and white and separate trimming motifs in color sashes are also very attractive and add an artistic taste to an otherwise plain costume.

Wide girdles on afternoon and evening gowns are again in vogue. They are clever expedients by which any bulk around the waist is eliminated, and therefore the pannier draperies or the fulness of fishus need hold no terror for slender women.

Wide girdles as folded oves shapes that show pointed undelins; they are slightly round, and in some unique models are cut in squares around the waist line. They are extremely high and suggest recollections of the portraits of Mme. Pompadour, Du Barry and other court beauties.

Sleeves are gradually becoming fuller and fuller. eBfore very ong we may return to the leg-o-mutton sleeve of othe days. Bell sleeves, too, are becoming slowly but surely to the fore.

Florence Fairbanks.

Baseball Notes

Catcher Lew McAllister, formerly of the Detroit Tiger, has been purchased from Buffalo by the Baltimore Club.

Bill Sweeney, of the Boston Braves, is crowding Zimmerman, of the Cubs, for the batting honors in the National League.

Joe Lake, who was a failure in New York and St. Louis, is now pitching championship ball for Hugh Jennings in Detroit.

The Cincinnati fans have no mercy on a losery, and the Redlegs have a tough job playing ball at home since the team began to slip.

Wichita Falls has the honor of owning the first championship team of the season, the Oilers having won the pennant in the Texas-Oklahoma League.

The Dubeque Club, of the Three-I League, disposed of two classy players when it sold Del Paddock to the Highlanders and Ernie Johnson to the White Sox.

Pitcher Demaree, recently sold by in 1908 when George Stallings was a member of the Newark, N. J., team the Mobile Club to the Giants, was manager of the team.

Pitcher Ray Keating, of the Lawrence New England League team, who has been sold to the New York Americans, has won twenty and lost nine games this season.

Clyde Milan, of the Washington team, has a chance to beat Ty Cobb's record of 83 stolen bases, made in 1811. Up to Aug 4, had pilfered 58 sacks.]

The Clarksville team took the lead in the Kitty League early in the season, and has stuck at the top of the percentage column like a porous plaster on an angry Swede.

The Giants will have to step lively if they expect to equal the Cubs' record of games won in a season. In 1906 the Cubs set the mark at 116 victories and 36 defeats.

The feat of pitching ninety-eight innings without letting a run, has won for "Buster" Brown the Sheboygan pitcher a chance to display his goods with the Milwaukee team.

It is not often that a star ball player is seized with such a case of rattles as was Iven Olson, the Cleveland shortstop, recently, when he made seven errors in a doubleheader.

It looks as if the Pittsburg team got the worse of it when it traded Leach and Leifeld to Chicago for Cole and Hofman. Leach and Leifeld are playing great ball for the Cubs, while Cole has returned to his home nursing a sore arm, and Hofman reported to the Pirates on account of illness.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 14.—Governor McGovern has set tomorrow as the day for hearing, the application for a pardon for John Dietz who barricaded himself in his house two years ago and resisted with arms a sheriff's posse. In the conflict a deputy sheriff was shot and killed. Dietz was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment. The application for a pardon has been made through the efforts of Mrs. Dietz.

The Old Orchard.

Oh, I know an ancient orchard. Where the trees are all in bloom. You will find it if you follow Bee and butterfly and swallow And the wraft of rich perfume.

There the robin build his dwelling On the pink and dewy spray; When the wicket clicks behind you, Care and pain can never find you, For the world is shut away.

Gray the broken fence around it (Painted by the suns and rains). But the hand of Time embosses With the green velvety mosses Every picket that remains.

Overhead the apples blossoms Spread a tent of rosy snow. Marking off the golden minutes For the thrushes and the linnets With the flakes that fall below.

'Tis the orchard of our childhood Where all day we used to swing When the winds were sweet as honey, And the hour long and sunny In the bridal bowers of Spring.

Eggs Hatched in Bucket

On Sunday a lady in town found a nest of eggs in her yard. Thinking the eggs were newly laid she put them in a bucket and placed the bucket in the pantry. While in the pantry Tuesday she heard several "peck, pecks" that she at first thought was mice squeaking. The noises kept up and the lady began an investigation. Looking in the egg bucket she was surprised to see biddies picking their way out of the shells that enclosed them. They were hatching by themselves right in the bucket.

Squires-Carroll

On Wednesday morning, August 7, many relatives and a few invited friends gathered at the delightful country home of Mr. J. B. Carroll to witness the marriage of his daughter, Ethel May, to Dr. Reston Memory Squires of Wake Forest.

Promptly at 8:30, Miss Mimie E. Cox, a cousin of the bride, skillfully rendered Lohengrin's wedding march as a processional. The bride attired in a becoming traveling suit of gray leaning on the arm of the groom entered from the parlor to the porch which had been made beautiful with flowers and potted plants for the happy occasion. Standing under a wedding bell, suspended from an arch of green and white, the marriage vows were spoken, the bride's pastor, Rev. M. A. Adams performing the ceremony.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was used as a recessional after which amidst the congratulations and good wishes of many friends the happy couple left in an automobile for Greenville where they took the 9:37 train for New York and Niagara.

Mrs. Squires is a woman of strong personality, a graduate of Meredith College and has been a member of the faculty of same institution for the past two years. She possesses rare intellectual gifts and a noble Christian character. Because of these she will be sadly missed in the social, intellectual and religious circles of her home town.

glove the pill, steady myself and shoot as straight as I could or else the first baseman would let it roll to the fence.

"I didn't have confidence in the man at first and consequently my work suffered. This year I know what Stovall can do. I can take more chances with my throws, I have more confidence, and consequently more dash, and I'll head off a lot of fast men who last year got hits on slow grounders towards third.

"There's nothing so good to a ball club as one man's confidence in the others' ability. If you know the man on first or second or third is playing the game all the time, you can take more chances, throw faster and work with that recklessness which wins ball games. I think we'll win a lot of games this season with Stovall, not because he's a good hitter and a good fielder, but because the other infielders have confidence in him and their game will be better as a consequence."

STAR FILLS BIG GAP

Reliable and Experienced First Baseman Aids St. Louis.

Stovall's Presence Expected to Inspire Other Players With Confidence to Make Them 20 Per Cent Better in Fielding.

Ask any member of the Browns to give one reason why Wallace's club should not finish last and he will answer: "Stovall."

Not that the Browns figure Stovall, single-handed, will lead the club out of the depths of the sub-cellar, but the players to a man believe that the presence of Stovall on first will give each member of the infield sufficient confidence to make him a 20 per cent better ball player.

Since Tom Jones was traded to Detroit for Claude Rossman there has been a big hole around the initial sack at Sportsman's Park. The players have had no one to "throw to." True, there has been no less than twenty men tried out at first, but they all failed, and many of them were so putrid that the Browns' infielders lost confidence.

Such is not the case this season. Stovall is a great fielder, and his presence will inspire Laporte, Hallinan and Austin with sufficient confidence to make them much better players.

"I heaved a sigh of relief when I heard Stovall was to join our club," declares Jimmy Austin. "It's so encouraging to know that we have a real first baseman after having had so many goats dancing around that bag."

"Why, do you know I have seen game after game lost when the players were afraid to take any chances with their throws because of crude work of whatever particular man we happened to have on first."

"We had so many of those that re-

WHY BALL GAMES ARE LONGER

Umpire Billy Evans Tells Why Conditions Nowadays Require More Time Than Previously.

"Why are games longer? In the first place, the lively ball makes more hitting," vouchsafes Umpire Billy Evans. "In the second place, I have noticed that in batting against this livelier ball almost double the number of fouls have been hit, either of the long, raising variety or those which carom off the bat against the stands."

"In addition to this, there has been another vital change in the game. Instead of walking up and slamming away at the first good ball pitched, the average batsman of this season makes each pitcher work to the limit. Unless they are over the plate they pass them along. I have never before noticed so many individual cases where the batsman stood up with three balls and two strikes called."
