Concensus of Opinions is That Fair Brought Largest Crowd Ever Here

Success of Second Annual Pitt County Fair Goes Beyond All Borders of Expectation, Officials Being Congratulated For Their Work

FROM TEN TO TWELVE THOUSAND CAME TO TOWN

Automobiles and Buggies Throng Street all Day Long

Old timers yesterday had to hand it to the Pitt County Fair Association. They had to acknowledge that never since its history began, did Greenville have the mass of people it harbored yesterday.

From early morning well into the late evening the streets presented a most lively aspect, with sidewalks crowded with pedestrians and streets overrun with automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles.

Educational Day, yesterday, made one of the biggest hits ever, certainly accounting for the great crowd. It is variously estimated that from 2500 to 3,000 children marched in a parade long to be remembered.

Everything in Greenville felt yesterday the strain of the big day. Drug stores especially did an enormous business, the soda water flowing continually from morning till night.

Progress in the Fair Warehouse yesterday morning was practically impossible, the number of people there packing the warehouse tight.

The Wilson Concert Band, which provided the music during the fair, was popular with the crowd, constantly having a big ring of admirers and listeners around them.

The county schools exhibits as well as all other exhibits at the fair received all the attention they deserved at the eyes of the visitors and altogether, the second annual Pitt county will be hard to beat outside of Pitt county.

Grand Jury Reports No Interest In Good Roads in Several Townships

Pitt County, in the Superior Court, November Term, 1912.

To the Honorable Stephen C. Bragaw, Judge presiding:

The grand jury for this term of the court in submitting their report beg leave to first thank your Honor and the officers of the court for the kind and courteous treatment we have received at your hands, while in the discharge of their duties.

2. We have examined the jail and find that the same is kept in a sanitary condition and that no complaint has been made as to a proper treatment of the prisoners.

3. We find that the court house is in good condition and well kept, with the exception of several panes of glass which need replacing and this we recommend to the county commissioners to have done at once.

4. The public records of the county are well kept and in good condition.

5. We have examined into the condition of the Home for the Aged and find and we report that it is well kept and that the inmates are well provided for and receive kind and considerate attention from the superintendent.

6. We have visited the camp of the chaingang and find them to be properly cared for and kindly treated.

7. We find that the supervisors of the public roads of most of the townships do not visit and inspect the public roads of the county as required by law to do and give them that attention they should receive, nor do they make the reports to the court as is their duty to do.

Little Son of Mr. W. F. Evans in Unfortunate Accident Yesterday

The heavy traffic taxing Greenville's streets yesterday registered one accident that might have proven a fatality. Robert Evans, the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Evans, was one of the school children that formed part of the parade.

The shameful feature of the accident was that the driver of the buggy did not stop to find out what damage he had done and to date it is not known who occupied the vehicle.

F. Religion Claims Time of the Allens Preparing to Die in Charr

RICHMOND, Nov. 15.—Floyd Allen and his son, Claude Swanson Allen, are now diligent in preparing themselves by religious exercises to meet death in the electric chair one week from today, to which they were sentenced for participation in the Hillsville Court murders.

While persistent rumors have been circulated that Claude Swanson Allen's sentence to death would be commuted to life imprisonment upon the appeal of a prominent Baptist minister, and numerous petitioners, it is generally believed that the Governor will not interfere with the court's decision in the matter.

Gov. Mann said today most positively that he had not intimated by word or act what he would do in the event that the case came before him officially.

The Gasoline Wagon Has it All Over the Horse and Buggy

Sheriff Dudley's late acquisition of a benzine propelled wagon was justified last night, when the recently re-elected county official sped his Hup twenty miles towards the Craven county line, captured a big still and made the return journey home, all in a little under four hours.

Belgrade, Servia, Nov. 15.—Another Turkish force hoisted the white flag and surrendered to the Servian cavalry near Monastir yesterday.

The Turks retreated and were pursued as far as the village of Morabi, close to Monastir, by the Servians, who surrounded them here and poured in such a heavy fire that the Turkish officer in command decided that it was useless to continue fighting and ordered his men to throw down their arms.

The advance of the Servian army has been temporarily stopped by floods.

Bulgarians Discuss Plea for Armistice

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 15.—The Turkish request for an armistice, addressed by Kiamil Pasha, the grand vizier, to King Ferdinand, was discussed today by the Bulgarian council of ministers.

After the allies have consulted it is believed the negotiations for an armistice will be carried on by the commanding generals of the opposing armies purely from a military point of view.

The negotiations can begin only after the Turks have accepted the conditions laid down by the Bulgarians that in the meantime that no further reinforcements of Turkish troops may be brought into the field of operations.

GOV. WILSON TO CALL SESSION

Congress to Gather in Extraordinary Meeting

REVISE THE TARIFF AT ONCE

In Response To Country Wide Question Wilson Gives Out A Statement Agreeing

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Governor Wilson announced tonight that immediately after his inauguration as President of the United States he would call an extraordinary session of Congress to convene not later than April 15 for the purpose of revising the tariff.

The President-Elect will sail for Bermuda at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for a vacation and will return December 16.

"I shall call Congress together in an extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the pledges of the party ought to be redeemed as promptly as possible, but also because I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty as to what the particular items of tariff revision are to be should be removed as soon as possible."

Beyond this brief announcement, the governor said he had nothing further to say.

The governor did not intend to express himself about an extra session so soon after election. Although he has favored the idea of an extra session because the present arrangement would not bring the new Congress in to session until 13 months after its election, he had expected to spend more time in ascertaining public opinion.

THE IMPORTANCE OF EDUCATION PROVED IN LINCOLN'S CASE

(By Arthur Brisbane)

The very old and very foolish saying, "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," is disproved every day. Whenever you hear a man talk about "a little knowledge" ask him what he thinks about the danger of a great deal of ignorance. Tell him this: "The schooling of Abraham Lincoln all told, did not amount to as much as one year."

The teaching was elementary, including reading, writing, ciphering and very little of each one. It was picked up at odd times when he could be spared from daily labor. Remember that when he was a lad his father used to hire him out to work on other men's farms for very little money.

With that little learning he built himself up into one of the greatest men in history, saved the nation, ended once and for all civilized recognition of slavery.

A little learning might possibly have been dangerous had he been one of the idiotic kind of men. It might have made him feel dissatisfied with the hard labor for which he was fit, without stimulating him to better things.

But Lincoln's little learning gave him no rest—it kept him constantly adding more learning to his little supply.

The self-putting young man who thinks he has no chance may be interested in Lincoln's methods of getting ahead. He walked about twenty miles through the wilderness to borrow an English grammar. He could get no other books, so he read and re-read the statutes of Indiana. He wanted to teach himself to write well and think closely. He had never heard Bacon's saying: "Writing maketh an exact man," but he felt the truth of the fact for himself and he was bound to write. He had no paper and could not afford to buy any.

At night, when his work was done, he would bend his huge six-foot frame close down by the firelight to write and cipher on the back of a wooden shovel.

When the back of the shovel was covered with writing he would shave a thin layer from it and begin writing once more.

It is a very useful thing for men occasionally to feel ashamed of themselves. If you want to feel ashamed of yourself, if you are complaining and whining, just picture to yourself Abraham Lincoln in his father's little hut, with no windows and no flooring, crouching by the fire and developing his mind by laborious writing on the back of a wooden shovel.

Children of twelve in schools, precocious little girls of seven or eight, know much more than Abraham Lincoln knew when he was twenty-one years old.

With his "little knowledge" he grew and did the work that was to improve the condition of millions of men.

Don't be ashamed of your little knowledge.

But do be ashamed if you do not add to it whenever you can and especially if you fail to make it useful to your fellow men.

Mr. J. A. Robinson, who was founder and for many years editor of the Durham Sun, is a candidate for postmaster of Durham under the Democratic administration to be inaugurated next March. He has a great host of friends throughout the state who wish he may get the place he seeks.

The success of the Pitt county fair was glory enough for all and all are feeling their share of it.

We do not believe another county in the state, or any other state, can show a better looking large assemblage than was here at the Pitt county fair Friday.

Hon. William Jennings Bryan is scheduled for a speech in Raleigh Monday night, under the auspices of the hospital committee of the Woman's club.

Only the greatest people in the greatest county in the greatest state in the greatest nation in the world, could hold such a great county fair as has just been accomplished in Pitt county.

Every one who took part in making the Pitt county fair a success, has a right to feel gratified at the result.

OUTLINE OF PLANS FOR EXHIBITS

National Conservation Exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., 1913, Planned in Accordance With History

RESOURCES OF SOUTHLAND

Will illustrate the ways in which the Natural Wealth in Forests, Minerals and Human Efficiency May Be More Effectively Utilized.

The National Conservation Exposition is planned in accordance with exposition history especially to illustrate the modern idea of forecasting prospective development, especially throughout the Southern States. In a broad way the design is to illustrate the ways in which the natural wealth in forests, waters, minerals, and human efficiency are now used and may be still more effectively utilized in promoting the prosperity and assuring the perpetuity of the American people.

The Resources in Lands.
Recognizing the soil made fruitful by the natural water supply as that resource on which more than all others the generations of men must depend for materials for food and clothing, it is planned to devote large space to the exhibits of the soil and its products, of the best methods of maintaining and increasing production, and of progress in improving the grade and yields of plant and animal products.

Forest Resources.
Our forest resources are second in importance only to the land itself, because of the many important industries for which the forest furnishes the raw material, and of the forest's beneficial influences upon such other natural riches as waters for irrigation, power and navigation, fish and game animals, and the land itself. Considerable attention is to be devoted to forest exhibits.

It is planned to illustrate the existing forest resources, with their production and reproduction, their utilization, and their influences upon other resources.

Water Resources.
The water resources of the country in general and of the South in particular will be displayed with reference to the use of water (a) for domestic supply, (b) for agricultural production (whether applied by natural means or irrigation), (c) for power, and (d) for navigation.

Mineral.
The mineral resources of the country as a whole and especially of Southeastern United States will be exhibited as the chief basis for the greatness of this country in manufacturing and as a means of maintaining our industrial supremacy.

Human Efficiency—Health.
By far the most important of all our natural resources is man himself. It is to render his life more efficient that any form of conservation is advocated. Those vital forces intimate to himself are highest and noblest, and to their development, conservation and best use deep thought and great effort should be devoted.

The abolition of child labor, particularly in the Southern States, the eradication of disease, especially tuberculosis, the hook worm and typhoid fever will be graphically presented.

Education.
Another most important element in human development is education. The school is a crucial problem in the commercial upbuilding of the Southern States. School hygiene and sanitation, domestic economy, vocational training, industrial education for the negro, and rural school advancement shall be subjects for exhibition and shall be presented in the form of model demonstrations and in other ways.

Domestic Economy.
So important is this subject considered as an element in greater human efficiency that, although it might properly be included as a part of another section, it is thought well to devote a separate paragraph to it. Homemaking is the first and most important step in nation making. The work of the wife and mother in the establishment and maintenance of a comfortable home, in the preparing of proper foods and by her wisdom and radiation of domestic tranquility and happiness can contribute at least as much to the prosperity of the nation and the efficiency of its citizens as can the husband and father by his efforts in the outside world.

Good Roads.
Good roads are necessary requisites to development. Exhibits will be made of good roads in the form of (1) actual demonstration roads, (2) models showing materials, manner of construction, and the finished work, (3) road making materials and machinery, (4) maps of important highways, (5) photographic enlargements of both good and bad roads and the consequences and industrial and social conditions attending each.

Fish and Game Resources.
The co-operation of Audubon societies, fish and game commissions, and other organizations for the preservation of bird and animal life will be sought in exhibiting our animal resources and encouraging their perpetuation.

CONSERVATION EXPOSITION

One of the National Events of 1913 To Be Held At Knoxville, Tenn.

TO PROMOTE DEVELOPMENT

An Exposition For the Advancement of Conservation With the Nation's Leaders in This Movement Direct It.

The National Conservation Exposition will be held at Knoxville in the fall of 1913—an exposition of national scope and importance—an exposition for the advancement of conservation with the nation's leaders in the conservation movement directing it.

This exposition is to be educational and will lead in the best work which the people of the nation have to do for the welfare of the present generation and generations to come. Former expositions have been in the nature of celebrations of past events. The National Conservation Exposition looks forward instead of backward, and is designed to promote the highest development and best use of all natural resources. It will show what has been done along lines of substantial progress, and how greater things may be accomplished.

It is a new exposition idea which will be presented for the first time at Knoxville, in 1913, to the people of the South and the nation. The best features of past expositions will be shown, but in a more interesting form, made possible by improvements in all lines of industry and commerce. In manufacturing displays, the conservation idea will be brought out in exhibits which show the saving of time and labor, the prevention of waste and the utilization of by-products. In agriculture, not only the products of soils, but varieties of soils, the most approved methods of preparation, drainage, fertilization, cultivation and harvesting—methods for the prevention of erosion, leaching or deterioration from any cause.

Knoxville was awarded the exposition because of its preparedness to handle the project and because of its splendid location for an exposition of this nature. It is easily and quickly accessible from both North and South, and is in the center of a region in which conservation work is especially active at this time.

At least a year's start in the building of the exposition was made by the exposition held at Knoxville during the past two years, and work begins at a point which would have taken another city several years to reach. For these reasons wonderful results can be obtained in exposition building within the next eight months, and the present plans being carried out, Knoxville will have an exposition of the magnitude originally contemplated.

Exposition Buildings.
The buildings which have been erected will compare favorably with those of the larger expositions held in this country. The new buildings to be grouped around the upper and lower lakes on the exposition grounds will be quite as substantial and attractive.

The Land and Agricultural Building and Exposition Auditorium are now in course of construction. The Land Building might appropriately be named the Conservation Building, for it is in this structure that a mammoth relief map of the Southeast is being built, upon which the best methods of conserving soils, waters and forests will be shown, and on the second floor will be displays of educational exhibits of various state experiment stations, planned with the view of illustrating the principles of conservation as applied to soils. With the possible exception of the Southern States Building, to be erected on the lower lake, the Land Building will be the most imposing structure on the grounds. The approach will be the most attractive of any building, with double terraces and sufficient frontage to admit of excellent effects in landscape work.

The Southern States Building, next to be erected, will have a depth of 400 feet, with steps leading down to the water's edge, forming seats for an amphitheater and affording an excellent view of the amusement district across the lake, and of the water festivals which are being planned as a special attraction. It is in this building that exhibits will be made by the various Southern States, illustrating the development and progress of manufacturing industries in the South.

Space in the Southern States Building will be allotted to Southern cities in order that each city may group exhibits of its manufacturers and thus make the display of value both to the exhibitor and to the city. The plan will be to carry out as far as possible the "live exhibit" idea in all buildings—the actual processes of manufacture to be shown in every case where the necessary machinery can be installed.

Government Building.
A bill has been introduced in the National Congress providing for an appropriation for a government building and exhibits from the departments of the government of national resources. Among other buildings planned is a corn palace, to be erected in co-operation with the boys' corn clubs of the South and formed of ears of corn covering a framework, and a model concrete residence of colonial style to be used as the Woman's Building. In this structure such exhibits as pertain to domestic science, child welfare and the like will be shown. Another prominent feature will be a model farm of about five acres, containing a cottage, a barn, a sanitary dairy, portable hog and poultry houses, modern fences, and the most approved furnishings, tools and machinery. It is planned that one of the state experiment stations will work the farm according to the latest scientific methods. This will be a most valuable object lesson to visiting farmers.

A NEW EXPOSITION IDEA

To Be Presented By the National Conservation Exposition, Knoxville, Tennessee, 1913.

During the first decade of the twentieth century a new realization of the value and importance of the natural resources took shape. Through scientific surveys by State and the Federal Government, designed primarily to make the resources known and guide their exploitation, the quantities of standing timber, of iron ore and coal in the ground and of other natural materials, were measured; and the quantities were found not unlimited according to the common boast in the heyday of early exploitation, but of such amounts as to meet current demands for only a certain number of years, easily reckoned and understood in terms of the written history of mankind—e. g., at the current increasing rate of use computed in 1908 the standing timber of the country would last a generation, the high-grade iron ore a century, and the good coal from one to three centuries, according to the varying allowances made by different computers. In short, it became clear that the standard resources on which our great and growing industries rest are foredoomed to exhaustion within a small fraction of the period already covered by the Christian era, unless means be adopted to prevent waste and otherwise conserve the natural stores for the benefit of posterity. As understanding of the limitation of the natural resources spread, moral sense was awakened; the feeling of the natural right of the rising generation (and of generations still to come) to a fair share of the resources took form; and the natural wealth of this magnificently endowed country came to be viewed as involving moral no less than material considerations. Numberless manifestations of the new view have appeared—in legal enactments, the creation of state commissions, the improvement of educational curricula, etc.; but no more striking indication of the modern view has appeared than the idea of a national exposition designed to illustrate the conservation and development of the natural resources with a view to the permanent enrichment of the country and people. The change thus wrought in the exposition idea is fundamental; the old exposition looked backward, the new looks forward; the old exposition was solely material, the new is essentially moral; the old was a proud boast of achievement, the new a signpost to progress and an assurance of perpetuity. The expositions of the past were as songs of achievement at the end of a good day's work, the National Conservation Exposition will be a living and tangible promise of a still more glorious to-morrow foreordained by the wise action of to-day.

The GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW

AS TOLD TO
Hugh S. Fullerton

By CHARLES WAGNER.

Infielder Boston American League Club, Who is Considered One of the Fastest Fielders Either at Short or Second.

The greatest play I ever saw was one Tris Speaker made. It was the fourth great play of one game, and every one of them was made by Speaker, but the fourth was the best. It was during the series against the Chicago White Sox—I think in August of 1910—on the Boston grounds, and anyone who saw that game will remember seeing one of the greatest exhibitions of outfielding ever given.

The White Sox were hitting hard—much harder than usual—but Speaker kept catching almost everything they hit and making about as sensational running catches as one often sees. Besides that, he had pulled off two great throws during the game and his fielding kept Boston in the game all the way. A couple of long drives—one I remember was by Stahl—put us ahead late in the game, but still the White Sox weren't beaten.

I don't exactly remember who was pitching for Chicago. I know that either Walsh was pitching or else he was sent to hit for some one late in the game. Anyhow, it was Walsh who hit the ball that gave Speaker the chance to make his great play. I think we were one run in the lead and I remember there was a runner on second base when Walsh came to bat. Now when that big fellow leans against a ball with his full swing the fences aren't far enough away to hold the ball in the lot. And this time he certainly hit one. It looked as if it would go to Boyleston street, via the subway, when it started out to left. I remember our pitcher threw down his glove in anger, as he thought sure the ball was in the bleachers. But it rose a little too high. Speaker was chasing that ball at his best clip and he was going some. Still it didn't look as if he could even get close. He kept going on and on until I heard the crowd yelling for him to look out, fearing he would bang into the bleacher fence and break a few legs and arms.

The ball was falling almost on top of the railing around the bleachers. Whether it would have dropped into the seats or hit the fence and bounded back past Speaker I can't tell—but it never had the chance. Speaker whirled, almost touching the fence, gave one look at the ball, jumped and grabbed it; and although he was almost against the fence when he made the try, he never touched it. He had to twist and dodge to escape hitting the fence, and the runner went from second to third on the catch, and seeing Speaker just starting to throw, turned for the plate. Speaker drove the ball on the line to me, and all I had to do was to make a short lob throw to catch the runner at the plate, this turning a home run into a double play.

Sparrow an Office Pet.

A sparrow is kept as a pet in a Lewiston (Me.) coal office and furnishes lots of entertainment. Jonah is the sparrow's name, and the office is the only home that he has known since he fell out of the family nest. He can sing and scold, and when he is mad ruffles his feathers in a most indignant manner.

Stung.

"How in the world did you ever come to marry that horrid man in the first place?"

"It was all my chum's fault."
"Did she tell you that he was rich?"
"No, she pretended that she wanted him herself."
