

Big Crowds Hear Cyclone Mack In Sunday's Services

Many Out of Town People Hear Evangelist in Two Best Sermons of His Campaign Here

LIEUT. COMMANDER KING

Lieut. Commander E. U. King, Royal navy, is assistant naval attache of the British embassy at Washington.

Sunday showed the largest attendance at the McLendon services of any since the campaign began yesterday a week ago.

Among the Newbern delegation was Chief of Police Lupton who was called to the platform. In a few words the officer told of the great blessing resulting in his city from the recent meeting.

There was also a great improvement in the choir Sunday, the platform a part for singers being nearly full.

And the evangelist's sermon Sunday were such as will not be forgotten by the thousands who heard him.

The evangelist is resting today there fore there are no services, but will resume tomorrow at 8 and 7:30 p. m.

The following is a brief reference to the Sunday night sermon:

No man can be a good husband, no man can be a good father, no man can be a respectable citizen, no man can be a gentleman and swear.

There is one thing that will give any community a disreputable name and that is a dirty, cussing, rapacious, mendacious, swearing gang of lickspittles.

God said, "Remember the Sabbath," (Continued on Page 4)

Memorial For General Grant Nearing Finish

Statue For Fifteen Years Has been Under Construction About Complete

Washington Nov. 8.—Eighteen years in the making, a memorial to General U. S. Grant is nearing completion here and probably will be unveiled before the end of the year.

The equestrian figure stands 16 feet high weighs 10,700 pounds and cost $250,000. The memorial is located in the Botanic Gardens at the foot of the capitol and congress has approved the removal of a section of the iron fence on the east front of the gardens to admit the statue and to provide space for spectators at the unveiling ceremonies.

Authority for the creation of the memorial was given by Congress on February 23, 1901. The completion for the statue was held in 1902 and the award was to Henry M. Shady, a noted sculptor, of Elmford, N.Y., whose design was selected by a jury consisting of Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Daniel Chester French, Daniel H. Burnham and Charles F. McKim.

The equestrian statue has just been finished, however, and was shipped here in sections by motor truck from New York City.

Memorial Will Be Erected In Honor Pilgrim

Boston People Plan Erection of Tablet to Five Mayflower Passengers

Boston, Nov. 8.—The erection at Provincetown and Boston of memorials to the five Mayflower passengers who died at these places will be the contribution of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants to the celebration of the tercentenary of the Pilgrims' landing.

Four passengers died during the December days of 1620 while the Mayflower lay at anchor in Cape Cod Harbor, now Provincetown. Two days before the little ship set sail for the permanent settlement at Plymouth, James Chilton, who has been one of the signers of the famous Mayflower Compact in Cape Code Harbor, died. A day before the little band had lost Mrs. Dorothy Bradford, first wife of Governor William Bradford, by accidental drowning, and the death occurred also of Edward Thompson, a servant and Jasper More, a child.

Mary Chilton, who was the daughter of James Chilton, sailed on for Plymouth with her mother, and struggled through the trying times of the colony's early days. She later married John Winslow and before 1660 they removed to Boston, where she died in 1679, having survived her husband by five years. She was the only Mayflower passenger

Pitt County Will Feature Declamation

Committee Making Effort to Have Schools Represented at Trinity College

Durham, Nov. 8.—The committee in charge of the annual interscholastic declamation contest to be held at Trinity College, Durham, on Friday, Nov. 26, is making a special effort to see that Pitt county high school are represented by at least one man in the contest.

The custom of a declamation contest at Trinity, in which representatives of various high schools in North and South Carolina, and Virginia would compete, originated with the 9019 society, a scholarship and patriotic organization at the college, in 1910. The event grew in favor during the years, but it was found necessary to abandon it during the war. Last year it was resumed with much success and interest this year is expected to break all records.

The preliminaries will be held Friday November 26, beginning at 9:30 in the morning. From the number taking a part in the preliminaries, ten will be selected for the finals to be held that evening. The winner in the finals will be presented with an attractive gold medal given by the 9019.

The young men taking part in the contest will incur no expense while at the college. They will be the guest of the society which arrange the event. A trip through the manufacturing plants of Durham, followed by a banquet, are features of entertainment now being considered for them.

Any bona fide student of a recognized high school in the state is eligible for entrance in the contest.

Red Cross At Work Among The Starving

Survey of Navy Shows Important Part Which Organization has Played in Nation

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8.—"Among the first on the scene were doctors and nurses of the American Red Cross corps," read a newspaper report of the recent bomb explosion in Wall street. The promptness of the Red Cross on that occasion, resulting in the saving of numbers of lives, calls attention to the fact that thirty-nine years of Red Cross has been "among the first on the scene" at all manner of disasters.

Part of the charter duty of the American Red Cross is to carry on a system of national and international relief, to apply the same in mitigating the suffering caused by pestilence, famine, fire, floods and other great national calamities.

During the 39 years since the American Red Cross was organized, it has given relief in 250 cases of this kind, and directed the expenditure of more than $13,000,000.

Among these disasters are such well remembered events as the Charleston earthquake, the Mt. Pelee eruption, the Armenian massacres, the yellow fever epidemic, the Galveston storm, the San Francisco fire, cholera in Italy, the Guatemala earthquake, and the Halifax explosion, which occurred in the midst of the war.

It is very remarkable that in the very midst of the war, when the greatest demands were being made upon the Red Cross, its organization for Disaster Relief was so efficient that it was able to take care of several great disasters and oversee the disbursing of more than $8,000,000.

WILLIAM R. HINSDALE

William R. Hinsdale, an engineer of Orange, N. J., is the man who wrote the Cornelius Van Tromp letters to President Wilson during the war, urging him to adopt the convoy system to defeat the German U-boats which were at that time causing a panic in shipping circles.

Reductions In Sale of Cigars Now Effective

Introduction of Budget Brings Marked Change in Champagne Sales

London, Nov. 8.—Since Chancellor Austen Chamberlain introduced his last budget there has been a marked reduction in the retail sale of champagne and cigars in England.

Cigar merchants say that during the recent months clearances from bond and importations from Cuba have practically been suspended. The public, it is stated, refuse to buy at the high prices necessitated by the heavy duty and the inflated cost of the tobacco.

In 1914 a really good Havana cigar could be bought at 40 shillings to 50 shillings a hundred but today the cost is more than five pounds a hundred.

Wine merchants are a little surprised at the decline in the sale of champagne, as prices have not been substantially increased. In many cases growers have shouldered a part of the duty imposed by the budget in the hope of maintaining the English demand.

Pres. Wilson Urges Support Of Red Cross

Asks His Fellow Countrymen to Join Organization in Fourth Annual Roll Call

Washington, Nov. 8.—President Wilson today urged his "fellow countrymen" to join the Red Cross "in impressive numbers during the fourth annual roll call to be held during the fortnight beginning Armistice Day.

"The American Red Cross," said the President, "deserves a hearty response to its fourth invitation to annual membership, which will be issued during the fortnight beginning November 11th, Armistice Day.

"Under the stimulus of war and thru the cooperation of our people, this organization grew into immense size, enlarged its range of activity, served not only our fighting forces but also civilians involved in the hardships of war in our own nation and in the nations associated with us in a great common enterprise, and gave to the world an example of effective mercy through co-operation."

"Since the cessation of hostilities the organization has faced a dual duty: First, to fulfill obligations created by the war, and secondly to adapt its experience and machinery to the needs of peace.

"It is today, still governmental agencies in the care of cheer of our disabled soldiers and sailors, and in counselling and aiding the families of former combatants; and it is still assisting, with diminished resources, the process of rehabilitation in some of the more prostrated countries of our former associate.

"While continuing these manifold obligations, the Red Cross has been accommodating methods and applying lessons learned in war to the normal need of our own people in time of peace, especially in regions where provisions for public health and welfare were imperfectly developed. It has placed public health nurses in many localities, and has endeavored to enlist greater numbers of young women in the nursing profession in order that the supply might more nearly equal the steadily increasing demand for community nurses. It has devised a scheme of "public health centers" for the relief of maladies and for instruction in hygiene, dietetics, and general principles of disease-prevention. With its nurses and nurses' aides its has rendered incalculable service in the serious epidemics of influenza.

WORLD DEMANDS UPON FORESTS

The world is again turning to the United States for its supplies of forest products, and our exports of timber, lumber and other forest products, will aggregate about $200,000,000 in the calendar year 1920 against an average of $70,000,000 per annum during the war period.

Our exports of forest products, says a statement by the National City Bank of New York, have aggregated more than a billion dollars in the last decade despite the partial interruption by the war and are now running at the rate of $200,000,000 a year or nearly four times as much, in stated value, as in certain of the war years when the natural reduction in world demand was intensified by the lack of transportation facilities. In the pre-war years, our exports of lumber and other forest products aggregated about $75,000,000 per annum and were steadily advancing so that in the year immediately preceding the war the total value of all forest products exported was $115,000,000. But, with the opening of the war the demand temporarily declined, especially from Europe, and the total value of the exports of this class dropped in 1915 and 1916 to just one-half that of the year preceding the war. Now, however, with the resumption of building in all parts of the world and the Russian supplies temporarily cut off, the world again turns to the United States and her neighbor, Canada, and our exports of lumber and other forest products, which advanced from $55,000,000 in 1915 to $87,000,000 in the closing year of the war, was $137,000,000 in 1919 and promises to be about $200,000,000 in the calendar year, 1920.

Russia, adds the bank statement, with her big timber surplus and proximity to the European markets, was, prior to the war, our chief rival in the lumber and timber markets of the world, her exports in all forms having aggregated $75,000,000 in 1913, those of paper and pulp $100,000,000. With Russia's supply not now available to her European neighbors, they are calling upon the United States for supplies, while Asia, Oceania, South America and even South Africa, are also taking largely of our forest products, and also calling upon Canada whose exports of lumber and other forest products in 1919 were $106,000,000 against our $17,000,000 in that year and a prospect of $200,000,000 in 1920.

Oriental demands for our lumber and other forest products have rapidly increased in the recent years. In the eight months of 1920, for which details are now available, the orient, including Asia and Oceania in this term, took approximately $10,000,000 worth of this class of material for the United States against less than $3,000,000 in the same months of this immediately preceding year. Our Latin-American friends at the south took in the eight months ending with August of the current year, over $20,000,000 worth of pitch pine lumber alone, against $7,000,000 worth in the same months of last year, and this total was materially increased by the demand for certain other classes of lumber, and especially staves. Europe which relied largely upon Russia for her forest products and took nearly all of the $75,000,000 worth which she exported, now turns to the United States taking largely of our oak and pitch lumber timber, and the total of these two groups sent to Europe in the eight months ending with August of the current year was $13,000,000 in value against less than $2,000,000 in the same months of 1919.

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY NEEDED

The establishment in Washington of a great national University, one which would be big enough broad enough and sufficiently well financed to make it an institution in keeping with other notable institutions of learning located at the National Capital, is being discussed according to information reaching Washington, in many quarters other than educational. The drift of post-war adjustment, which has taken on such a decided impetus, it is being pointed out, should be directed toward educational as well as industrial, financial and other matters.

The possibilities for co-operation on the part of such an institution, one nonsectarian in character, with movements looking to the abolishment of war the Americanization of the people of the United States, the promotion of the study of the constitution and all which it stands for, in the opinion of those giving the subject careful study, be such as to justify many times over the support given it.

The number of institutions of a patriotic, literary and artistic character already established in Washington by authority of the Congress, on behalf of and for the people, such as the great amphitheater in Arlington cemetery, a fitting memorial to the sailor and soldier dead of all wars, America's Westminster Abbey, the great Smithsonian Institute, already inadequate from a physical standpoint to meet the demands upon it; the Congressional Library, the pride of all Americans; and other such institutions all emphasize the need for a national university which would supplement them.

At the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church, just held in Washington, resolution adopted included a declaration that ability to read and write the American language was not enough to Americanize immigrants but that they must be imbued with the principles and the ideals of the nation. Resolutions of this character are being adopted with singular unanimity by national organizations, religious, fraternal, industrial, and otherwise, all stressing by implication if not in words the need for some centralized, government conducted, agency which should act as an intellectual American clearing house for those sterling principles and ideals on which the government of the United States depends today for its future success.

NUMBER OF FARMS BY STATES

The Bureau of the Census has just issued, under the heading, Number of Farms by States and Counties, an interesting report dealing with the farm situation in the United States. The bureau says that for census purposes a "farm" is all the land which is directly farmed by one person, either by his labor alone or with the assistance of members of his household or hired employees. When a land owner has one or more tenants, renters, croppers, or managers, the land operated by each is considered a farm.

An impressive feature of this farm census is that in some states by comparisons with census figures of 1900 and 1910, respectively, marked decreases in the number of farms are shown included among the figures by State given those used herewith applying to the census of 1900, 1910 and 1920, in the order named, are the following:

SATURDAY "Y. W. NIGHT AT TEACHERS TRAINING SCHOOL"

Saturday was Y. W. night as it was the first Saturday in the month. A mock election was the feature of the evening cards with the Democratic and Republican nominees were hung up an Suffragettes made party speeches among the people who came to vote were women of all sorts and kinds, negro as well as white women with their children, and a few men as the votes were counted the voters rooted for parties. At the end the doubtful election was shown by a large interrogation mark wanging above the ballot box. The women were true typists and managed the election just as they would go to market, or shopping, but they did the job well in spite of apparent confusion. It was an excellent take off.

DR. J. B. TURNER CONDUCTS

Y. W. C. A. VESPER SERVICES

Dr. J. B. Turner conducted the Vesper services of the Y. W. C. A. at the Training School Sunday. From his text, that our daughters may be as cornerstones polished after the similitude of a palace, he developed three ideas in which womanhood should be like a cornerstone: beauty; endurance and support.

During the McLendon meeting services are held at 6:45.

President Wright accepted the gift graciously, and announced that the school appreciated the gift so much that arrangements had been made for a weekly supply of films to be paid for by the school. The gift was offered to the Board of Trustees and accepted some time ago. The announcement that the apparatus would be here at the opening of the fall term was made at commencement.

The story of Browning's great poem, "The Ring and the Book," was shown after the presentation. This is the third picture in the series.

NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND

By virtue of power vested in me by that deed of trust executed to me on the 2nd day of February, 1920, by Wyatt Darden and wife, Lizzie Darden, and duly recorded in the Register's office for Pitt County, in Book Q-13, at page 76, default having been made in the payment of the notes therein described, and the holder thereof having requested the trustee to sell, I shall on Monday, the 6th day of December, 1920, at twelve o'clock noon, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the Courthouse door in Greenville, the following described parcel of real estate, lying, being, and situated in Beaver Dam Township, in the County of Pitt, and State of North Carolina, to-wit:

Bounded by the lands of J. W. Smith, Ora Moye, the Patrick heirs land and others, and being lot No. 2 in the division of the lands of the late Amos Blount, and containing 9 3-4 acres, more or less.

This November 6, 1920.

SMALL FIRE IN COTTON

About midday Sunday two bales of cotton on the cotton platform near the Norfolk-Southern station were discovered on fire. An alarm was turned in and the fire was put out with little damage resulting.

FOURTEEN HUNDRED SHARES IN NEW B. & L. SERIES

The thirtieth series in the Home Building and Loan Association which started Saturday opened with about fourteen hundred shares. The books are not closed yet and shares will continue to come in for some days yet, probably swelling the number a few hundred more. Greenville folks certainly believe in their building and loan association. It is the best business in the community.

and stopped. God said, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," and stopped. God said, "Thou shalt not steal," and stopped. God said, "Thou shalt not bear false witness," and stopped. God said, "Thou shalt not covet," and stopped.

He says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain," and turns back and comments on it, adding, "For I will not hold him guiltless that taketh my name in vain."

You see he says more against cursing than he does against Sabbath desecration, stealing or killing. In fact, God says you are a lower character than a thief or a real red handed murderer.

Do you want proof? Well, look at God's manifest logic. He seems to say, if you break the Sabbath you can plead necessity. If you steal you might plead the gnawing of personal hunger or the heart harrowing cry of your family. If you kill a man you might plead self defense mistake, struck harder than you intended, or some semi-reasonable excuse might be urged. I can see how you can get out of anything but cursing. I can see how a man can be placed in such a position that he would kill and yet be exonerated by God and man, if he kills to protect his life or the life of another. I can see how a man could be driven to that extremity, by hunger, and the cry of his family that he would steal.

What do you think of a profanity using woman? I think she has lost all womanhood of a womanly woman, and her cursing is the last sigh of dying modesty, and yet she is as good as you old buck warts that indulge in cursing.

According to Webster's dictionary there is no difference in morals and manners between a gentleman and a lady, and God has but one standard of honesty and purity of speech in life for man and woman.

If your wife sucked cigarettes and squirted tobacco juice and got on the outside of rot-gut-booze and stunk like a cross between a buzzard-popecat and limberger cheese, and spit out her withering profanity, you would be going around here with a face as long as a jack-ass's ears saying you couldn't live with her; and you contemptible white-livered devil, she has to live with you.

You say, "Mack, I can't quit cursing." Listen: You intelligent, educated, cultured man, that was brought up in a Christian land Bible, in your house bugged at the breast of prayer, cradled to sleep to the motherly music of holy worship, fed from a table where heads were bowed and grace was said, sent to bed from an altar prayer and open Bible, sent to a Sunday school where reverence and worship were taught as a duty and distilled from lips of prayer like dew, and unbreathed as a holy atmosphere, and yet you little meddler, infinitesimal shrimp, you can't cut it out, you say? I get so awful mad it helps me to express my self in a satisfactory manner. Well, you are always very careful who you express your self to; bullies always treat bullies nice.

New, why is it that you could be mad enough to cuss some people, and you couldn't be made mad enough to cuss others? Because you know there is some people, if you cursed they would knock twelve different kinds of hell out of you. Men if you never become Christians, for God's sake have enough self-respect and common decency to cut out cursing.

You can't go anywhere any more, in car, depot, store, office, street but that you will find some friend with his foul mouthed oaths poisoning God's pure air.

Some time ago I was on the B. & O. train going through the state of Pennsylvania and I stepped back in the smoker and the air was saturated with the odors of nicotine, and reeking with the perfumes of liquor, mingled with oaths and co-mingled with obscenity. I stood there and looked on at that quagmire of filth and cess-pool of iniquity and thought my God, won't hell be an awful place when this bunch of reprobates get there.

Just think, at last when a death wagon backs up to your door, and a funeral procession ramps down the road to the cemetery and the dirt falls with that dull remorseful thud on the on the box as the preacher says, "dust to dust," and "ashes to ashes," and your wife and children turn away from your grave and go home and look at your picture, and all they will remember is your curses and dams, and blasphemy. My God what an awful legacy to bequeath them.
