The Methodist Sunday School is entering upon a new piece of work tomorrow; namely the beginning of a class for men. The Sunday School already boasts of one of the best classes in town. Taught by Prof. R. H. Wright of the East Carolina Training School. However it is very clear that another class is needed, and so Sunday will see the inauguration of the Young Men's Bible Class. This is designed primarily for young men above the High School age. The class will be in charge of Mr. J. B. James, and this fact alone insures its success. The class will have a room for its work. There is considerable crowding in the Sunday School at present, but this congestion is being relieved by the erection of tent on the vacant lot space in the rear of the church. These tents are built after the manner of the permanent camps in the army. They are 16x16, have an excellent floor, and have a frame which is six feet high. They are boarded up three feet from the ground, and are electric lighted, and heated with the same sort of stove that the United States army uses. The tents make very attractive teaching quarters and the young boys of the school are competing with each other for the privilege of having the use of one of these tents.

The young men of the town are especially invited to be present tomorrow at the initial session of the class.

Last Sunday the Sunday School had an attendance of 358, which is about what has been for the past month. The collection amounted to $27.50. 400 are looked for at the assembly tomorrow.

At The Tent

"Cyclone Mack" will preach at 3:00 and 7:30 P. M. His subject for the afternoon will be the "Sail On", and at night "The Consequences of Sin". There will be no services Monday afternoon he will preach to the colored people.

NEW JERSEY RUNS AHEAD IN STUDENT MIGRATION TODAY

Close Study of Migration Shows That Large Percentage of Men Educated in Other States

New York, Nov. 13.—A study of student migration shows that New Jersey leads all other states in the percentage of its college students sent to other states to be educated. New Hampshire leads all other in the percentage of students rec'd from other states for education and New York ranks first in the total number of undergraduates sent outside the state for college instruction.

This information is furnished by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education who has completed a survey for that organization of student movements throughout the United States. The survey does not include the larger state universities, but simply the institutions ranked as accredited colleges by the Association of American Universities, the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The Association of Southern States and Universities of the Southern states and Universities of California.

The survey revealed, Dr. Kelly said, that Ohio and Pennsylvania are in the lead with the greatest number of college there being seventeen in each state while there are 12 states which have no accredited college. These are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming. These 12 furnish 2,246 college students to the institutions of other states, in the list surveyed.

"Conversely, it is interesting to note said Dr. Kelly, that California comes the nearest of any state to taking care of her own students. Only 6.6 percent of California's students attend college outside of the state.

And other facts revealed by the survey are:

Ohio leads in the total number of college students enrolled.

The District of Columbia has the highest average enrolled per college, which is 2,629.

Massachusetts leads in the total number of students drawn from outside of the state, the number being 4,105.

Ohio leads in the total number of students in and outside the state.

There is a striking like of migration the survey showed, of students of southern states to states of the north, outside of a limited amount of migration from one southern state and another, southern students migration is almost nil.

The North Carolina Conference will meet in Rocky Mount the coming week.

Cyclone McLendon Lays Bare His Life Before Conversion In Greatest Services of Big Revival

Mr. McLendon's sermon was in part as follows: Psalms 66:16. Come and hear all ye that fear the Lord...

I hadn't been to a church or darkened the door of any means of grace in six years except once. I was in Wadesboro, N. C. on one occasion and my wife, who was from good Presbyterian stock, persuaded me to go to a little Presbyterian church one night and I went to sleep on the Pastor much to her great humiliation and to my condemnation. I had gone down the sin line until my brain was clouded by dissipation. A mere creature of a man a moral derelict on the mat ready to take the count nothing more than a dangerous signal, hung up to warn the coming generations. Home a hell mother's heart broken, fathers hopes blighted I think that one of the first things that made me think Brown who manages my shop, passed by my fathers home, and my mother called him and asked him how I was getting along. I hadn't been home for some time and Brown told her that I was going at the same gait and he said she looked at him and the tears rained down her face and she sobbed, and said, Baxter, I believe is gone, we have held on to God for him for years and it seems now that he has passed redemption. She says there is going to begin a revival meeting in Bennettsville in a few days, and if that doesn't reach him he is gone. Brown came on to the shop and told me the conversation he had with my mother how she went over my last condition. I told him I had troubles of my own and never to mention to me anything that my people said about me. But when I thought of my old broken hearted mother with her tear stained face weeping over my dissipated life, I'll tell you it hung like a black cloud in the sky of my happiness and what little joy I had was turned into worm wood.

I wasn't interested in the coming revival I cared nothing about the preacher nor promoter. It never entered my head to have anything to do with it. But the day arrived when they began to erect the old tent in about 75 yards of my place of business. I can see it going up around the poles now. That night they had their first service I was not interested. I had no idea of going about the place. I closed my shop about eight o'clock, and none of the local talent was on hand for the game. I went over to the hotel to see if there were any traveling men that I could corral and wring it, but they were conspicuous by their absence. This was the first night in a long time that the devotees of the spot wasn't on the job. I waited a while, but they didn't show up I said well that meeting is the biggest thing in town and I'll go over and round them up. I went over to the tent and took a seat away back in the rear I don't think I heard a word the preacher said. I was so busy taking inventory of the congregation to see if there was enough of my kind to have a game after the services. After the sermon they made the altar call and Bud Robinson the cow-boy preacher who didn't know a letter in the book when he was converted at 19 years old, stepped off the rostrum and pushed his way through the crowd, walked over benches until he reached me he stood there and gazed at me and I stared at him. He had the gentlest kindest sweetest countenance that was ever placed on a human being. His face resembled the painting of the Christ by Dore.

I have often wished that I could reproduce his tender tone and loving look when he said young man a man that looks like you and has the appearance that you have the devil is doing dirt with him in this country. He turned and walked back to the rostrum without saying a word to another soul. Some girl standing near me said, Baxter, did he know you? No he never saw me before. Well, that is strange that he pushed his way through this crowd and came back here and spoke to you and you only. Yes, that's so. The benediction was pronounced, the service was over. I forgot about my anticipated poker game and opened up in high gear for home. I went there about as seldom as I went anywhere. I retired for the night, but not to sleep the pillow was hard, the bed was uncomfortable the cover was too short. I rolled and tumbled was nervous and restless and all I could think about and all I could see and hear was "Young man, a man that looks like you and has the appearance that you have the devil is doing dirt with him in this country." I would close my eyes and his face would stand out there before me would try to see something of him and his voice would ring through my ears. "Young man, a man that looks like you and has the appearance that you have the devil is doing dirt with him in this country." I was nervous and restless couldn't sleep and I would say to myself what is the matter with me, down in my heart I knew. I said if God will forgive me for going to that meeting I'll never go to another. About one o'clock I got up and went to the closet and took a good strong brace out of a bottle of Three Feathers but it didn't touch the spot. I lay down and all I could see was that man's face and all I could hear was Young man, a man that looks like you, and has the appearance that you have dirt with here in this country." My God how man conscience talked to me that long lonely night. The things that I had done and was doing stood out before me like a panorama. That monster that was in my breast. The foot prints of diety that was rolling over my soul. The coldest thing that was ever said to Dives in the Blackpit and charred wall of the graveyard of the damned was "Sin remember."

That God given faculty of memory was resurrected sins of commission sin of commission, secret sins, public sins, sins I had forgotten a broken hearted mother a father with his hopes blighted, a home that was a hell all marched by me in one hideous black procession. Oh the inventory God helped me to take of myself that night a wasted talent prostituted and everything noble grand and beautiful assassinated. I roled and groaned, sighed and rawned and cried, Oh God, right day never come Rena would say, Baxter, what's the matter with you that you are so restless? I would say nothing, and then I would see Bud's face, and hear his words ringing through my head Young man, a man that looks like you and has the appearance that you have the devil is doing dirt with him in this country.

"Early the next morning I arose and went to my shop to join a man with whom I took a drink every morning. When the boys came in I began swearing at them cursing them and acted as a man crazy and damned everything in sight. Everyone wondered what had come over me. On every way I turned the preacher's face was before me and his words kept ringing in my ears. The night before I had heard them announce a song service for 7:30 that morning and I could not keep my eyes off the clock. I had sworn that I would not darken the doors of a church or religious gathering of any kind again and I swore that I would not go back to the tent. I was restless and finally I said I am going to see what those guys are doing. I tried to speak off hand for I did not want them to suspect what had come over me. Brown said, look out Mack or you will get religion but I said nothing doing.

I stood out side of the tent at the back and every one looked at me in surprise and amazement and no matter which way I turned it seemed the preacher's eyes would cut down in me. The preacher looking right at me said here is a hell father and mother broken hearted wife neglected you are making vagabonds of mother's sons and running women's husbands and I said to myself who has been talking about me to the preachers? He stopped and then said if there is a poor broken hearted fellow here come and kneel at the altar and I forgot every thing and felt like a sack of sand at his feet. It seemed the news spread over the town in fifteen minutes. The boys in my shop said I was drunk and ought to be arrested for disturbing the meeting. I rushed straight home and my wife said have you come home to dinner and I said yes and she seemed glad that I had come home I told her nothing about the mourner's bench. I had in my pocket a pair of dice prepared for the business and I took them out when no one was looking threw them out of the window into the weeds and that was the first step. Dinner was announced and while we were eating some one came to the door and whispered something to my wife and she came back into the room with tears in her eyes and with an understanding said come home soon tonight and I will go with you. But I had said nothing about what had happened. I came home early that night and after supper Rena took my arm and walked with me to the tent and took me on to the front seat and people full of curiosity stopped and stared.

The preacher took his text and standing right in front of me preached at me for an hour and when the altar call was made I went right up. I had always carried a gun from boyhood and that night it seemed that Colt weighed 100 pounds. Conscience said, seeking God carrying a gun and with murder in your heart. When I got home I laid it out on the bureau and swore to never carry a gun again religion or no religion. And the next morning at the service when the call was made I was right on the job and I want to say right now if may doubt that there is a personal devil let him dispel that doubt I was conscious of something standing by me saying Mack, you are the biggest fool in South Carolina. What do you mean by coming to the altar? You make your money gambling and have developed into one of the best professionals in the country. I had a library of poker books. I had gambled since a boy and the lust was strong in me and the devil kept saying what are you going to do for a living? You are fixing to bill your self along the line. For three days the struggle kept up and I wrestled with the money question and at the devils prompting argue with the preachers and confess I sometimes stumped them.

At the end of the third day I elined my fist and said God. I am done with gambling and I meant it. I asked my wife if she was willing to get out of the luxuries of life and plain cornbread and white water. She said she had been ashamed to walk down the street and meet other women and have them say she was wearing clothes her husband had won off their husbands.

God only brought up one thing at a time. I loved a chicken fight and could wait them all night long, and again came a struggle but I said good bye chickens. The next I had to give up was my bull dogs. I had the best dogs in the country. I argued the question again and finally gave them up. Then God said, Mack what are you going to do about your associates. They were of the lowest types, gamblers, drunkards. I was a real friend to my friends and would fight for them if the occasion demanded. I am intense in anything and everlasting in every thing and this was the hardest thing I was called on to do and the decision was made and I died to my friends.

I thought I had met all the conditions and done all that was required of me but God said, will you preach? Standing on a chair high above everything else, Mr. McLendon called upon the congregation to look at a man whom God had called to preach as much as Paul was called to preach. He knew that God had called him to preach and was glad that he knew it. The first call came at the age of fourteen and the speaker narrated the wonderful story of that first call, of the mighty struggle, his praying to God to take the call away, the restless nights and the days when he could not eat. He was fighting God against the call and in the end he told his father who said he would work his fingers to the bone to educate him if he would preach but after a giant struggle Mack ran away from the call. He prayed and implored but God said I have called you. He went North West and East and everywhere he went God followed him. On (Continued on Page 4)

YALE TO CONTEST PRINCETON ELEVEN FOR 1920 HONORS

Two Colleges to Clash On Gridiron At Princeton For First Time In Four Years

STRUGGLE WILL PROBABLY BE MOST DETERMINED IN HISTORY OF BOTH CLUBS

Special Trains Will Be Run From Many Districts to Accommodate Football Fans

Princeton, N. J. Nov. 13.—The Yale football team will reenter the Palmer Memorial Stadium here tomorrow afternoon, for the first time in four years for a game with the Princeton eleven. Since that last contest in the Tigers gridiron amphitheatre back in 1916, the world war and the seasonal shift to New Haven have prevented the bi-annual battle which is the closing class of the Princeton football schedule.

As a result of this annual break in the series between the two famous football rivals the struggle tomorrow has taken on greatly increased interest and Tigertown is aflame with color and excitement on the eve of the game which means the success or failure of the gridiron season from Princeton football standpoint. The village hotels are filled beyond all normal capacity while the University dormitories are quarantining many alumni who would hesitate to state how many years have elapsed since they were graduated.

The portion of the forty odd spectators who will witness the game, however will come to the scene of the battle during the forenoon hours tomorrow. Special trains are scheduled to deposit thousands of football followers and adherents of the two universities between the hour of 10 a. m. and one p. m. and when the rival squads of players run out on the turf shortly before two P. M. it is expected that every available seat and foot of standing room in the huge stadium will be occupied with the throng of spectators which should exceed any previous attendance at the game here. Tickets are not to be had at any price and the speculator would reap a golden harvest if it were possible to secure any number of seats regardless of their location.

It is doubtful if greater interest ever marked the annual meeting of the teams of Yale and Princeton. The Tiger victory over the Elis at New Haven last season and the excellent showing against Harvard last Saturday has primed the Nassau hosts for triumph over the Blue. Two consecutive victories by Princeton over Yale are few and far between for since 1873 the Orange and Black was won but 11 games of the 43 played against their New Haven opponents. Nine games have resulted in tie contests and the remaining 23 have been won by Yale. The complete records of the series follows.

FRIDAY EVENING NOVEMBER 19

The popular advertisement now is the one that tells of reduced prices.

The cold wave pounded down on us last night and the high wind made folks shiver.

A man can work his way better than he can talk his way, but it takes more grit to do it.

Tomorrow morning will show to what extent "Cyclone Mack's" campaign has awakened loyalty among the local church members.

Don't try to pick the mote out of the other fellows eye while the same in in your own eye. Get yourself right first then you can help your neighbor get right.

The Republicans spent nearly three and a half million dollars to elect Senator Harding to the Presidency. And of course they expect to get it back with big interest. Think of thousands spent to elect him, being more than ten times as large as his salary for a term of four years will be.

Making Greenville what it ought to be should be the object to which every citizen should give his aid. It should be made a town worth while in every respect, and right living is the first step in that direction. With this the highest incentive, there will be no question about the prosperity of legitimate enterprises and the advancement of every interest to make people happier.

NEW SANITARY MARKET

OPENS NEXT TUESDAY

Greenville is soon to have a market that is worthy the name from a sanitary viewpoint, on Dickerson Ave. the Greenville Market Co., Mr. C. S. Graves manager, are equipping such a plant and it will be ready to begin business next Tuesday, as will be seen by announcement elsewhere. This market is being equipped with modern refrigeration appliances and everything to be sold there will be handled in the most sanitary method. The company is leaving nothing undone to make it ideal.

AMERICANS READY PATRONS TO BARS AT HAVANA, CUBA

About Only Persons Seen On Streets Over Loaded Happen to Represent Uncle Sam

Havana, Nov. 13.—About the only persons seen on the streets of Havana who show symptoms of over indulgence in intoxicants are Americans. This does not mean however that all the Americans who come here drink to excess.

Beer and light wines are so much a part of the Latin life that it has no intoxicating effect. They drink moderately. But some visitors from the dry land seem to drink constantly once they find a bar.

The Americans, however, the most disagreeable sickening picture is the hobo from home a hopeless, wrecked figure that infest hotel lobbies. His panhandling is brazen. They pick out people speaking their own language and without shame boldly announces that they want money for drinks. They long ago discarded the appeal for help to get to other shirt from the laundry.

Most of these unfortunates did not follow the flag; they followed the whiskey trail, generally as stowaways or in a ship crews they deserted, once within swimming distance of the docks. But for passport regulations, Havana police authorities say there would be hundreds here from the states with a thirst no visible means of support.

CYCLONE MACK IN STIRRING SERMON ABOUT REPENTANCE

Evangelist for First Time During Meeting Extends Invitation At

Close of Sermon

At the close of a powerful sermon on "Repentance", in which he told his hearers there was no other way they could come to God and be saved unless they repent. "Cyclone Mack" gave the first invitation of his campaign here. He has laid well the foundation in the series of strong sermons against sin which he has delivered up to this time, and the result of this sowing was shown in the scores who eagerly pressed forward under this first invitation to accept Christ and live for Him.

Numbers of church members also went forward under the invitation to make confession that they had not been right and declared a reconsecration to God. It was an inspiring scene to see so many in this service reach the decision to forsake sin and give themselves to Christ.

Under the sudden change in the weather and high wind last night the tent was not so comfortable, but Mack stated he would see to it that enough stoves were put in today, and anything else needed done to make the tent amply warm. So no one need stay away from the services through fear of the cold.

C. ARTHUR. 1

Cyclone Mack On Conversion

 the train, in the gambling den, in hotels in quagmires and filth. God would continue calling. He told of his fight after a shooting scrape in Bennettsville, of his promise to God of the man got well to preach and his narrow escape from hideous accidents and then back again to the last night of the meeting when he was converted. It was the last call and the devil knew he didn't get him that night he never would. And the battle waged on and on, wife, father and mother implored him to give up and the devil begged him to hang on. At the end he still had not given up and started to walk down the aisle when a little woman met him and said, go back give up and God will make it all right.

I went back said boys I am done and a mighty shout went up to heaven from that tent. People screamed and applauded, the like as such has never been seen there.

He went home to an 18 months old babe he had never held in his arms.
 He took him from his crib and said,
 God bless you. He marveled at creation. He was a new man, reborn and regenerated. Revolutionized. One day he had been carryin' a gun, the next day a Bible. One day he was markin' cards, and the next scripture. One day he was spitting out oaths and the next telling of the wonderful love of God. All that I am I owe to Christ, the speaker said. He re-commended the Christ who had made him a new to the people. He was a new man as much as a man can be in this world and since that memorable night, 14 years ago, has been preaching the love of God
 with all his might to all who will hear.
