Discovered in Seat Alone and Thinly Clad Soon After Train Pulled Out of Elizabeth City

Washington, N. C., Jan. 2.—A three weeks old baby girl was left on the Norfolk-Southern midnight passenger train last Friday night from Norfolk to Raleigh. The baby was discovered after the train had pulled out of Elizabeth City. She was in a seat all alone and thinly clad. Her outside wrap was an Indian blanket. The conductor of the train wired ahead here for some one to meet the train and take charge of the child.

Friday, according to the Norfolk Southern railroad officials, the babe in the arms of a woman, was seen around the station in Norfolk most of the day and when the night train was ready to leave for Raleigh the woman deserted her baby at Elizabeth City. When the maid in the Norfolk station was informed that the baby was wrapped in an Indian blanket she remembered the woman.

As yet no tidings of the mother have been secured. Every effort is being made by the railroad to find her.

The stranger is a bright and healthy looking little miss. Quite a number have visited the hospital to see her and it is said two persons have consented to adopt her.

NEW YEAR BRINGS GREAT CHANCE FOR EARLY RECOVERY

Comptroller of Currency Predicts Greater Prosperity For the American People

(By International News.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—The dawn of the New Year brought the United States a splendid opportunity for complete recovery and business and financial prosperity, was declared today by D. R. Crissinger, comptroller of currency.

"Business and financial conditions 1922," Mr. Crissinger said. "Our business outlook is greatly brightened and we are clearly past the most difficult part of the period of deflation. In fact, current reports indicate business is on an upturn with worst features of depression left behind.

DEATH OF PENROSE LEAVES BIG GAP IN REPUBLICAN RANKS

While Body of Senator Rests at Home Awaiting Burial Great Scramble Begins For His Job

(By International News.)

Washington, Jan. 2.—The death of Senator Penrose leaves a big gap in the Republican "old guard" leadership which had already begun today to bring about an upheaval in national and state politics of the party in which he was such a conspicuous figure for so many years.

While the body of the noted leader rests at his home in Philadelphia, a great scramble has started for the important Republican committee assignment made vacant by his death.

VISCOUNT GREY BELIEVES LEAGUE OF NATIONS CAN SOLVE WORLD PROBLEMS

British Statesman Believes China Potential Cause of War While It Remains Unsettled

(By International News)

London.—That the Washington conference is a beginning, but a beginning which leaves many problems, the most notable of which is China, still to be solved, is the belief of Viscount Grey, former minister of foreign affairs and ambassador to Washington.

This statesman, who, more than any other, was responsible for Britain's entry into the war in aid of Belgium and France, gives full praise to the work at Washington, yet believes that greater world problems than have been touched there can only be solved through or with the help of the league of nations.

It is within the range of possibility that the results of the Washington deliberations may be administered, on the British side, by Grey at some future time.

"The Washington conference is a beginning so good that it is bound to have further consequences," the former foreign minister declares. "The quadruple agreement between the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan is, in my opinion, a momentous and favorable departure.

Although this agreement relates only to the island possessions of the Pacific it must have an effect in spirit which will go far beyond the agreement itself.

The real difficulty in the far east is not, however, the question of the islands, but of China, and that question has not been solved at Washington.

Certain general principles have been agreed to, but the difficulty is in application of those principles to China. If China were a settled country, managing its own affairs satisfactorily, keeping its own house in order, the application of general principles would be easy enough.

The Chinese are a great race and a proud race. They dislike the interference of the foreigner, but as long as they cannot put and keep their own house in order they will be dependent in one way and another upon foreign assistance and their condition will be such as to invite foreign interference.

While China remains in a state of chaos countries which have interests in China may inevitably be drawn into interference which may produce great difficulties among themselves, besides being an injury to China.

There is only one line of safety in the far east at the present moment. The powers which have interests in China must be so united in consultation that they will trust each other and act together, none of them at

LLOYD-GEORGE IS ORGANIZING HIS OWN PARTY TO WIN AT THE COMING ELECTION IN BRITAIN

Collapse of Coalition Will Not Necessarily Mean Downfall of Empire's Astute Premier

London, Jan. 2.—The political future of the prime minister is the most talked of subject throughout Great Britain. When he appeals to the country for a new lease of power within the next few months, will he be able to retain his position?

The Coalition government is quickly breaking up. It is hated by Liberals and Tories, while Labor will have nothing to do with it. It is so unpopular that no candidate at an election dare brand himself as a Coalitionist.

Neither the Irish settlement nor the results of the Washington Conference have increased the standing of the government in the slightest degree.

Therefore, the Premier, without a party or organization of his own, finds himself apparently tied to a mass of unpopularity which must break into its component parts—thus ceasing to exist—and be either ingested as a whole, or snowed under in the coming fight. tempting to exploit the Chinese situation to their own separate advantage or to the disadvantage of China. We must not forget in our satisfaction over the Washington conference that it does not cover the whole ground of the world's affairs. Over a great part of the ground we have to look to the league of nations. I do not look upon the Washington conference as anything but an endorsement to the league of nations. I believe that in spirit the United States desires as strongly the objects aimed at by the league as the country most devoted to it.

ROUSE BROTHERS BUY JOB OFFICE IN GREENVILLE

G. A. Rouse of Farmville and Troy Rouse Take Over Plant Formerly Greenville Pub. Co.

A business transaction that stands out prominently among the New Year changes is the purchase of the job printing plant of the Greenville Publishing company by G. A. Rouse, publisher of the Farmville Enterprise and his brother, Troy W. Rouse, who has been employed by the local concern for many months. The job plant has been operated by Mrs. Ollie Clark the past several months and was the property of J. L. Mayo of Washington, former owner and publisher of the Greenville News.

Both members of the new concern are well known to Greenville and Pitt county people, having been connected with the printing business in various capacities for many years. G. A. Rouse was a member of The Reflector force in 1910, later going to Farmville where he became manager of the Rouse Printery which publishes the Enterprise. Mr. Troy Rouse has been engaged in the printing business in Greenville several years, having been connected with the Greenville Publishing company during the ownership of Mr. Mayo and also after taken over by Mrs. Clark.

The new concern will hereafter be known as the Rouse Printery and will cater to the job printing business in Greenville and surrounding territory. The equipment is up-to-date and modern in every way and capable of competing with concerns in much larger cities.

Mr. G. A. Rouse will still retain business interests in Farmville, but will spend considerable time in Greenville until the new enterprise is firmly established.

Paris.—Three million francs' worth of radium, part of which is the gift of America to Madame Curie is at the mercy of any enterprising thief who considers the precious element worth the taking. Editorials in the Paris press suggest that greater precautions should be taken to safeguard the treasure, which has been gotten together with much difficulty.

SEVERAL CHANGES TAKE PLACE AMONG GREENVILLE FIRMS

Number of Changes in Business Circles Noted With Beginning of New Year

The New Year finds quite a number of changes in business circles of the city this year, but no more than in past years. The majority of these changes are among persons holding clerical or office positions, but there are also a few merchants vacating old quarters for new and some going out of business entirely.

The last two or three years have seen only a few changes among the business houses, but conditions are different this time, and business men and clerks are endeavoring to firmly entrench themselves to take advantage of whatever the new year has to offer.

C. L. Perkins, who has been connected with the John Flanagan Huggy Company a number of years, has purchased half interest in the Forbes & Barr Filling Station, on Dickinson avenue and assumed management.

Mr. Harry Wood, of Bethel, has been added to the clerical force of the John Flanagan Huggy Company. Mr. Arthur Briley has accepted a position in the stock rooms of the same concern.

P. G. Little has resigned his position with Quinn-Miller to go in the grocery business in the building formerly occupied by E. H. Parkerson. Mr. Parkerson is moving to the Cobb-Edwards building on Dickinson avenue.

Mrs. Josephine Phillips has accepted a position with the Greenville Storage Battery Company.

Sam T. White Piano Company will move into new quarters in the next few days. The building will be occupied by John L. Horne Co., clothiers at the present located on Dickinson avenue.

S. T. Hicks has moved out of the building formerly occupied on Fourth street. This building is being remodelled for D. Pender Grocery Company.

A store on the Cobb-Edwards block on Dickinson avenue has been rented by several business men for the purpose of opening an up-to-date barber shop.

D. W. Hardee, merchant who operated a store on Evans street, has retired from business.

SAYS COMMERCE FACES BRIGHTEST YEAR IN HISTORY

Government Experts Predict Sharp Upturn in Business and Financial Circles of the U. S.

Washington, Jan. 2.—American commerce, which has been staggering under the greatest annual loss in history faces the New Year with bright prospects of complete recovery world trade events in 1921 totalled seven billion dollars in round figures, the lowest volume for the country since before the war.

Reported losses at the present total six billion, five hundred thousand dollars over 1920. The downward plunge halted last fall and December is destined to show a sharp upturn, according to government officials.

Both imports and exports suffered to no little extent. Export trade showed a loss in volume in every country in the world, excepting Mexico and Germany. Imports from Greece increased considerably, due largely to heavy leaf tobacco buying. The greatest monetary was incurred in Cuban imports.

BRITISH TENDENCY TOWARD CAPITAL.

A strong tendency toward large capital organization is evident in the industrial and financial life of Great Britain, according to the National Bank of Commerce in New York. War time expansion and post war foreign competition, it declares, have led to consolidation and larger resources at the expense of the smaller individual enterprises.

"The impetus toward consolidation of interests and resources which produced in America the United States Steel Corporation, the Standard Oil Company and the Ford organization has in recent years been felt with particular force in British industry," the bank says in the December issue of its magazine, Commerce Monthly. "The desire for expansion of enterprises during and after the war and the need for liquid capital to maintain expanded enterprise in the face of tightening conditions were alike conducive to enlarging the capital of commercial and industrial companies. Fear of foreign competition emphasized the desirability of eliminating by amalgamation or agreement major competition at home and of securing the resulting economies in production. Either course tended to produce large organizations with extensive capital resources at the expense of the smaller individual enterprises which have played so large a part in the industrial life of Great Britain.

"Besides new organizations which sought capital during 1919 and 1920, numerous long established companies increased their capital either for the purpose of expanding business, extending plant or purchasing allied concerns.

"Besides new organizations which sought capital during 1919 and 1920, numerous long established companies increased their capital either for the purpose of expanding business, extending plant or purchasing concerns.

"New issues of capital for commercial and industrial purposes in Great Britain in 1920, exclusive of conversation loans, bonus shares, and shares issued to vendors, amounted to about three times prewar issues for the same purposes, as compared with twice the prewar amount in 1919. In the first nine months of 1921, however, the general business depression was clearly reflected in a marked decrease of new capital issues. The largest relative expansion occurred in the iron, steel, coal and related industries, miscellaneous commercial and industrial enterprises, banks, motor traction, and breweries.

"A second characteristic of the period is the number of amalgamations which took place. This was in many instances but the continuation of a movement which had been going on even prior to the war, notably in the iron, steel and coal, and the textile industries.

"In contrast with the elaborate anti-trust laws of the United States, the common law is practically the only check upon combinations in Britain. It holds null and void agreement in restraint of trade, but it has been broadly construed and considerable weight is given to freedom of contract, so that combination is not prohibited. Existing combinations range all the way from associations somewhat resembling the German cartel, in which each firm retains its identity and its independence in all save certain specific matters controlled by the association, to complete amalgamation.

"Recent tendencies appear, however, under the pressure of external competition, to be definitely away from this type of more or less temporary co-operative organization and in the direction of permanent control through amalgamation or through share ownership in subsidiary companies. Many of the largest capital issues in 1920 were for this purpose. Corporations or holding companies of this kind do not require for their success the inclusion of practically an entire industry and they make possible economies of production as well as regulation of output and selling price. Their effect upon price has a very definite relationship to the extent of their dominance in the field of industry concerned, but through the advantages of large scale organization they can exist on a competitive basis while a monopolistic position is being attained.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT.

The third year has passed since the armistice was signed, and the world is yet far from restored to normal working conditions, not to speak of recovery from the losses sustained in the conflict. In Europe much work has been done for the re-building or restoration of properties that were destroyed or that suffered deterioration, and progress has been made in the reorganization of production.

The railroads are in much better condition than in 1919, the coal mines have been in part restored and industry generally, so far as physical facilities are concerned, is now able to operate in a fairly efficient manner. Moreover, social conditions are in some respects notably improved. The revolutionary spirit has subsided, the people appear to be willing to work. The crops in Europe and of Russia were good in 1921, the agricultural class is doing well, and in most of the countries on the continent that class is very powerful in the governments and exercises a conservative influence.

AN OPPORTUNITY

If there is any farmer in North Carolina who has got security, can borrow money at six percent it is his duty. The war finance corporation has the money and all the banks have to do is to furnish good security. If every farmer can borrow six percent money, pay his debts and run his farm this year by paying for his supplies, the wheels of industry will turn profitably to all.

NEW YORK CELEBRATED REGARDLESS OF BOOZE?

New York, Jan. 2.—Thirsty New Yorkers and prohibition agents matched wits on New Year's eve.

The agents at a long conference today at headquarters laid their plan for making good the adage that "there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip."

Then promptly at 7 o'clock they started out. All over the city they spread, but the central attack was aimed at the "Great White Way," where for years back New Yorkers have clustered a drink the New Year in. The elite of the attacking army wore evening clothes.

Mystery Ship Seized.

Ocracoke, N. C., Jan. 2.—The Messenger of Peace, three-masted British schooner, which was seized off the North Carolina coast by a coast guard cutter, with 1,000 cases of whiskey, is the vessel which was known as the "mystery ship" which came into Ocracoke inlet last August and went aground on a shoal jut inside the inlet. The ship was then in command of Captain A. Coleman, of Jacksonville Fla., who had a crew of nine West Indian negroes. A search of the vessel was made at that time but no liquor was found. Captain Coleman explained he came into the inlet to make a landing at Ocracoke to replenish his supply of drinking water.

The Messenger of Peace is a very old vessel and coast guardsmen said she was barely seaworthy.

DESTRUCTIVE RAVAGES OF INSECTS

The extent to which the cotton boll weevil limits the yield of lint per acre, its destructive influence must be reckoned as an important factor of expense in the production of cotton. This fact does not so far appear to have entered as an important element of the cost of growing cotton by the general cotton trade. The cotton buying world seems to have concluded that no matter how much more extensive the cotton acreage or how much greater the cost of production, that if normal crops are grown, a fixed basis of ten cents per pound for middling lint cotton is enough for the growers to receive. Conditions, involving the extra hazards of weather during the crop growing and harvesting periods; the extra work of plowing under the stalks or burning them in the fall; the extra labor of picking up the cotton squares; the purchase and use of poison and machinery, are all disregarded by the cotton in the cost of production as though these new items of expense did not exist.

In every large cotton growing State after being fully invaded by the boll weevil, the average yield of lint per acre has been reduced practically 50 percent of the acreage in cotton has been so reduced as to largely cut down the production during years prior to such invasion. Texas was the first cotton State invaded by the boll weevil. In 1895 Texas planted 6,854,021 acres and harvested 3,140,392 bales. As the destructive ravages of the boll weevil in that State advanced the cotton acreage was steadily increasing the production to any material extent, but on the contrary the aggregate yield of cotton lessened, except a few favorable seasons of dry weather.

In 1893 Texas had increased her cotton acreage to 12,597,000 acres, an increase of 5,739,329 acres over the acreage planted in 1894 before the boll weevil infestation. The only way Texas has been able to maintain her leadership in cotton production and keep up her average yields around 3,000,000 bales annually, has been to practically double her cotton acreage while backed by climatic conditions which have usually been unfavorable to the propagation and development of the weevils. A large land area of Texas in the Pan Handle has always been free of the weevils.

The same conditions hold true of Louisiana, Mississippi, Florida, Alabama and Georgia, which have now been fully invaded, and will be true of South and North Carolina. The following table, taken from the United States census bureau reports show the acreage and production of cotton prior to boll weevil invasion and the acreage and production in such States since invasion.

It will be noted from the above statistics that except in the case of Louisiana, which has not produced an average exceeding 30 to 40 percent of pre-weevil invasion, the other States are being held down to an average of practically 50 percent in production. In Texas, as stated before, production is maintained by largely increasing the acreage planted prior to the boll weevil. There has been a very great reduction in cotton acreage in the States east of the Mississippi, notwithstanding the heavy ravages of the weevil, lessening the total yield of cotton. The farmers have steadfastly planted cotton as usual up to 1921 in defiance of weevil activities, but it is not now believed they will continue to do so.

Just think how much happiness it would bring if everybody could start the new year with a new Buick.

Look over the list of Buick owners in this community; you will find among them the most representative people of our city. Next to the pride that we feel in having the best automobile buy in the world, is the pride we feel in the type of people who are driving Buick Automobiles in our territory.

LONDON SHOCKED BY THOUGHT OF SKYSCRAPERS
London.—Will London eventually come around to the idea of the skyscraper? An increasing number of British architects are beginning to think so. The other day the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street, as the Bank of England is popularly known, received the shock of her life when Professor A. E. Richardson, of the University of London proposed tearing down the old structure and erecting a twenty-three-story tower building.

WARREN BROS.

Professor Richardson drew a sketch of his proposed building, with architectural ornaments which give the appearance of church steeples. This sketch the author declared, was more to illustrate a principle than actual building.

"There are certain places in the city and in other parts of London," he said, "where the height of buildings could be raised without damage to the general aspect."

"Such a case is the Bank of England. I have prepared this sketch partly to arouse criticism and discussion and partly to call attention to the fact that it should be possible to build, from within the bank, a building which would act as a foil to St. Paul's."

Somebody thought of asking the opinion of the Lord Mayor on the proposed skyscraper, especially as his Mansion House is directly opposite the site. He laughingly regarded the entire plan as a joke.

Among the English architect some favorable comment was elicited. One well-known architect came out publicly in favor of the new idea.

Mr. J. R. Turnage of Ayden was in Greenville this afternoon.

JACK HOLT'S DIVING FEAT IN "THE CALL OF THE NORTH"
Diving 25 or more feet into icy water at Mammoth, Cal., fully dressed in a heavy buckskin suit, was one of the feats accomplished by Jack Holt in his first Paramount star picture, "The Call of the North," which will be the feature at White's theatre Tuesday.

The scene shows a rescue wherein Holt brings Francis McDonald safely ashore, the latter having taken a backward dive from the side of the rocky cliff, a distance of fifteen feet.

The water was extremely cold. As soon as the scene was made the actors hastened to the fire kindled for the purpose of drying them out. But the inexperienced "fireman" built his fire on top of the cliff where the wind blew from all four quarters at once, seemingly, and the drenched star and his companion in misery were pretty well chilled before they were tried out.
