HOUGHTON ADDRESS CAUSING COMMENT IN ALL SECTIONS

Regarded by President Coolidge as Guide for European and American Opinion on Continental Problems

Washington, May 6. — Complete analysis of the reception accorded in European Capital to Ambassador Houghton's London address, is awaiting comment from Paris and other press accounts of the speech or brief and an immediate editorial expression of London.

Added interests is attached to the reaction in France in view of the interpretation of the address by Berlin Anzeiger as "plainly a shot at France," while other opinion abroad saw it as a generalized announcement upon positions upon which American assistance would be based.

General comment in diplomatic circles here also regarded France as the speaker's target, while French circles regarded it as a reflection to the recent election of Von Hindenburg.

The Ambassador's address, which was made on his own responsibility, is regarded by President Coolidge as a guide for European and American opinion on continental problems.

Unofficial spokesmen in Berlin welcomed Mr. Houghton's frank admonition to Europe in seeking paths of peace, and expressed the belief that his advice will facilitate negotiations for a high security pact.

The American loan question predominated the discussion in diplomatic circles here. The French taking the view that the country's surplus gold would find its best market regardless of any political question which might be raised in Washington.

Significance of the speech British spokesmen declared, was that it came at a time when the London and Paris governments were dealing with the security problems, they recognizing, however, that American assistance could be employed mainly through private loan channels. Italian observers placed themselves in a position of an interested spectator, attaching no great importance to the London address so far as Italy is concerned.

The oil operator was sentenced to two years in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, and was also fined $1,000.

LONDON DINERS NOW MAY DANCE AND EAT WITHOUT LOSS OF TIME

London — Menus have been set to music in London. Restauranters have taken this step in an effort to keep pace with the dancing craze, and at the same time keep the pots in the kitchens boiling. Dancing between courses, it is maintained, whets the appetite and tons up the system, this being the contention years ago of Barbary Coast dance hall managers in San Francisco, where the idea of a whirl on the hard-woods after each dish is said to have originated.

The menus are so arranged with the music in some of the popular London cafes that the diners may enjoy one course after another without skipping a single blast of the saxophone which gives them the signal to take the dancing floor.

Health Department Directing Attention Milk Supply of City

There are two important factors in public health work which concern the Health Department; the water and milk supply.

Greenville has a modern water plant in every respect, which is a credit to the city, the water being handled under strict observation and tests being made daily for bacteria which would make the water impure or dangerous to the public health.

It is equally as important to guard the milk supply to a city, for it should be handled under sanitary conditions from the source of production to the consumer, as it is one of the greatest carriers of bacteria among the foods used in the raw state.

The North Carolina State Board of Health has formed a Standard Milk Ordinance, which is being adopted by the different cities and towns. Twenty five towns have adopted this ordinance to date, of which number Greenville is included.

This ordinance requires that milk

The building was a two-story brick structure used for storing cotton. Firemen were fighting the blaze from the ground floor when the roof and upper floor fell in sending them down beneath a weight of cotton bales. The fire was confined to one building.

Wall Street Given Another Merger Topic

New York, May 6.—Control of the Norfolk Southern Railway recently acquired by Ernest Williams, who is associated with the Duke Tobacco Company interest, has given Wall Street another merger topic involving the Piedmont and Northern, the Durham and Southern, and the Georgia and Florida systems.

Consolidation of these roads, into what is described as a Duke system, would combine 1,500 miles of railway in the south extending from Madison, Florida to Norfolk, Va.

JURY SELECTED TRY MEN CHARGED WITH ATTACK NEEDLEMAN

Seven Defendants Go on Trial Today; Jury Completed at Noon

Williamston, May 6.—Seven defendants went on trial in Martin County Superior Court at 2:30 this afternoon, charged with murdering Joseph Needleman, after they had, together with a number of others, broken into the Martha County jail and removed Needleman from the building where he was confined, awaiting trial on a charge of attacking a young white girl.

Those who faced the jury were Edward C. Stone, Henry D. Griffin, Julian Bullock, Clayro Heath, Farney F. Sparrow, John Garkn, and Roy Gray.

The eight defendants were on the mutilation charges, but Farney W. Sparrow, Jr., was allowed a temporary continuance after a developed condition resembling diphtheria, but it was expected his case would be called before the close of the special term. The jury to try the men was completed at noon, and court recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

Prior to drawing the jury, Judge N. A. Sinclair refused a motion to continue the case. Court officials expressed an opinion today that Needleman would not be tried on a capital charge at the special term of court, and that when his case came up for action it would be in some other county other than Martin. Needleman was not present at the trial as he developed a temperature last night and it was considered inadvisable for him to attend. The state expected to proceed with other witnesses and to introduce his testimony at another date.

Williamston, May 6.—The battle for the jury to try Edward C. Stone, Henry D. Griffin, Julian Bullock, Clayro Heath, Farney W. Sparrow, John Garkn, and Roy Gray, all charged for having performed a serious operation on Joseph Needleman, began shortly before 10 o'clock this morning. There were 200 men present, to draw from, and the state was allowed two challenges and each defendant four challenges.

The state accepted the jury in full at 11:20 o'clock, and the defense began its examination of the prospective jurors. At 11:38 o'clock the defense passed the jury as to F. W. Sparrow, Jr., did not have diphtheria, but his condition, in the opinion of the court, warranted a continuance of his case for the time being. A motion to have the other cases continued was overruled. Joseph Needleman was not in court but he was expected to arrive with his attorneys some time during the day from Washington. It was stated in the event that he did not come today his absence would not hold court proceedings as the state is said to have sufficient evidence to begin its case without him. He is said to have developed a temperature last night, which might make his making the trip inadvisable.

Prospective jurors were questioned closely as to their knowledge of the pending cases, and their relations to those involved. Several kinsmen, by blood or marriage of the men under indictment, were excused. One jurymen said he knew very little about the case, and when asked if he had read about them in the newspapers, he replied he could not read.

A report was current today that the trial of Needleman would be postponed until a later term of court, or might be transferred to another court, but this could not be confirmed.

PUTTING GOLD IN PURSE

One would suppose that very pity for those unfortunate veterans whose reason was wrecked as a result of their war service would make anything touching their welfare the most sacred of sacred trusts.

One would suppose so, one would be entitled to suppose so, had not demonstration in repeated instances proved that their pathetic sacrifice for country is no shield, no protection for them against those who, despite everything, would batten on their misfortune and coin their spilt blood and shattered brains into gold of money profit for their own purses.

Much light was thrown by a recent case in New York on the way in which even the government's provision for these men is seized upon and turned to others' uses. It shot a stark, revealing beam clean into a mass of gold-blooded, sinister grasping for advantage and profit the like of which one wishes, for very pride, could not be found again in the country.

One man was guardian for sixteen mentally incompetent veterans. Sixteen! I developed that it was not from an overwhelming desire to serve that he had taken them under his care. He had other reasons, very clearly and coldly defined reasons, too, it appeared. The other day he was convicted of embezzling $50,000 from these helpless men and was sentenced to ten years in prison.

That was not the end of the story. The bonding company next sought to escape a considerable part of its liability on the bonds. Legal action was begun against it. Attorneys and special guardians for the veterans then appeared upon the scene, and with them a new phase of the sorry tale. They put in claims for fees which would have drained from the already criminally depleted estates of the veterans they were to protect a total of $6,000 more.

Amid all this drab round of greed and grasping avarice, a bright side to the picture appears. The American Legion, giving that service which it always seeks to give to the disabled, took the matter up. Its attorneys went into court. They made a vigorous drive against the claim for fees. They got the results they used to get in their war drives. They won. Through them, the wheels were set in motion so that entire justice may be done and the funds recovered so far as may be.

The Legion has a right to feel proud that, in this case, at least, as a result of its efforts, the money which is being paid to make comfortable the lives of those whose minds were wrecked by the horrors and strains of war will go to the work of mercy it was set aside to do.—American Legion News.

N. Y. Herald Tribune says: In view of inter relationship of Norfolk and Southern with the Duke interests, it is believed that a "Duke System" will eventually be formed, embracing the Piedmont and Northern. The Durham and Southern and possibly the Georgia and Florida, now in receivership, as well as the Norfolk and Southern. This combination would give a mileage of 1500 miles of track running N. from Madison, Fla., to Norfolk, Va., where it would have ample connections with Eastern, North and South lines, and lines to the West.

Market outlook: Barring unfavorable developments not now anticipated, the upward tendency promises to continue throughout the week with the usual trading reactions. Both rails and industrials have established new highs on the recovery indicating that the buying has been for other than short accounts.

Reactions should only be regarded as buying opportunities. There are too many stocks going up to be specific, although we notice buying activity in Mop Pfd, Can Con Gas MQ and Seaboard.

GRAIN

Wheat traders in the main are bullish and the selling pressure is not heavy except on Julges. There has been indications for several days that a large eastern long was a heavy seller to take profits on wheat bought a week or two ago at much lower prices. There are a few close observers who believe the situation is the most difficult one to analyze and say present prices discount a great deal of damage and they are only advising buying on good breaks.

Average consumption of corn between March first and November first is around 1 billion bushels or 125,000,000 bushels monthly, which means 750,000,000 from May to November. Murray finds only 621,000,000 bushels in all positions to cover the above usual consumption of 750,000,000 bushels.

While the wheat market is awaiting the coming government estimate of yield, there should be more attention given to corn.

Journal Commerce says: Wide wheat area in Kansas has been abandoned and the remaining crop is thin and low in vitality. Rains have come too late. Weeds and insects threaten.

WEEKLY WEATHER.
 Past week reports indicate Texas rains covered entire cotton section to moderate degree and planting being rapidly completed for Texas as a whole, cool nights have prevailed over eastern and central belts with continued drought in Mississippi

THE WEATHER

Night temperatures continue cool over belt. Light rainfall in El Paso and Amarillo districts.

Forecast in the Eastern belt generally fair, central belt mostly fair, western belt part cloudy—except West Texas generally fair.

Fall River Cloth Mills estimated production about 505 normal with prospects further curtailment unless conditions improve.

Liverpool cables: Steady to trade calling, scattered short covering for London. New crops depressed due to changing July hedges to October. Continued demand from spinners and exporters.

COFFEE

Continued dullness in actuals and absence of demand for spots and costa and freights weakening the markets in general and lower prices seems very likely.

SUGAR

Suggest purchases of futures on any slight weakness. Would not follow up an advance but wait for the dips. I believe stocks in the interior are small and refiners' supplies are not large and a general buying movement is apt to take place at any time.

MRS. H. L. CARR, HOSTESS TO THE ROUND TABLE CLUB

On Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Tyson, Mrs. H. L. Carr entertained the Round Table Club in a meeting that proved one of the most interesting of the year. Several items of business were successfully arranged after which Mrs. N. S. Fulford read the beautiful tribute of love for Mrs. Claude Grant from our club.

Then a member had to be elected to fill the vacancy caused by this valuable and precious member having slipped away from us to enter into rest.

To fill this vacancy Mrs. R. G. Fitzgerald was chosen and the club feels honored that she accepted and gives her a warm welcome.

The subject for the afternoon was "Mothers," and this spirit pervaded in the roses, red and white and in the music.

Mrs. Wiley Brown, in her paper on "A Great Mother," "Schuman Heinke gave proof that a woman can be a great mother and also make for herself a renowned career.

Mrs. Person was asked to tell something about her recent trip to California. So first touching upon some of the things accomplished through the bravery and patience of the Pioneer Mothers, she gave an enjoyable resume of the scenes of wonder and beauty and some of those of historical value.

Following this Mrs. E. W. Griffin sang the beautiful poem: "My Mother," written by Mrs. Milton White in memory and appreciation of her mother.

Then Mrs. Carr, and Mrs. Griffin sang as a duet the song our Mothers sang, "When You and I Were Young Maggie."

Mrs. Frances Burch, of Norfolk, a niece of Mrs. Griffin was the accompanist, and she also rendered wonderfully several instrumental selections.

Mrs. Carr's other guests included Mrs. James Tyson, Mrs. D. D. Overton, and Mrs. W. A. Darden.

After a refreshing ice course served by Catherine Tyson and Mary Dorcas Harding, Mrs. Burch was asked to play "A Perfect Day," and the club sang this as a fitting close to this well spent afternoon.

A Tribute.
In the home going of Mrs. Grant, a charter member of The Round Table Club, we have sustained a loss that is keenly felt and seems irreplaceable.

For fifteen years, she served untiringly in her club, four times a president and always an interested worker in every activity of the club. Under her leadership, the Round Table has stood for ideals of social fellowship and those things that make for the betterment of life.

The club feels that it has lost one of its truest, best and most devoted members. Her gentle, strong inspiring influence will live on in the circle of our club and be a sweet memory cherished by those who love her.

"If in the paths of the world
Stones hath wounded thy feet,
Sorrow hath tried thy spirit,
Of that we saw, nothing: to us
Thou wast still Cheerful helpful and firm."

NO MEALS TO BE SERVED AT THE SHRINE CEREMONIAL IN WILSON

The Wilson Shrine Club wants to inform all Nobles of Sudan Temple that the noonday luncheon also the banquet has been cut out and no meals will be served at the Spring Ceremonial to be held in Wilson May 20th.

In accordance with what they believed to be the views of the Divan, the Wilson Shrine Club extended the invitation for this year's Ceremonial with the understanding that the noonday meal would be eliminated as a part of the official program.

The membership of Sudan Temple has increased to such proportions that the expense in connection with the banquet has become so great that the Divan of Sudan Temple, decided to eliminate the Banquet in the future as a part of the official programs of Shrine Ceremonials.

The Wilson Shrine Club has engaged the Woman's Club and other organization of Wilson to prepare and serve food at a nominal cost, in order to take care of the visiting Nobles and their friends. The Hotels and Restaurants of the City will also open their doors and take care of as many as possible.

MEETING OF WOMAN'S CLUB THURSDAY P. M.

Please show your interest in this club by being on hand. Remember it is your club, and you are responsible for its success or failure as long as your name is on its roll.

EXPLORER FINDS BOOKS OF UNKNOWN LANGUAGE

Harbin.—The site of the ancient city of Haraboto, once capital of the kingdom of Tangut, is reported to have been discovered by P. K. Kosloff, a Russian explorer. He recently has returned from a two years' stay in the heart of Mongolia, bringing with him, it is said, quantities of treasures of interest to scientists.

A library of 2,500 volumes in seven languages and some 350 pictures are said to have been recovered from the ruins of the long lost city, covered for centuries by the sands of the Gobi desert.

Some of the books reported to have been found are in a language hitherto unknown to philologists, but the explorer had the good fortune to find a dictionary of the language which should greatly facilitate the translation of the books.

In addition many objects of art in gold and bronze and some artistic tapestries were said to have been found. The collection has been sent to the Leningrad Academy of Fine Arts.

CHAPTER II

"Try Your Luck with Professor Challenger"

I always liked McArdle, the crabbed, old, round-backed, red-headed news editor, and I rather hoped that he liked me. Of course, Beaumont was the real boss; but he lived in the rarefied atmosphere of some Olympian height from which he could distinguish nothing smaller than an international crisis or a split in the Cabinet. Sometimes we saw him passing in lonely majesty to his inner sanctum, with his eyes staring vaguely and his mind hovering over the Balkans or the Persian Gulf. He was above and beyond us. But McArdle was his first lieutenant, and it was he that we knew. The old man nodded as I entered the room, and he pushed his spectacles far up on his bald forehead.

"Well, Mr. Malone, from all I hear, you seem to be doing very well," said he in his kindly Scotch accent.

I thanked him.

"The colliery explosion was excellent. So was the Southwark fire. You have the true descriptive touch. What did you want to see me about?"

"To ask a favor."

He looked alarmed, and his eyes shunned mine. "Tut, tut! What is it?"

"Do you think, Sir, that you could possibly send me on some mission for the paper? I would do my best to put it through and get you some good copy."

"What sort of mission had you in your mind, Mr. Malone?"

"There, take it with you. I've nothing more for you tonight."

I pocketed the slip of paper.

"One moment, Sir," I said, as I realized that it was a pink bald head, and not a red face, which was confronting me. "I am not very clear yet why I am to interview this gentleman. What has he done?"

The face flashed back again.

"Went to South America on a solitary expedition two years ago. Came back last year. Had undoubtedly been to South America, but refused to say exactly where. Began to tell his adventures in a vague way, but somebody started to pick holes, and he just shut up like an oyster. Something wonderful happened—or the man's a champion liar, which is the more probable supposition. Had some damaged photographs, said to be fakes. Got so touchy that he assaults anyone who asks questions, and heaves reporters down the stairs. In my opinion, he's just a homicidal megalomaniac with a turn for science. That's your man, Mr. Malone. Now, off you run, and see what you can make of him. You're big enough to look after yourself. Anyway, you are all safe. Employers' Liability Act, you know."

A grinning red face turned once more into a pink, oval, fringed with gingery fluff; the interview was at an end.

I walked across to the Savage Club, but instead of turning into it I leaned upon the railings of Adelphi Terrace and gazed thoughtfully for a long time at the brown, oily river. I can always think most sanely and clearly in the open air. I took out the list of Professor Challenger's exploits, and I read it over under the electric lamp. Then I had what I can only regard as an inspiration. As a Pressman, I felt sure from what I had been told that I could never hope to get into touch with this cantankerous Professor. But these recriminations, twice mentioned in his skeleton biography, could only mean that he was a fanatic in science. Was there not an exposed margin there upon which he might be accessible? I would try.

"You seem very anxious to lose your life."

"Well, Sir, anything that had adventure and danger in it. I really would do my very best. The more difficult it was, the better it would suit me."

"You seem very anxious to lose your life."

"To justify my life, Sir."

"Dear me, Mr. Malone, this is very—very exalted. I'm afraid the day for this sort of thing is rather past. The expense of the 'special mission' business hardly justifies the result, and, of course, in any case it would only be an experienced man with a name that would command public confidence who would get such an order. The big blank spaces in the map are all being filled in, and there's no room for romance anywhere. Wait a bit, though!" he added, with a sudden smile upon his face.

"Talking of the blank spaces of the map gives me an idea. What about exposing a fraud—a modern Munchausen—and making him ridiculous? You could show him up as the liar that he is! Eh, man, it would be fine. How does it appeal to you?"

"Anything—anywhere—I care nothing."

McArdle was plunged in thought for some minutes.

"I wonder whether you could get on friendly—or at least on talking terms with the fellow," he said at last. "You seem to have a sort of genius for establishing relations with people—sympathy, I suppose, or animal magnetism, or youthful vitality, or something. I am conscious of it myself."

"You are very good, Sir."

"So why should you not try your luck with Professor Challenger, of Elmore Park?"

I dare say I looked a little startled.
