

BODY OF BRYAN BEGINS ITS LONG JOURNEY TO THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special Train Leaves Dayton At 7:40 O'clock; Funeral Arrangements Have Not Been Completed; All Sections of Country Pay Tribute to Great Man

Dayton, Tenn., July 29.—The body of William J. Bryan began its long journey to the National Capital today when the bronze casket, in which the Commoner lay, was removed from the Richard Rogers residence at 7:40 o'clock. The widow followed as the remains of her distinguished husband were placed aboard a special pullman on a siding near the home. Citizens of Dayton attended the funeral carriage on the short march through the streets of the town. A guard of six uniformed men formed the simple escort.

Dayton, Tenn., July 29.—The body of William Jennings Bryan today began moving toward Washington from the neat white cottage where he had been known and admired, loved and followed as the fundamentalist leader to the city when he had been the respected Democratic Chieftain, the Congressman and the Secretary of State. The body was carried out and across the land in a special car.

Just as in life he had thrown aside the political coat for the plainer garments of the religious leader in death, and the body passed from the scenes of his last fight for fundamentalism to those of his earlier political strife. In Dayton the tribute was paid the fundamentalist chief among friends among whom he passed. Here he received the homage of the hills rendered in the simple fashion of those who dwell among them. In Washington will come the tributes of those who knew him best as he moved among them as the political leader, orator and statesman.

Pledges of his comrades in the fight against evolution came today from far separated corners of the land. Opponents of the evolution theory will drive it from the tax supported schools of the nation, they said. Telegrams and letters continued to flood the little home at Dayton bringing to the bereaved widow notes of consolation from hundreds of admirers and friends of the dead.

Plans for the funeral services in Washington early today had not been completed. From various sections of the country came news of tribute to be paid to the memory of the dead man. In North Carolina Governor A. W. McLean issued a proclamation ordering all flags on state and county buildings in the state to fly at half staff Friday while the people of the state lay aside their activities for thirty minutes during the funeral.

This was supplemented by additional instructions from mayors of different cities. In Charlotte, N. C., a request was made by the mayor to the pastors of the city churches to toll their bells for five minutes at the hour of the funeral.

Dies in Home of Friend
Dayton, Tenn., July 29.—A speech made by William J. Bryan at Columbia, S. C., in 1918, sowed the seeds of a friendship which brought him to live his last hours and to die in the home of Richard Rogers, a Dayton pharmacist. Mr. Rogers, a soldier in Camp Jackson, near Columbia, during the war, heard an address of the Commoner and became an admirer of the great man. He followed the political leader's career with interest, and afterwards when Mr. Bryan was asked to come to Dayton to participate in the Scopes prosecution, the young pharmacist wrote to the Commoner and invited him to be his guest during his stay here.

Tallu's, Louisiana, July 29.—An outbreak of the cotton leaf caterpillar, or army worm, throughout Louisiana and the possibility that it has spread on to Mississippi and Arkansas was announced today at the government Delta laboratory here.

Death Duel

HARRY K. KIRK

Henry K. Kirk, son of a well-known San Francisco family, world advertiser and poet, was found apparently murdered. A few days later the body of John Truder was found and with it a note telling of a strange duel in the desert when he and Kirk, back to back, shot out their grievances.

GEORGIA TOBACCO MARKETS OPENED 18.8 CENT AVERAGE

Total Sales Estimated at 1,700,000 Pounds, Selling for Approximately $300,000; Mostly Cheap Grades

Macon, Georgia, July 29.—Virtually complete reports from all of Georgia tobacco marketing centers today indicated that sales on the opening of the season yesterday brought growers approximately $300,000. The total sales were estimated at more than 1,700,000 pounds and the average price at 18.8 cents per pound.

Due to the crop being late, the amount of tobacco marketed was not up to expectations. Gathering and curing still are underway. Most of the tobacco now being sold is of sandlog variety and cheaper grade. Indications are that the quality of later tobacco will be good.

Declares Co-operative Market Ass'n. Opposed Bureaucracy Control

Philadelphia, July 29.—A protest against any attempt to force "long distance bureaucratic control" upon the co-operatives by the Federal government was voiced today before the American Institute of Co-Operation by John D. Miller, of New York City, President of the National Co-operative Milk Producers Federation and Vice President of the Dairy Men's League Co-operative Association. "Co-operative Marketing Associations seek no government subsidy and are unalterably opposed to bureaucratic control," asserted the speaker, "when bureaucracy has had its own way it has left an indelible record of lethargy and inefficiency. Incapable in itself it prevents the exercise of initiative of those engaged in commerce and industry.

"Further than this its gradually and insidiously changing the form of government itself, in that we are becoming more and more a government by bureaus instead of a government by Congress, a government by bureaucratic rule instead of a government by law."

Louis F. McKay of Memphis, declared that "Co-operative cotton marketing was beginning to offer a new hope for a season tenant farmer. It offers a machinery to wrest him from the thrall of the credit system. It makes of him a man who takes pride in his own community rather than that one who migrates annually from farm to farm.

YOUTH CONFESSES JEALOUSY CAUSE OF TRIPLE KILLING

Rudolph Disse Shoots and Kills Mrs. Vivian Tomlin Peers, H. G. Carter and Detective Sargent, J. H. Burke

Richmond, Va., July 29.—"Because I could not keep her and I was not going to let anyone else get her," was the reason given today by Rudolph Disse, Dapper youth, for shooting to death Mrs. Vivian Tomlin Peers, Henry G. Carter, his rival, and Detective Sargent John H. Burke, who stood in the way of his reaching Carter. Willis Britt, automobile salesman, who also attempted to stop Disse, was shot in the hip. The triple killing followed a police court affair yesterday in which the pretty clothier model, the restaurateur, and Disse were principals. The girl was arraigned on charges preferred by Disse, and Disse was charged by Carter with threatening his life. Their cases were continued because of the absence of the commonwealth attorney, and Disse was then arrested on warrant charging him with passing worthless checks.

The police court case was the end of an affair between the girl and Disse, which had extended over a year and because of which she left her husband. She wanted some clothing she had left in the youth's room, and Burke was assigned to accompany her there. Britt, who did not know any of the principals, agreed to lend the detective his car, and to drive the girl to Disse's home in her own machine. The girl obtained her belongings and was ready to be driven off by Britt when Disse asked, "Will I ever see you again, Vivian?"

A negative reply was the signal for the shooting. The girl was shot first and then Britt as he attempted to get to Disse. Burge, who was standing in front of the car reached for his pistol, but before he could get it from his pocket, a bullet struck him in the abdomen and another in the lung. The youth jumped into Britt's automobile and amid a fusillade from the fallen officer's weapon, drove some twenty blocks across town and fired two bullets through Carter's heart as he stood behind the counter of his restaurant. The man died almost instantly, and Disse drove away, but was arrested by a traffic officer ten minutes later. The girl died on the way to a hospital, and Burke died last night.

Disse told the police he shot Burke because "he tried to stop me and I thought Britt was a policeman too, as he was trying to get out to me."

Crop and Weather Conditions for the Week Ending Tues.

Washington, July 29.—Crop and weather conditions were summarized in Southern States for the week ending yesterday by the Department of Agriculture today.

Generally, the report said, the more eastern portions of the cotton belt had good local rain and cotton made good progress in Eastern Carolina, most of Georgia and Florida. Conditions in western Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi also were more favorable for the cotton crop, but in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma heat and drought conditions as a rule, although there were a few rains in the Texas panhandle and some portions of Oklahoma.

Devotes Energy to Prevention General Coal Strike Friday

London, July 29.—Highest officials of the British Government today devoted their energy to the prevention of general coal strike scheduled to start Friday. While the cabinet discussed the situation Premier Stanley Baldwin was absent from that meeting in order to conduct conference first with the miners and then with the mine owners. These meetings occupied the entire morning, but no final decisions were reached. This afternoon miners and owners will meet jointly with Government officials. This conference is objected to determine with finality whether the threatened strike will be an actuality.

Gustavo Carranza, Mexican musician, recently abandoned his "cult of intellectuals" in Westchester, N. Y., when the parents of his feminine disciples threatened him with death.

WARREN ADDRESSES STUDENT BODY OF TEACHERS COLLEGE

Secretary of N. C. E. A., Discusses Importance of the Teachers Assuming a Professional Attitude

In an address today before the student body of the East Carolina Teachers College, Mr. Jule B. Warren, Secretary of the North Carolina Education Association, discussed the importance of the teacher's assuming a professional attitude and knowing the details of her profession.

He pointed out that the purpose of the Association was to create better conditions educationally in the State both from the standpoint of the teacher and from the standpoint of the citizen. Last year the organization had a membership of ten thousand in round numbers. Out of the fee of two dollars paid by each member he or she receives a year's subscription to the North Carolina Teachers, a magazine published specifically for the teachers of the state. In addition to this each member is entitled to the privileges of the placement bureau, is entitled to attend all of the meetings of the Association as well as to help in formulating the educational policies of the organization.

The whole income of the organization is dedicated entirely to the service of teachers and to education. The state association is the means through which the leaders of the profession in North Carolina hope to accomplish the dream of an educated State in the next generation.

The Association has a complete organization in every part of the State now and it hopes to be in a better position to push forward the educational program of the State than it ever has before. Through its magazine it can keep its membership better informed and can through its pages carry to its readers from month to month the information necessary to make each an intelligent part of the organization for educational progress.

Claiming False Imprisonment Sues for $50,000 Damages

Tampa, Florida, July 29.—Lady Grace MacKenzie, who was held in jail here three days on charges preferred by George E. Gray, local real estate operator, today filed a suit for $50,000 damages against Gray, claiming she was falsely imprisoned. Lady Grace, widely known as a big game hunter, explorer, writer, and photographer, was charged by Gray with having given him a bad check. She Baldwin was arrested and held in jail until a heavily veiled woman, whose name still is unknown, made good the check. After her release from prison, Lady Grace disappeared, but today she held a conference with her attorney here and the filing of the damage suit followed. The suit was filed with the circuit court clerk and are awaiting action on the part of Gray and his attorney's before further steps are taken.

Mission Leaves for Washington to Discuss Debt to United States

Brussels, Belg., July 29.—The mission to Washington to discuss settlement of Belgium's debt to the United States left this morning for Cherbourg to sail for New York tomorrow.

Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt Undergoes Operation Today

New Port, R. I., July 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church are back in New Port again, which they left only Saturday after their wedding. They returned to be near Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt who acted as the sister's bridesmaid. Miss Vanderbilt became ill with appendicitis the night before the wedding and even a few hours before the ceremony was attended by a physician. Yesterday it was decided to operate and word was sent to the honeymooners. They promptly returned and found the room in which the wedding was held overlooking the sea, converted into an operating room. Following the operation Miss Vanderbilt was reported as resting as comfortably as could be expected. While their plans are understood to hinge upon the progress of the invalid, Mr. and Mrs. Church have registered at the Country Club, which would indicate that they expect to be in this vicinity most of the summer.

ALLEGED MEMBER BAND OF ROBBERS EFFECTS ESCAPE

Lewis Powell Succeeds in Getting Out of Perquimans County Jail; Wanted Here for Larceny, Store Breaking

Lewis Powell, wanted in Pitt county on a charge of robbery and store breaking and who has been in the custody of Hertford authorities for the past few days, succeeded in effecting his escape from the Perquimans county jail Monday night. His three companions, two men and a woman were left behind.

Powell using a tin plate and a pop bottle tunneled his way to liberty by digging a hole through the corridor into which his cell opened into the main corridor of the jail. During last winter a negro effected his escape by cutting a hole through the roof. This had never been adequately patched and Powell experienced little if any difficulty in getting out.

The three companions of Powell could also have escaped but feeling that perhaps if all tried to get away they would be apprehended, decided to remain.

Sheriff Jackson went to Hertford Monday for the purpose of bringing the prisoner here for trial. Upon his arrival Judge Bond refused to release Powell pending Habeas Corpus proceedings.

William J. Bryan Lived in North Carolina 2 Years

Asheville, July 29.—For two years William Jennings Bryan lived in Asheville, maintaining a home on Edwin Place, Grove Park. That was from 1917 to 1919. The Commoner was advised that the altitude here was not beneficial in his case, and he and Mrs. Bryan, seeking a lower altitude, became interested in Florida and moved to Miami.

580,300 Fish Have Been Distributed From State's 5 Hatcheries

Raleigh, July 29.—Fish numbering 580,300 have been distributed from the State's five hatcheries and there are 367,830 on hand, making a total of 948,130, said the latest report of J. K. Dixon, chairman of the Fisheries Commission Board, made public by Governor McLean today. These hatcheries were constructed at a total cost of $103,476.02 and operating expenses to July 1, 1925, were listed as totaling $7,721.40.

WHOLESALE LIQUOR RAID IS STAGED IN KINSTON RECENTLY

Male and Female Detectives Said to Be In Employ of Ku Klux Klan, Lay Essential Ground Work Indictments

Kinston, July 29.—Information purporting to be authentic was had by The Daily News late yesterday that the Ku Klux Klan of North Carolina and the federal prohibition enforcement authorities of the State are working hand in hand to rid the state of "moonshine liquor" and its attendant miseries.

From a reliable source the News is advised that the Klan is employing detectives of both sexes to ensnare the unsuspecting bootlegger, the said detectives supplying the evidence upon which warrants are drawn and arrests made. Kinston is reported to have had a "mixed pair" of sleuths at work here for some six weeks, the results of which were the issuance of thirty-odd federal warrants and half that number of arrests yesterday.

The suddenness of the hand of the law is reported to have been so overwhelming that news of the "catastrophe" failed to wing its way fast enough to save any appreciable number of alleged violators from their fate. Those who made their escape are said to be white women, in most instances. Among those who are yet to be served with warrants are property holders, who find themselves between the "devil and deep blue."

The serving of the warrants by a pair of United States deputy marshals was started early Tuesday in various sections of the city and in sections adjacent to Kinston. Suspected dealers in retail and wholesale quantities in some instances, after hearing the warrant read, attempted to destroy what "stock" they had on hand, only to pull themselves deeper in the mire. The news flew thick and fast, but not fast enough to insure the safe removal of contraband goods for several others. Some had no stock at all on hand; their crime had a recent dating.

It is understood that the "pair of detectives" who worked up the cases here went about their task in a clever manner. Apparently they were man and wife, or father and daughter. They were suspected, street gossip said, but soon were lost in the hum-drum life of the "South Side." They purchased quantities of rum from many individuals, it is said. In some cases, unsuspecting parties "accommodated" the couple by acting as go-betweens; others actually went out of the way to "get a little leeker" for the nice-looking couple.

But the day of reckoning was soon to come. The couple was on hand for the hearings of the new defendants before United States Commissioner Sutton, who bound each over to the Federal Court at New Bern in the sum of $400 for each offense. It is understood that all gave bond after considerable effort on the part of some.

City and county officers are stated not to have "been in" on the coup here yesterday. Chief of Police Bursell said in his department was not actively interested in the roundup, having participated in one a year or so ago which got very good results. County officers are busy looking after lawbreakers, but are working along other avenues, it was stated.

Identity of those arrested yesterday was not made public by Chief Agent Clifton of the district enforcement bureau, or by Commissioner Sutton. The hearing were heard in "dry" headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

OUTLOOK GOOD

With good reports from the opening of the Georgia tobacco markets yesterday the outlook for the South Carolina and North Carolina markets is very encouraging. The average on the Georgia market is reported to have been between eighteen and nineteen cents per pound despite the fact that the tobacco in that state is sold in bulk ungraded. This should mean an average of from one to three cents more per pound in this section which with the large production this year points to a wave of prosperity the coming fall.

WILL TWO AND TWO STRETCH TO FIVE?

President Coolidge's summer rest is disturbed by logicians who, in the matter of the foreign debts, twilt on arithmetic. The United States is a creditor nation. How, ask spokesmen of foreign governments, can it receive interest on public and private debt abroad and also maintain an export market if it builds a tariff wall against importations?

However the transaction is camouflaged by three-cornered trading and roundabout exchange, money can be transferred from Europe to the United States only in gold, or goods, or satisfactions of some sort—tourist expenses abroad and immigrant remittances, for example. "If we must pay interest on war debt," says Europe, "drop your tariff and let us pay in goods."

But these men have not votes. Mr. Coolidge's Massachusetts advisers represent many votes, and they passionately protest: "Why, Mr. President, we're cutting wages now; demand is falling off. Business is rotten. Don't lower the tariff! Raise it!" And the pestered President, suspecting that two and two really make four, wonders if his advisers are right and they somehow can be stretched to five.—N. Y. World.

Since the wholesale dry raid of the past few days in Kinston it is reported that "How Dry I Am," is again becoming a very popular air.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

I was so stunned by this sudden shock that for a time I must have nearly lost my reason. I have a vague recollection, as one remembers a bad dream, of rushing about through the woods all round the empty camp, calling wildly for my companions. No answer came back from the silent shadows. The horrible thought that I might never see them again, that I might find myself abandoned all alone in that dreadful place, with no possible way of descending into the world below, that I might live and die in that nightmare country, drove me to desperation. I could have torn my hair and beaten my head in my despair. Only now did I realize how I had learned to lean upon my companions, upon the serene self-confidence of Challenger, and upon the masterful, humorous coolness of Lord John Roxton. Without them I was like a child in the dark, helpless and powerless. I did not know which way to turn or what I should do first.

After a period, during which I sat in bewilderment, I set myself to try and discover what sudden misfortune could have befallen my companions. The whole disordered appearance of the camp showed that there had been some sort of attack and the rifle-shot no doubt marked the time when it had occurred. That there should have been only one shot showed that it had been all over in an instant. The rifles still lay upon the ground, and one of them—Lord John's—had the empty cartridge in the breach. The blankets of Challenger and of Summerlee beside the fire suggested that they had been asleep at the time. The cases of ammunition and of food were scattered about in a wild litter, together with our unfortunate cameras and plate-carriers, but none of them were missing. On the other hand, all the exposed provisions—and I remembered that there were a considerable quantity of them—were gone. They were animals, then, and not natives, who had made the inroad, for surely the latter would have left nothing behind.

But if animals, or some single terrible animal, then what had become of my comrades? A ferocious beast would surely have destroyed them and left their remains. It is true that there was that one hideous pool of blood, which told of violence. Such a monster as had pursued me during the night could have carried away a victim as easily as a cat would a mouse. In that case the others would have followed in pursuit. But then they would assuredly have taken their rifles with them. The more I tried to think it out with my confused and weary brain the less could I find any plausible explanation. I searched round in the forest, but could see no tracks which could help me to conclusion. Once I lost myself, and it was only by good luck, and after an hour of wandering, that I found the camp once more.

Suddenly a thought came to me and brought some little comfort to my heart. I was not absolutely alone in the world. Down at the bottom of the cliff, and within call of me, was waiting the faithful Zamba. I went to the edge of the plateau and looked over. Sure enough, he was squatting among his blankets beside his fire in his little camp. But to my amazement, a second man was seated in front of him. For an instant my heart leaped for joy, as I thought that one of my comrades had made his way safely down. But a second glance dispelled the hope. The rising sun shone red upon the man's skin. He was an Indian. I shouted loudly and waved my handkerchief. Presently Zamba looked up, waved his hand, and turned to ascend the pinnacle. In a short time he was standing close to me and listening with deep distress to the story which I told him.

"Devil got them for sure, Massa Malone," said he. "You got into the devil's country, sah, and he take you all to himself. You take advice, Massa Malone, and come down quick, else he get you as well."

"How can I come down, Zamba?" "You get creepers from trees, Massa Malone. Throw them over here. I make fast to this stump, and so you have bridge."

"We have thought of that. There are no creepers here which could bear us."

"Send for ropes, Massa Malone." "Who can I send, and where?" "Send to Indian village, sah. Plenty hide-ropes in Indian village. Indian down below; send him."

"Who is he?" "One of our Indians. Other ones beat him and take away his pay. He come back to us. Ready now to take letter, bring rope,—anything."

"To take a letter! Why not? Perhaps he might bring help; but in any case he would ensure that our lives were not spent for nothing, and that news of all that we had won for Science should reach our friends at home. I had two completed letters already waiting. I would spend the day in writing a third, which would bring my experiences absolutely up to date. The Indian could bear this back to the world. I ordered Zamba, therefore, to come again in the evening and I spent my miserable and lonely day in recording my own adventures of the night before. I also drew up a note, to be given to any white merchant or captain of a steam-boat whom the Indian could find, imploring them to see that ropes were sent to us, since our lives must depend upon it. These documents I threw to Zamba in the evening, and also my purse, which contained three English sovereigns. These were to be given to the Indian, and he was promised twice as much if he returned with the ropes.

So now you will understand, my dear Mr. McArdle, how this communication reaches you, and you will also know the truth, in case you never hear again from your unfortunate correspondent. To-night I am too weary and too depressed to make my plans. Tomorrow I must think out some way by which I shall keep in touch with this camp, and yet search round for any traces of my unhappy friends.

CHAPTER XIII

"A Slight which I shall Never Forget"

Just as the sun was setting upon that melancholy night I saw the lonely figure of the Indian upon the vast plain beneath me, and I watched him, our one faint hope of salvation, until he disappeared in the rising mists of evening which lay, rustled from the setting sun, between the far-off river and me.

It was quite dark when I at last turned back to our stricken camp, and my last vision as I went was the red gleam of Zamba's fire, the one point of light in the wide world below, as was his faithful presence in my own shadowed soul. And yet I felt happier than I had done since this crushing blow had fallen upon me, for it was good to think that the world should know what we had done, so that at the worst our names should not perish with our bodies, but should go down to posterity associated with the result of our labors.

It was an awesome thing to sleep in that ill-lit camp; and yet it was even more uncaring to do so in the jungle. One or the other must be prudent, on the one hand, warned me that I should remain on guard, but exhausted nature, on the other, declared that I should do nothing of the kind. I climbed up on to a limb of the great ginkgo tree, but there was no secure perch on its rounded surface, and I should certainly have fallen off and broken my neck the moment I began to doze. I got down, therefore, and pondered over what I should do. Finally, I closed the door of the zareba. It had three separate fires in a triangle, and having eaten a hearty supper dropped off into a profound sleep, from which I had a strange and most welcome awakening. In the early morning, just as day was breaking, a hand was laid upon my arm, and starting up, with all my nerves in a tingle and my hand feeling for a rifle, I gave a cry of joy as in the cold gray light I saw Lord John Roxton kneeling beside me.

It was he—and yet it was not he. I had left him calm in his bearing, correct in his person, prim in his dress. Now he was pale and wild-eyed, gasping as he breathed like one who has run far and fast. His gaunt face was scratched and bloody, his clothes were hanging in rags, and his hat was gone. I stared in amazement, but he gave me no chance for questions. He was grabbing at our stores all the time he spoke.

"Quick, young fellow! Quick!" he cried. "Every moment counts. Get the rifles, both of them. I have the other two. Now, all the cartridges you can gather. Fill up your pockets. Now, some food. Half a dozen tins will do. That's all right! Don't wait to talk or think. Get a move on, or we are done!"

Still half-awake, and unable to imagine what it all might mean, I found myself hurrying madly after him through the wood, a ride under each arm and a pile of various stores in my hands. He dodged in and out through the thicket of the scrub until he came to a dense clump of brushwood. Into this he rushed, regardless of thorns, and threw himself into the heart of it, pulling me down by his side.

"There!" he panted. I think we are safe here. They'll make for the camp as sure as fate. If will be their first idea. But this should puzzle 'em."

"What is it all?" I asked, when I had got my breath. "Where are the professors? and who is it that is after us?"

"The spe-men," he cried. "My God, what brutes! Don't raise your voice, for they have long ears—sharp eyes, too, but no power of scent, so far as I could judge, so I don't think they can sniff us out. Where have you been, young fellow? You were well out of it."

In a few sentences I whispered what I had done.

"Pretty bad," said he, when he had heard of the dinosaur and the pit. "It isn't quite the place for a rest cure. What? But I had no idea what its possibilities were until those devils got hold of us. The man-patin' Papuans had me once, but they are Chesterfields compared to this crowd."

"How did it happen?" I asked. "It was in the early mornin'. Our learned friends were just stirrin'. Haden't even begun to argue yet. Suddenly it rained apes. They came down as thick as apples out of a tree. They had been assembling in the dark, I suppose, until that great tree over our heads was heavy with them. I shot one of them through the belly; but before we knew where we were they had us spread-eagled on our backs. I call them apes, but they carried sticks and jabbered back to each other, and ended up by tryin' our hands with creepers, so they are ahead of any beast that I have seen in my wanderin'. Apemen—that's what they are—Missin' Links, and I wish they had stayed missin'.

They carried off their wounded comrade—he was bleedin' like a pig—and then they sat around us, and if ever I saw frozen murder it was in their faces. They were big fellows, as big as a man and a deal stronger. Curious glassy gray eyes they have, under red tufts, and they just sat and drew the line pretty sharply at us.

I found myself hurrying madly through the wood.

gloated and gloated. Challenger is a no chicken; but even he was cowed. He managed to struggle to his feet, and yelled out at them to have done with it and get it over. I think he had gone a bit off his head at the suddenness of it for he raged and cursed at them like a lunatic. If they had been a row of his favorite Presmen he could not have slanged them worse."

"Well, what did they do?" I was enthralled by the strange story which my companion was whispering into my ear, while all the time his keen eyes were shooting in every direction and his hand grasping his cocked rifle.

"I thought it was the end of us, but instead of that it started them on a new line. They all jabbered and chattered together. Then one of them stood out beside Challenger. You'll smile, young fellow, but 'pon my word they might have been kinsmen. I couldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. This old ape-man—he was their chief—was a sort of red Challenger, with every one of our friend's beauty points, only just a trifle more so. He had the short body, the big shoulders, the round chest, no neck, a great ruddy frill of a beard, the tufted eyebrows, the 'What do you want, damn you!' look about the eyes, and the whole catalogue. When the ape-man stood by Challenger and put his paw on his shoulder, it was a mighty consolation to us all to know that you were runnin' loose and had the archives in your keep."

"Well, now, young fellow, I'll tell you what will surprise you. You say you saw signs of men, and fires, traps, and the like. Well, we have seen the natives themselves. Poor devils they were, down-faced little chaps, and had enough to make them so. It seems that the humans hold one side of this plateau—over yonder, where you saw the caves—and the ape-men hold this side, and there is bloody war between them all the time. That's the situation, so far as I could follow it. Well, yesterday the ape-men got hold of a dozen of the humans and brought them in as prisoners. You never heard such a jabberin' and shriekin' in your life. The men were little red fellows, and had been bitten and clawed so that they could hardly walk. The ape-men put two of them to death there and then—fairly pulled the arm off one of them—it was perfectly beastly. Plucky little chaps they are, and hardly gave a squeak. But it turned us absolutely sick. Summerlee fainted, and even Challenger had as much as he could stand. I think they have cleared, don't you?"

We listened intently, but nothing save the calling of the birds broke the deep peace of the forest.

the thing was complete. Summerlee was a bit hysterical, and he laughed till he cried. The ape-men laughed, too—or at least they put up the devil of a cacklin'—and they set to work to drag us off through the forest. They wouldn't touch the guns and things—thought them dangerous, I expect—but they carried away all our loose food. Summerlee and I got some rough handlin' on the way—there's my skin and my clothes to prove it—for they took us a bee-line through the brambles, and their own hides are like leather. But Challenger was all right. Four of them carried him shoulder high, and he went like a Roman emperor. What's that?"

It was a strange clicking noise in the distance not unlike castanets.

"There they go!" said my companion, slipping cartridges into the second double-barrelled "Express." "Load them all up, young fellow, my lad, for we're not going to be taken alive, and don't you think it! That's the row they make when they are excited. By George! they'll have something to excite them if they put us up. The 'Last Stand of the Grays' won't be in it. 'With their rifles grasped in their stiffened hands, 'mid a ring of the dead and dyin', as some fathead sings. Can you hear them now?"

"Very far away."

"That little lot will do no good, but I expect their search parties are all over the wood. Well, I was telling you my tale of woe. They got us soon to this town of theirs—about a thousand huts of branches and leaves in a great grove of trees near the edge of the cliff. It's three or four miles from here. The filthy beasts fingered me all over, and I feel as if I should never be clean again. They tied us up—the fellow who handled me could tie like a bo'sun—and there we lay with our toes up, beneath a tree, while a great brute stood guard over us with a club in his hand. When I say 'we' I mean Summerlee and myself. Old Challenger was up a tree, eatin' pine and havin' the time of his life. I'm bound to say that he managed to get some fruit to us, and with his own hands he loosened our bonds. If you'd seen him sitting up in that tree hobnobbin' with his twin brother—and singin' in that rollickin' bass of his. 'Ring out, wild bells,' 'cause music of any kind seemed to put 'em in a good humor, you'd have smiled; but we weren't in much mood for laughin', as you can guess. They were inclined, within limits, to let him do what he liked, but they drew the line pretty sharply at us.

"Well, now, young fellow, I'll tell you what will surprise you. You say you saw signs of men, and fires, traps, and the like. Well, we have seen the natives themselves. Poor devils they were, down-faced little chaps, and had enough to make them so. On July 28, 1925, at high noon, in the Church of the Advent, Williamston, the Rev. James E. W. Cook, of Greenville, united in the bonds of matrimony Miss Nellie Jane Wynne, of Williamston, and Professor Charles Fisher Carroll, Jr., of Warsaw, N. C.

Only members of the immediate families were present. At the conclusion of the beautiful ring service of the Episcopal Church, the happy couple motored to Virginia Beach and other parts of the East Coast for their honeymoon. A splendid luncheon was served at the home of Luke Lamb, Esq., brother-in-law of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll have a host of friends in Eastern Carolina who will wish them every prosperity for the years to come.

BATHING BEAUTY CONTEST TO BE HELD PAMLICO BEACH THIS WEEK-END

The annual Bathing Beauty contest at Pamlico Beach will be staged during the coming week-end, at which time dancing, moving pictures, and barbecue dinner will be featured. Beginning Friday night with the presentation of "The Ten Commandments" at the Pavilion, at popular prices, this feature will be followed by a dance, with music by Martins' Orchestra. Saturday will be featured by a special barbecue dinner at the hotel, and the entrance of the contestants in the beauty contest. There will be another dance Saturday night, and on Sunday another barbecue dinner, followed by the awarding of handsome prizes to the winners, will close the festivities.

A large crowd from all parts of this section will doubtless be present to make this the most successful week-end of the entire season.

Health Dept. Preparing to Announce Milk Grades to be in taoinhrdluupo

As stated about a week ago, the grading of all milk sold in Greenville will begin during the first week in August. This means that all bottle caps will bear one of four designations: Grade A Raw milk, Grade B Raw milk, Grade C Raw Milk or Grade D Raw Milk. Grade A is the mark of highest quality and signifies that all the requirements as to barns, milk house, utensils, methods of handling and sterilization are complied with; that the milk as delivered is cooled to 50° temperature, and that the bacteria count is maintained below a maximum of 50,000. Grade B milk is the next quality and signifies that all the essential requirements of sanitation and cleanliness are complied with, but the barn may not be of as good construction, the milk cooled only to 60° on delivery, and sterilization not done as effectively. The bacteria count will be under a maximum of 200,000. Maturity this milk can not be expected to keep as long as grade A milk, and is not as safe to feed to babies. Grade C milk is the next lower in quality and signifies that some items of sanitation have not been met. Sterilization of utensils may not be done by an approved method, cooling may not be efficient, so that temperature on delivery will be over 60°, and the bacteria count will be under a minimum of 1,000,000. Grade D milk is all other milk and the only requirement is that the bacteria count be under 5,000,000.

At present final grades are being made of all dairies, which together with the average of the bacteria counts and the delivery temperatures will determine the grades awarded. It should be noted that the grades are determined and awarded on the basis of the record made during the preceding grading period, not on what the dairy expects to do in the future. It can be likened to the grades given at school on a report card. Those who are awarded one of the lower grades at the start can be awarded a higher grade just as soon as the requirements are met. On the other hand should a Grade A dairy get careless it can be immediately reduced to the lower grade it deserves. Coincident with the announcement of grades, cards will be posted by the Health Officer, in all restaurants, cafes, soda fountains and other places dispensing milk as such, stating the grade of milk sold, so that all purchasers may know the quality of milk served them. The sale of "Dip Milk" by the glass is prohibited and when a glass of milk is served it must come from an individual bottle, with cap marked with the grade.

SCHEME FOR IMPROVING ARTILLERY FIRE DEVISED

Honolulu.—A scheme for taking ballistic wind, to be used in correcting the ranges of guns in night firing, has been devised by Major John M. Hood of the 15th Coast Artillery at Fort Kamehameha here, and is announced to have passed successful tests in improving the accuracy and precision of fire.

Portable searchlights, capable of revolving both vertically and horizontally, were trained on a pilot ascension balloon 25 inches in diameter as it rose. The speed and direction were computed, as is done at the meteorological station during the day. This is said to have been the first time the idea of tracking a small balloon at night had been tried.

The experiment was carried out successfully by the operator of the light the first time and without field glasses. Atmospheric conditions were adverse, with low clouds and a heavy wind velocity; nevertheless the balloon was tracked for 1,500 yards. Military experts said that with better equipment it could be tracked as high as 3,000 yards.

PORK BARREL METHODS OLD, LETTERS DISCLOSE

Springfield, Ill.—Evidences that the "pork barrel" was in operation more than 100 years ago are shown in the efforts of Nathaniel Pope, then secretary of the Illinois territory, to secure house rent from Albert Gallatin, secretary of the United States Treasury. Letters between the two have been discovered by the state archives department and are being bound.

The first letter was written by Pope to Gallatin, May 11, 1809, transmitting his expense vouchers.

"I wish to deal candidly with you," Pope said. "I have lived in a house belonging to my wife's father (Elijah Backus), who certainly would never have charged me rent. But if a friend should furnish the secretary with an office for nothing, it being personal favor, it is no argument against his charging the government a reasonable price for occupation."

Pope apparently used his home for an office and asked the secretary of the treasury to pay him office rent of $12 a month. He asked for $150 for "contingent expenses."

Scene from "THE NARROW STREET" A WARNER CLASSIC OF THE SCREEN

"The Narrow Street," one of the season's "best sellers" from the pen of Edwin Bateman Morris, has been re-created on the screen by Warner Bros., and will begin its engagement at White's Theatre, today for one day.

Possessing all the qualities of mystery, romance and humor that made it a "best seller," it is expected that the picture will more than live up to the written word, by translating the whimsical interest of the novel onto the screen.

Warner Bros. have been particularly happy in their choice of players to interpret the roles of the leading characters, who, it will be remembered, proved the surprising combination of a staid bachelor, unaccustomed to social superficiality and a dashing maid of mysterious identity.

Matt Moore, whose name needs no introduction to the theatre-going public, will be seen in the part of the bachelor, Simon Haldane, and knowing his penchant for humorous interpretations, the bashful hero promises to prove very enjoyable.

Dorothy Devore, on the other hand, has been chosen to portray Doris, who injects pep into the erstwhile colorless life of Simon. She appears suddenly in his home, out of a bitter storm, and throws herself on his mercy for refuge. This characterization calls for sparkle and snap, and it is expected that Dorothy Devore, with her Christie Comedy experience, will more than fill the bill.

William Beaudine has directed "The Narrow Street," which was adapted for the screen by Julien Josephson, David Butler, Russell Simpson, Gertrude Short, Tempe Pigott, Kate Tomney and other notables complete the cast.

commemorations of important events of their rich historical origins.

The Fascisti, always quick to take opportunities to call attention to the grandeur of ancient and medieval Italy, now are doing as much for the church, in pursuance of their idea that the power of the church is closely linked with the strength of the nation and hence should be celebrated as such.

The most important church commemoration this year is the 16th centennial of the Council of Nicea, at which the Aryan Schism broke the church in two, losing for Rome jurisdiction over the spiritual affairs of the eastern world. This important centennial will also be celebrated in Athens by the hierarchy of the Orthodox Greek Catholic Church.

Another important religious centennial will be that of St. Francis Assisi next year, preparations for which are being made this summer.

Of secular celebrations, the most interesting this year will be that of Virgil on September 20. In connection with this even, the government has appropriated a considerable sum of money for restoration of the supposed tomb of the famous Latin poet.

TESTS MADE TO ELIMINATE JUICE REFINING IN THE SUGAR MANUFACTURE

Havana.—Manufacture of standard granulated sugar direct from cane juice has been proved a commercial possibility, test as Central Hershey, near Havana, indicate.

Milton S. Hershey, American chocolate manufacturer and owner of four sugar mills in Cuba, for several years has been carrying on experiments seeking a system workable on a commercial scale which would eliminate the raw sugar stage of refining the cane juice.

Last year a well known chemist and sugar expert carried on a series of experiments which, officials of the mill say, proved beyond doubt that direct manufacture of white sugar on a large scale can be accomplished at a cost which would compete with the present system.

APPROPRIATED PORCELAIN GIVES SOVIET ONE OF FINEST COLLECTIONS

Moscow.—Soviet Russia claims to possess the finest collection of Russian and West European porcelain and ceramic objects in the world. A special museum recently was organized in Moscow to accommodate the vast collection, which is made up chiefly of private collections appropriated after the revolution from the nationalized property of Russian magnates like Riaboushinsky, Oliv, Gudovitch, Morozov and others. Morozov's collection alone consists of 3,000 articles.

To make the museum's collection representative of all classes of porcelain art, magnificent examples of Sevres, German, Italian, English and Swiss porcelain were brought from the Hermitage in Petrograd. The splendid collection of Danish porcelain belonging to the Dowager Empress Marie also was added.

CELEBRATION TO RECALL FIRST ZEPPELIN FLIGHT TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Friedrichshaven.—The 25th anniversary of the first Zeppelin flight will be celebrated in this city in August. On his first flight Count Zeppelin succeeded in remaining in the air only 20 minutes. To the coming celebration, a number of prominent personalities in the world of economics and science will be invited.
Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin was born at Constance, in Baden, Germany, in 1838. During the American Civil War, he served as a volunteer in the Union Army. It was while he was in America that he made his first ascent in a balloon. He died in Berlin in 1917.
