FARMER IS FOUND DEAD NEAR HOME STOKES SECTION

N. L. Gray Had Captured Moonshine Still and Was Enroute Home When He Suffered Heart Attack

N. L. Gray, 67, of the Stokes section of this county, missing since noon Monday, was found dead in the woods about a mile from his home late yesterday after an all day search had been made for him by friends and neighbors.

It developed from the evidence heard by the jury that Gray left his home about noon Monday, saying that he was going into the swamp to seek suitable places to set traps.

MODERN EXPERTS

In Baltimore a blasting expert was called in to raze a brick chimney. He arranged his powder and then, 200 feet from the base of the chimney, he drove a stake. Here, he announced, was where the top of the chimney would fall. When the powder was set off, the chimney topled and fell squarely on the stake. The crowd which had assembled was delighted. That the expert could tell to the inch where that chimney would fall seemed magical.

And in a sense it was. Modern accuracy we have come to take for granted. The navigator who brings a ship to port without missing by so much as a mile, the astronomer who forecasts an eclipse within nine seconds, the tunnel-builder whose entries meet at a predetermined spot—all these we have grown used to. What they do is of course just as exact as what the chimney-blaster did. Only, when his skill displays itself on something we are not used to, something that goes off with a fine loud noise, we crowd and clap our hands like children. Well, we yield a deserved tribute.—N. Y. World.

GIRLS ARE WARNED

Next month the colleges all open for the fall session. Announcements have been made of the curriculum, sports and the like, but only one has advertised its code of rules, its prohibitions, so to speak. The University of California, through its woman executive, has notified any prospective students what will be expected of them. Here are the prohibitions to the girls who enter:

- Coming home from dances after 1 a. m.
- Entertaining masculine friends after 11:30 p. m.
- Hose rolled below the knees.
- Excessive use of rouge and lipstick.
- All extremes in dress and conduct.
- Indulgence in cigarettes.
- Petting parties.
- Drinking intoxicants.

Whether prospective students like such rules or not, at least they know what to expect if they enter that school. The authorities let them know exactly what to expect. It is a good idea. Now, if girls do not wish to be regulated—if they are resolved "to live my own life as I choose," to quote the modern expression—they can select some school where there are no prohibitions. Usually when girls object to rules of schools they complain that they did not know such rules would be prescribed. The publication in advance of the opening of the session is fair notice of what may be expected. If the girls do not like the rules, they can go elsewhere.—News and Observer.

could help me forget my worries by treeing squirrels and giving me sport. I was good to him, but my heart is heavy because I failed him in his greatest need. When some human poisoned him he came to me, strong in his faith in me, for me to help him and I failed him. He begged me in his dog way to do something for him and there was nothing I could do but stand and see him suffer. I called a doctor but he was dead when the doctor arrived. He died no doubt wondering why I did not help him, but I am certain he died my friend. I don't know who I poisoned him but hope they read this for I want them to know that I lost only lost a dog but lost a friend.

ough so that the dog thinks he is a friend, and then feed the dog, who will wag his tail, thank him for food and then die. May the Lord have mercy on their soul. I can't imagine who would do this thing unless it was the some person who wrote Mr. Ham the insulting letter while he was preaching in Greenville. When our blessed Saviour was on earth he was betrayed with a kiss, now we have the man who betrays dogs with beef-steak and poison. I am not mad with this person. I have lost a friend and my heart is sad. I am but human and am weak, but we are taught to forgive as we would be forgiven, so friend, whoever you are, your sin toward me and my dog is forgiven. I hope you will never be guilty of another such trick.

SCENES OF AUTO FATALITIES IN OHIO MARKED BY CROSSES
Columbus, Ohio. — Dotting the sides of Ohio's highways throughout the length of the state at frequent and infrequent intervals stand white crosses. They mark spots where automobilists have been killed. Automobile drivers rounding a sharp curve, in many sections, come squarely upon a white cross, or possibly two or three, mute reminders that one or more persons have been killed at that spot. Governor Vic Donahey was responsible for the placing of the crosses. It was his idea that they would help to cut down automobile fatalities by making drivers more cautious. They have not been installed long enough, however, to draw any conclusions. Many automobile drivers declare they experience a sinking sensation when they suddenly come upon the white crosses. The governor has been condemned for the move on the ground it gives rise to morbid thoughts; others have praised it as being a good "sedative" for reckless drivers.

ONLY A "FICE" BUT HE WAS TRUE.

Mr. Editor:
Allow me space in your paper for just a few words in memory of a very dear friend and companion of mine. A friend that was very close to me because of his loyalty and absolute confidence in me, at all times and under all circumstances and conditions. One who never by act nor in any manner doubted me or my friendship for him, but always greeted me with a smile and was ever willing and glad to go with me anywhere.

He was nothing but a dog. Just a brindle fice, but his heart was pure and his friendship sincere. When human friends would criticize and condemn, when they would withhold their friendly greetings and pass by on the other side, when they would get together and discuss my faults and wonder just what bad things I would next be guilty of, why "Brin" would just come and lay his head on my knee, wag his tail, and try to say to me by his actions that he was not ashamed of me. It is at just such times as these when a man needs friendship and sympathy that he learns to love a dog. Human friends are bound by connections and stand in fear of what somebody will say, so they stand aside and let a man bear his own burdens. They may sympathize with you and feel sorry for you but they cannot afford to show their friendship by going with you or standing up for you in public. Not so with a dog. A dog is bound by no connections. Be a friend to a dog and he will be a friend to you. Disagree with a man and he will get mad. Kick a dog and he will wonder what it is about, but he will still be your friend. Loan a man money and he will often times fail to repay you, but feed a dog and he will repay you by loving you. A man will sometimes, take the best you have and then not appreciate it, but a dog will take the scraps you throw him and still give you his love and friendship. Go to jail and your friends will talk about you but your dog will go and beg to be allowed to stay with you. Of course, I loved my dog and am going to miss him. He trusted me and believed in me. We had some great times together and he was a great comfort to me. When things went wrong I could take my dog and go off away from men and in his dog way be

NEW YORK PICTURED AS IT REALLY IS

A majority of all motion pictures produced present some phase of New York life, but according to Ronald Colman, who plays the leading masculine role in "Tarnish," the Samuel Goldwyn-George Fitzmaurice production, which is now playing at White's Theatre not one of ten mirrors truly life in the metropolis.

"If one had never visited New York," states Colman, "but relied solely upon the motion picture for his or her impression, it might be believed that there were nothing in New York but cabarets and the mansions of the rich. Or that all downtown offices were as spacious as palaces and had twenty-foot ceilings."

"Tarnish," however, is one of the few pictures I have acted in which shows New York as it really is. Perhaps it is because both Mr. Goldwyn, the producer, and Director George Fitzmaurice are thoroughly familiar with the metropolis. "Tarnish" deals with a typical New York family and it very accurately pictures the life of the wealthy, the middle classes, and the very poor. The cabaret it shows is not an over-gaudy, bizarre affair such as no New Yorker ever saw. It is, of course, lively, gay, exotic, and to anyone who has visited Broadway's white lights it will recall memories of the most famous night cafes. "The whole story seems to catch the spirit of Manhattan — just as surely and as accurately as O. Henry caught it in his famous short stories."

MARNE THAT SAVED FRANCE TO SUPPLY BIG WHEAT CROP

Paris — The battlefield of the Marne, where the Americans helped the French turn the tide of war years ago, will furnish a bumper crop of wheat this year. The Department of the Marne and the Eure were rated at the end of June at 90 in the official crop estimates, while 80 is exceedingly good and far above the average of recent years. Thirty-three of the 80 departments were rated at 80 to 85, yet government officials are wondering whether they will not again this year be obliged to import some wheat to meet ordinary requirements.

Agricultural experts say that while the crops look good, the rust has done much damage and that an early July estimate of 90,000,000 metric hundred weight for 324,000,000 bushels of wheat must now be reduced to about 288,000,000 bushels. France consumes about 225,000,000 bushels per year.

The harvest which began recently in some departments, is just in time to keep the mills going, the stocks on hand having been practically exhausted, so that if the agricultural experts are nearer right than the official crop judges, France will have to buy abroad nearly as much wheat as she imported last year. It is pointed out, however, that the agriculturalist is always inclined to pessimism and fair judges opine that while France may be a little short of her requirements she will not need as much grain from abroad as last year.

SURVEY AMERICAN INCOMES SHOW HOW DOLLAR FLUCTUATED

New York. — The total "current income" of the American people rose from $67,254,000,000 in 1919 to $74,158,000,000 in 1920 and declined to $62,736,000,000 in 1921. These figures are contained in a report to be issued by the National Bureau of Economic Research, which summarizes the results of an exhaustive investigation upon which Dr. Willford I. King, Maurice Leven and a corps of assistants under the general direction of Dr. Edwin F. Gay, and Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, co-directors of research of the bureau have been engaged since the summer of 1922. Another outstanding revelation by the report is that 34,000,000 persons engaged in "gainful occupations" do not report taxable income and do not pay income tax.

The sharp drop of eleven and one-half billion dollars from the inflation period of 1920 to the depression year of 1921 was the greatest fluctuation in the nominal total national income recorded in the bureau's income studies running back to 1909.

In the latter year the total income is shown to have been $27,100,000,000. It rose steadily to $32,000,000,000 in 1913 and then dropped to $31,600,000,000 the next year. Beginning in 1915 the trend started upward again making great annual leaps until the peak was reached in 1920.

"The price changes during the more recent years of this period (1909-1921) have been so violent that comparisons of money values for different years tell practically nothing about the variations that have occurred either in the physical volume of business or in the quantity of goods that the income will buy," says a statement issued by the bureau supplementing the advance figures. "It has been necessary, therefore, to convert many items into figures representing values in money of constant purchasing power. For this purpose, prices of the year 1913 have been commonly taken as standard."

Taking the total income of $32,000,000,000 in 1913, as a basis, the report shows that the total income of $27,100,000,000 in 1909 was actually worth 28,200,000,000 of the 1913 dollars. Going to the peak year of 1920 the $74,158,000,000 income of that year is shown to have been worth only 36,300,000,000 of the 1913 dollars, while in the previous year 1919, the total income of $67,254,000,000 is shown to have been worth 37,600,000,000 of the dollars as valued in 1913. The 1921 income of $62,736,000,000 is given a rating in the value of 1913 dollars of only $100,000,000 less than the $74,158,000,000 income of the peak year of 1920.

In the study of the changes in the economic welfare of the people of the United States it is revealed that during the 13 years under review the hypothetical "average person" had more than doubled the number of dollars constituting his current income, and that even when this income was reduced to dollars of 1913 purchasing power, his economic position had been considerably improved, although in relatively much less degree. Measure increased from $299 in 1909 to a peak of $697 in 1920 and in 1921 it stood at $379. The purchasing power of this per capita income in terms of 1913 dollar valuation shows that the $299 of 1909 were equal to $312 per capita of the 1913 dollars; that a $470 per capita income of 1917 was equal to only 361 of the 1913 dollars, and a $579 per capita income of 1921 was equal to only 334 of the 1913 dollars.

The average nominal incomes of the "gainfully occupied" are shown to have virtually doubled during the 13-year period. The average income of the person gainfully occupied was $791 in 1909, which was equal to $823 of the 1913 value. This average income of the gainfully occupied steadily increased to $1,851 in 1920. The amount is shown to equal in value 907 of the 1913 dollars. In 1921 the average of this class of income was $1,537, equal in value to 887 of the 1913 dollars.

The fact that 34,000,000 persons engaged in gainful occupations do not report taxable income is shown by a comparison of figures of the National Bureau of Economic Research with those of the Internal Revenue Office in 1916, the first year of the income tax, the Internal Revenue Office showed that there were 437,000 returns filed reporting a total net income of $9,298,000,000. In the same year the figures of the bureau show there were 38,101,000 persons gainfully occupied and that their total current income was $39,200,000,000. These figures of both sources show steady increases until 1920 in which year the Internal Revenue report showed 7,250,000 returns filed with a total net income reported of $23,735,000,000. That year the research bureau shows that there were 40,008,000 persons gainfully occupied and that their total income was $74,158,000,000. In 1921 the Internal Revenue returns filed dropped to 6,662,000 with a total net income reported of $19,577,000,000, while the research bureau shows 40,810,000 persons gainfully occupied whose total current income was $62,736,000,000.

Coffee
Yesterday's market, while somewhat erratic, nevertheless showed no indication of working lower. Firm offers were not plentiful and only at higher prices which we believe shows Brazil's confidence in present prices. See no reason to expect other than a firm condition again today.

Sugar
While refiners are somewhat hesitant about paying 2.5-3 cents for raws which would establish the futures market on a higher level, we believe the market is slowly emerging on a healthier basis. Yesterday about 10,000 tons of refined were sold for export which with the business done recently will amount to 40,000 tons, the largest portion of which will be transhipped from Germany to Russia. This augments the moderate domestic demand and as some Cuban holders are showing less interest in offerings at 2.5-8 cents we believe that the market will go higher, although temporarily slow to advance on account of the anticipated September liquidation.

Cotton Summary
The weekly cotton crop letter of a well known local house says weather past week generally favorable, except in drought area of Texas and parts of the Carolinas, Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi. Weevil damage to date very small. Picking progressing in Southern part of Belt and probably 10 per cent completed in Texas.

Local showers fell in New Mexico and Florida yesterday; high temperatures prevailed generally throughout Southwest. Outlook is for scattered thundershowers today in South Atlantic and East Gulf states; generally fair today, part cloudy tomorrow in Arkansas, part cloudy in Oklahoma with scattered thundershowers today generally fair today, part cloudy tomorrow with probably showers on extreme west coast of east Texas, part cloudy in West Texas with probably scattered showers.

Weather
High temperatures continue over central and western belts. Temperatures about normal over Carolinas. Light rainfall in Chattanooga district otherwise no rains reported in the cotton belt.

Forecast: Wednesday Eastern belt partly cloudy, showers expected central belt mostly fair, western belt part cloudy, probably some showers.
