LITERARY DEPARTMENT OF WOMAN'S CLUB MET ON TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The Literary Department of the Woman's Club met in the home of Mrs. H. H. Settle Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. W. E. Tingle and Mrs. Settle were hostesses. Studies in Southern Literature are the topics for this year's work. Mrs. Moore read an interesting paper on the life and works of John Henry Bonner. There was a round-table discussion about the work of John Charles McNeill and William Thornton Whitsett. A delightful salad course was served.

MRS. SMITH IMPROVING

Friends of Mrs. S. A. Smith, who is ill in the Johnson-Willis Hospital in Richmond, Va., will be glad to learn that she is getting along nicely and expects to return home soon.

NOT FAR WRONG

This morning in the primary department of one of the local schools the teacher was impressing upon the minds of the little folks the blessings derived from prayer and then asked several of the pupils what they prayed for and what they found to be thankful for.

Many things for which they were thankful were named by the children and finally one little boy declared he thanked God for the trees.

"It's too late for that now, because they're cutting them all down around my house," declared one little boy who, prior to the opening hour of school today, had busied himself watching workmen cut down a number of the trees killed here by escaping gas.

BUSINESS SCHOOL OPENS WITH LARGE ENROLLMENT

The night business school operated by Mrs. C. M. Tolar and Mrs. J. B. Spilman opened Oct. 5 with a goodly number of young men and women enrolled for the several courses taught.

This shows that Greenville's young men and women have become awakened to the possibilities of such business training and are taking advantage of the convenience of a night school operated by two of Greenville's best prepared and most experienced women. Mrs. Spilman is connected with East Carolina Teachers College in the capacity of Assistant Treasurer and has had wide experience along practically all commercial lines, as well as in the teaching profession. Mrs. Tolar's teaching experience extends to several of East Carolina's public and private schools in addition to her special work in Gregg Shortland. She has also had several years practical office experience.

The enrollment was much larger than expected and necessitated the employment of extra teachers, which now makes it possible to accommodate more students in any of the courses and new ones are enrolling daily. (Adv.)

Bethel Boy Scout Receives Star Rank

Harold Stator, son of J. A. Stator, of Bethel, was made a Star Scout at the Court of Honor meeting held in the Bethel Baptist church last night. Fifteen merit badges were awarded to five scouts of the Bethel troop, making it one of the leaders in the Pamlico Council.

Honors were awarded as follows: Connell Garrenton, camping, carpentry, conservation; craftmanship in leather, handicraft and pioneering; Harold Stator, civics, cooking; Wm. Burroughs, athletics, cooking, public health; Kelly Abeyounis, civics, cooking, pathfinding; and R. J. Whitehurst, cooking.

Members of the Court of Honor were C. C. Martin, chairman, E. L. Mayo, Rev. F. A. Burns, and J. H. Wilcox, scout executive of the Pamlico Council.

Mad Dog Costs Forsyth County Sum of $243.00

Winston-Salem, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Hereafter the dogs of Forsyth county will wear tags bearing numbers or they are liable to be killed and their owners prosecuted under the criminal law according to a statute of North Carolina, Chapter 384, Laws of 1911, entitled an act to mitigate the evils of hydrophobia.

The commissioners became painfully aware of this evil yesterday morning when they authorized the payment of $243 for the damage done by unknown rabid dogs. The owners of these dogs could not be found because a mad dog owner does not usually push his title and because the animals were not marked. The Forsyth county commissioners want all dogs marked in the future and they have asked the sheriff to enforce the statute to the limit. Dog tags will be ordered and unlicensed dogs will not be allowed to operate.

The ease in which the commissioners had to fork over the cash yesterday morning, was that one involving the biting of a mule belonging to F. M. Holland, of Belkows Creek Township. The mule in turn bit a veterinary surgeon, Z. B. Bittling. He is taking the pasture treatment. The county reimbursed Dr. Bittling, F. M. Holland, and J. D. Fulton, who were also bitten by a rabid dog.

NEWS OF WOMEN

New York, Oct. 20. (AP)—Spend all the money you can afford on clothes until you are established, and then act as though you were superior to clothes, is the advice given to business girls by Mrs. Helen Woodward, once a stenographer, and now a successful advertising and sales executive.

To live her commercial life over again, Mrs. Woodward says, she would never be afraid of anyone because "I'd know they were just as much afraid of someone or something."

Unseen Sources of Long Life

The basic sources of automobile value are not always apparent to the eye.

A motor car, like a house, may LOOK a great deal more substantial than it really is.

Because of this difficulty, more and more thousands are turning to Dodge Brothers product for insurance against disappointment.

The years have proved, and each year proves anew, that Dodge Brothers are as deeply concerned with the UNSEEN goodness of their motor car as with the seen.

The mileage it will deliver, the safety it will provide, the expense and trouble it will save the owner over a period of years, are quite as important to Dodge Brothers as the more obvious details of equipment and style.

REPLACE THE TREES

The work of removing the number of trees along our city streets, recently killed by escaping gas, has been started, and while the dead trees must be removed it is a sad spectacle for those who for years have enjoyed the sight of the green foliage and the cooling shade these trees have furnished.

A movement to replace these trees has been discussed by some of the local civic organizations and it is to be hoped that such a step will be carried to completion.

VALUE OF AN EDUCATION

Declaring the value of a college education and pointing out that among the notables of the nation the great majority are persons of college education, the University News Letter says:

"The educational advantages enjoyed by the people biographically sketched in Who's Who in America, edition by edition, have furnished a theme of widespread interest and of continuous discussion. There is a deepening impression in favor of higher education as the determining factor in the attainment of the most desirable positions in life.

"The recent edition of Who's Who contains the results of an exhaustive investigation to determine the value of an education in enabling one to achieve outstanding success.

"The figures show that the number attending college but not graduated, was 3,022, or 13.69 per cent of those giving educational data, and the total number of collegians, graduated and undergraduates, was 17,077 making 77.36 per cent.

"In round numbers 77 out of every 100 persons giving educational data, whose names appear in the 1922-23 edition, attended college, and 64 out of every 100 were college graduates.

"Academies, seminaries and secondary schools (regarded as of equal educational rank) are credited with 1,574 or 7.13 percent of those furnishing educational data.

"Normal schools are credited with 1,182, or 5.35 per cent and common or grammar schools 1,880, or 8.52 per cent.

"It is interesting to note, in recapitulation, that two persons out of every 100 included in this tabulation completed their preliminary education in normal schools and 5 out of every 100 completed their preliminary education in high school; 9 out of every 100 passed into active life from common or grammar schools; 7 out of every 100 attended academies, seminaries or other secondary schools; 64 out of every 100 were college graduates; and 77 out of every 100 completed their education in college.

"Only a very small percent of all people are college graduates, yet 64 per cent of the notables listed in Who's Who furnishing educational data are college graduates, and 77 per cent attended college. It is incontrovertible argument in favor of a college education.

PRESS COMMENT

CAN'T LIVE ON FAIR WORDS

(News and Observer) Fair words butter no parsnips, as North Carolina veterans have discovered and they have set about through organized efforts to secure more substantial recognition from General Assembly.

No Legislature fails to pay tribute to the achievements of the Confederate soldier, and no legislator with power of speech fails to eulogize the memory of their deeds. The Capitol dome often vibrates with the eloquence of orators in the legislative halls who vie with each other for the honor of making the most appeals to sympathetic hearts.

None, least of all the Confederate veterans can complain about the eloquent speeches. If eloquence would pay grocery bills and provide warm clothing, the Confederate veterans would be the best fed and best clothed people of the commonwealth. Unfortunately for the veterans it takes money to buy groceries and it takes hard cash to secure clothing.

Every Legislature is committed to the cause of the veterans until it comes to putting the final touches on the appropriation bill and then the veterans are told that there isn't enough to go around and that they will have to get along for another two years. That has been the story for a long time. Meantime, the veterans are getting older and feeble, and meantime the demands for money for other needs become more pressing.

The Confederate veterans have resolved to insist on more tangible recognition than eloquent speeches. They can manage to live without the speech, but for many of them it is not possible to make much headway in living with the stipend paid them by the State. North Carolina is rich enough to see that every worthy Confederate veteran is taken care of. It ought to see that it is done.

The Confederate veterans and their friends are right. They ought to insist that the matter of pensions be considered seriously instead of being made the theme for flamboyant speeches.

BRITISH SUBSIDY IS AID TO BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY

Norwich, Eng., Oct. 20.—(INS)—The sugar beet industry—subsidized by the State—is going ahead by leaps and bounds in Britain.

Norfolk, the center of the industry, has grown more than 15,000 acres of beets this year. At the Cantley factory, Norwich, 1,500 tons of beets can be crushed daily. Altogether, throughout Britain, the beet acreage has risen from 55,000 acres in 1925 to 125,000 acres in 1926, and where nine sugar factories operated last year, 14 are in full swing this year.

Prices are guaranteed by the government and this makes the industry well worth the farmer's while. This year's crop is the finest ever known and many farmers in the great ploughland district of the Eastern Counties who scarcely knew how to make both ends meet, are now finding themselves prosperous through beet.

Too Much of a Good Thing

It is six years since I had my first stomach trouble. It rapidly grew worse. My food would not digest and I was reduced to skin and bone. My doctor put me on a starvation diet, and when my pains grew worse I concluded it was too much of a good thing. On the advice of my druggist I tried Mayr's and am now entirely well. It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and always the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Sold by all leading druggists.

Ford's Miniature Industrial Village May Materialize

South Sudbury, Mass., Oct. 20.—(INS)—Henry Ford's dream of a miniature industrial village here, as a parallel to his interests in the historic Wayside Inn may soon materialize. Property that he must acquire to realize his ideals is gradually being offered him at his own prices, by residents who desire to see the community thrive under the Ford business supervision.

The old C. O. Parmenter mill, a landmark in this section of the state, dating back to Colonial days, has now been offered to Mr. Ford with only one stipulation—that he name his own price. The mill would be the site of a factory for the manufacture of small parts for motors used in the Ford automobile.

French More Money Mad Than U. S., Dreiser Says

Paris, Oct. 19, (AP)—The United States may be a Shylock in the eyes of some Frenchmen, but in the view of one prominent American author Paris is more "money mad" than New York.

Theodore Dreiser told a French interviewer that Paris is owned by money. "It is even worse than New York in that respect," he said, on his first visit to Paris since 1912. "The old intellectual, artistic Paris has been swallowed up by a commercialism more intense even than America's."

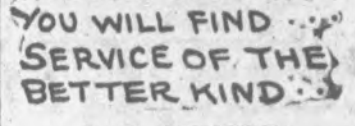

"Nor is the evil limited to France. There is not a corner of European soil that is free from it. The fault is partly ours. We Americans have been 'showing off' our wealth so ostentatiously."

America and Europe are moving in opposite directions—America towards idealism, Europe towards materialism. Dreiser said.

TIMBER CAN BE MADE MONEY CROP, SAYS GRAEBER

Extension Department State College Distributing Booklet On Value of Farm Timber

Raleigh, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Farm timber is a crop which may be utilized same as any other money crop by farmers of North Carolina according to R. W. Graeber, extension forester of State College. Mr. Graeber has just prepared extension folder number 23, "Know the Value of Your Timber Crop," which is now ready for distribution.

This publication gives pertinent facts about farm forests in the state and shows how these may be used for advantage to increase the farm income.

The soils, climate and seasons in the State are ideal for the rapid growth of many trees, says Mr. Graeber. Fully stocked stands of short leaf and loblolly pines are producing from one to two cords of wood per acre annually when given reasonable fire protection and care. This is equivalent to 500 to 1,000 board feet of saw timber per acre a year, giving an annual net return of from $3 to $5 each acre. This income from small plots of pines can be increased by good management to promote better utilization of the entire crop.

Mr. Graeber said that the farm forest is the farmer's best savings bank where the accumulated growth of years is safely stored as an emergency fund for the owner or as a valuable heritage for his children. North Carolina has 8,479,138 acres of farm wood land. This represents 46 per cent of the total farm area, states Mr. Graeber. In 1925, North Carolina's 283,491 farmers used 4,819,347 cords of fuel wood on their farms which was an average of 17 cords per farm. More than 750,000 cords are burned annually in curing tobacco and rough culls or other low grade material will produce as much heat as the best timber. For that reason, farmers should not burn a good tree but should use the culls, he said.

Only 5,000 copies of the booklet giving these late facts about the farm forest are available to growers in the state. Copies may be had free of charge as long as the supply lasts on application to the Agricultural Editor at State College.

Rev. Norris Expects Acquittal at Trial for Slaying Chipps

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 20. (INS)—There can be but one outcome to my trial and that is acquittal.

Rev. J. Frank Norris, militant pastor of the First Baptist Church of Fort Worth, when he was visited in his study. It was the same room in which on July 17, Rev. Norris shot and killed D. E. Chipps, prominent Fort Worth lumberman.

He referred to his trial, scheduled for November 1, in district court, on a charge of murder in connection with the killing of Chipps. In a statement by Rev. Norris after the killing, and in statements since then, it is said Norris will claim he killed Chipps in self-defense, after Norris felt reasonably sure his own life was in danger.

"I am not talking about anything now and do not want my case to be tried in the papers before it goes to court", Rev. Norris said. "I even have quit seeing newspaper reporters and others, but I always am glad to see an old friend."

He is not the same Norris of a year ago. The vigorous actions, and the snapping of his eyes are gone. He talks more slowly and his dark circled eyes have lost part of their former brightness. His face and lips are drawn—all showing the mental trial and worry he has gone through.

The study of the pastor is different, also from what it was on that warm Saturday evening, just before a stroke on July 17. Then the prone body of Chipps lay on the floor men stood around as if awe-stricken in the presence of death.

Now, young women secretaries and assistant secretaries to Norris and other church officials, are bustling in and out. Visitors are told that "Rev. Norris is seeing no one today." The offices of the First Baptist Church and the Searchlight, the church's weekly newspaper, in adjoining rooms are busy places, caring for the incoming subscriptions to the minister's defense fund and order for the newspaper.

"Yes, sir," declared the pastor, "I always thought my church here was a big one, but by recent progress I realize that it is just beginning to grow."

When asked how he was feeling, Norris reminded the visitors that he was not being interviewed. "But," he added, "You may use anything I have said in my sermons during the last few weeks, if you wish."

Rev. Norris then had his sermons and pointed out excerpts that he said express his feeling more than anything he could say now.

This unusual review, now takes the form of the minister-pastor being quoted from notes he made for his sermons, as follows: "All fair and just men will give a minister the same right as a bootlegger to defend himself and if he doesn't do it, he is unworthy of being called a human being. To regret an act is one thing and to regret the necessity that was forced upon one is a wholly different thing.

"Far beyond our highest expectations, contrary to what our enemies thought, this heroic church at one stroke became more solidly united, more determined and more courageous, and at the same time more tendered and more burdened.

Of course a minister is like everybody else, and praise God we live a life out here in Texas where most people think so too. I am not concerned about what the papers say, either good or bad. I am not losing any sleep over what may happen in the court house, though there isn't any doubt in anybody's mind as to the outcome. But let it come, let come what will, it will mean victory upon victory.

"No hand that has been lifted against the First Baptist Church has prospered. Who is there among us who can't recall when a large group met together and drank to the death of this pastor and gave him forty days time to leave the city?"

Rev. Norris referred to the time 12 years ago, when a committee ward him to leave town in 30 days, after he was charged with arson in the burning of his church. Rev. Norris was acquitted on this charge, on an instructed verdict.

"I have lived, it seems to me, a thousand years in a few days time," the interview continues. "What is the result? Out of the depths of my heart I have come to have a more confident, conquering faith in this, the living Word of God, than I ever knew before. I have come to have—ten thousand times less—concern about the things of this world, the things that perish."

Yale Student Council Bans Prom Parties

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 20. (INS)—Yale's student council has rushed to the rescue of the Junior Prom, an ancient institution that lately has been tottering. Because in recent years students have preferred house parties given by the fraternities to the more formal Junior Prom, the student council this fall has voted that all parties on Prom night be abolished. The vote is considered a final effort to retain the Prom as a traditional Yale institution.

"There has been a steady encroachment on the importance of the Prom over a long period of years. Parties on Monday night served to keep many away while breakfast dances were rather in the nature of anti-climax." So the student council declared. Then it said:

"Sheriff Houses have been the worst offenders in the past but with the college fraternities adopting an open house system in their new buildings there was the danger that they might also plan parties which would further divert the attention of the university from the Prom itself.

As a result of the small attendance consequent upon these conflicting parties there has been a serious financial deficit each year until affairs reached such a point last year that there was a possibility that the University authorities might take cognizance of the dwindling interest and abolish Prom Week completely."

Yale without its Prom would be unthinkable according to old-timers who point out the Prom has gained more attention in American literature than even the famous "Yap Day."

Daily News Letter

Consists of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population.

Paris, Oct. 20, (INS)—Paris is no longer the Paradise for birds in the cage, a reputation the capital enjoyed for many years. Jazz automobiles and the gay life leave small room for little birds, say the bird sellers who formerly did a thriving business.

Only a few interesting birdshops remain on the quay, and the bird-market which once was very lively, is rarely visited except on Sunday by curious on-lookers. The real buyers don't come any more because they can't buy. The birds are too high priced as well as their food. In spite of the saying "to eat like a bird," the little things eat all day. Paris was once a great center for the canary bird, "the bed room nightingale," as the French call it. Almost every other house had a cage in the window or on the balcony. Forty years ago there was an important Canary Congress in the capital and the birds sold for one hundred dollars a piece. At Puteaux near Paris, there were one hundred and fifty they sold for two or three thousand dollars a day. This bird-seed was very famous. Very little of it sold today. Its high price helps prevent people from buying birds. Then too, the Parisians no longer have time to take care of them. Every one stays home as little as possible and a bird can't be carried off for a week-end in a little basket like a cat or dog. Birds have become a luxury that is going these days.

Americans know nothing about Cronze writing in 'Opinion,' provided one serves them quickly with ice cream and jazz thrown in, they are perfectly happy. They don't know what they are eating now.

The trouble with most Americans, the writer goes on to say, is that nearly every one that crosses the ocean wants to make France like their own beloved country. Thus, they have transported their abominable cocktails, which kill the appetite and ruin the organs of taste, as well as their terrible jazz and moles and manners of Palm Beach.

They go into a good restaurant and order a delicious meal served to them past haste, then bolt it down like a real "quick meal," moistening it with a rare Bourgoigne or Bordeaux completely ruined because they wanted it frappe or served with Seltzer water. Others do not know the first thing about ordering a real meal, letting fish take the place an entremets and eating no vegetable. They treat a divine hen of Bresse like an ordinary chicken from India, put jam on their soup and drink whiskey between courses.

Monsieur de'roze says he needs no better confirmation of these facts than the statement made by a buyer from San Francisco last June:

"I do not think the food in famous Parisian restaurants is to be compared with what we had in London. If I had come to London first, our holiday would have begun and ended there.

New recruits are being reported every day for the newly formed French Anti-Dollar League.

The starched stiff collar seems doomed to disappear. The editor of one of the largest Parisian dailies has taken off his and Louis Forest, well-known humorist declares he can no longer write a funny line with one around his neck. Dr. Jean Bouchon, one of France's finest surgeons, who has performed a number of startling operations in airplanes, says that no doctor can work either on land or in the air when wearing the barbarous article, called a stiff collar.

You are glad considering the number of political speeches pouring out over the radio through what we call the ether. Thousands of these dreary speeches criss-cross in all directions. Let's hope the angels do not hear them. Yesterday in one American city nine political orators were talking over the radio at the same time.

Trotsky wanted to carry out Lenin's policies, and prove that the proletariat, which means the working man, whose capital is his hands rather than his brain, can rule a country, directed by the right theorists.

But Trotsky is defeated by Stalin, and admits it. Stalin decides that what Russia needs is foreign credit, also foreign skill, to help build up industries. Foreign money will make Russian leaders very rich, and Russia will gradually change from a proletarian government, which never could be, to what communism calls "the hated Bourgeoisie."
