FOREST FIRES ARE RAGING IN PUNGO SWAMP

More Accidents Result From Dense Smoke Clouds; Much Damage in S. C.

Washington, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Forest fires in the Pungo Swamp section raged uncontrolled today as more accidents were reported as resulting from the heavy smoke over the entire coastal section. Two automobiles collided in the smoke-filled streets of Belhaven, but neither driver was injured. Reports from Belhaven said the smoke was so dense it is almost impossible to travel either in the city's streets or in the surrounding highways. State highway engineers have reached the scene and are trying to save the roads.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Red flames of fire licked at forests in many sections of South Carolina today, given potency by a drought which has assumed serious proportions.

Water Swamp, 20 miles east of Columbia, was described as "a mass of flames" by motorists who drove through a smoke filled highway between here and Sumter.

Fires in Darlington county and other sections around Florence were reported unchecked. Governor Blackwood, in issuing a call for county authorities to aid the state in checking the fires, estimated the damage would reach millions of dollars.

From York county came reports of devastating flames in the Philadelphia section. It was believed a number of tenant houses on the plantation of Mrs. Susie B. Carrill had been burned but the fires and smoke prevented investigation.

One hundred men, more if found necessary, were to fight fires in the Charleston area today, funds having been supplied by the Charleston county legislative delegation.

Planes still were unable to fly in the vicinity of Charleston because of the poor visibility.

Probe Charges Against Dreiser

Pineville, Ky., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Theodore Dreiser, novelist, and Marie Pergain were indicted by the Bell county grand jury here today on charges of adultery. The offense is a misdemeanor under Kentucky law.

Dreiser on being told yesterday that such charges were being investigated issued a statement denying them and saying it was impossible for him to have been guilty.

Pineville, Ky., Nov. 10.—(AP)—With the last of Theodore Dreiser's committee of writers homeward bound after investigating conditions in the coal fields, the Bell county grand jury today began probing a charge of misconduct against the group's leader.

The 60-year-old author of "The American Tragedy" who left here yesterday denied at Bristol, Va., Tenn., the misconduct accusation and said it would be impossible for him to be guilty.

Circuit Judge D. O. Jones, in charging the Bell county grand jury, said witnesses had sworn to a warrant charging Dreiser and a young woman had lived together openly at a hotel here. The warrant has not been served on the novelist.

Dreiser, in denying the allegation, said he enjoyed "the companionship of ladies" and was "fond of their conversation" but was "incapable of committing adultery" and the perjured evidence of Judge Jones' court would be powerless to prove otherwise.

Judge Jones also charged the grand jury to determine if acts of criminal syndicalism were committed at meetings of miners conducted by the Dreiser committee, and to return indictments if justified. He said if he had been governor he would have placed state troops on the border and never permitted the writers to enter Kentucky.

Rocky Mount, —(AP)— Official aid in a search for Mrs. Nannie D. Brown, 38, who left her brother-in-law's home three weeks ago, has been asked by the brother-in-law, A. A. Stancill, who said he feared foul play.

GIpsy SMITH REACHES CITY

To Deliver First Sermon of Revival At Immanuel Baptist Church Tonight

Gipsy Smith, one of the best known evangelists in this country, will deliver his first sermon in the series of revival services at Immanuel Baptist church tonight.

He will arrive in Greenville this afternoon where he will spend two weeks in what members of the congregation hope will be one of the greatest religious awakenings in years.

The series of services opened Sunday night and Rev. W. S. Harden pastor of the Presbyterian church, delivered the initial sermon.

The second sermon was delivered last night by Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church.

Mr. Hillman spoke on the subject of Paul's letter to the Philippians concerning Timothy, showing where Timothy had lived dangerously for Christ.

He said the most pressing need of the times was for more people to live dangerously for Christ. The time has come, he said, for people to take greater responsibilities, to take greater risks, for the cause which Christ represented.

He declared the success of the series of revival services depended largely upon the congregation living dangerously in behalf of Christ. He urged his hearers to be up and doing and to make a daring attack in behalf of the Bible against the hosts of the devil.

Rev. W. H. Covert, who will direct the singing during the services, rendered a solo number, "I Have Hid Thy Word in My Heart," and was joined by the congregation in the chorus.

The choir has made special preparations for the revival, and the singing each morning and evening is expected to be one of the most inspirational part of the services.

CITY SET FOR ARMISTICE DAY

Annual Celebration of End of War to Be Marked by Colorful Parade Here

On the eve of Armistice Day, members of Pitt County Post of the American Legion were making last minute plans today for the annual celebration to be staged here tomorrow in commemoration of the ending of the World War.

With the principal speaker, Rev. Gipsy Smith, arriving this afternoon, the former soldiers believed they had virtually completed preparations for the day, which is being hailed as one of the greatest since actual signing of the armistice thirteen years ago.

The celebration will be ushered in with a colorful parade which will be participated in by motorcycle officers of the police department and State Highway patrol, High School band, Boy Scouts, former service men, high school children, and Battery A of the 113th Field Artillery, North Carolina National Guards.

The parade will begin moving from the Atlantic Coast Line station on Dickinson avenue promptly at 10 o'clock and will move down the street to Pine points, and then along Fifth street to the campus building of East Carolina Teachers college where the address and principal exercises will be staged.

Immediately after the speaking, former soldiers their wives and members of the auxiliary will be treated to the annual barbeque in the basement of the campus building. A picture will be run continuously during the afternoon and evening at the Capitol theatre, offering the hundreds of people part in the celebration a chance to witness Lloyd Hughes and Marceline Day in the "Sky Raiders."

The climax to the afternoon program will be a football game at the Third Street Stadium at 3:30 o'clock between Ayden and Rich Square, two of the most highly touted grid aggregations in this part of the state.

The celebration will be brought to a conclusion with a dance at the Woman's Club.

Mouzon Confers With His Elders

Asheville, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was in conference here today with the ten presiding elders of the Western North Carolina conference preparatory to the conference's annual session, which opens tomorrow.

Referring to rumblings which have shaken the church since the last Presidential campaign, the bishop told the elders yesterday that "the Methodist church is not concerned with any man's political affiliation. The church is concerned with moral issues, whether they are drawn into politics or not."

He said he did not believe the Democratic party would "be so rash" as to offer a wet candidate for President in 1932.

The first public gathering of the conference will be held tonight, with the sessions formally opening Wednesday morning.

CONVERGE ON NONNI RIVER

Tokyo Reports Situation Quiet But Apprehensive in Face of Shifting Soldiery and Booming Guns At Bridgehead in Manchuria; Japan Said to Have Demanded Surrender of Tsitsihar by the Chinese General; China Asks League to Patrol International Railway

Booming guns and shifting soldiery in Manchuria portended two new battles today, at the Nonni River bridgehead and at Tientsin, although Tokyo reported the situation was "quiet but apprehensive."

Dispatches to two London newspapers said Japan had demanded the surrender of Tsitsihar by the Chinese general, Mah Chang-Shan, and that China requested the League of Nations to send an international army of 4,000 men to police the railway, pending a settlement.

Baron Kijuro Shidehara, Japanese foreign minister, forwarded to Washington his government's reply to Secretary of State Stimson's "aide memoire" on the Manchurian situation but stated he would not ask for publication of the documentary interchange between the two governments.

Field guns and machine guns boomed and cracked at Tientsin where a sanguinary clash occurred yesterday in an area between the Japanese concession and the Chinese city as police battled rioters and Japanese reservists posted an alert guard, after demanding the withdrawal of the Chinese to a distance of 300 meters from the concession. The ring died down later, however and quiet was restored, though the air was tense.

Dispatches from Harbin said Japanese forces had withdrawn a few miles south of the Nonni River bridge, but were and a new attack on General Mah Chang Shiang's army was expected.

The Tass agency at Moscow received a message from Khabarovsk, Siberia, telling of unconfirmed reports that a Japanese newspaper editor attached to the Japanese Mission at Harbin, was urging "white" Russians to attack the Soviet Chinese Eastern railway, promising to aid the attack with money, arms and ammunition.

The developing situation held the attention of League of Nations circles at Geneva and there was a considerable difference of opinion among speculators about whether a state of war exists or not. Reports that General Mah had issued the declaration were not generally believed, and legal experts insisted that the League could not recognize a war declared by a general in the field. There was a growing number of practically-disposed persons, however, who insisted that when soldiers fight and kill each other it's war, declaration or no declaration.

The Japanese delegation at Paris issued a statement yesterday saying the fighting at Tientsin was entirely between Chinese police and bandits, although it added several Japanese were killed.

The fighting started in the Chinese quarter, the statement said, and a rumor was spread attributing it to Japanese influence but the rumor was promptly denied by the Japanese authorities, through the French consul. The League of Nations council has been called to meet at Paris November 16 to continue its efforts to bring about peace and a proposal for a diplomatic and economic boycott of Japan is expected unless she agrees to withdraw her troops.

At Tokyo it was said today the withdrawal of the troops from the Nonni River sector was planned to begin November 13, but that the fighting delayed repairs to the bridge and the troops might have to remain several weeks longer.

EDUCATORS TO GATHER HERE

Over One Thousand Teachers to Attend Fall Session of the Northeastern Dist.

One thousand teachers from this section of the state will gather here Friday and Saturday to attend the annual fall conference of the Northeastern District Teachers Association at the East Carolina Teachers college.

The city has been making preparations for entertainment of the visitors for the last several weeks, and it was announced from the office of the Merchants Association today that ample accommodations had been promised.

The association made it known several days ago that over two hundred rooms would be needed for the visiting teachers, and it was stated today that the public response had been liberal. Ample accommodations will be provided for every person remaining Friday night and the city will attempt to live up to its reputation as one of the most hospitable in this part of the country.

The Northeastern District is composed of 21 counties and in this number are some of the best known educators of the state.

Although the program had not been given out, it will contain many things dealing with work of the profession, as well as numbers of addresses of leading educators.

Several members of the faculty of local schools are scheduled to speak.

The counties to be represented are: Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gates, Greene, Heartford Hyde, Lenoir, Martin, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrell, Washington and Wilson.

Score Smoking Among Women

High Point, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Adoption of a report supporting the Volstead Act and condemning smoking among women, and announcements of ministers' stationing, marked the close of the annual Methodist Protestant conference here.

On the final ballot for delegates to the general conference, the following were named:

Rev. B. M. Williams, Efland; H. Free Surratt, Greensboro; J. A. Burgess, Burlington; W. T. Hanna, Julian; T. S. Coble, Haw River; J. M. Cutchin, Whitaker; W. F. Redding, Jr., Asheboro. Alternates: Rev. R. C. Stubbins, Asheboro; Dr. A. G. Dixon, High Point; Rev. E. Pritchard, Winston-Salem; Rev. E. A. Hunter, Henderson; Rev. Edwin K. Wheeler, at Charlotte; Rev. Forest, at Wake Forest.

He said so again yesterday in answer to a question about suggestions by friends that he move to assure himself of support which otherwise might be given to others.

The issue of seeking convention dates was revived because of the recent New York visit of Senator Roosevelt. The governor's friends consider the senator representative of the Democratic attitude in Montana toward the Roosevelt candidacy.

ROTES HEAR OF FAR EAST

Rumsey Campbell Tells of the Serious Struggle Between Japan and China

The far East was the main topic of the program at the regular meeting of the Greenville Rotary Club last night. The discussion centered around Manchuria which is now the bone of contention in a serious struggle between China and Japan with Russia ready to enter the conflict on the least provocation.

Rumsey Campbell, instructor of the National Guard unit in this territory, and a member of the Greenville Rotary Club was the speaker. Since he has spent considerable time as an army officer of the United States in Manchuria and in other far Eastern countries and he was able to present first hand information about conditions in that region.

He said that Japan and Russia were interested in Manchuria because of the large commercial concessions which China had granted them in that country. The natural resources of Manchuria in coal and iron are very necessary to the industrial life of Japan as this is practically her only source of these materials.

When foreign powers first came in contact with China and Japan about forty years ago Japan quickly recognized the value of modern (Continued on page six)

Labor Leader Victim of Gang Guns at Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Two shotgun thrust through the curtainsides of an automobile blasted away last night at Timothy Lynch, labor leader as he stood beside his garage in suburban Maywood, fatally wounding him. He died ten minutes later in an Oak Park Hospital. The assassians escaped.

Lynch, who was 60 years old, was secretary of the West Suburban Teamsters' union.

The police immediately said they theorized that his slaying might have been in retaliation for the double killing last July of Barney McCone and Herman Dien, who were reputed to have attempted to supplant Lynch's union with one of their own.

THE SALLIE COTTEN MEMORIAL

The planting of trees along the Greenville-Bruce road as a memorial to Mrs. Sallie Southall Cotten is most fitting and the Woman's Club is to be congratulated for sponsoring such a movement and every individual and organization that had a part in the completion of the work deserves the thanks of the community. Beautification of the highways and countryside was something that was close to the heart of Mrs. Cotten and we reiterate that such a memorial to her is most fitting.

DON'T PUT IT OFF

With almost every town, city and community in the country at this time raising funds and supplies to take care of the families who will be in need this winter, it seems to us that it is about time such a movement was getting under way here. As usual, Greenville will have many persons who will need aid this winter and unless we make provision for them there will be much suffering. While we do not think that the need exists now and probably will not exist until after Christmas when real winter sets in, we do not believe that we should wait until that time to begin to make our preparations. While other places are in the midst of raising their funds and the matter is being brought before our people almost daily is the proper time for us to act. Let's not wait until there is real suffering before we prepare to take care of the situation. Let's get busy now and get funds in hand and then when the time comes to take care of our needy cases we can spend our time doing that properly rather than having to make an effort at that late date to raise the money to do the job with.

ABOUT TOWN

The present industrial and unemployment situation is bringing about an increase in crime in the United States which will grow more grave as these conditions continue, states Charles L. Chute, general secretary of the National Prohibition Association, in an interview recently made public.
 "The world-wide depression," states Mr. Chute, is "increasing the work of the courts, statistics prove that every period of hard times has brought its increase in crime, stealing, family desertion, child neglect and delinquency follow industrial depression and unemployment."
 "Unemployment makes men disregard laws and the usual social conventions. This is a situation we can all understand. A man without the means of supporting his family is faced with a temptation which is hard to resist. To send such a man to prison is often an injustice to the man especially to his family. The humane, sensible way to deal with many of these men, as with most young and first offenders, is through probation, which supervises and guides the delinquent, finds him a job, makes it possible for him to support both himself and his family.

"Probation officers are today confronted not only with the problem of handling more cases, but of finding facilities for family relief. Officers who deal with men and boys of working age are having extreme difficulty in placing them in jobs. In normal times the probation officer succeeds not only in finding useful jobs for most of his charges, but he is able to do a certain amount of vocational guidance besides. Today these officers report that they are unable to find any sort of work for fifty per cent of their men. They are, therefore, handicapped in the most careful factor in successful probation supervision that of keeping the probationer busy in a satisfying occupation, thereby enabling him to support himself and his family and if possible, to get ahead in the world.

There is urgent need that the public increase its support to probation departments and provide more adequate staffs to deal effectively with the increased number of offenders, thereby reclaiming many to good citizenship and preventing their wives and children from being thrown upon the public for support.

Better police supervision of the city is the object of the alarm system being established in the business district.

Seven gongs have been placed at strategic points in the business district, giving the police department direct telephone communication with the patrolmen on beat in these areas.

It will also enable the chief of the department to mobilize the officers more quickly in case of emergency.

The alarm system was authorized by the aldermen in an effort to improve the policing of the city, especially at night when the sounding of the gong at a certain point would send members of the force speeding to the scene to render any assistance that might be needed.

The aldermen are to be congratulated upon this effort to more fully protect the lives and property of the citizenship.

Preceded by a colorful parade, members of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion will stage a giant celebration here Wednesday commemorating the end of the World war.

Not only the Legion, but virtually every body in the city will join in the observance denoting that important occasion thirteen years ago when thousands of men laid down their arms and returned to paths of peace.

It is an important occasion to the men who fought that great fight for civilization and they will do everything in their power to make it truly representative of the event.

In addition to the parade, Gipsy Smith, prominent evangelist, will deliver the principal address, praising the effort of this nation which brought about world peace.

Then there will be the annual barbecue dinner for former service men, a football game, picture show and dance.

All in all, it will be one of the most appropriate celebrations since that first Armistice Day celebration when everybody raised their voices to Heaven in words of praise and thanksgiving.

It is to be hoped the entire community will turn out and do everything possible to help the veterans of that great conflict pay fitting tribute to the men who gave their all that civilization might be saved from the heel of German autocracy.

Fall Bargain Days will be the order of the day in Greenville Thursday in Greenville Thursday and ten merchants will vie with one another in an effort to give to the shoppers of this great trade territory the best to be had in the field of merchandises.

It is not the ordinary sales promotion event but—three days set aside in which the participating merchants will share their profits with the people who have been hard hit by the period of depression which has swept across the world the last two years.

Despite the shortage of money, merchants have provided themselves with one of the most complete showings of fall and winter goods in years, and it is with a view to also relieve the overstaked condition of their shelves and counters.

Thousands of people will visit the city to take advantage of the splendid offerings is not to be doubted and those do not come will miss one of the best opportunities of the year to obtain real values at bargain prices.

N. Y. PLANS FOR GRANDI VISIT

 to ski over the Alps in war times, today caused considerable official comment.

While the youthful Italian minister was already on the high seas en route to his diplomatic conference with President Hoover, State Department officials and Mayor Walker were busy with a conference of their own.

It was no secret that the State Department was considerably perturbed about the plans of anti-Fascist organizations to stage protest demonstrations (not only here but in other cities) during the visit of Grandi.

 That was why on its official program made public several days ago, New York's customary reception of fanfare and ticker tape for visiting dignitaries, was conspicuously omitted.

But Mayor Walker and the public officials of New York City went right ahead with preparations to give the 36-year-old Italian diplomat as rousing and vociferous a welcome as that recently accorded Premier Pierre Laval of France when he came here on a similar mission.

At first, the State Department at Washington frowned. But then there were urgent appeals.

That part of the Italian-American colony were which still looks upon Mussolini as the hero of their native land demanded that they be given a chance to cheer the dictator's right hand man.

But while the one group of Italian-Americans were eager to give Minister Grandi the kind of welcome that would remind him of that day when the black shirts under his command marched into Rome, overthrew a tottering government and put Mussolini in power, another group, vigorously opposed to the Fascist regime in their native land, were preparing hostile demonstrations.

Just to see these 37 ex-soldiers, who fought with the Allies and are now men without a country because of their allegiance to the lost cause, is an inspiration.

CHIEF OF POLICE ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Lumberton, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Arguments were expected to start late today in the trial of H. C. Bethea, St. Paul's police chief, for the slaying of E. J. Dean last April 11.

State's witnesses yesterday testified that Bethea called Dean as the two left a store, and that the two went into an alley, where three shots were heard. Bethea was said to have come out and called that he "had to shoot a man."

Forty-four character witnesses for Bethea took the stand before court recessed last night, many of them saying Dean had a reputation as a violent man.

LADY with a PAST

By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: Venice Muir's search for an interesting reputation reaches success when Rene de Thénardier commits suicide, and his love for her is believed to be the cause. She is spending six months in Paris, planning to return to New York and storm society. New York has formerly considered her dull. Guy Bryson is acting as a friendly gigolo.

Chapter 26 AN AFTERNOON OF SURPRISES

"Oh Guy, nothing more to do with Rene!" "No. Purely in connection with my humble self." "Oh. Well, I hope it's not too uncomfortable." "So do I."

"Whatever can you mean! Stop for me at half-past seven, Guy." "Right."

Venice put down the receiver and glanced at her watch. Just time to get over to the Bankers Trust for mail before they closed. She hurried out to the back entrance in the Rue St. Honoré. Two letters from Nolly and one from Lola written on the Laconia. Nolly's letters were postmarked a week apart. The operation must be over now. Venice eagerly opened the earlier one, reading as she walked back towards the Rue Mont-Thabor.

"August 11th

"Darling Venice, "The operation was a failure. At first I thought my heart would break. But the relief in being alive to tell the tale comforts me. And why should I grieve at being back where I was before? I had let my mind run riot at times though and had seen myself dancing at parties and in swimming in the summer and having lots of men attentive to me. But there I might have missed the nice quietness Pongo gives me and perhaps he, the old dear, would have tripped me up at every turn for having him changed. Of course that's all pure bravado, Venice. I'm bitterly disappointed."

"Lola wrote some one at home who told mother about your Marquis and the American who is always at your heels. I do think it's wonderful, but I knew titles would adore you."

"Ernest is still sweet to me; but, of course, he has to come and see me every few days anyway—I'm still in bed—so I guess he's just a nice kind doctor and not a beau after all. Probably when I'm up and about again he'll drop away completely. I could be unhappy but I won't. After all, I've enjoyed several months of him, and a young man, even for several months, was beyond my farthest dreams."

"Do write me all about yourself—everything. Aren't you coming home soon?"

"Your loving,

"NOLLY."

Venice stumbled at a curb and sighed. Poor Nolly, always to lead a dull, sequestered life. Lack in her room at the Louis-Le-Grand she opened the second letter. Nolly was engaged to Ernest Price!

How simply marvellous. I must cable her. Venice rushed out again, her mind singing with the happiness of Nolly.

The cable dispatched, Venice stood uncertainly in the Rue Cammon. She was too happy to go back to her room at the Louis-Le-Grand and sit by herself alone with her excitement.

"By Jove, Venice Muir. How are you?"

It was Lita Chase very chic in tomato-colored treads that accentuated the canary hair peeping from her tweed beret.

"Hello," cried Venice. "Come to the Ritz Bar with me for a little 'Won't I just!' She linked her arm in Venice's and together they found a table jammed in one corner."

"What a sensation you've caused," said Lita as soon as their cocktails were ordered. "Imagine Rene killing himself on account of you!"

"He didn't. He was frightfully hard up, and his debts were growing unbearable."

"That's what you say. Bask in the light of this scandal, Venice, and relish it. Jove, it's more potent than all my divorces."

"But your divorces are real. My scandal's misconstrued."

"I don't believe you," said Lita. "It's funny, thought Venice. People who live sensationally themselves must believe sensational things about others."

"Are you fond of Guy Bryson?" "Why?" Venice asked amused. "Because if you're not I want him."

"That's perfectly all right," said Venice. Lita talked of men as though they were new hats or cars. "You are sporting. Is he divorced?"

Venice sat quite still. Had she heard aright? Was he divorced or separated? He had a wife then. Or didn't Lita know what she was talking about?

"Oh, you do care then?" Lita misunderstood her silence.

"No, I don't," Venice managed. "I was just wondering about his wife. I never knew her. Don't they get along?" She felt as if some one else's voice was speaking out of her own mouth. Guy, the frank the easy. He had been married several times and never even mentioned it. This hurt, for she had enjoyed his friendship, and friendship is worthless without honesty.

"No. I don't know her either. She's an American, I believe. But I fancied Mrs. Coates was horribly upset at your going about so much with a married man. A nice girl like you, Venice." This last was added with a little laugh. It was as though Lita had suggested that they were members of the same club and no one suspected.

"That was it, then. Mrs. Coates' kindly warning. That explained the 'all things considered' of Mrs. Coates at Rene's party."

"I suppose I shouldn't," Venice murmured scumbly. She was dejected. It was the old, shy, Venice drinking a cocktail in the Ritz Bar with a woman that made her gauche and uncomfortable."

"Don't be intricate," begged Lita. Venice glanced at her watch.

"I've got to hurry," she said in that uninteresting manner of hers when gaver words evaded her. Venice walked quickly back to the Louis-Le-Grand. She felt very hurt with Guy and a bit angry. This was an element of cheating in their companionship which disgusted her.

Lola's letter lay unopened on her bed. She listlessly tore the envelope's flap. The afternoon had worn her out with its diversity of emotions.

"Dearest Venice, "You are certainly stepping high, wide and handsome these days. Imagine a Marquis killing himself for you. Congratulations. And Guy Bryson still on your trail. I believe, darling, you once told me you were a dud. Were you fooling me or yourself?"

hurt which she felt. She thought a moment. "As you see by the paper Jerry and I are on the uncertain deep. We've both been ill a good bit. In fact I think I'm going to be again. Love,

LOLA."

Only a reputation of her past. Lita would spread it in New York now. The way would be easy when she returned, but it had certainly been difficult in the building.

Dining with Guy at the Cabaret she broke out abruptly. "Why didn't you tell me you were married?" He stared.

"How odd. When did you discover that? It was on the very thing I had the uncomfortable thing to tell you."

"Look here," said Guy gently, laying a hand over hers that rested on the table. "don't feel that way about it, Venice. It hasn't hurt you in any way, really."

"Yes, it has, Guy. It's hurt my feelings. I thought we were friends. You're not friends if you're dishonest with each other."

"That's quite true, Venice. But that first afternoon at the Cafe de la Paix I never gave it a thought and later, when I did, I was afraid you might have had Puritanical scruples and I did think the whole experiment was such a blinge."

"If I could have mentioned knowing your wife once in a while it would have been better."

"You're right. But you wouldn't have let me be your gigolo, Venice."

"Yes, I would have. I'd have let any one be my gigolo at that point. They both laughed.

"Friends again?" begged Guy, holding out a hand.

They shook and Venice acquiesced warmly. The hurt was gone and she realized that it was only the surprise of the thing that had rankled.

"What's your uncomfortable bit," she asked.

"My wife's on her way over."

"Yes. And you're the cause." "Guy, how dreadful!" (Copyright, Harriet Henry)
