

LADY with a PAST

By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: Mystery wins poetry. Venice Muir decides when she alters her reputation for dulness, in New York Society, by following an interesting career abroad.

Chapter 33
ENCOUNTER
"Why, it's Venice Muir." He caught her arm.
"Hello, Drake, I've been walking behind you for fifteen minutes."

"I wasn't sure it was you." Yes, he was just the same. His collar was soft and his overcoat rough, a vagabond sort of young man. His face still held that easy look of laughter and of friendliness. His hazel eyes were as clear and yellow-gold as she had remembered them. His hair as black and wavy and crisp. "Put on your hat," she said. "The air's cold."

They resumed their walking.
"I wondered when you were coming back."
"I've been home a month. I love Paris. I wish I was still there. The Seine and the Quai d'Orsay and the gorgeous sweep of the Place de la Concorde."
"I've never been. I will when my exchequer is fatter. What are you doing? Taking a constitutional?"
"No, I've been visiting a friend on the West side. She's remarkable. She's very lame but she's the happiest person I know. Content in her own little closet." She went on and on. She told him all about Nolly's operation that was a failure and Nolly's engagement. It was wonderful. Some one to whom you could talk about the things that mattered to you. She described her mother's death in Paris and then suddenly she stopped. He hadn't heard. He'd been in Florida all summer. Did he know about Rene? Was he still going to be kind because he was sorry for her? She would so like to capture his sincere interest.

He looked at her, astonished.
"Go on. What caught you up?"
"I—oh, I've done nothing but chatter about myself. Tell me about you." She couldn't actually drag Rene out into this nice, simple, friendly encounter.
"There's not much to tell about me. I'm working hard. At present I'm burned up with a contest I'm trying for."

"What kind of a contest?"
"A new skyscraper. Must be at least sixty stories high on a comparatively small ground. Difficult. They had emerged onto Fifth Avenue."
"Come to dinner with me," said Venice impulsively.
"I wish I could but a chap from Philadelphia is in town for the day. I'm meeting him at seven."
"Oh, Venice knew a sudden quick embarrassment. "Well, I'm hopping a taxi at this corner."

"Look here, Venice," he protested, catching her arm, "you're not going shy on me. You're sixteen blocks from where you live and I'm going to walk you to your door. If you're free for dinner there's no reason for you to hurry."
"All right." She was left wordless. She wished he had heard about Guy, and about Rene jumping out of the window because she wouldn't marry him.

"I love New York in the dark," he was saying. "Look at those lights down by the Sherry-Netherlands, man-made sentiments that rival the stars. I long to put up a building of my own designed that will be a thing of beauty, raising its slender spires to the skies."
"Some of the cathedrals in France are exquisite. All lace and delicate, yet so stable and strong."

"And the windows. I read a book on cathedral windows. Color as mellow as vintage wines—ruby and amber and purple like ripe grapes."
"Oh, Drake, you must go over some time. You'd get it all."
She thought of Mrs. Coates worrying about which guest for which party and Guy who would be "any kind of a gigolo." They were as unreal as though she had never actually known them, characters in a play which she had temporarily enjoyed. Drake was real. He understood things. They were before her apartment.

"Can't you come in for a moment?"
"I'd love to, Venice but I'm late now. I'm going to telephone you soon. Next time you won't be taking a boat in five minutes."
They shook hands. He noticed that surprising grip of hers.
"How unexpected for a slim feminine girl," he said. "Character." Venice blushed and hurried into the house. She had never been as happy in her life before.
"It's a lovely evening, James." She smiled at the old doorman.
He looked astonished. It was the first time that Miss Muir had spoken to him conversationally in the four years he had worked in the house.

Edwin D. Mouzon. The roll call of members showed a large attendance of clerical and lay delegates with more women than usual among the lay delegates.

Dr. H. M. North, of Raleigh, secretary of the Bishop's cabinet, submitted the nominations for the conference boards and committees and they were confirmed by the conference.

R. G. Fitzgerald, chairman of the board of stewards, of Jarvis Memorial church where the conference is meeting, extended a welcome to Greenville.

Bishop Mouzon in responding said he did not know where Eastern Carolina hospitality could be surpassed.

The Rev. W. H. Brown, of Goldsboro, was elected assistant secretary while the Revs. Rufus Bradley, La Grange, A. J. Hobbs and R. M. Price, both of New Bern, were elected statistical secretaries.

Characters of all nine presiding elders were passed and there reports submitted. They are J. C. Wooten, Durham; O. W. Dowd, Elizabeth City; W. A. Cade, Fayetteville; Walter Patten, New Bern; H. M. North, Raleigh; H. G. Smith, Rockingham; J. H. McCracken, Washington; L. B. Jones, Weldon, and W. C. Martin, Wilmington.

The conference voted in favor of a proposal to reduce the number of districts from nine to seven, but definite action on what district will be consolidated to eliminate two of them was not taken immediately.

The characters of the preachers in the Durham, Elizabeth City, Fayetteville and New Bern districts were passed.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock Rev. E. H. McWhorter was scheduled to deliver a sermon on the subject, "Solitude and Victory." Tonight at 7:30 Dr. North will speak on "The High Calling of God."

Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, and Rev. J. H. McCracken, presiding elder of this district, are conference hosts.

He told his hearers to have a clear vision of fallen, suffering humanity and that they would have the power to act as intercessor. The resources in this respect are boundless, he said, and there is power enough to lift all the world from sin and suffering.

whenever he appeared, and his wiry, quick movements, his beaming smile his military bow and his intelligent directing won the admiration of his audience.

Among the men were big blondes, dark rugged men who looked like story-book Cossacks, some straight, tall young fellows, some almost effeminate looking, their physical differences being as great as that of their faces.

The range of voices, from the highest tenor to the deepest bass voice, seemed almost uncanny at times. It was indeed difficult to realize that a man instead of a woman was singing the high, delicate notes, and it was most decidedly not false to the deep, booming bass came from such abysmal depths that it would have seemed equally impossible to anyone but the giant that stood near the center.

Their encores were enjoyed as much as the numbers on the program. The dance by two was one of the most delightful surprises of the evening. The Volga Boat Song appeared in such a new dress, and under a new name, "Ay, okhem," and with such different interpretation that many in the audience missed the fact that it was the favorite they were looking forward to.

"Mother Volga's breast is heaving. Angry waves in madness roar; While the lightning flash discloses One long vessel from the shore. In the prow the doctory chieftein. At the oars the henchmen brave. What fear they of the raging tempest. What fear they of wind and wave."

"On the Road to Petersburg" has these words now as refrain but added to these "a little bell is tinkling" with solo parts with a touch about the "lad thou lovest."

"The Captive Cossacks" was descriptive of the prisoners in a Turkish camp. The call of the cuckoo at dawn awakens the memories of home until they almost forget the binding shackles and they hear the call of the Sultan to tighten the irons, when on the horizon is to be seen the oncoming vessels of the Cossacks' rescuing brethren.

"An Old Polka," a young girl inviting her sweetheart to dance, closed the group.

The first of the soldier songs "The Topsy Turn" was adequately described by the music itself. "The Little Red Sarafan" (a woman's long cloak) has a lovely little poem as the words, an older woman singing of youth and of love that are gone and there is no need to sew longer on the red cloak.

The final number, "Song of the Don Cossacks" is in praise of Piattoff, famous leader of the Don Cossacks, who drove Napoleon from before the gates of Moscow across the Russian frontier. Son of the Don, that mighty river of romance and past glories, Piattoff is the heroic leader to inspire all Cossacks.

Adventures Of Betty And Scarlet Bunny

By W. A. LILLYCROP

Betty was watching out the window for Scarlet Bunny. And as soon as he came hippity-hop, hippity-hop up on the porch, she flung the door open to let him in. "I have been waiting for you ever so long," she said motioning to him to sit down. "For I have thought of a way we can help the Fairies to help people."

"How?" asked Scarlet Bunny. "Why," said Betty, "I have been thinking that we might go to every house in town and tell them how people are in need and that they can help."

Scarlet Bunny shook his head. "That wouldn't do much good I'm afraid," said he. "Everybody knows that there are people in need. They all talk about it plenty. But not many really do anything about it. And we would be just like the rest, talking but not really helping."

Betty looked at him thoughtfully for a while then her face lighted up and she said: "I'll tell you what let's do. Let's help somebody ourselves!"

"Great! Lets do!" said Scarlet Bunny. "But whom can we help?"

"Maybe I can tell you somebody," said Betty, who came into the room just at that moment.

Both Betty and Scarlet Bunny looked at her waiting.

"Yesterday," she said, "There came a man to the front door selling straw brooms. He said that he had lost his job, and that his wife and children were in real need. I was so sorry that I didn't have the change to even buy a broom. But I asked him where he lived and he said that he lives in the last house on this edge of town. And I have been thinking, she continued, that if I only knew whether that family really is in such dreadful need, I could give that man some odd jobs around the house."

"Then I know what we can do," said Scarlet Bunny. "I know where that house is. Suppose Betty and I slip out there and see if they really need help?"

Mother approved of this and in a few minutes Betty and Scarlet Bunny climbed into the little red air-plane. And with a putt-putt, putt they were sailing towards the situation without serious injury or loss of life.

Both trucks involved in the collision yesterday were moving at a low rate of speed because the fog made it impossible to go fast, and in spite of all the men could do, one was forced to sacrifice his life.

This brings us face to face with the fact that it is advisable to do our best to avoid disaster under all conditions. The road may seem clear, but it is impossible to say when a wheel will run off or the steering gear will become useless. Careful driving at such times may result in the saving of human life and how happy and thankful we should be of our deliverance.

The Sheppard Memorial Library has become a great force in the life of the community, and no set of people realizes it more than that in the Falkland community.

So inspired were the children of the school of that section that they planned and perfected a display dealing with the library and the school and placed it on display in the office of the Merchants Association.

With the aid of cardboard and childish hands constructed a tiny schoolhouse and library representing Falkland school and Sheppard Memorial Library, and surrounding them a road leading to Greenville, two farm houses and fields with the various products grown in this section.

A spirit of keen appreciation for what the library is doing for the rural communities prompted the children to such a creation, and that their labor of love will prove an inspiration to all who look upon it goes without saying.

Public libraries are indispensable during this complex age, and Greenville and Pitt county people look with pride upon the splendid opportunities made possible through the donation of the present beautiful structure by Mr. Harper D. Sheppard, former Pitt resident now living in Hanover, Pennsylvania. The building is probably the finest in this part of the state and is a living monument to the generosity to the man who gave it as well as a memorial to his father.

ed to Betty.

First of all she quickly turned her head away so Scarlet Bunny would not be able to call her a cry-baby, told him how to get back to her house.

When this happened the man was so grateful and such puzzled expressions came on the face of the woman and the children that Betty and Scarlet Bunny hurried away as fast as they could go. As their air-plane went putt-putt, putt back towards her house Betty said: "We want to help the Fairies help those people and I feel now that it helped us more than them."

Scarlet Bunny didn't say a word. Betty looked towards him. He was sitting there wringing his nose! Immediately she burst again into a gale of laughter. She couldn't hardly wait for the plane to get home so she could tell mother about Scarlet Bunny's bath.

But as the plane landed, mother herself was standing in the yard and said: "Get out quickly you two and come here! I have a great secret to tell you!"

(In tomorrow's Reflector read about Betty and Scarlet Bunny and what the secret was.)

AYDEN NEWS

Ayden, Nov. 18.—William Owen Hart, who assists his father in operating a filling station two miles south of Ayden, was out squirrel hunting. On hearing his dog squeal ran to his relief and found him in the teeth of a full grown fox, who had the little dog by the throat choked with it. William Owen, like William Tell "who shot the apple from his boy's head," shot the fox in the head. He now has the pelt on exhibition to verify this statement and expects to have it made into a turban.

The Reflector last week gave the names of only a few who are operating curing potato houses in Pitt county, overlooking Mr. E. J. Conklin, who has five portable potato houses all filled, aggregating 2,000 bushels. Mr. T. F. Hart converted a tobacco barn into a curing house and has 700 bushels. Miss Mack Dixon, Charise McGilhon and C. E. Smith each have one of 500 bushels capacity, besides a multitude of banks on every farm. With barns full of corn, plenty of hay and fodder, pens full of fat hogs, why should we worry about not having money?

Fire came near destroying the residence of the late Erastus Cannon, 3 miles west of Ayden, last Monday morning. People traveling the road saw smoke coming through the shingles, made the alarm, and heroic fighting by a bucket brigade the fire was extinguished. The fire had rolled from the fireplace, igniting a lot of scrap tobacco. The building was considerably damaged as was the furniture by smoke and water.

The many friends of Mr. R. L. Johnson, who has been very sick with pneumonia, will be glad to know that he is improving.

By this time it was too late for Betty to say anything. And anyway the woman could not have heard her for the shrieks and laughter of her children who were so excited that one of them bit a piece right out of the scap!

And Betty herself seeing the expression on Scarlet Bunny's face, had to join the laughter. He looked exactly like Brother Billy always looks when mother hints that a bath would not hurt him. When she laughed, Scarlet Bunny gave her a very reproachful look out of the one eye that was not at that moment full of soap and then stopped struggling so that they could get it over as soon as possible.

Finally, the woman gave him up for a bad job. In spite of all her scrubbing, assisted by the children, Scarlet Bunny remained as red as ever. And the woman said: "He really must be a red rabbit or else he is blushing."

At which, to the surprise of the children, Scarlet Bunny wriggled the end of his nose and Betty went off again into a gale of laughter.

Just as they were drying Scarlet Bunny the broom seller himself came home.

The family crowded around him expectantly. And when Betty saw the tiny bag he had which held the little he had brought for all their supper, and saw him shake his head sadly to his wife as he laid a number of unsold brooms on the table, Betty thought her heart would break.

Then the man looked at Betty. And when the woman quickly told him it was a poor hungry little girl which she had asked to stay for dinner, and when the man said so cordially: "Yes, we'll share with her our last crumb." Two things happen, placed in them.

Push Probe of Death of Girl

Salisbury, Nov. 18.—(AP)—While authorities here sought to clear up the mystery of her death from a poison dose, Mary Chance, Erskine College (S. C.) graduate, was being buried at her father's home in Wrens, Ga., today.

Chalmers Kincaid, said to have been the girl's sweetheart, was still being held in jail here as a material witness, as he was her last known companion. She was visiting Kincaid's sister here, although, her father said when he came here for the body, her family had believed her to be in Augusta, Ga.

The girl told physicians who she was, and of the poison dose being administered by "a man" before she died.

FARM NOTES

(By E. F. ARNOLD, County Agent)
The Farmers Club of Farmville held its second meeting last night with some fifty dirt farmers in attendance. Mr. John T. Thorne, president of the club, presided over the meeting.
The first part of the program consisted of a very interesting report of T. McL. Carr, vocational teacher of Fountain, on the trip he and one of his pupils won to the International Dairy Show at St. Louis, Mo. This was followed by a discussion of the need of general livestock production in Pitt County agriculture, lead by A. C. Kimrey, dairy specialist from the Division of Extension at State College.

A number of farmers in the Farmville section are beginning to make the production of livestock a permanent part of their agricultural program and it is the purpose of this farm club to bring to them helpful information of dairy, swine and poultry production. The next meeting of the club will be held in January and at this time it is planned to have with the club a poultry specialist from the Extension Department and also to have the farmers of the county give a report on the demonstration work they did in 1931. Among those who are or have conducted demonstrations are: J. C. Parker, poultry, hogs, tobacco and lespedeza; B. F.

Lewis, ten litter production of hogs; M. D. Turnage, tobacco; John T. Thorne, corn, hogs, poultry and lespedeza; R. E. Tugwell, tobacco after soy beans; and Roy Bowling, poultry. These farmers will report on these demonstrations as to farm practices used, cost of production and profits resulting from same. The county agent is highly pleased with the interest being manifested by the farmers of this section in their efforts to improve the farm practices of their section. Mr. Kimrey and the county agent visited the farm dairies of J. C. Galloway, John T. Thorne and the May-brothers Tuesday and found these farmers well pleased with their efforts at developing a real farm dairy.

Curb Market

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Barnes set aside one acre on their farm for the production of vegetables from which they have sold $201.35 since January 1. They are highly pleased with the money they have been able to convert their one acre of vegetables into through the curb market. This is only one instance of many in which farm homes are being benefitted by having an opportunity to dispose of their stuff through local market.

Lespedeza

The following farmers have purchased lespedeza seed saving seed pans: Blaney Sumrell, J. O. Harris, manager of county home, W. G. Stokes, John T. Thorne, J. C. Parker, W. E. Smith and J. R. Dozier. Last year only one was purchased,

Mr. Carl Turnage of Farmville being the first farmer to secure one of these. This method of saving seed will tend to increase the acreage of this crop among the farmers of Pitt county.

G. O. P. To Get Busy

Market Report

Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Cotton opened steady at an advance of one to four points on trade buying and covering. Trading was quiet and January sold up to 6.45 and May to 6.78.

Trading was quiet, however, and prices weakened, under a renewal of near month liquidation combined with some southern and Liverpool selling. December sold off from 6.35 to 6.26 or three points net lower, while May declined to 6.75, with the general market showing net losses of about two to three points by the end of the first half hour.

Liverpool cables were relatively steady early but eased slightly just before the local opening, and there may have been some selling here on that action of silver. Liverpool cables reported trade and Bombay buying in that market and said there was an increased cloth inquiry in India.

the neighborhood of 3 points and failed to find much stimulant in the declaration of the regular dividend, a decision that had been fully expected. Case and Harvester were down 2 or so in sympathy with wheat. U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, American Tobacco, B. Coca Cola and American Can sagged a couple of points. Westinghouse and Western Union reached new minimums.

Weekly surveys of the steel industry showed that the rise in operating ratios had been halted, although production was holding its own.

The money market appeared to have readjusted itself fully to the withdrawal of loans for the account of "others." Call funds were again available unofficially at 2 per cent.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Indications of extremely disappointing export demand for North American wheat, together with abrupt setbacks in Liverpool wheat quotations, swept grain values downhill today.

Notice was taken of announcements that the British government would introduce a wheat quota system. Drought complaints from the western part of Kansas and Nebraska failed to act as an offset.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Wobly commodity markets and the appearance of some negative mid-week business statistics and news contributed to a heavy tone in stocks today. Narrow gains of the previous session were more than lost during the morning and by afternoon the market was soggy. All groups participating in a slow decline. Bonds were dull and spotty.

News that the Belgian copper producers had called, apparently without reaching an agreement on output curtailment, was disappointing for the twice postponed departure of the visitors had aroused hopes that a solution might be reached. Copper stocks weakened sharply, nor did the further loss of 13-8c in silver bullion help the speculative attitude toward metal issues.

ARRANGE FOR THANKSGIVING GAME HERE

For the pleasure and enjoyment of these people who have been unable to see a football game this season due to various reasons and for those unable to go to Chapel Hill for the Virginia game, the high school team has arranged a football game for Thanksgiving Day. This game will be with the Farmville team, and as these two teams have played to a scoreless tie in the earlier part of the season a hard game is to be expected.

"You needn't tell me — I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

Milder

because they're fresh

CAMELS are never parched or toasted!

FOLKS who smoke really fresh cigarettes made from choice sun-ripened tobaccos never have to give a thought to their throats.

That's because such fresh cigarettes retain natural moisture—and are gratefully smooth, cool, throat-friendly, mild.

Camels are the fresh cigarette—everyone knows that now—they're blended from the finest Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos that money and skill can buy.

We would never dream of parching or toasting these choice sun-ripened tobaccos—that would only drive off or destroy the natural moisture that makes Camels fresh in nature's own mild way.

The Camel Humidor Pack protects a fine cigarette fresh with natural moisture—it could do little or nothing to freshen a cigarette that is dried-out or factory-stale.

If you smoke for pleasure, see for yourself what freshness means in mildness and flavor—switch to Camels for just one day—then leave them, if you can!
